V. 11. Men of warre] The Hebrew צבא ſignifies three things 1. Militare, to warre, 2. concurrere and congregari, to aſſemble, 3. miniſtrare, to miniſter. The firſt notion is very frequent, the ſecond, Exod. 38. 8. (where yet the Septuagint read νηστευσάσων, for צבא it ſeems reading צום jejunavit) and 1 Sam. 2. 21. and the third is ordinary alſo (and from thence Timothy called καλὸς στρατιώτης a good ſouldier, that is, miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt) Hence it is that among thoſe Greek writers, which follow the Hebrew idiome, the word στρατεία, στρατιὰ and στράτευμα, is uſed for every one of theſe three; For the firſt ordinarily and primarily; For the ſecond, when wee meet with στρατεία οὐρανοῦ πᾶσα, which we render exercitus, and hoſt of heaven, but ſignifies univerſus cœli comitatus, the whole company of heaven, whether the many ſtars or many Angels there; And in the third ſenſe we have here στρατεύματα for officers, and ſervants or attendants, and ſo the Syriack tranſlation renders it, and gives us authority to doe the like, though otherwiſe it might be rendred more vulgarly, either his company, or his ſouldiers about him.

b. Παιδεύειν

V. 16. Chaſtiſe] Παιδεύειν ſignifies ordinarily to ſcourge, or chaſtiſe, as παῖδες children or ſervants are wont to be uſed, when they have offended; ſo Heb. 12. 6. παιδεύει chaſtening is expounded by μαστιγοῖ ſcourging. And in ſtead of it here, the other Evangeliſts Mat. 27. 26. Mar. 15. 15. have φραγελλώσας, from from the Latine flagellum, a whip, and S. John c. 19. 1. ἐμάστιγωσε ſcourging. Now to what the infliction of this ſort of puniſhment on Chriſt belonged, is matter of queſtion, that which is ordinarily ſaid is, that Flagellation was among the Romans a ſolemn preparative to Crucifixion; So Livy of the ſervants, l. 34. Multi occiſi, multi capti, alii verberati crucibus affixi, they were ſcourged and crucified. And in Valerius Max. l. 1. c. 7. Servum verberibus multatum ſub furca ad ſupplicium egit, having ſcourged his ſervant under the croſſe he had him to puniſhment, that is, crucified him. So Antigonus the King of the Jews was firſt whip'd, then beheaded with an axe, ſaith Dio l. 49. and ſo 'tis ſaid of Alexander in Qu. Curtius l. 8. verberibus affectos ſub ipſis radicibus petræ crucibus juſſit affigi, he appointed them to be ſcourged and crucified; and Joſephus of the Jews ἀλώσ. l. 5. c. 32. μαστιγόμενοι καὶ προσβασανιζόμενοι τῷ θανάτῳ πᾶσαν αἰκίαν ἀνεσαυρώθησαν, they were ſcourged, and reproachfully handled, and then crucified; and Philo ſpeaking of the Jews of Alexandria crucified by Flaccus, addes, μετὰ τὸ αἰκίσασθαι ἐν τῷ θεάτρῳ, that this was done after they had been reproachfully handled, that is, ſcourged, in the theatre; and ſo this was part of the horrendum carmen, the ſolemn form of ſentence, verbera intra aut extra pomœrium, Arbori infelici ſuſpendito, ſcourge him, and then hang him on the tree. But this is not the notion that here we muſt have of the ſcourging of Chriſt. For then it muſt be part of his ſentence of death, which by Joh. 19. it appears it was not, for there 'tis ſaid that Pilate took him and ſcourged him, v. 1. whereas he was not as yet condemned to death; nay v. 6. Pilate refuſes to condemn him to death, profeſſing that he finds not any capital crime brought againſt him; then examines him farther, v. 9. then ſeeks to releaſe him, v. 12. and coming again to the judgment ſeat, v. 13. at length he delivered him to be crucified, v. 16. This is ſo evident by that Evangeliſt, that the learned H. Grotius applies this ſcourging to that other ordinary uſe of it for examination, ſuch as Act. 22. 24. is μάστιξιν ὑπετάζαι being examined with ſtripes, and in Cicero, virgam in tormento eſſe magis quàm ſupplicio, that the rod is for a torture rather then a puniſhment. But there is no ground for this conjecture from any circumſtance in any of the Goſpels, nor reaſon to adhere to it, without ſome teſtimony, upon a bare poſſibility of it, eſpecially when the mention of it in this fourth Goſpell ſuggeſts another notion of it, which will reconcile all the difficulty, and it ſelf be ſubject to none, viz. that Pilate willing to deliver Jeſus from capital ſentence, appointed this of ſcourging to be inflicted on him. For that Pilate did not believe Chriſt guilty of any capital crime it is evident, and conſequently not fit to be crucified; ſo likewiſe that beſides his own conſcience, his wifes dream did make him very unwilling to pronounce that ſentence of death on him, but very induſtrious to find ſome pretence of releaſing him, and that finally 'twas onely the importunity of the Jews, to which he ſacrificed him; And here it is plain that he propoſes to the Jews the ſcourging of him, as a lighter puniſhment proportionable to his crimes, and then that he may releaſe him. So we finde in the Epit. of Livy Dec. 5. l. 6. of Matienus a ſervant, ſub furca din virgis cæſus erat, & ſeſtertio vœniit, he was ſcourged, and then ſold: and ſo 'twas ordinary to bind to a pillar, or poſt, and ſcourge men, προσδεθεὶς κίονι πολλὰς ἔλαβε πληγὰς in Artemidorus ὀνειροκρ. being bound to a pillar he received many ſtripes. From hence therefore 'tis evident, that the notion of his ſcourging was that of a lighter puniſhment, to releaſe him from a greater, (and that, as John ſets it, inflicted on him before the ſentence of death was pronounced againſt him) though when that was done, he was fain to gratifie them by delivering him up to their fury to be crucified alſo. And ſo the place both in Matthew and Mark may well be rendred Mat. 27. 26. τὸν δὲ Ἰησοῦν φραγελλώσας, παρέδωκεν ἵνα σταυρωθῇ, having ſcourged Jeſus, that is, formerly having done ſo, he proceeded farther, and delivered him to be crucified; and ſo in Mark c. 15. 15. παρέδωκε τὸν Ἰησοῦν φραγελλώσας, ἵνα σταυρωθῇ, He delivered Jeſus having ſcourged him, (having done ſo before he thus delivered him) to be crucified. And this ſort of ſcourging was a puniſhment uſual among the Jews for offences not capital; ſee Note on 2 Cor. 11. b. A fourth ſort of ſcourging there was for capital crimes, whipping to death, with the head faſtned to the furca, which Suetonius in Nerone calls ſupplicium more majorum, the old Roman puniſhment. But this cannot belong to this place.

c. V. 29. Bleſſed are the barren] This expreſſion of the dayes approaching, that they ſhall ſay μακάριαι αἱ στεῖραι, bleſſed are the barren, &c. had certainly its completion in what befell Jeruſalem in the time of the ſiege. But more particularly it may refer to one paſſage: After that Titus had incompaſs'd the city with a wall ſo that none could come out to forage, they were forced to feed on dung, ſaith Joſephus, on ſhooes and girdles, &c. and for want of ſuch proviſion as this, one Marie, a noble and rich woman, daughter of Eleazar, bereaved of all by the Seditious, killed her ſucking child, and dreſt'd it, and eat part of it, and the Souldiers breaking in upon her, and finding a part left, went away in deteſtation, and preſently the news of it went over the whole city, and every one, ſaith * Joſephus, look'd upon it with horror, and with the ſame compaſſion, as if they had done it themſelves. Then was this ſpeech fit for them to take up, on hearing this horrible newes, Bleſſed are the barren, and the womb that never bare, and the paps that never gave ſuck, in compariſon to those that are forced to feed on the fruits of their wombs, and devour their own ſucking infants. And then that which follows, If they doe theſe things on a green tree, what ſhall be done on a dry? may perhaps be beſt interpreted in relation to this particular fact alſo, of that noble and rich woman, Marie. If ſuch horrible things befall the wealthieſt among you, what a diſmal ſtate ſhall all others be involved in? This may poſſibly be the meaning of the phraſe. But if not, then in that other notion of the righteous and the wicked, it may have had its completion alſo.

* l. 7. c. 8. Εἰ ἐν τῷ ὑγρῷ

d. V. 32. Malefactors] Theſe Malefactors crucified with Jeſus were thieves and murtherers, and authors of an uproar in the city, which is an evidence among others formerly mentioned, (ſee Note on Mat. 27. d. and on Mar. 15. a.) of Chriſts death being after the Roman not Jewiſh manner. For the Jewiſh cuſtome was never to put to death two malefactors on the ſame day, unleſſe it were for the ſame crime; ſo ſaith Maimonides Sanhed. c. 14. They never condemn more then one in a day; but one to day, another to morrow, unleſſe they they be both guilty of the ſame tranſgreſſion, and deſerve one death. And that Chriſt was not pretended to be put to death for that crime of the other two, is clear by his Inſcription, which ſaith it was for pretending to be King. κακοῦργοι σὺν αὐτῷ

e. V. 45. Veile of the Temple] That which is here ſaid of the veile of the Temple, that ἐσχίσθη μέσον, muſt be ſo rendred, that μέσον may be taken Adverbially for in the middle, ſo as to be anſwerable to εἰς τὰ δύο into two parts in Matthew and Mark. Now what veile of the Temple this was is the only thing that will need to be here determined; for of this it is certain that there were two veiles or high walls (intimated by the mention of the ſecond veile, v. 3.) the one that covered or encloſed the Sanctuary from the eyes and approach of the people, who were permitted to goe no farther then the court of the Jews and only the Prieſts admitted into the Sanctuary; For thus the manner was, the θυμιατήριον, or altar of incenſe was within the Sanctuary, and thither the Prieſts went daily and offered incenſe, the people mean while ſtaying without, and praying every one privately by himſelf, (the thing noted by the ſilence in heaven for halfe an hour, Rev. 8. 1.) And thoſe prayers of the people for ſupply of their ſeverall wants were thus offered up by the Prieſt with that incenſe of his that went up to Heaven (ſee c. 1. 10. d.) But the people themſelves ſtaid without, and might not enter or look in there, that Veile, or wall, or ſcreen made a full ſeparation of one from the other. And as the Sanctuary was encloſed or ſeparated from the court, ſo was the Holy of Holies encloſed from the Sanctuary, and thither none entred but the High prieſt once a year, and ſo there was a ſecond Veile. That this is here meant, is no way ſpecified, or deducible from any circumſtances of the ſtory in any of the Goſpels, yet may be thought moſt probable from one intimation of the author of the Hebrews, c. 10. 20. where our way to heaven is ſaid to be conſecrated by Chriſt by the veile, that is, his fleſh. There as the veile is made a type of Chriſts fleſh, and being ſo, the rending of the veile will be a fit ſolemnity of the piercing and crucifying Chriſts fleſh; ſo that veile is clearly the ſecond veile, entring into the ἅγια the holies, v. 19. that is, the Holy of Holies, as appears by c. 9. 8, and 12. And if that were here meant, then the ſignificancy is not only the approaching deſtruction of all the Jewiſh rites, but alſo that that unapproachable place, a type of heaven, was now laid open to all true Chriſtians, and that in the mean time there is liberty to approach unto God in prayer allowed to them; and again that Chriſt not now once a year, as the High prieſt, but once for ever, there to continue, entred into the Holy of holies, that is, beyond the Sanctuary, the common place of all the Prieſts (and ſo the type of Heaven, where all the Angels and Saints are) even into the inmoſt adytum at the right hand of God, farre above all Angels, &c. a place of preeminence peculiar to him. CHAP. XXIV.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOW upon the firſt day of the week, very early in the morning, [they] came unto the ſepulchre, bringing the ſpices, which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

1. Mary Magdalen &c. Mat. 27. 1. and here v. 10.

2. And they found the ſtone rolled away from the ſepulchre.

3. And they entred in, and found not the body of the Lord Jeſus.

4. And it came to paſſe, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold two men ſtood by them in ſhining garments.

5. And as they were afraid, [and bowed down their faces to the earth, they ſaid unto them, Why ſeek yee the living among the dead?]

5. and did obeyſance to them, they asked them, ſaying,

Do you ſearch in a tombe or grave for one that is riſen from the dead?

6. He is not here, but is riſen; Remember how he ſpake unto you when he was yet in Galilee,

6. Mat. 17. 23.

7. Saying, The ſon of man muſt be [delivered into the hands of ſinfull men,] and be crucified, and the third day riſe again.

7. put to death by the heathens, Romans

8. And they remembred his words.

9. And returned from the ſepulchre, and told all theſe things unto the eleven and to all [the reſt.]

9. the other diſciples of Chriſt, which were not of that number.

10. It was Mary Magdalen, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told theſe things unto the Apoſtles.

11. And their words ſeemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not.

12. Then aroſe Peter, and ran unto the ſepulchre, and ſtooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themſelves, [and *departed, wondring in himſelf at that which was come to paſſe.]

*or, departed to his own abode, wondring at that

12. and returned to the place from whence he came, and where he abode, being much amazed to ſee the body gone out of the grave. See note on Joh. 20. a 13. And behold, two of them went that ſame day to a village called Emmaus which was from Jeruſalem about threeſcore furlongs.

13. Mar 16. 12.

14. And they talked together of all theſe things which had happened.

15. And it came to paſſe that while they communed together, and reaſoned, Jeſus himſelf [drew near and went with them.]

15. joyned himſelf to their company.

16. But their eyes were held, that they ſhould not know him.]

16. And at firſt, through Gods will ſo diſpoſing it, they diſcerned not that it was Jeſus.

17. And he ſaid unto them, What manner of communications are theſe that ye have one to another, as ye walke, and are ſad?

18. And the one of them, whoſe name was [a] Cleophas, anſwering ſaid unto him, Art thou only a ſtranger in Jeruſalem, and haſt not known the things, [that are come to paſſe there in theſe days?]

18. that are notoriouſly come to paſſe there, and talkt of by all at this time?

19. And he ſaid unto them, What things? And they ſaid unto him, Concerning Jeſus of Nazareth, which was a Prophet, mighty [in deed and word before God] and all the people.

19. in miracles and in doctrine approved by God.

20. And how the chief prieſts and our rulers delivered him [to be condemned to death, and] have crucified him.

20. to the Roman procurator, accuſed him and required him to be put to death, and accordingly at laſt they

21. But we truſted that it had been he which ſhould have redeemed Iſrael. And beſide all this, to day is the third day ſince theſe things were done.]

21. But we were full of hope that he had been the Meſſias ſo long expected by us. And this being the third day ſince his crucifixion,

22. Yea and certain women alſo of our company made us aſtoniſhed, which were early at the ſepulchre,]

22. Some women that were followers of him together with us, and that were this morning at the monument wherein he was laid, came and told us wonderfull things,

23. And when they found not his body, they came, ſaying that they had alſo ſeen a viſion of Angels, which ſaid that he was alive.]

23. How that they found not his body there, but met with Angels which told them that he was riſen from the dead.

24. And certain of them which were with us] went to the ſepulchre, and found it even ſo as the women had ſaid, but him they ſaw not.

24. And ſome of the twelve diſciples, Peter and John,

25. Then he ſaid unto them, O fools, and ſlow of heart, to believe all that the prophets have ſpoken.

26. Ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things, and to enter into his glory?]

26. Is it not by thoſe prophets foretold to be decreed by God, that the Meſſias ſhould be deſpiſed by men and ſlaughtered by them, Iſa. 53. 8. before he ſhould enter on his kingdome?

27. And beginning at Moſes, and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the ſcriptures the things concerning himſelf.

28. And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone farther.

29. But they conſtrained him, ſaying, Abide with us, for it is towards evening, and the day is farre ſpent, and he went in to tarry with them.

30. And it came to paſſe, as he ſate at meat with them, he [took bread, and bleſſed it, and brake, and gave to them.]

30. after the manner of the maſter of the family bleſſed the meat, and carved, and diſtributed it to them.

31. And their eyes were opened, and they knew him, and he vaniſhed out of their ſights.]

31. Which occaſioned (ſee v. 35.) their firſt ſuſpicion that it was Chriſt, And preſently they diſcern'd that it was very he, And he immediately diſappeared, in what manner or by what means it is not known.

32. Was there not an unuſuall warmth of affections and paſſion upon us all the time that

32. And they ſaid one to another, [Did not our heart burn within us while] he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the ſcriptures?

33. uſed to aſſociate with them,

33. And they roſe up the ſame houre, and returned to Jeruſalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that [were with them,]

34. And aſſoon as they came, told them, ſaying, See 1 Cor. 15. 5.

34. Saying,] The Lord is riſen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

35. by his bleſſing and carving the meat ver. 30. they came to diſcern him to be Chriſt, not knowing it a long time.

35. And they told what things were done in the way, and how [he was known of them in breaking bread.]

36. And as they thus ſpake, Jeſus himſelf ſtood in the midſt of them, and ſaith unto them, Peace be unto you.

37. And they were in a terrible fright thinking it had been a viſion of ſome ſpirit, without any reall body joyned unto it.

37. But they were terrified and affrighted, and ſuppoſed that they had ſeen a ſpirit.]

38. yee doubt or ſuſpect me to be a ſpirit without a body?

38. And he ſaid unto them, Why are ye troubled, and why doe [thoughts ariſe in your hearts?]

39. it is very I, body and ſoul together:

39. Behold my hands and my feet, that [it is I my ſelf:] handle me and ſee, for a ſpirit hath not fleſh and bones, as ye ſee me have.

40. gave them leave to ſee and feel the prints of the nails in his hands and feet.

40. And when he had thus ſpoken, he [ſhewed them his hands and his feet.]

41. And the greater and more tranſporting their joy was, the leſſe confident were they of the truth of it, and therefore to confirm them in the certain belief of it, he called for ſome meat.

41. And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondred, He ſaid unto them, Have ye here any meat?]

42. And they gave him a piece of a broiled fiſh, and of an honey comb.

43. And he took it, and did eat before them.

44. What you now ſee I did foretel when I was among you, before my crucifixion, & is agreeable to all the ſeverall images and predictions of me in all the books of God, which were of neceſſity to be fulfilled.

44. And he ſaid unto them, [Theſe are the words which I ſaid unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things muſt be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moſes, and in the prophets, and in the Pſalms concerning me.]

45. Then by the ſpeciall operation of his ſpirit, he gave them the underſtanding of the Scriptures, in thoſe things eſpecially which concerned the Meſſias.

45. Then opened he their underſtanding, that they might underſtand the ſcriptures.]

46, 47, 48. The ſumme of which he declared to be this, that the Meſſias was thus to be put to death, and riſe again, and that his Apoſtles, the witneſſes thereof, ſhould after his reſurrection preach repentance, and upon that, remiſſion of ſinnes, to Jeruſalem, and through all Judea, firſt, and then to all the nations of the world.

46. And ſaid unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Chriſt to ſuffer, and to riſe from the dead the third day.

47. And that repentance and remiſſion of ſinnes ſhould be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jeruſalem.

48. And ye are witneſſes of theſe things.]

49. To which end he promiſed immediately to ſend them the holy Spirit (promiſed by God the Father) to deſcend from heaven upon every one of them, and ſo to inſtall them to ſucceed him in his office, till which time he commanded them all to ſtay, and not to ſtirre out of Jeruſalem.

49. And behold, I ſend the promiſe of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jeruſalem, untill ye be indued with power from on high.]

50. And he led them out as farre as to Bethany: and he lift up his hands, and bleſſed them.

51. Act. 1. 9.

51. And it came to paſſe, while he bleſſed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

52. And they worſhipped him, and returned to Jeruſalem with great joy.

53. conſtantly at the times of devotion (ſee note on Act. 1. d.) in ſome of the chambers of the Temple,

53. And they were [continually in the Temple,] praiſing and bleſſing God. Amen.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. IN the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God.

1, 2. In the beginning of the world before all time, before any thing was created, the

2. The ſame was in the beginning with God.]

ſon of God had a ſubſiſtence, and that ſubſiſtence with his Father, of whom he was begotten from all eternity, and was himſelf eternal God, and being by his Father in his eternal purpoſe deſign'd to be the Meſſias, who was among the Jews known by the title of the Word of God, (ſee note on Luk. 1. b.) he is here fitly expreſs'd by that title, The word.

3 All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made.

3. This eternal word of God I mean by which all things were at firſt created.

4. In him was life, and the life was the light of men.]

4. He brought with him that doctrine which is worthily called life, c. 6. 63. and 12. 50. becauſe it leads to holy life here, ſuch as God will be ſure to accept of through Chriſt, and to reward eternally (whereas the law was the bringing in of death) ſee c. 10. 10. and this vivificall doctrine was the means deſigned by God to lead and enlighten all mankind, eſpecially the Jews, to tell them their duty, and therefore is called the light of life, c. 8. 12.

5. And the light ſhineth in darkneſſe, and the darkneſſe * comprehended it not.]

* received or apprehended, καταλαμβάνω.

5. Though through the darkneſſe of mens hearts, the greateſt part of the Jews themſelves had no fruit or benefit by it.

6. There was a man ſent from God,] whoſe name was John.

6. There came a man with commiſſion from God to preach repentance to the Iews, † teſtimony μαρτυρία

7. The ſame came for a † witneſſe to bear witneſſe of the light, that all men through him might believe.]

7. He was by God ſent on purpoſe to teſtifie that Chriſt was the Meſſias, the true teacher ſent from heaven, that ſo by that teſtimony of his all men might believe on him.

8. He was not that light, but was ſent to] bear witneſſe of that light.

8. This Iohn was not the Meſſias, but the whole end of his miſſion into the world was to * which coming into the world enlightneth every man.

9. That was the true light * which lighteth every man [a] that cometh into the world.]

9. That word which now I ſpeak of, that is, Chriſt is that true light, eminently that, which light is defined to be able to refreſh and warm the coldeſt, and to enlighten the darkeſt heart, And he, as the ſun after a long darkneſſe of night, is now riſen in our hemiſphere (ſee v. 10. and c 9. 5. and 12. 46.) and being manifeſted to the world, ſhineth forth to every man therein. a.

10. He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.]

10. This word was from the beginning in the world, in ſo eminent a manner, that indeed the world was made by him, but the generality of men did not take notice of him.

11. He came unto his own, and his own received him not.]

11. And therefore there being one peculiar nation, the Iews, which were more fully then all the world beſides inſtructed in this truth, he at laſt came to this people, was pleaſed to be born and live and do miracles among them, and theſe that were his own people did not entertain him as ſent from God, but rejected and put him to death.

12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the ſons of God, even to them that believe on his name,]

12. But all that received, that is, believed on him, were by him advanced to be the adopted ſons of God.

13. Which were [b] born not of blood, nor of the will of the fleſh, nor of the will of man, but of God.]

13. To wit, thoſe which live according to the will of God, and neither the naturall nor carnall, nor bare morall principle. b.

† or, had his tabernacle * from σκηνόω

14. And the word was made fleſh, and [c] † dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory [d] as of the only begotten * of the Father) full of grace and truth.]

14. And this eternal word was born in humane fleſh, aſſumed our nature, and in that fleſh of ours, as in a tabernacle, appeared among us moſt gloriouſly, in ſuch a manner, as was not competible to any but the one true eternal ſon of God. And whereas the former tabernacle, wherein God was pleaſed to dwell, had in it the law, that miniſtration onely of death, 2 Cor. 3. 7. precepts of exact obedience, he now in the tabernacle of his fleſh, by his incarnation and paſſion, &c. is all full of grace, that is, exceeding mercy: and whereas the whole buſineſs of that tabernacle was nothing but ſhadows, he hath brought the ſubſtance and truth with him, which was meant by all thoſe ſhadows, the inward purity, ſhadowed by the legal precepts of circumciſion, &c. and ſpiritual and eternal promiſes, in ſtead of thoſe carnal or temporal, ſee v. 17. c. d.

* This was he, ὅτι Or. ὃν

15. John bare witneſſe of him; and cried, ſaying, * This is he of whom I ſpake, He that cometh after me, is preferred before me, for he [e] was before me.]

15. Iohn the Baptiſt teſtified and proclaimed concerning him, ſaying, He that followes me, whoſe forerunner I am, hath been, and muſt alwaies be preferred infinitely before me; For although he appeares after me among you in reſpect of his birth and entring on his office, yet he had a being long before me, And this was moſt truely ſaid of the Baptiſt; For he was before the creation of the world, v. 2, 3. Col. 1. 17. e.

16. And of his fulneſſe have we all received, and grace for grace.]

16. And being full of all graces, excellencies, perfections, he hath communicated them to us in that degree, as is neceſſary for us, and in proportion to his abundant charity and goodneſſe toward us, we Chriſtians which are his body or fellow-members of his humane nature, receive grace and mercy flowing from him to us, (ſee ver. 14. and note on 1 Pet. 3. c. and Act. 2. f.)

17. For the law was given by Moſes, but grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt.]

17. For though the law were given by Moſes from God long ago, yet the Goſpel, called Grace, v. 14. (ſee note on Heb. 13. d.) as it is oppoſed to the ſeverity and rigour of the law; and truth, as oppoſite to the ſhadowes and ceremonies of the law, was to be brought in by Ieſus Chriſt.

18. No man hath ſeen God at any time; The onely begotten ſon, which is in the boſome of the Father he hath declared him.]

18. God is inviſible, and not approachable by us, and ſo his will, and the knowledge of his attributes cannot be conveighed to us but by ſome interceſſor, and of this ſort none can be comparable to Chriſt Jeſus, who is next unto the Father and moſt dearly beloved by him, and knows moſt of his mind (ſee note on Mat. 8. g.) and his end of coming into the world was to declare this unto us.

19, 20. Now when the Jews ſent meſſengers to John Baptiſt as he was preaching and baptizing, to know who he was, this was conſtantly his anſwer, that he was not the Meſſias, prophecied of, and ſo long expected by them.

24. And they which were ſent were of the Phariſees.

25. Why then doſt thou receive diſciples, and proſelytes, or followers, and that after the ſolemn manner of receiving proſelytes, by way of baptiſme, or waſhing,

25. And they asked him and ſaid unto him, [Why baptizeſt thou then,] if thou be not that Chriſt, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

The day after the return of the Phariſees, Iohn ſeeing Jeſus coming to him, ſaid, Behold the perſon ſent from God, as a lamb prepared for the ſlaughter, (in whom are ſumm'd up and completed all the typicall Moſaicall preſcriptions of lambs to be ſacrificed, either in their daily ſacrifices, or at the paſſover) who ſhall thereby obtain pardon from God for that ſin that all the world is engaged in, on condition they now reform at his coming.

31. And though I was not able to diſcriminate him from others, yet a little before his baptiſme it was revealed to me (as appeares Mat. 3. 14.) and at his baptiſme by the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon him, Mat. 3. 16. I was clearly told it, that he was the Meſſias which was to come into the world; And the grand deſign of my coming and gathering diſciples was by that means to make this people take notice of, and receive Chriſt.

31. And I knew him not: but that he ſhould be made manifeſt to Iſrael, therefore am I come baptizing with water.]

40. One of the two that heard thoſe words of Iohn concerning Ieſus, and which thereupon followed Ieſus, v. 37. was that Andrew which was brother to Simon after ſurnamed Peter. (And the other moſt probably Iohn, the writer of this Goſpel, who uſeth not to name himſelf, when the ſtory would direct to it.)

46. Nathaneel argued againſt this from a known obſervation among the Jewes, that Nazareth being in Galilee, and Galilee, as they conceived, looked on by God as a mean deſpicable place, out of which, ſay they c. 8. 52. never any prophet aroſe, it was incredible that any one born in Nazareth ſhould be the Meſſias. To this deceivable arguing Philip gives no other anſwer then this, that if he would goe to him, and ſee and heare him, he would ſoon be of another mind.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Ερχόμενον εἰς τὸν κόσμον.

V. 9. That cometh into the World.] That ἐρχόμενον here may be the Nominative caſe in the Neuter gender, and ſo agree with ὃ which, as well as the Accuſative Maſculine, and ſo agree with πάντα ἄνθρωπον every man, is evident. And that it is ſo, may appear by the title, by which Chriſt (that is meant by the light, which is the Antecedent to ὃ which) is ſo frequently expreſs'd in Scripture, that of he that cometh or cometh into the world. Of the title ὁ ἐρχόμενος, ſee Mat. 11. Note a. And for this encreaſe of it, ἐρχόμενος εἰς τὸν κόσμον, coming into the world, ſee Joh. 12. 46. I came a light into the world, directly parallel with this here. Only here it is to be obſerved, that this coming into the world, doth not referre to Chriſts birth in the world, but to the manifeſtation of him to the world, his entring on his office of preaching the will of God to them. So as his coming may be all one with his being ſent, that is, his Commiſſion from God to declare his will unto the world, as Joh. 8 42. I came not of my ſelf but he ſent me. So c. 18. 37. For this was I born, and for this I came into the world; where as coming into the world differs from birth, ſo is it in the next words ſpecified what it peculiarly belongs to, I came into the world that I may bear witneſſe to the truth. Thus it is uſed in the other word ſent of the Apoſtles, where it cannot poſſibly be underſtood of their birth, Joh. 17. 18. As thou haſt ſent me into the world, ſo alſo have I ſent them into the world. So 1 Tim. 1. 15. Jeſus Chriſt came into the world, and here Joh. 11. 27. I believe that thou art Chriſt the ſon of God ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος that cometh into the world; which was certainly deſigned by Martha as an expreſſion of her belief that he was the Meſſias.

b. Γεννᾶσθαι ἐκ Θεοῦ

V. 13. Born not of blood] To be born of any thing ſignifies to receive his beginning or principle of life and motion from any thing: and ſo here to be born of God is to have received ſome ſpeciall influence from him, and proportionably to be a ſon of God is that ſtate which is anſwerable to ſuch a principle, a life proportionable to ſuch a beginning, that higher pitch of Chriſtian living now under the Goſpel. And in oppoſition to that, Firſt, thoſe That are born of blood (which is the livelyeſt expreſſion of our corrupt birth, or naturall eſtate) are thoſe that live the ἐθνικὸν καὶ πρῶτον βίον, that natural, heathen, firſt life, ſaith Clemens Alexandrinus, the life of the naturall man: Secondly, Thoſe that are born of the will of the fleſh are carnal men, thoſe that follow their own vicious carnal will; and Thirdly, Thoſe that are born of the will of man (though literally that may note thoſe that are adopted by man, yet) by way of Accommodation, and ſo as may be agreeable to the former phraſes, they ſeem to be thoſe that by the influences of that higher rational principle, live according to the rule of rational nature, that is, of unregenerate morality, to which the rules of Chriſts law ſuperadding much of light and perfection, the believers and receivers of Chriſt are here defined to be thoſe that live according to thoſe rules, that higher principle, (and ſo are ſaid to be born of God) and not according to any of theſe lower ſtates.

c. Σκηνοῦν

V. 14. Dwelt] What is meant by Gods being ſaid to be preſent or to appeare in the Old Teſtament, hath been expreſs'd Mat. 3. k. to wit, that the Angels which are the courtiers of heaven doe appear (as they are wont to doe) in ſome ſhining glorious manner. This is wont by the Hebrews to be called שכינה the habitation, or preſence, of God. and in Greek δόξα glory, and ἐπιφάνεια appearing. So Num. 16. 10. the glory of the Lord appeared, and v. 42. the cloud covered, and the glory appeared, and God ſpeaks from thence. So when the glory is ſaid to be departed from Iſrael 1 Sam. 4. 21. 'tis clear that by glory is meant the preſence of God, which was ſignified by the Ark, and ſo in many other places, ſee Note on 1 Pet. 4. f. and 2 Pet. 1. 3. and 17. Rom. 9. c. So Rev. 21. when it had been ſaid of the New Jeruſalem that 'twas σκηνὴ the Tabernacle of God with us, v. 3. that being repeated again v. 11. is ſaid in theſe words, ἔχουσα δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, having the glory of God. See Rev. 21. 23. alſo. And becauſe this appearance of God in the fleſh was the moſt viſible permanent, and ſo remarkable appearance, wherein he ever exhibited himſelf among us, therefore it is that here 'tis expreſs'd (as it were by the Schechina) by ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν, he had his Tabernacle pitch'd among us (the Greek σκηνόω coming immediately from the Hebrew שכן and differing from it only by the Greek termination) agreeable to that Prophecy of Noah, Gen. 9. 27. in the Targums understanding of it, that God should dwell in the tents of Sem, that is, saith that Chaldee Paraphrast, that his Schechina should inhabite in the tabernacle of Sem. The same is expres'd here again by δόξα in the other part of the verse, the glory (and so most probably, 1 Pet. 4. 14. and Joh. 12. 4.) which is the other expression of the presence of the divine majesty, and accordingly Procopius on Isa. c. 40. interprets δόξαν κυρίου, τὸν υἱὸν, the glory of the Lord to be the son, who, saith he, is above all creatures, of the same divinity with the father, but especially being man is capable of this title, θαυμαίσι ῥηγῶν ἀεὶ καὶ πᾶσι κτίσιν μεταπλάττων τῷ ῥήματι, γενόμενος πᾶσι σωτήριος, &c. always working miracles, and transforming the creature by his word, and bringing salvation to all at this his appearance, Tit. 2. 11. For though this incarnation of Christ was the greatest humbling of him, yet was it nevertheless the greatest manifestation of his glory, never so much of the Divine power and glory was seen upon the earth, as in this. Thus Joh. 2. 11. Christs working miracles is said to be the means of manifesting his glory, that is, of evidencing the inhabitation of the Godhead in them.

d. Ib. As of the only begotten] For the signification of the particle ὡς as S. Chrysostomes note is worth reciting, ὐχ ὁμοιώσεως, saith he, ἔξεστιν, οὐδὲ παραβολῆς, ἀλλὰ βεβαιώσεως καὶ ἀναμφισβητήτου διορισμοῦ, It is not a note of similitude or comparison, but of confirmation and unquestionable definition; as if, saith he, the Evangelist had said, we saw his glory, such as became, and was fit for the only begotten, and true natural son of God, the king of all. To the same purpose saith Adrian, in his εἰσαγωγὴ to the Scripture, p. 9. Τὸ Ὡς διχῶς λέγει, ἤτοι καὶ παραβολὴ, ἢ καὶ βεβαίωσιν, The Scripture useth ὡς, as, two ways; First, By way of comparison; And Secondly, Of confirmation: and as an instance of the latter he gives ὡς ἀγαθὸς ὁ θεὸς τῷ Ισραὴλ, Truly God is good to Israel, Psal. 73. 1. and this text, where saith he, 'tis used ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀληθοῦς, the glory of the true only begotten son.

e. Πρῶτός V. 15. Was before me] What is the notion of the word πρῶτος first in the New Testament, may here be fitly defined; 1. It signifies in many places (being spoken of a person or persons, especially when it hath a Genitive case annex'd to it) a ruler or principal person. So Mar. 6. 21. Πρώτοις τῆς Γαλιλαίας the principal men Galilee. So Lu. 19. 47. πρώτοι τοῦ λαοῦ, the Rulers or Elders, of the people. So Acts 13. 50. πρώτοι τῆς πόλεως, the governors of the city. So Acts 28. 7. πρώτος τῆς νήσου the ruler of the Island. and v. 17. πρώτοι τῶν Ιουδαίων, the rulers of the Jews, that is, of their Consistory, which they then had at Rome. In this sense the phrase πρῶτός μου cannot be taken here, so as to be rendred my Lord, my Prince, or my Captain; for that is certainly the meaning of the phrase precedent ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν he was preferred before me, as will appear by v. 27. compared with Mat. 3. 11. Mar. 1. 7. Lu. 3. 16. There by the mention of the shooe, &c. 'tis plain, that those four places are parallel, and that which is ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν, was preferred before me in this, is by all the other Evangelists rendred ἰσχυρότερός μου ἐστὶν, is stronger then I. And therefore S. Chrysostome here interprets ἔμπροσθέν μου, before me, by λαμπρότερος, ἐντιμότερος, more excellent, more honourable. From this clear notion of ἔμπροσθεν precedent, for priority of dignity, will depend the just notion of πρῶτός μου, annex'd thereto by the Causal ὅτι for, as the proof of the former, and so somewhat different from it, or else it would be the proving of idem per idem, the same by its self. Thence it follows, that ἔμπροσθεν noting Christs dignity above Johns, πρῶτός μου, must not be rendred in that sense, and so it remains, that it be referred to priority of time, ὅτι πρῶτός μου ἦν, for (although he was born after me and not yet entred on his office, yet) he was before me, he had a being long, even infinitely before me. The only exception against this rendring of πρῶτος is that the word is of the Superlative degree, not of the Comparative. But that is easily answered, by remembring, that in the New Testament the degrees of comparison are promiscuously used, taken one for another, and that on occasion of the Hebrew idiom, which hath not those degrees of comparison, which other languages have. Thus is μία one used Mia for πρώτη first Lu. 24. 1. and others the like. And thus is πρῶτος first in the Superlative used for the comparative πρότερος former, so 'tis evidently in this Gospel, c. 15. 18. ἐμὲ πρῶτον ὑμῶν μεμίσηκεν, the world hated me before you: c. 20. 8. ὁ ἐλθὼν πρῶτος he that came first, signifies him that came before Peter v. 3. and so is taken for the Comparative πρότερος. And so when Christ is called the πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως, Col. 1. 15. litterally Πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως.
the first-born of all the creation, it must be interpreted, as it is in the Nicene Creed, according to this notion of πρῶτος, begotten of his father before the whole creation, or, as it followes v. 17. πρὸ πάντων he is before all things. Thus is the word used sometimes in humane Greek authors also, as πρῶτον Δαρείου in * Aristophanes, before * Opp.
Darius: and that it must be so here appears by the conjunction of μοῦ to it, which (as by being in the Genitive case, it is fit to be joyned with a word of the comparative degree, so) by being of a single person, uncapable of distribution or plurality, cannot belong to a Superlative.

V. 29. The next day] Η ἐπαύριον signifies here the f. day immediately following, not (according to the lati- ἐπαύριον tude of the Hebrew מחר) the morrow, that is, any part of the following time: For thus I conceive the whole series and course of this story in S. John is to be made up. As in the other Evangelists Mat. 3. 11. Mar. 1. 7. Lu. 3. 16. the testimonies of John Baptist concerning Christ are set down, before Christ was particularly made known unto him, so now, the Spirit having visibly descended on him at his Baptisme (as the same Evangelists agreee in relating) this Evangelist farther mentions John Baptists subsequent testimonies of him, founded in that demonstration of the Spirit then descending on him. Such is that mention'd v. 15. where the Baptist saith, This was he that I speak of, This person on whom the Spirit so visibly descended after my baptizing of him, was he to whom my former obscurer testimonies belonged. And this seems to have been delivered by the Baptist at the time of Christs absence in the wilderness 40 days, (set down by the other Evangelists) and so all that second testimony, (mention'd v. 19. &c. to v. 28.) where of him he saith v. 26. μέσον ὑμῶν ἕστηκεν, ὃν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε, there stood among you one whom ye knew not, referring again to that time of Christs being baptiz'd of John, at which time he saw (that is, I conceive, John Baptist saw) the Spirit descend upon him, Mat. 3. 16. and so again Mar. 1. 10. εὐθὺς ἀναβαίνων, John coming out of the water with him, from baptizing him, saw the heavens opened &c. noting this descent of the Spirit upon him to have been particularly seen by this Baptist, by which he was enabled thus to testifie of him. This second testimony of Johns was caused by the Jewes sending to him from Jerusalem, to know whether John were the Messias or no, and this still in the time of Christs absence, and then 'tis added τῇ ἐπαύριον, the day after the returne of those messengers, the day after this testimony, and answer of his to the Jewes, Jesus came back from the desert to Jordan, where John was, and there John sees him, v. 29. and testifies again of him at large, v. 35. And the next day after this is the beginning of a new account, v. 35. and again τῇ ἐπαύριον v. 44. the next day is the second day of that new account, and then 'tis added distinctly, τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ, c. 2. 1. on the third day.

V. 42. Brought

g. V. 42. Brought him to Jesus] What is here said of Andrews and Peters coming to Christ, was sometime before their forsaking their trades, and following him in the other Gospels. For here the next day after Christs returning from the wilderness to Jordan, John Baptist is standing still ver. 35. and two disciples with him, One of them was Andrew v. 40. John seeing Christ points to him in their hearing, and by so doing doth in a manner put them off from continuing with him, and fastens them on Christ, saying, Behold the Lamb of God, &c. v. 36. Andrew and the other (who very probably was John the writer of this Gospel, who therefore names the circumstances of the time of Day, ver. 40. and the very words that pass'd so punctually, but after this manner in other places conceals his name) goe presently to Christ, and ask him where he abides, follow him thither, spend some time with him that evening, soon after that Andrew reveals this to Simon, and both of them together goe to Christ, v. 42. Assoon as Christ saw them, he told Simon, that his name was Simon, and that he was the son of Jona or John, and that his name should be changed into a Syriack word, that signified a stone, that is Πέτρα, or Πέτρος in Greek, noting that he should be built upon (or added to) Christ, superstructed on that great corner stone (in this building, the Church, which was now to be erected,) and in his choosing and sending out Apostles should be the first, πρῶτος Σίμων Mat. 10. 2. Now of these three, Andrew and that other disciple (probably John) and Peter, none did immediately joyne themselves to Christ, so as to accompany him as yet, but of this sort, the first that we find is Philip, v. 44. whom Christ calls (in his journey to Galilee) to follow or goe along with him (and therefore the πρωτοκλησία the priviledge of their first call belongs to him) He doth so, and then goes a little way off to Nathaneel, and brings him to Christ, v. 43. and he is received by Christ to be a disciple also (whether chosen after to be one of the Apostles under the name of Bartholomew, who is mostly, and in the Gospels constantly, joyned to Philip, and may be but the expression of Nathaneel, by signifying him the son of Tholomee, as Simon is called Bar, i. e. son, of Jonah, or John, it is not certain, though that he was so, 'tis very probable by Joh. 21. 22. where Nathaneel of Cana in Galilee is named with the rest of the disciples who were all Apostles.) After this Christ goes into Cana of Galilee to the mariage there, c. 2. he and his disciples with him v. 2. which notes that he had such constant followers; Then he and his disciples went to Capernaum, thence to Jerusalem at the Passover, v. 13. and there cast out the buyers and sellers out of the Temple. Then after the discourse with Nicodemus c. 3. Jesus and his disciples went into Judea, and continued there and baptized, v. 22. (that is, his disciples baptized, though he did not, ch. 4. 2. which signifies sure that he now had disciples) at which time 'tis said that John baptized in Ænon, v. 23. and some farther time it was before John was put in prison, for after this, 'tis said, as yet he was not, c. 3. 24. But when John was imprisoned, Mat. 4. 12. Mar. 1. 14. then again a second time Jesus goes into Galilee, Lu. 4. 14. and Joh. 4. 3. and there within a while walking by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew a fishing (as yet living in their vocation) Mat. 4. 18. Mar. 1. 16. and upon the great draught of fish, Peter at that time was so astonied, and Christ so revealed himself to them, that they all, Peter, Andrew, James, and John, left all, and followed him; But this clearly after all that was related in the three first, and part of the 4th chap. of this Gospel. By this ordering and marshalling the Evangelists in this particular, as the perplexities of the story will be a little cleared, so 'twill also appear, what ground there is for the asserting the πρωτοκλησία or priviledge of the first call to belong to S. Peter. All that can be said of him in that particular is his coming to Christ with Andrew, when Christ told him his name should be changed into Cephas, &c. But at that time Christ bad him not follow him, and after that 'tis clear he parted from him, and followed his trade some time, till Christs second coming into Galilee, and till after Johns imprisonment, and if that which Christ then said to him (joyned with his coming to, but not staying with him) should be thought sufficient to date his calling from thence, yet then are Andrew and that other disciple (most probably S. John the writer of this Gospel, who had the honour of the πρωτοκλισία, the uppermost place next Christ at meals, lay with his head at Christs bosome; see Note on Mat. 8. g.) in all reason to be resolved on, as the πρωτοκλησίας the first call'd, having gone to Christs abode, and continued that evening with him, c. 1. 40. But if this be not sufficient to settle the πρωτοκλησία in either of these, because they and S. Peter return'd to their trades till after Johns imprisonment, then sure must it be placed somewhere else; for 'tis cleare Christ had disciples before that, who baptized many, and 'tis clear of Philip that he followed Christ, as his inseparable attendant, and there is little reason to doubt it of Nathaneel, and so in no respect can it be settled in S. Peter, who (yet farther) when he did forsake all and follow Christ, had three more Andrew and James and John which accompanied him in so doing.

CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

1. AND the third day there was a * mariage in Cana of Galilee, and the mother of Jesus was there.

* mariage-feast, γάμος

2. And both Jesus † was called and his disciples to the mariage.

† and his disciples were invited to the feast, ἐκλήθη καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς τ. γάμον

3. And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus [saith unto him, They want wine.]

3. mention'd the want of wine to Christ as an occasion and season of revealing his power, by shewing a miracle to all there present in supplying them.

4. Jesus saith unto her, Woman, a what have I to doe with thee? mine hour is not yet come.]

4. But Christ repressed her, saying that this matter of his office to which he was sent by God, was a thing, wherein she, though his earthly parent, was not to interpose; Farther telling her that 'twas not yet seasonable for him to shew forth his power unto all, intimating his purpose that he would doe it more privately then by her words she appeared to designe it.

5. His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, doe it.]

5. Whereupon, that none but the waiters might take notice of it (who knowing the wine was all spent, could not chuse but know if any supply were made) she bids them be obedient to him, and without any noise, doe what he should bid them.

† cleansing, or washing, καθαρισμοῦ.

6. And there were set there six * waterpots of stone, after the manner of the † purifying of the Jewes, containing two or three firkins a piece.]

6. And there were there six vessels of stone, cisterns of a competent bigness, out of which they were wont to draw water for every mans use; These were set there to wash in, after the manner of the Jewes, who constantly wash before meals. See note on Mar. 7. a.

7. Jesus saith unto them, Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8. And he ſaith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the Governour of the feaſt. And they bear it.

9. When the ruler of the feaſt had taſted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was (but the ſervants that drew the water, knew) the Governour of the feaſt called the bridegroom,

10. And ſaith unto him, [every man at the beginning doth ſet forth good wine, and when men have well drunk, then that which is * worſe, but thou haſt kept the good wine untill now.]

10. It is the manner of men at feaſts, to bring their gueſts the ſtronger, richer wines at the beginning, then that which is not ſo rich, but thou haſt reſerved the richeſt piece till the latter end of the feaſt.

* ſmaller, τὸν ἐλάσσω

11. This * beginning of miracles did Jeſus in Cana of Galilee, and [manifeſted forth his glory, and his diſciples believed on him.]

11. gave evidence of the preſence of his divinity (ſee note on c. 1. b.) and accordingly his diſciples believed on him, as the ſon of God.

* Jeſus made the beginning of his miracles, ἐποίησε τὴν ἀρχὴν τῶν σημείων ὁ Ἰησοῦς.

12. After this he went down to Capernaum, he and his mother, and his brethren, and his diſciples, and they continued there not many daies.

13. And the Jewes Paſſover was at hand, and Jeſus went up to Jeruſalem,

14. And found in the Temple thoſe [that ſold oxen, and ſheep, and doves, and the † changers of money ſitting.]

14. that ſet up a trade to ſell ſacrifices to them that came thither from farre, and that returned money by way of exchange, (ſee note on Mat. 21. b.)

† exchangers, καπηλεῖς

15. And when he had made a ſcourge of ſmall cords, he drove them all out of the Temple, [and the ſheep and the oxen, and poured out the * changers money, and overthrew their tables.

15. And uſing no other weapon but only a whip of little cords, which he found there; he drave them all out of the Temple, no man making any reſiſtance, (in like manner as he after did again Mat. 21. 12.)

* money-merchants, κολλυβιστῶν ſee note on Mat. 21. b.

16. And ſaid unto them that ſold doves, Take theſe things hence, make not [my Fathers houſe, an houſe of Merchandiſe.]

16. the Temple ſet apart for Gods peculiar preſence and ſervice, a ſhop of trade to buy and ſell in it.

17. And his diſciples [remembred that it was written, The zeal of thine houſe hath eaten me up.]

17. interpreted that act of his, as an act of zeal, by which ſome malefactors were puniſhed in the very fact, without legall proceſſe and condemnation among the Jewes, and to that purpoſe call'd to mind that of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 69. 9. The zeal of thy houſe hath fed or gnawed upon me, and the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me, that is I am as tender of any diſhonour done to thy houſe or thee, as if it were done to my ſelf, ſee Rom. 15. 3. and ſo am ſtirr'd up with zeal to vindicate it.

18. Then anſwered the Jewes and ſaid unto him, What ſigne ſheweſt thou us, * ſeeing that thou doeſt theſe things?]

18. Hereupon the Jewes came and queſtion'd him ſaying, What commiſſion doeſt thou bring? what evidence of thy coming from God, or, what miracles doſt thou doe by which it may appear to us that thou art inveſted with ſuch authority, as theſe acts of thine pretend to?

* that ὅτι

19. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Deſtroy this temple, and in three daies I will raiſe it up.]

19. Jeſus ſaid unto them, The ſigne that is to be ſhewn to you is this, that when you have put me to death, I now tell you, that I ſhall within three daies riſe again, ſee Mat. 12. 39.

20. Then ſaid the Jewes, Fourty and ſix years was this Temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three daies?]

20. This being ſaid by him in a parabolicall manner calling his body this temple; and the putting him to death, the deſtroying of this temple; and his reſurrection, the rearing it again; they miſtook his meaning, and thought he had ſpoken of the Temple of Jeruſalem (and laid it up as an accuſation againſt him, Mat. 26. 61.) and argued againſt it, as an impoſſible thing for him to rebuild that in ſo ſmall a time.

21. But he ſpake of the Temple of his body.]

21. But the truth was, he ſpake of his bodies being kill'd, and riſing again the third day, which after the manner of prophets he thus expreſs'd, and mentioned this as the miracle by which his doctrine was to be confirm'd.

22. When therefore he was riſen from the dead, his diſciples remembred that he had ſaid this unto them, and they believed the Scripture, and the word which Jeſus had ſaid.]

22. This ſpeech of his the diſciples called to mind after his reſurrection, and upon that, added to many other completions of his owne predictions, and the predictions of Scripture concerning him, they believed thoſe prophecies as fulfilled in him, and believed his own words as agreeable thereto, and ſo reſolved that he was the Meſſias.

23. Now when he was in Jeruſalem at the Paſſoever, on the feaſt day, many believed in his name, when they ſaw the miracles which he did.]

23 Many others did ſo alſo at Jeruſalem when he came thither, and acknowledged the power by which he acted to be divine, being convinced thereof by the miracles which he did there at the time of the feaſt of the Paſſover and unleavened bread.

24. But Jeſus did not commit himſelf unto them, becauſe he knew * all men.

25. And needed not that any ſhould teſtifie of man: for he knew what was in man.]

* all things, or, every man, for ſome ancient copies read, πάντα

24, 25. But Jeſus knowing the ſecrets of mens hearts, and wanting no information concerning any man, (being able to dive into the inſide of a man, into his very thoughts) conſequently diſcerned what kind of belief this was in theſe men, how unlikely to bear any ſtreſſe, to hold out in time of temptation, and his time of ſuffering being not yet come, he would not venture himſelf to the hazard of their unconſtancy, and therefore did not ſo freely converſe, as to abide and eat and drink with them.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί

V. 4. What have I to doe with thee [Tis not eaſie to reſolve what is the importance of this ſpeech of Chriſt to his mother, τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί; What have I to do with thee? yet by the next verſe, which tells us what Mary did upon it, (viz. ſpake to the attendants, that they ſhould do whatſoever Chriſt bad them) 'tis clear that ſhe did not conclude from his ſpeech, that he would not make uſe of his power to help them to wine, but directly the contrary, that ſhe believed that he would. And 'tis clear by ver. 7. that Chriſt immediately goes about it, bids them fill the water-pots of water, and immediately turns it into wine. By this 'tis manifeſt that the meaning of Chriſts ſpeech muſt not be, that his time of working miracles was not yet come, but either that it was not yet the fitteſt point of time to do this particular miracle, but 'twould be more fit, becauſe more beneficiall, when the wine was quite ſpent, or elſe that 'twas not yet his time to do his miracles ſo openly and publickly, as Mary seemed to believe (and his kindred after insist on, c. 7. 4) but Christ frequently provides against (for what reasons, see Mat. 8. b.) To this latter the circumstances of the Context considered all together doe most encline, And accordingly the result is, that though he meant to work this miracle, yet he would doe it more privately, so as it should appear to none of the Guests, or to the Bridegroom, or to the Ruler of the feast, but only to the waiters and his own disciples and mother, that came along with him. This is manifest by the event; for ver. 9. the ἀρχιτρίκλινος the manager, or orderer, of the feast knew it not, but only they that drew the water, that is, the waiters; nor is there any farther publick notice taken of the miracle, but only that the Evangelist mentions it, as a beginning or præludium of of his σημεῖα signes, or wonders, v. 11. by which by little and little he made himself known to the world, and manifested his glory, that is, made it appear that the Godhead dwelt in him, but this not to all, but his disciples, of whom peculiarly 'tis added, that they believed on him. As for that form of speech τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί, it is only a form of repressing (as much as let alone, with which 'tis joyned Mar. 1. 24.) and so is used 2 Sam. 19. 22. Mat. 8. 29. Mar. 5. 7. Lu. 8. 28. to expresse dislike to the proposall, in the first, In the rest, to desire him to let them alone, not to meddle with them. And accordingly it here signifies Christs dislike of Mary's proposall, which was (without any care of secrecie) publickly to supply them with wine, now it was wanting. Which manner of doing it Christ dislikes & gives his reason for it, οὔπω γὰρ ἥκει 'twas not yet fit to doe his miracles so publickly. The truth of this interpretation, by which 'tis granted that Christ did not say, that it was not his season to doe the miracle (but only not to doe it so publickly) is so convincing, that Gregory Nyssene, rather then he would grant the meaning of it to be, that his time of doing any miracle was not yet come, thought himself obliged to read the latter part of the verse by way of interrogation also, Is not my houre yet come? and to interpret it thus, Am not I yet of age to be master of my own actions? wilt thou rule me now at this age still? But there is no need of this altering the punctation, Justin Martyr, or the Author of the Quæst. and Answ. ad Ortho. would have it rendred thus literally, What is it to me and thee? that is, the care of providing wine belongs not to thee and me, p. 136. But the first interpretation is most satisfactory, and beyond exception.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

1. THere was a man of the Pharisees named Nicodemus, [a Ruler of the Jewes.]

1. one of the Jewish Sanhedrim.

2. The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou * art a teacher come from God: for no man can doe these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.]

2. Who durst not be seen or known to come to Jesus and therefore did it by night, *come from God a teacher, ἀπὸ θεοῦ ἐληλυθας διδάσκαλος

c. 7. 50. and 19. 9. and said unto him, Master we are convinced that thou art sent by God to teach and instruct us in his way, for this thy miracles testifie, which could not be done without God's speciall hand, and would never be allowed by God to confirm falsities.

3. Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdome of God.]

3. Jesus willing to undeceive him, and that he might not flatter himself, that the acknowledging of him to be the Messias, or sent from God, would be sufficient, without the undertaking his service, owning and confessing of him (in despight of all fear of men) without being his proselyte, and forsaking his former course, tells him positively, that unlesse he would be born again, which is a phrase to denote a proselyte of Christ, and when occasion required, forsake all for Christ's sake, even his former course of life, and dignity in the Iewish state, (contrary to his coming to him by night, and acknowledging him secretly) he should not see the kingdome of God, be a Christian here (which is a priviledge of a greater height, then that of being a Iew, or a member of their Sanhedrim) or a Saint hereafter.

4. Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mothers womb and be born?]

4. Nicodemus attending only to the literall sound, not sense of Christs words, asks how a man of full years can again be born.

5. Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be [a] born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God.]

5. Iesus answers him, Except a man be received as a proselyte, and that not of an ordinary sort, such as are among you Iewes, but a Christian proselyte, such as are received by Baptisme in the Christian Church, so as to undertake the law of Christ, and renounce his former (whether heathen, or) Iewish course, the first expresst by being wash't in water, the ceremony of the Iewes proselytisme, (now also made use of by Christ) by which a man was said by the Iewes to be new born, and accordingly so here in an high degree; the second by being born of the Spirit, entring on a new pure spirituall life, and not only passing under those externall washings (agreeable unto which it was, that Christ's disciples were admitted not only by water, as John's and the Iewes proselytes were, but by the holy Ghost's descending upon them, see note on Act. 1. a) he cannot enter &c.

6. That which is born of the flesh, is flesh; and that which is born of the spirit, is spirit.

6. The actions of a naturall man, which hath none of this new Christian birth, that hath not thus given himself up to a Christian life, will be but naturall actions, at least but externall purifications, restraints of sinne in the outward part. But the actions of a spirituall person, thus born anew from that higher principle, a proselyte of Christ's, they will be spirituall, purifications of the very spirit.

7. Marvail not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.]

7. And therefore you are not to wonder that I tell you of the necessity of this new birth, undertaking this new course, and forsaking the former, nor to think there is nothing in it, because 'tis not visible to your eyes: Many things have great force in them, whose beginnings are not visible to the eye, or at all known by men.

8. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou heareſt the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: So is every one that is born of the Spirit.]

8. As for example; the wind which, though no body knows from what part precisely it comes, what beginning it hath, and how produced, and when it riseth, or what becomes of it when it ceaseth, yet hath most discernible effects, comes with a great force and noise (which is evidence enough, that there is such a thing) is heard by all men: And so is it in this matter, He that is born anew, that undertakes to be a proselyte of Christ, he by the Spirit of God, and those influences that are conveyed to him from Christ, is able to doe wonderfull things, is discernibly another kind of man then he was before, and so his new birth is, and must be, seen by the fruits and growth &c. discernible to himself and others, though the beginnings or sourse, or means of conveighing this unto him be undiscernible. See Mar. 4. 26.

9. Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?]

9. Nicodemus still continued ignorant of the meaning and possibility of the truth of what Christ said, and therefore still question'd how this could be?

10. Jesus

10. To which Ieſus anſwered, This that I ſay of new birth in baptiſme, being not a learned Iew, a Phariſee, and only agreeable to, but perfectly a piece of your doctrine about proſelytes, tis ſtrange that thou being Maſter in Iſrael, ſhouldſt not underſtand it: ſee Mat. 3. a. and Ioh. 13. b.

10. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Art thou a maſter of Iſrael, and knoweſt not theſe things?]

11. The things that thou ſo wondreſt at, and wilt not believe, I have perfect knowledge of, and aſſure you of the truth of them, but the Iewes will not believe me.

11. Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, [We ſpeak that we doe know, and teſtifie that we have ſeen, and ye receive not our teſtimony.]

12. Your not believing or underſtanding (v. 9.) thoſe things that are ordinary in the Jewiſh law, (ſee v. 31.) is an argument, that things of an higher nature will not be received by you.

12. If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how ſhall you believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?]

13. As if I ſhall tell you that I am to aſcend up to heaven, and from thence demonſtrate to you that I came down from heaven, and am the very Meſſias, the eternall ſon of God, that am now a man.

13. And no man hath aſcended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the ſon of man which is in heaven.]

14, 15. And again that I am to be lifted up on the Croſſe, and thereby to fulfill what was typified by Moſes's lifting up the brazen ſerpent,

14. And as Moſes lifted up the ſerpent in the wilderneſs, even ſo muſt the ſon of man be lifted up,

15. That whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life.]

and that this is the way, by which I mean to bring all that believe in me to everlaſting life, as all that looked on the brazen ſerpent were cured of whatſoever diſeaſes.

16. For herein hath God's unſpeakable love been expreſt to all mankind, that he hath

16. For God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten ſon, that whoſoever believeth on him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life.]

ſent his eternall ſon to aſſume our nature, and to teach and give examples of holy life, and at laſt to die for them, and riſe again, and aſcend to heaven, all on this one deſigne, that every perſon in the world, that ſhall receive and obey him, ſhall be reſcued from eternall death, and then made partaker of eternall life.

17. For this my miſſion from God my Father was deſigned all in mercy and charity,

17. For God ſent not his ſon into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be ſaved.]

not to puniſh or condemn any man, but on purpoſe that all men might be reſcued from puniſhment.

18. He that receiveth and obeyeth me, is by me ſecured, that he ſhall eſcape all puniſhment, only he that rejecteth

18. He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemn'd already, becauſe he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten ſon of God.]

me is certainly condemned, (by the purport of that very covenant, of which mercy to believers is the principall part, all others being abſolutely excluded) for that great ſinne of refuſing of Chriſt now ſent to him, as having not embraced that only remedy, the only ſon of God now offered to him.

19. And this is it that will aggravate your ſinne and puniſhment, that when God made

19. And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkneſſe, rather then light, becauſe their deeds were evil.]

ſuch proviſion for you, when Chriſt came to enlighten and take men off from all their former evil courſes, they were ſo beſotted to their own ſinfull waies, that they choſe rather to continue in them, then to be reformed and purified by Chriſt, or but ſo much as to be taught their duty by him.

20. But as he that fears coming into the light, 'tis certain he hath ſomewhat to conceal, and that he hath not a mind to part with it, So the refuſing to come and be inſtructed in the knowledge of his duty by me, is an evidence that that man is a wicked man, and means to continue ſo, who cannot venture his actions in the light, for fear they be found faulty, and he engaged to reform them.

20. For every one that doth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, leſt his deeds ſhould be reproved.]

21. Whereas he that lives a juſtifyable life, or reſolves to amend what is amiſſe, a ſincere, upright perſon, will be glad of a director, will come cheerfully to be put in the way of ſtricteſt duty, and venture to have his actions judg'd of whether they be right or no, which is an argument that what he doth he doth in the fear of God, and with a good conſcience.

b. 29. When the bridegroom hath the bride in ſecret conference, to conſummate the marriage, and the friend of the bridegroom hearkens at the doore, to hear whether all ſucceed well or no, if the bridegrom ſignifie (by ſome ſorm of ſpeech, that was uſuall to that purpoſe) that all ſucceeds proſperouſly, then that friend rejoices exceedingly, and thus is it with me in my attendance on Chriſt at this time.

29. [b] He that hath the bride is the bridegroom, but the friend of the bridegroom which ſtandeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly, becauſe of the bridegrooms voice: This my joy therefore is fulfilled.]

30. He

30. He must increase, but I must decrease.] 30. And of him I shall farther foretell you, that he shall increase daily in splendor and fame, and I proportionably decrease.

31. He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth, he that cometh from heaven is above all.] 31. And it is all reason that it should be so. For he cometh from heaven, and so must needs be superiour to all such as I, who am an earthly man, having my originall from the earth, made up or compounded of earth, and therefore what I say or doe, is but of an earthy, but what he, of a much higher originall, my baptizing is but like the rest of your Jewish baptismes (see v. 12.) only with water, but his with the holy Ghost also.

32. And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth, and no man receiveth his testimony.] 32. And the thing which he teacheth he knowes to be true, having received it from his Father, but the multitude of men in the world receive not his testimony, believe not that he is sent from God.

33. He that hath received his testimony, hath set to his seale, that God is true.] 33. He that doth receive it doth in effect no more but bear witnesse unto, and acknowledge the veracity of God himself, it being as impossible that one so sent from God as Christ, should lie, as that God should lie himself.

34. For he whom God hath sent, speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.] 34. The former prophets had the Spirit in a limited measure bestowed on them by God, to goe on such or such an errand, on which God sent them, and 'tis therefore [Thus saith the Lord] to all their prophecies, But on Christ the Spirit descended once for all, and commanded belief of all that he should say.

35. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.] 35. Christ is the welbeloved of his Father, and by him God hath revealed to us all things fit to reveal, see Mat. 3. 17. And therefore

36. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son, shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him.] 36. Whosoever gives up his faith and obedience to him is in a course which will bring him to all felicity eternally, and on the contrary he that stands out contumaciously against his doctrine, continues immutably and inevitably under the wrath of God, due to him both for his former sins, and this addition of his standing out against this powerfull method of Gods for the recalling him.

V. 5. Born of water] The nature of Proselytes among the Jewes, and the difference of them hath been spoken of (Note on Mat. 23. d.) and also the manner of initiating them by washing or Baptisme (Note on Mat. 3. a.) as also their putting off all their former relations of kindred, and consanguinity, and so being as it were new-born (Note on Mat. 19. 28. d.) From hence it is that at the receiving of Christian religion, which is the nobler Proselytisme, and hath in the ceremony of initiation, not only the washing in water, but also the baptisme of the Spirit too, that is, the communication of that Spirit of Christ in some measure that descended on the Apostles, Act. 2. a. man is here said by Christ to be born anew of water and the holy Ghost; And when Nicodemus a learned Jew, and a Master among them, seems to be ignorant, and wonders how this can be, and asks this grosse question to that first part of it, how one that is of age can be born again, Christ wonders at him v. 10. intimating that this is the very doctrine of Proselytisme, which no knowing Jew can be ignorant of, to wit, that he is to be wash'd and circumcised, and being so, is by the Jewes counted as one recens natus, new born, brought forth by another mother, so that he who was kin to him before, is now no longer kin to him. This λοῦτρον παλιγγενεσίας washing of regeneration, Tit. 3. 5. is in effect a being new born, and he that so follows Christ in this regeneration, or new birth, Mat. 19. 28. (if that be the right punctation) he leaves brothers and sisters, father and mother, wife and children, v. 29. and Mar. 10. 29. and Lu. 18. 29. And to the same purpose belongs that which follows v. 11, 12. intimating that speech of Christ, which Nicodemus so little understood, of being born anew of water, to have been a thing ordinarily seen and known among the Jews, ὀπίγειον, an ordinary, inferior earthly thing, in comparison with the ἐπουράνια those higher celestial doctrines (so much more contrary to the Jewish customs and laws) that should be revealed, and to the baptizing with the holy Ghost, of which also he here speaks, referring still to this custome of Proselytes among the Jewes, which is here accommodated to the receiving of Christian religion, entring into his discipleship.

Λοῦτρον παλιγγενεσίας. Ἐπίγειον. Ἐπουράνια.

b. V. 29. He that hath the bride] Among the Jewes in their rites of Espousalls, there is frequent mention of חופה, a place where, under a covering, it was usuall for the bridegroom to discourse familiarly but privately with his spouse, whereby their affections might be more knit one to another (in order to marriage) which were not supposed to be so, till the bridegroom came cheerfully out of that Chuppah. To this doth David referre Psal. 19. 5. speaking of the Sun, which as a bridegroom comes forth rejoicing מחופתו from the Chuppah. This custome is now still observed among the Jewes (as in Germany 'tis affirmed) either before the Synagogue in a square place covered over, or, where there is no Synagogue, they throw a garment over the bridegroom and the bride, and that serves the turn. See Paulus Fagius Exeg. in Gen. 4. Whilst now the bridegroom thus talks with the bride, the bridegrooms friends, that is the παράνυμφοι or pronubi (as in Talmud tit. Sanhedrin, speaking of friends, the example of such there mention'd, is שושבינו as the παράνυμφος) use to stand at the doore (agreeable to which is that of Julius Pollux, καλεῖταί τις τῶν νυμφίου φίλων θυρωρὸς, one of the bridegrooms friends is called the doore-keeper; ὁ δὲ θύρας ἐφεστηκὼς, he that stands at the doore, &c.) and hearken whether all doe succeed well or no, and when they hear the voice of joy, which is an intimation from the bridegroom that all is well, (which Nonnus calls, ἠδάδα φωνὴ, that is, a familiar language, some form of kindnesse or familiarity) then they rejoyce, and so celebrate this news. See Elias Levita in Tisbbi, in the word ששבן. Of these παράνυμφοι or pronubi, it is farther observable out of the Greek Liturgies (in the Euchologie, ἀκολουθ. στεφανώμ.) that they are used as Mediatours between the bridegroom and his bride, and help to make the league between them, (and therefore in the office of marriage, speaking of one of those, ἀλλάσσει τὰ δακτυλίδια, he takes the mans ring, and gives it to the woman, and the womans in like manner to the man, and the title that is there bestowed on him is ὁ σύνδεκνος, and otherwhere (by a corrupt barbarous word fetch'd from the Latine compar) κουμπάρος, as here, the friend of the bridegroom, and Mat. 9. ὑὸς νυμφῶνος, an officer used in those Espousalls, and defined by Simeon Thessalonicensis to be ὁ τῆς σωφροσύνης καὶ ὁμονοίας ἀνάδοχος, the undertaker for chastity and kindnesse betwixt the couple, καὶ διδάσκαλος τῆς ὁμοφροσύνης, καὶ ἀγαθῆς συζυγίας νουθετῶν, one that instructs them in the marriage-duties of love and concord, and is as it were the Susceptor in marriage, as the Godfather is in Baptisme, and so publickly promises for the bridegroom before the Church.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. IV.

1. Chriſt knew that the Phariſees heard of his receiving more proſelytes by that ceremony of baptiſme or waſhing,

1. WHen therefore [the Lord knew how the Phariſees had heard that Jeſus made and baptized more diſciples] then John,

2. Though Jeſus himſelf baptized not, but his diſciples,

3. Conſidering the danger that this might bring upon him from the Sanhedrim of the Jewes, it being not yet the fit ſeaſon for him to leave the world, till he had farther diſſeminated his doctrine, he left Judea for a time.

3. He left Judea] and departed again into Galilee.

4. And Samaria was in his way.

4. And he muſt needs goe through Samaria.]

5. Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, neer to the parcell of ground that Jacob gave to his ſon Joſeph.

6. In this place was the well which Iacob once digged, on which occaſion Ieſus being weary of travaile ſate down cloſe by it on the ground, and it was about twelve of the clock, mid-day.

6. Now Jacob's well was there: Jeſus therefore being wearied with his journey, ſate [a] thus * on the well: and it was about the ſixt houre.]

a. By

7. There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water, Jeſus ſaith unto her, Give me to drink.

8. For his diſciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.

9. commerce or communication of familiarity

9. Then ſaith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou being a Jew, askeſt drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? For the Jewes have no [dealings] with the Samaritanes.

10. what a mercy & bounty of God is now deſigned thee, and who it is that made that requeſt to thee, on purpoſe that thou mighteſt be partaker of a farre greater gift, thou wouldſt not have ſtartled at this requeſt, but have made advantage of it to ask, and he would certainly have given thee that fountain-water, of a divine ſpeciall quality, which would have yielded thee eternall life.

10. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, If thou kneweſt [the gift of God, and who it is that ſaith unto thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldſt have asked of him, and he would have given thee [b] living water.]

11. The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, thou haſt nothing to draw with, and the well is deep, from whence then haſt thou that living water?

12. Iacob, from whom we Samaritans profeſſe to receive our religion (and therefore refuſe to goe up to Ieruſalem, which Moſes, later then he, commanded.)

12. Art thou greater then [our father Jacob,] which gave us the well, and drank thereof himſelf, and his children, and his cattel?

12. It is the nature of this ordinary water to quench thirſt for a ſmall time, but then conſtantly that thirſt within a ſmall time returns again, and ſo there is continuall need of ſupply,

13. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, [Whoſoever drinketh of this water, ſhall thirſt again,]

14. But that which I mean by water, and which upon thy bare petition I am ready to give thee, v. 10. will ſo refreſh, that he ſhall never thirſt again that drinketh of it, It ſhall be within himſelf a perpetually flowing fountain that of its own accord ſhall yield him daily refreſhment here, and never ceaſe till it end in everlaſting life and bliſſe.

14. But whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never thirſt; but the water that I ſhall give him ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up into everlaſting life.]

15. As yet the woman underſtood not his meaning, but applying it groſly to corporall thirſt, ſhe

15. The woman] ſaith unto him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirſt not, neither come hither to draw.

16. And therefore to work more ſenſe in her, Ieſus meaning to give her knowledge in ſome degree that he was the Meſſias, by diſcovering ſome acts and evidences of his omniſcience, 16. Jeſus] ſaith unto her, Goe call thy husband, and come hither.

17. The woman anſwered and ſaid, I have no husband. Jeſus ſaid unto her, Thou haſt well ſaid, I have no husband.

18. For thou haſt had five husbands, and he whom thou now haſt, is not thine husband: in that ſaidſt thou truly.

19. thou canſt reveal the ſecrets of ones life, haſt prophetick knowledge, If ſo, then I pray tell me, or ſatisfie me in this difficulty.

19. The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, I perceive [thou art a prophet.]

20. Iacob and the Patriarcks before the law (whoſe ſucceſſors the Samaritans pretended to be, and ſo pleaded a greater antiquity for their ſchiſme, then the Iewes had for their true worſhip, but this falſly, being indeed Aſſyrians, tranſplanted by Salmaneſer into the cities of Samaria, when the tribe of Ephraim and the reſt of the kingdome of Iſrael, which inhabited there, were by him carried into Aſſyria, 2 Kin. 17. 24.) worſhipped in mount Ephraim at Shiloh, in the countrey of Samaria, where antiently the tabernacle and the ark of God were, long before the building of the temple at Ieruſalem; And yet ye Iewes ſay that 'tis not lawfull to perform the ſolemn worſhip of God in any place but Ieruſalem.

22. Our Fathers worſhipped in this mountain, and ye ſay, that in Jeruſalem is the place where men ought to worſhip.]

21. the worſhip of God ſhall be ſo farre from being confined to this place, that it ſhall not be confined to Ieruſalem it ſelf, nay a deſolation ſhall ſhortly overwhelm both.

21. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Woman, believe me, the houre cometh when [ye ſhall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jeruſalem worſhip the Father.]

22. Ye worſhip the God of the land, 2 Kin. 17.26. without any knowledge who that is, and your own Gods with him, We Iewes worſhip the eternall God of heaven, who hath revealed himſelf to us, For the ſpeciall revelations of God, beyond that which other nations enjoy, belong to the Iewes, and ſo all manner of advantages toward our eternall good.

22. Ye worſhip * ye know not what, we know what we worſhip: for ſalvation is of the Jewes.

* that which ye doe not know, wee worſhip that which we know, ὃ οὐκ οἴδατε, ἡμεῖς προσκυνοῦμεν ὃ οἴδαμεν.

23. But now the time of Reformation approacheth, and God will be worſhipped and obeyed neither in the Iudaicall rites, (which are oft called carnall, and conſiſted in externall performances) nor according to the Samaritane falſe worſhip, who worſhipt their own idols together with God. 2 Kin. 17. but in a pure ſpirituall manner extending to the very heart, and ſuch as was typified by thoſe ſhadows; and the ſon of God now comes to draw all men to this way of worſhip, to the Chriſtian from the Iudaicall or Samaritane way. See note on Lu. 9. d.

23. But the houre cometh and now is, when the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in ſpirit and in truth: For the Father ſeeketh † ſuch to worſhip him.]

† ſuch worſhippers of him, τοιούτους προσκυνητὰς αὐτοῦ.

24 God

24. God is a Spirit, and [they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth.]
24. is eſpecially delighted with the Chriſtian worſhip, which is taught to joyn the ſoul with the externall performances, and to worſhip the true God now revealed by Chriſt, after that manner, wherein Chriſt reveals him.

25. The woman ſaith unto him, [I know that Meſſias cometh, which is called Chriſt, when he is come, he will tell us all things.]
25. This reformation thou talkeſt of, we know ſhall be wrought when the Meſſias or Chriſt comes, and him we doe expect.

26. Jeſus ſaith unto her, [I that ſpeak unto thee am he.]
26. I am that Meſſias.

27. And upon this came his diſciples, and marvailed that he talked with the woman; yet no man ſaid, What ſeekeſt thou, or, Why talkeſt thou with her?]
27. As he ſaid this, the diſciples came back from the city, v. 8. and thought it ſtrange that he ſhould thus diſcourſe with this woman, yet no man was ſo curious as to ask him the reaſon, or require of him an account of this action.

28. The woman then left her water-pot, and went away into the city, and ſaith to the men.

29. Come ſee a man which told me [all things that ever I did: Is not this the Chriſt?]
29. many things of my life, which were ſo ſecret, that it is not imaginable how he ſhould know them, were he not the Meſſias.

30. Then [they] went out of the city, and came unto him.
30. the people of Sychar

31. In the mean while his diſciples [c] prayed him, ſaying, Maſter, eat.

32. But he ſaid unto them, [I have meat to eat that ye know not of.]
c,
32. I have ſomewhat to doe more valuable to me, then eating.

33. Therefore ſaid the diſciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat?

34. Jeſus ſaith unto them, [My meat is to doe the will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his work.]
34. My doing the office for which I was ſent, is as pleaſant and more neceſſary to me, then meat or drink.

35. * Say not ye, There are four months, and then cometh harveſt? Behold I ſay unto you, lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harveſt.]
*Doe ye not ſay that it is yet foure months and harveſt comes?
35. 'Tis not with my harveſt as 'tis with that in the fields, four months yet to that time, Conſider and ye ſhall ſee the great inclinations and forwardneſſe of men to receive the Goſpel, if it may be preached unto them.

οὐκ ὑμεῖς λέγετε, ὅτι ἔτι τετράμηνός ἐστι, καὶ ὁ θερισμὸς ἔρχεται;

36. And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternall; that both he that ſoweth, and he that reapeth may rejoice together.]
36. And they that will but goe out, and preach to them, ſhall receive reward for their pains, and by converting others advantage themſelves eternally, and come to reap the fruits of all that ſeed, that the prophets &c. from all time have ſowed.

† For in this the ſaying is true that, ἐν τούτῳ ὁ λόγος ἐστὶν ἀληθινός, ὅτι

37. † And herein is that ſaying true, One ſoweth and another reapeth.]
37. So that to this may the proverb be applied, One ſoweth &c. that is, the prophets ſowed this ſeed of the Goſpel, in foretelling Chriſt's coming, and the Apoſtles they reap the harveſt of converts to him.

38. I have ſent you to reap that whereon ye beſtowed no labour; other men laboured, and ye are entred into their labours.]
38. The prophets have ſo prepar'd mens hearts to receive the Goſpel, that there needs very little pains of yours, you may at firſt preaching of the Goſpel reap a whole harveſt of proſelytes.

39. And many of the Samaritanes of that city believed on him, for the ſaying of the woman which teſtified, [He told me all that ever I did.]
39. He told me the ſecrets of my life, which he being a ſtranger could not know, if he were a meer man.

40. So when the Samaritanes were come unto him, they beſought him that he would tarry with them, [and he abode there two daies.]
40. And though Mat. 10. 5. he forbad his diſciples at that time to goe into any city of the Samaritanes, (that they might make the Jewes ſee they were his peculiar care at that time) yet to ſhew that the Goſpel was not their encloſure, he now himſelf ſtaies with the Samaritans two daies, and preacheth the Goſpel to them.

* believed on him. So the Syr. and many copies αὐτῷ.

41. And many more* believed [becauſe of his own words.]
41. upon what they heard from him themſelves.

42. And ſaid unto the woman, Now we believe, not becauſe of thy ſaying: for we have heard him our ſelves, and know that this is indeed the [Chriſt, the Saviour of the world.]
42. Meſſias that was to come to redeem the world.

43. Now after two daies he departed thence, and [went into Galilee.

44. For Jeſus himſelf teſtified, that a prophet hath no honour in his owne countrey.]
43, 34. went to Galilee, avoiding or paſſing another way, not by Nazareth, the place of his education, becauſe, according to the proverb, he expected no reception there, he went another way, not by the lake of Geneſareth, but by Thabor and Carmel toward Cana, where he had wrought his firſt miracle.

45. Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having ſeen all the things that he did at Jeruſalem at the feaſt, for they alſo went unto the feaſt.]
45. And upon this ſecond coming of his among the Galileans, they having, ſince he was there laſt, ſeen what miracles he had done at Jeruſalem, at the feaſt of the paſſover, c. 2. 14. they thereupon gave him a very kind reception (and after the cure of the courtiers ſon which follows here, teaching publickly in the Synagogues of Galilee he was glorified of all, Lu. 4. 15.)

46. So Jeſus came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine, and there was a certain [d] * noble man, whoſe ſon was ſick at Capernaum,

47. When he heard that Jeſus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and beſought him that he would come down, and heal his ſon: for he was at the point of death.

48. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, [Except ye ſee ſignes and wonders, ye will not believe.]
48. I perceive there is need of doing miracles among you, to work faith in you, This weakneſſe therefore of yours I will indulge to.

49. The noble man ſaith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die.

50. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Goe thy way, thy ſon [liveth.] And the man believed the word that Jeſus had ſpoken unto him, and went his way.
50. is recovered, ſee v. 52, and 53.

51. is recovered,

51. And as he was now going down, his ſervants met him, and told him, ſaying, Thy ſon [liveth.]

52. Then enquired he of them the hour when he began to amend; and they ſaid unto him, Yeſterday at the ſeventh houre the feaver left him.

53. So the father knew that it was at the ſame hour in the which Jeſus ſaid unto him; Thy ſon liveth, and himſelf believed and his whole houſe.

9. And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed and walked: and on the ſame day was the ſabbath.

10. The Jewes therefore ſaid unto him that was cured, It is the ſabbath day, [it is not lawfull for thee to * carry thy bed.]

10. the carrying of thy bed is the carrying of a burthen, and that a labour contrary to the Sabbatick reſt, and therefore unlawfull to be done by thee.

* take up ἆρας

11. He anſwered them, He that made me whole, the ſame ſaid unto me, Take up thy bed and walk.

12. Then asked they him, What man is he that ſaid unto thee, Take up thy bed and walk?

13. And he that was healed wiſt not who it was, [for Jeſus × had conveighed himſelf away, a multitude being in that place.]

13. For by reaſon of the great multitude that was there at the time, Jeſus had opportunity to depart from among them, without any mans taking notice of it.

× was gone out privately ἐξένευσεν

14. Afterward Jeſus findeth him in the Temple, and ſaid unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: ſinne no more leſt a worſe thing come unto thee.]

14. The cure that was lately wrought upon thee thou knew'ſt not by whom, muſt oblige thee to an upright reformation of life, or els thou art to expect more fearfull judgments then that diſeaſe was.

15. The man departed, and told the Jewes, that it was Jeſus, which had made him whole.

16. And therefore did the Jewes perſecute Jeſus, and ſought to ſlay him, becauſe he had [done theſe things] on the ſabbath day.

16. both wrought a cure (which they thought unlawfull on the ſabbath, Mar. 3. 2.) and alſo bad him to carry his bed v. 10.

* untill now ἕως ἄρτι

17. But Jeſus anſwered them, My Father worketh * hitherto, and I work.]

17. To this exception of theirs againſt him, becauſe of his curing on the Sabbath, Jeſus made this reply, God my Father, from whoſe reſt you take the celebration of the ſabbath, did not ſo reſt from all work on the ſabbath day, but that ever ſince he hath done works of providence (ſee Chryſoſtome hom. 10. in. Gen. p. 63.) and of preſervation and mercy every day, And why may not I his Son doe ſo without exception, my Fathers actions and mine being the ſame?

* alſo called God his own father, πατέρα ἴδιον τὸν Θεόν.

18. Therefore the Jewes ſought the more to kill him, not only becauſe he had broken the ſabbath, but * ſaid alſo that God was his father, [making himſelf equall with God.]

18. which the Jewes, that knew that the ſon of God muſt be of the very divine nature (as a ſon is of the ſame nature with his father) and therefore equall with God, interpreted to be a blaſphemy in him, whom they believed not to be the Meſſias, and therefore fit to be puniſhed with death.

19. Then anſwered Jeſus and ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The Son can doe nothing of himſelf but what he ſeeth the Father doe: for what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the ſon likewiſe.]

19. To this exception of theirs againſt Chriſt he anſwers, although I affirm my ſelf the ſon of God, and ſo am rightly concluded by you to be equall with my Father, yet this is farre from being matter of impiety in me, farre from oppoſing my ſelf againſt God, For I doe nothing but what is the expreſſe will of my Father that I ſhould doe, and therefore twas reaſonable for me to ſay what I did, v. 17. that my Fathers actions will juſtifie me in doing the ſame.

20. For the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that he doth; and he will ſhew him greater things then theſe, that ye may marvaile.]

20. For out of the infinite love my Father bears to me, he communicates all things to me, and by that means you are likely to have greater matter of wonderment, then this curing a ſick man on the ſabbath can amount to.

21. For as the Father raiſeth up the dead and quickneth them: even ſo the Son quickneth whom he will.]

21. For even to the raiſing of the dead, farre greater then the curing of the ſick, my Father hath communicated his power to me, and as my Father raiſeth, ſo will I whomſoever I pleaſe.

22. For the Father judgeth no man; but hath committed all judgment unto the Son.]

22. And for the office of judging (Angels, or Men) of the Church, and finall ſentencing of all.

23. That all men ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father, he that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him.]

23. And ſo by this means it appears that as it was no fault in me to ſay what I did v. 17. though it were the equalling my ſelf with the Father, ſo it muſt needs be great hypocriſie in you to think and pretend that you zealouſly honour my Father, when you do deſpiſe and diſhonour me, which am ſent with this power at this time, on purpoſe to be honoured by all men, in the ſame manner as my Father is honoured, that ſo I may work a reformation among you.

24. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but is paſſed from death unto life.]

24. This is ſo perfectly the will of my Father, that I muſt tell you, that on your heeding and hearkning to me at this time, and believing and entertaining my doctrine, as the meſſage of God, depends your eternall well-being, your eſcaping eternall death, and attaining eternall life.

25. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead ſhall heare the voice of the ſon of God, and they that heare ſhall live.]

25. And I aſſure you, this power which God my Father hath given me at this time, extendeth to the greateſt things, even to raiſing the dead out of their graves (as alſo ſinners out of their graves of ſinne,) which power you ſhall ſhortly ſee (nay in the ſpirituall ſenſe is already) exerciſed by me.

26. For as the Father hath life in himſelf, ſo hath he given to the Son to have life in himſelf.]

26. For as God hath of and from himſelf power to give life to any thing, ſo hath he given this power to me, and I have it.

27. And he hath given him authority to execute judgment alſo, becauſe he is the ſon of man.]

27. And as I am God-man, that is, in that I have thus humbled my ſelf to this mean eſtate (which ought not to leſſen, but rather encreaſe the account which is due to me in the world) my Father, by way of reward, (Phil. 2. 8, 9.) hath given me all power and authority, both now and hereafter, in and over his Church. And ſo again in other reſpects, as 1. that men having a mercifull high prieſt, (not ſuch an one as cannot ſuffer, or conſequently be touched with our infirmities, but one, that is a man upon the earth, in all things, tempted like unto us, yet without ſinne) might have confidence of acceſſe to him, in his preſent government of all things, and 2. that men which have bodies and ſo are viſible (and are to be judged hereafter as well as Angels) may have a viſible judge of them, and of al things done in their bodies.

* cometh ἔρχεται

28. Marvaile not at this: for the houre * is coming, in which all that are in their graves ſhall heare his voice.]

28. Let not what I ſay be matter of wonderment to you, for all the dead; (and an eſſay thereof ſhall ſhortly be ſeen among you.)

29. And ſhall come forth, they that have done good unto the reſurrection of life, and they that have done evil, unto the reſurrection of damnation.]

29. And the righteous ſhall have their bodies and ſouls united in bliſſe, and the wicked ſhall alſo have a reſtitution of their bodies, to receive their ſentence and puniſhment.

30. I can of mine own ſelfe doe nothing: as I hear, ſo I judge: and my judgment is juſt; becauſe I ſeek not mine own will, but the will of † the Father which hath ſent me.]

30. My judgment is a righteous judgment and agreeable to my Fathers method, and decree, that they which believe on me, ſhall be ſaved, and they that reject me, damned. This my Father hath declared, and therefore 'tis not the ſeeking either honour or revenge to my ſelf, that I ſay or doe this, but the going according to my Fathers preſcript, and nothing elſe.

31. If I bear witneſſe of my ſelf, my witneſſe is not true.

32. There is another that beareth witneſſe of me, and I know that the witneſſe which he witneſſeth of me, is true.]

31, 32. If I did any thing that tended to mine own honour, and were a ſingle witneſſe neſſe therein, you might reaſonably except againſt it, but as that which I doe, is not to honour my ſelf, but only to execute my Fathers will, ſo for the truth of what I ſay, my Father bears witneſſe of me, and hath done it already, by ſending the Spirit, and a voice from heaven, and giving me power to doe miracles, and that ſure is a competent teſtimony, which can deceive none.

33. And for the triall hereof, you have ſent to John, who baptized me, when the Spirit ſo deſcended on me, and he that ſaw it, teſtified to you the truth of it.

33. Ye ſent unto John, and he bare witneſſe unto the truth.]

34. But as for me I need not the teſtimony of John, or any man, but yet that you that believe him, may believe him of me, and ſo eſcape and flie from the danger, which approacheth you, I thus mention to you his teſtimony, which was of ſuch authority with you.

34. But I receive not teſtimony from man, but theſe things I ſay, that ye might be ſaved.]

35. He was that Elias, deſcribed Eccluſ. 48. by being like fire, and his word burning like a lamp, and for a while you liked well to hear him, but aſſoon as he teſtified of me, then you preſently rejected him.

36. But I have no need of that teſtimony of his, for the working of thoſe miracles, which God hath enabled me to work, is a greater demonſtration of my being ſent by God, then John Baptiſt's teſtimony, that he ſaw the Spirit deſcend upon me.

36. But I have * greater witneſſe then that of John; for the works which the Father hath given me to finiſh, the ſame works that I doe, bear witneſſe of me, that the Father hath ſent me.]

37. And God the Father by voice from heaven hath teſtified of me, But ye, as, according to your Fathers deſire, expreſt Exod. 20. 19. Deut. 5. 25. and 18. 16. ye have not heard the voice of God, nor ſeen his appearance, ſo it appears by your actions, ye behave your ſelves as thoſe that know nothing of God, ungodly impious men, ſee 1 Joh. 3. 6.

38. And for that only means leaſt you, the word of God revealed to you, ye doe not make uſe of that, or live according to it, as is apparent by your not believing on me, who have ſeen, and heard, and know his will, and am ſent by God, as the only means of declaring that will to you, and am foretold in the ſcripture, as the Meſſias to come.

38. And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath ſent, him ye believe not.]

39. Look into, and examine the writings of the Old Teſtament, whereon you depend, and believe that through performance of the Moſaicall precepts, you ſhall have eternall life. And on examination you ſhall find that all thoſe prophecies are types and fulfilled in me, and that all the promiſes of life there made, have an aſpect on me, the giver of life.

40. But ye, though ye look upon theſe as the repoſitory of your preſent and eternall bliſſe, and though they direct you to me as the only means to attain it, yet wilfully reject me, and by that means your eternall bliſſe alſo.

And ye will not come to me that ye might have life.]

41,42. Alas, 'tis not your approbation, or eſtimation (to be acknowledged, or well-ſpoken of by you) that I contend for, while I thus ſpeak. But to this purpoſe I ſay it. By your dealing with me, who come with this teſtimony of my Father, it is apparent and diſcernible, how farre you are (whatever you pretend) from all piety and love of God, that this teſtimony of God cannot work on you to receive me, but the being well-ſpoken of by men (ſee c. 12. 43.) is all you care for, and becauſe that may be loſt by receiving me, therefore am I rejected by you.

41. I receive not honour from men.
42. But I know you that ye have not the love of God in you.

43. But to ſee the ſottiſhneſſe of your dealings: I bring my commiſſion from God, and ye heed it not, and yet if another without any commiſſion from God, a meer counterfeit, ſhall, in his own name, come, and undertake to ſeduce you, ſuch as Simon Magus, (ſee note on 2 Theſſ. 2. e) what multitudes of you Jewes will follow him?

43. I am come in my fathers name, and ye receive me not; If another ſhall come in his own name, him ye will receive.]

44. 'Tis not poſſible you ſhould believe aright, that are ſo in love with the praiſe of men, as to take him for a prophet, who hath no other teſtimony that he is ſo, but his own, or the voice of other men, and dare not believe on me, the rulers, for fear of diſpleaſing the people, and the people, the rulers, and mean while both contemn the favour, and approbation of God, and ſet his teſtimony at nought, reject me, who come authoriz'd with that.

44. How can ye believe which receive † honour of one another, and ſeek not the honour, that cometh from God only?]

45. 'Tis not ſo much I, to whom you have done this affront, and therefore I ſhall not need to bring any complaint or indictment againſt you before my Father, but 'tis our own prophet Moſes, on whom you pretend to depend ſo much, and he will riſe up to teſtifie againſt you.

46. Had you but heeded and believed Moſes, that prophet ſo valued by you, his predictions & typicall repreſentations would have led you to believe on me, in whom they all are fulfilled.

46. For had ye believed Moſes, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me.]

47. But if your own Moſes cannot be heard by you, I cannot expect to have that authority with you.

47. But if you believe not his writings, how ſhall ye believe my words.]

Annotations on Chap. V.

V. 2. By the ſheep-market a poole] The words being read, as they are now in our beſt Copies, ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ both in the Dative caſe, the only Nominative caſe in the period muſt be ἡ ἐπιλεγομένη Βεθσαδὰ, and then there can be no way of tranſlating it, but by underſtanding the word בית houſe, which is after contained in the word Bethesda, and which muſt be the ſubject, to which the following adjunct belongs, πέντε στοὰς ἔχουσα, having five porches, which cannot be ſaid ſo properly of any thing, as of an houſe; If this be the reading, then this houſe called in Syriack בית חסרא the houſe of mercy, as the Syriack now reads it, that is, the alms-houſe literally (not as Beza would have it domus effuſionis) muſt be reſolved to have been a noſocomium or hoſpital for thoſe that are ſick, and that it was built ἐπὶ τῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ, upon, or adioyning to, that poole, (or, as the Kings MS. reads, ἐν τῇ on it,) and had five porches in it. Others anciently did read it (ſee Rob. Steph. var. lect.) without ἐπὶ τῇ in the Nominative caſe, ὧν δὲ ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις προβατικὴ κολυμβήθρα, there was at Jeruſalem a ſheep-pool, So S. Chryſoſtome, and S. Cyrill of Alexandria, Theophylact, Theophilus

a. ἐπὶ τῇ Ὑροβατικῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ. Βεθσαδὰ

Theophilus Antioch. and S. Jerome, Bethesda (saith he, in Locis Hebr.) piscina in Jerusalem quæ vocatur Peculialis, Bethesda is a pool in Jerusalem, called the cattel-poole, which if it be the right reading, then may that poole be there set for this house and poole together, and both (ἐπωνυμίαν) with the agnomen of Bethesda the almes-house, or else בירת may be taken in a larger notion to signifie any place, and so signifie the poole only, without supposing any house there, but only some buildings, as porches or entrances into the poole v. 7. As for that third reading which Beza used, ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ and then κολυμβήθρα in the Nominative, this agrees not with the ancient readings, and being not intelligible, but by understanding πυλη, and so making it the sheep-gate, Nehem. 12. 39. that is no way agreeable to this purpose. For supposing, what is so often affirmed by those that favour this reading, that the sheep that were brought in at this gate for sacrifice, were there wont to be washed, before they were brought into the Temple or as Beza, potare & mersari, to drink, and be washed) yet 'tis neither imaginable that the washing, or drinking of sheep there, should make the poole medicinable nor that being so of it self, or made so by miracle, it should be thus employed to those common uses, for which any other poole would have been as good. That which I conceive of it is this, not that here the live sheep were washed by those that brought them, but the carcasses or entrailes of them, when they were slain, and this by the officers of the Temple. So saith Benjamin in his Itinerary, ושם נראה עד היום הזה הברכה &c. There is untill this day that poole in which the antients killed their sacrifices, and each of the Jewes set their name there on the wall. Agreeable to which is the account which Brocardus hath rendred of this matter at large, In area Templi, saith he, contra Aquilonem est porta vallis ducens in vallem Josaphat, & hac etiam vocatur Gregis quòd per eam introducebantur greges in templo immolandi. Intrantibus porrò portam Gregis ad sinistram occurrit piscina probatica, in qua Nathinæi lavabant hostias quas tradebant sacerdotibus in Templo offerendas. It was so called, because the sacrifices were there washed by the Nethinim (or inferior officers) which they delivered to the priests to be offered in the Temple, supposing this washing to be intermediate between the slaying, and offering of the sacrifices, and to belong to all the sacrifices (as S. Jeromes Peculialis also denotes) not the sheep only. This, it seems, Theophylact did believe, who gives this for the commonly assigned reason of the divine healing power that these waters had, ὅτι τῶν πλύνεσι τὰ ἐντόσθια τῶν ἱερείων, because the entrails of the sacrifices were washed there. And, I suppose, these words in * S. Jerome (lacus alter mirum in modum rubens quasi cruentis aquis, another poole looking wonderful red, as it were with bloody waters, &c.) doe intimate it also. And it is observable that those that here waited for cures, are not men of all sorts of diseases, but only the blind, the halt, the withered, and perhaps the Paralytical ver. 3. and therefore perhaps the whatsoever disease ver. 4. may not denote an unlimited universality, but only a restrained, ὁποίῳ ποτὲ κατέχετο νοσήματι, whatsoever disease he was held with, that is, which soever of these forementiond, for which they came thither for cure. And that a medicinable force to the curing of lameness, &c. might naturally come to the waters by that means, according to Theophylacts account of the commonly received opinion will not appear strange, if the cures that are wrought by putting the Patient into the belly of a beast newly opened, or into the skin of a sheep newly flead, or by the application of the warm vital parts of any beast, be considered. For the like virtue might well be transfused to this pool by the daily washing of the entrails of the sacrifices in it, at the time of the feasts (such as is here mentioned v. 1.) where so many thousand sacrifices were killed at once, as may be guess'd by the number of the two hundred fifty five thousand, and six hundred Paschal sacrifices, which was testified to Cestius by the Priests at a Passover in Neros time. These might well die and colour the water, and give a force to it, and that at such a time, when the waters were warm with the fresh washing of the sacrifices in it, and especially when by a mans going down to move or trouble the water v 4. those grosser thicker parts, which came from the beasts, the congelations of blood, which went to the bottome, were stirr'd up and made to infuse themselves more strongly into the water; which seems to be the reason, why to the working of a cure by those waters these two circumstances are made necessary, 1. that it should be, not at any time, but κατ' καιρὸν, v. 4. καθ' ὡρισμένην at a set season, which that it signified a festivall time, (if not solely that) appears probably, because now v. 1. ἦν ἑορτὴ Ἰουδαίων there was a feast of the Jewes, and at this time the sick man waited that καιρὸν opportunity, though he were deprived of it v. 7. And if from v. 6. it be imagined that he had lain a long time in that place, that is a mistake, for the πολὺν χρόνον long time belongs to the length of his disease v. 5. and to nothing else. 2ly. that the sick person should go in immediately upon the troubling of the waters, which must signifie, that immediately upon the moving, they had a force which soon cool'd or decay'd again, by the sinking of that which was stirr'd up, or by the evaporating of it. All which, if it be a naturall and no miraculous way of curing, it will be the more unlikely, that ἄγγελος here v. 4. should be an Angel of Gods. It may easily be supposed that there was an officer or servant, sent down by them that had skill in it, to trouble the waters at a fit time, and he seeing a messenger sent before, as it were, to prepare for the sick mans coming after him might well be called ἄγγελος, not an Angel, but a messenger; see Act. 12. 8. But it is very uncertain, from the variety of Copies, what is to be determin'd in this matter. For as the Kings MS. makes one great change here, and reads Ἄγγελος γὰρ Κυρίου κατ' καιρὸν ἐλούετο, The Angel of the Lord washed, or bathed, at a season, v. 4. so on the other side, the ancient Greek and Latine MS. which Th. Beza presented to the University of Cambridge, wholly leaves out the fourth verse wherein the only mention of ἄγγελος, whether Angel or messenger, is. In this variety we can but resolve what the Context makes most reasonable, and that is to adhere to our ordinary reading, without admitting either of those changes, which those venerable Copies, so contrary one to the other, suggest to us. For as to the former the troubling of the water being taken notice of, both v. 4. and v. 7. as the only thing that gave or rather excited (for a very short time) the medicinal virtue in the water, there was no need of the miraculous interposition of one of Gods holy Angels to effect that; any ordinary man, sent down for that purpose, was sufficient thus to move or trouble the water. As for the bathing of an Angel at a certain time, there is no probable account to be given of that, nor can it have any speciall energie, to the making of the waters medicinal, for the bare troubling the waters did that v. 4, 7. As for the latter, which leaves out the whole fourth verse, the remainder of the Context utterly resists that, being all built on that relation of the medicinal nature of the poole, and the circumstances of it, which are given us in that verse. The Context then remaining intire, as it doth in our ordinary copies, the chiefe objection I discern to offer it self against the way of interpreting it of a medicinable virtue, naturally arising from the fresh warm blood of the entrails of the sacrifices that were wash'd there, is, that the cure was limited to one, to him that first stepp'd in and this man had been there long in vain, because another still stepp'd in before him; which is thought unreconcileable with that opinion of the medicinable virtue of the blood, in that poole, which would as probably minister to the cure of more, as of one. To this I answer, that it is not improbable, there might be causes of this (more than one) arising from some circumstances of the place, &c. which being not taken notice of in the text, cannot with any certainty be assigned by us at this distance, and yet this very possibility that there were such, be sufficient to avoid the force of that objection. For instance, the place that contained these medicinal waters might be of no larger capacity, than to hold one at once (and the steps down to it somewhat proportionable) and that on purpose designed in order to curing diseases, to which it was most likely to contribute, if the virtue that came from the entrailes were kept within so narrow a compass, as when a medicinal bath is to be provided by infusion of herbes, &c. 'tis ordinary to use a vessel of no greater capacity then will suffice one patient at once, that the infusion of the drugs may be the stronger, and so more medicinal. And then considering how apt those grosser parts are, when stirred up, to sink again, and some space being allowed to the officer, that moves the water, to ascend before the patient can descend, it followes regularly, that the cure should be thus limited to one patient at one moving of the water, and if * S. Chrysostome judge aright, in one year; εἰς μόνῳ τῷ ἐνιαυτῷ ἐκείνῳ, saith he, one only in a year (at this καιρός, season, or Paschal festival, when the great multitude of sacrifices were newly wash'd there) was cured by that water. All this is here very fitly supposeable, non obstante either the mention of the poole, which may be deemed to signifie a place of a greater capacity, or the five porches, v. 2. For the five porches, those being parts of Bethesda, the house of mercy, or hospital, as hath been shew'd, there might be uses of them for the sick, and diseased persons, which lay there, v. 3. without imagining them to be so many entrances to this poole. And then for the κολυμβήθρα, though by rendring it in Latine piscina, and poole in English, it may seem to be of a larger capacity, yet being, we know, by the antients used vulgarly for the font in the Church, and that expressely from the use of it in this place, it need not be supposed here to have been of any such large capacity. And then this being thus premised and supposed, all that is here said is very consonant. 1. That after the moving of the water, it should be medicinal onely to one at once; and 2. That he onely that could make most haste, and so come first, was likely to receive this benefit by it, and so this lame man miss of it, because he could never get to be foremost. Other waies there are also supposeable, to remove all force of this objection, and secure the probability of this conjecture; But because I propose it onely as such (and that not as mine own, but founded in the received opinion, from which Theophylact cites it) I shall not farther insist on them, but only adde that the Christian religion is no way concern'd in the miraculousness of this cure, if such it were, it being afforded the Jewes before Christs coming, and continued to them, at this time of their resisting and crucifying of Christ.

11. having blessed the bread and fishes, thanked God for them, and implored his blessing on them, he as the Master of the feast gave the severall proportions to the disciples, and they as waiters distributed them to the guests, every man his portion of bread, and of fish, as much as they desired to eat.

19. So when they had rowed about twenty five or thirty furlongs, they ſee Jeſus walking on the ſea, and drawing nigh unto the ſhip, and they were afraid.]

19. When therefore by the contrariety of the winds they had been forced to fall to their oares, and had done ſo for ſome ſpace, they diſcern one walking on the ſea and coming toward the ſhip, This was Jeſus, but they not knowing it was ſo, (v. 20.) were afrighted with the ſight.

20. But he ſaith unto them, It is I, be not afraid.

21. Then they [willingly received him into the ſhip; and immediately the ſhip was at the land whither they went.]

24. When the people therefore ſaw that Jeſus was not there, neither his diſciples, they alſo took ſhipping, and came to Capernaum, ſeeking for Jeſus.]

24. When, I ſay, the multitude ſaw Jeſus was gone from that place, as well as his diſciples, v. 19. and from thence concluded it moſt probable, that Jeſus, though he went not with the diſciples, was gone after them to Capernaum, his uſuall habitation, they having the advantage of veſſels for paſſage v. 23. took ſhip and went to Capernaum to look for him.

25. And when they had found him on the other ſide of the ſea, [they ſaid unto him,] Rabbi, when cameſt thou hither?

25. they conſidering that he went not into the ſhip with the diſciples v. 22. and not knowing of any paſſage by boat, which he could have to Capernaum, could not imagine which way he came thither, yet becauſe Tiberias was not far of from the place where the miracle of the bread was wrought, and there came other boates from thence, v. 23. they being uncertain what to think, aſked him of the time and way of his conveyance.

26. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [Ye ſeek me, not becauſe ye ſaw the miracles, but becauſe ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.]

26. That which makes you thus follow me, is not the acknowledgment of my divine power evidenced by my miracles, or conſequent to that, a purpoſe to embrace my doctrine, or deſire to learn of me, but a groſſe carnall deſire of the like advantages, which you had of my multiplying loaves to feed you.

27. [b] Labour not for the meat which periſheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlaſting life, which the ſon of man ſhall give unto you, for him hath * God the Father ſealed]

27. Set not your hearts on theſe poor externall advantages, ſeek not, deſire not to acquire this corporall food, in order to your worldly ends, ſecular victories and greatneſs, (ſee note a.) and that which will afford you but a ſhort fading benefit, v. 49. but look out, and get your part of that food which is it ſelf unperiſhable, and will make all that feed on it immortall alſo. This food ſhall the Meſſias (that is, Chriſt) beſtow upon you, for him and his doctrine hath God the Father acknowledged to be his own (ſee note on Epheſ. 4. i.) and by the coming of the Spirit on him, demonſtrated him to be ſent by him, no King of your chooſing or making v. 15. but as his kingdome is to be a ſpirituall kingdome, ſo is he to be inſtalled to it by God, and not by you.

29. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him, whom he hath ſent.]

29. Jeſus anſwered them, That which God requires of you, is, to believe and doe all that I, who am ſent by him, doe command you.

30. They ſaid therefore unto him, What ſigne ſheweſt thou then, that we may ſee and believe in thee? what doſt thou work?]

30. Then though they had before believed and reſolved v. 14. that he was of a certain truth the expected Meſſias, and were therefore minded to ſet him for their Captain or King, yet now being checked by Chriſt for their carnall conceits of the Meſſias, v. 26, 27. they retract their former reſolution, and demand farther ſignes, before they will look after ſuch a kind of Meſſias as he now tells them of, and therefore to his requiring them to believe on him, they ſaid, What miracle doe you ſhew? what work of wonder, ſuch as may be ſufficient to aſſure us, that thou art the Meſſias?

31. Our fathers did eat Manna in the deſert, as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.]

31. We have great reaſon to adhere to Moſes, who wrought ſuch miracles, brought down bread ready prepared from heaven for us, and unleſſe thou wilt produce ſome atteſtation to thy ſelf, which may at leaſt equall this one, why may not we be allow'd to think it unreaſonable to forſake him, and follow thee?

32. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, Moſes gave you not that bread from heaven, but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.]

32. Jeſus ſaith unto them, I aſſure you, that Manna came not from heaven, but out of the airy region, and that the work of God, not Moſes, and now the ſame God gives you farre more durable food then that was, gives you me who came really down from heaven, and am moſt eminently that which Manna was to your bodies, bread or food to your ſouls.

34. Then ſaid they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

35. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, I am [the bread of life: he that cometh to me, ſhall never hunger; and he that believeth on me, ſhall never thirſt.]

35. that durable vivificall bread of God, the excellency whereof is infinitely above that of Manna, as in other things, ſo in this, that the feeding thereon yeilds a durable ſatisfaction, whereas in Manna and all corporeall food, there is ſtill a ſucceſſion of appetite.

36. But that which I told you v. 26. was, that though you have ſeen me and taſted of my miracles, yet you doe not believe on me, feed not on this true bread, which came down from heaven.

For this lies upon me, as the office for which my Father hath ſent me, the fulfilling of which is all my care, viz. that I ſhould be carefull to preſerve every one, which with an honeſt heart ſhall thus come and believe on me, and give every one that thus perſeveres (beſide many excellent priviledges here) eternall life of body and ſoul hereafter.

38. For I came down from heaven, not to doe mine own will, but the will of him that ſent me.

42. And they ſaid, Is not this Jeſus the ſon of Joſeph, whoſe father and mother we know? How is it then that he ſaith, I came down from heaven?]

43. To this muttering of theirs, Jeſus replied, I have ſaid nothing which 'tis reaſonable for you to murmure at.

43. Jeſus therefore anſwered and ſaid unto them, Murmure not among your ſelves.]

44. Tis true, there is ſome pretence for theſe vulgar prejudices againſt me, which would make it impoſſible for thoſe that look no farther, to become my followers, (and therefore this makes it ſo unfit and unſafe for you to fix your eyes ſo wholly on this) And it is an effect of my Fathers preventing grace to fit mens hearts to be ready and willing to come to me, (ſee note d.) and without this work firſt wrought, and that probity and humility, which qualifies men to receive my doctrine, I doe not expect that any man ſhould believe on me, and therefore I attribute it to that, (ſee v. 65.) when any one doth (as, on the other ſide, to your obdurate hearts, that you doe not) come unto me. And for every one that doth thus come, and therein obey my call, and follow the duct of my Father, on him moſt certainly will I beſtow everlaſting life.

44. No man can come to me, except the Father, which hath ſent me, draw him, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.]

45. The ſumme of what I thus ſay, hath been obſcurely delivered to you by the prophets of old: For they, for example, Iſaiah c. 54. 13. ſpeaking of theſe times, have foretold, that God will diſpoſe and prepare the hearts of many men to be fit, or ready to receive Chriſt, (ſee note e.) to embrace the Meſſias, And therefore it was that I ſaid that every humble honeſt heart, every diſciple of my Father that hath not reſiſted that guidance, and attraction of my Father, doth certainly come to me, and believe on me.

47, 48. He that embraceth my doctrine and is ſincerely my diſciple, to believe and practiſe what I command him, ſhall undoubtedly live for ever, as having fed on that enlivening bread, v. 33 receiving me his ſpirituall food, by his faith into his ſoul.

47. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that believeth in me, hath everlaſting life.

48. I am that bread of life.]

49, 50, 51. The Manna given in the deſert did not make them immortall which did eat of it. But the bread which is now ſent you down from heaven, will give immortality to them that feed on it, that is, to all that truely believe in Chriſt, that receive his doctrine, and digeſt it into the food and nouriſhment of their ſouls, And this is offered and prepared for every man, not only for you Jewes. Manna was bread indeed, but firſt, dead, not living. Secondly, it came not down from heaven properly ſo called, v. 32. and Thirdly, they which did eat of it, afterwards dyed. Fourthly, their Manna was contradiſtinct from their quailes, that bread from that fleſh. Fifthly, That was given for the preſerving the life only of one nation. But contrariwiſe by theſe ſo many ways of excellency above that Manna, I am, firſt, living bread. Secondly, I came down from heaven properly ſo called, the higheſt heaven. Thirdly, whoſoever feedeth, that is, believeth on me, embraceth my doctrine and practiſeth accordingly, ſhall not dye, the ſoul whoſe food I am ſhall become immortall in bliſſe. Fourthly, this bread which I ſpeak of is very fleſh, even my fleſh which I will give to be crucified for the life of the world, by that death of mine purchaſing grace and pardon for ſin, which are the foundation of immortality. Fifthly, this world is the whole world, all mankind, not onely that one nation of the Jewes, which received benefit by that.

49. Your fathers did eate Manna in the wilderneſſe, and are dead.

50 This is the bread which came down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not dye.

51. I am the living bread, which cometh down from heaven: if any man eate of this bread, he ſhall live for ever: and the bread that I ſhall give him is my fleſh, which I will give for the life of the world.]

52. Hereupon the Jewes diſputed about this ſaying of his, how 'tis poſſible that men ſhould feed on his fleſh.

52. The Jewes therefore ſtrove among themſelves ſaying, How can this man give us his fleſh to eat?]

e. 53. you thus feed on this celeſtiall food, that is, be ſincere diſciples of the crucified Saviour, that comes not to be a glorious King, but to dye for the ſins of the world, you have no part in this true, that is, immortall life.

53. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, Except [ye e eat the fleſh of the ſon of man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.]

54. Who ſo eateth my fleſh and drinketh my blood, hath eternall life, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.

f. 55. For I that am thus ſent in the fleſh to dye for the world, am ſuch food, as will feed you to everlaſting life, and ſo am eminently that which food is ſaid to be, yea in a much higher degree; Food doth not firſt give, but only continues and preſerves life, but my fleſh ſhall give life to the world.

He that thus feedeth or believeth on me, that reſignes himſelf up to be ruled by me, in the ſame manner as he abides in me, hath me abiding in him, is ſo made a member of me, that by the life which is in me he ſhall alſo be enlivened by God, by whom I live, (See note on c. 14. c.) and this is one preeminence over corporall food, which corrupt in the ſtomach, before they nouriſh any man.

57. As the living father hath ſent me, and I live by the father: ſo he that eateth me, even he ſhall live by me.] 57. For as I that came down from the Father the fountain of life, his ſon by eternall generation, muſt needs derive life from him, ſo alſo he that believeth on me, and ſo hath digeſted my precepts as the nouriſhment of his ſoul, muſt needs derive life from me.

58. This is that bread which came down from heaven, not as your fathers did eat Manna, and are dead:] he that eateth of this bread, ſhall live for ever. 58. This bread from heaven is not like that Manna, which they that eat, did dye for all that.

Many therefore of thoſe that had hitherto followed him, ſaid, this doctrine of his is very hard and unintelligible, how he ſhould be ſaid really to have come down from heaven, and how his fleſh ſhould feed men to life eternall.

And asked them, whether it were not as credible that he ſhould have come from heaven, as that he ſhould goe up thither; telling them that they ſhould ere long ſee him doe ſo, and that in reaſon would aſſure them that he came down from thence.

63. It is the ſpirit that quickeneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing, the words that I ſpeak unto you, they are ſpirit, and they are life.] 63. And for the other particular of eating his fleſh, he tells them they cannot but know, that it is the ſoul that enliveneth, and not the body, and agreeably that it is not the groſſe carnall eating of his body of fleſh, that he could ſpeak of, when he talk'd of their eating, and his feeding them to life eternall, (ſee note on Lu. 9. d.) but certainly a more ſpirituall divine eating, or feeding on him, which ſhould bring them a durable eternall life; his words (ſee v. 68.) that is, his doctrine being ſpiritually fed on by them, that is, being received into their hearts, not only their ears, will quicken them to a ſpirituall life here, and that ſhall prove to them an eternall life hereafter (ſo S. Chryſoſtome expounds, [the fleſh] that is the fleſhly hearing profits nothing.)

64. But there are ſome of you that believe not. For Jeſus knew * from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who † ſhould betray him.] 64. But for this ſpirituall feeding, ſinking down this ſpirituall food into your hearts, there are ſome of you that are far enough from doing ſo. Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. ὁ Προφήτης Βασιλέα ποιεῖ.

V. 15. Make him a King] The Jewes expected a Meſſiah (whom they called ὁ προφήτης the prophet v. 14.) about this time. Tacitus and Suetonius ſay it was a received opinion that about this time a great King ſhould ariſe in Judah; but this a glorious one, and a powerfull King, one that ſhould work their deliverance, free them from, and revenge them on the nations, who had gotten the dominion over them; By this miracle of Chriſts in feeding ſuch a multitude with ſo ſmall proviſion they conjectured rightly, that he was able to ſuſtain, and feed the greateſt and moſt numerous army with very little charge, and thereupon were ready to come and take him by force to be their King, that is, their judge, or leader, to fight their battails for them like Gideon, &c. and this afterwards they again referre to, when they put him in mind of Moſes's giving them Manna in the wilderneſſe, v. 31. which if he will doe, or any thing equall to it, they will believe on him. This faith of theirs being unduly founded, and breaking out into a very inordinate expreſſion, our Saviour wholly diſliked, as to the preſent expreſſion of it, meaning not to undertake any ſuch employment; And for the faith it ſelf, that he juſtly ſuſpected would turn into malice, when they ſhould ſee this their hope of temporall deliverance and revenge fruſtrated, and therefore he retired, departed out of their hands to a mountain alone.

b. Εργάζεσθε

V. 27. Labour] The word ἐργάζεσθε to labour, here seems to answer the Hebrew עשה, having here an Accusative case after it, and that signifies to acquire, parare, comparare, quærere, acquirere, colligere, possidere, lucrari, and is rendred by the Septuagint ἐκτήσαντο Gen. 12. 5. and Gen. 31. 1. For עשה in Hebrew, and ποιέω in Greek, the Targum read קנא acquisivit, and Deut. 8. 17. in stead of My hand hath wrought me all this strength, עשה החיל, ἐποίησε δύναμιν, the Targum hath כנש נכסיא hath gathered, or acquired, me these riches. So Ezech. 28. 4. ἐποίησας, thou hast made the gold and silver in thy treasury, the Targum have וכנשתא, and thou hast gathered, &c. and thus Lu. 19. 16. ἡ μνᾶ σου προσειργάσατο δέκα μνᾶς, and v. 18. ἐποίησε πέντε μνᾶς, thy pound hath made, or wrought, that is, hath gained, acquired, ten, or five pounds. Thus in Palæphatus Parius* ὠνὲι ἀπίστων, εἰργάσατο βρῶμα, he got himself food, sibi victum comparavit. Another notion there is of the word, 1 Cor. 9. 13. οἱ τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι, they that work, or labour, or prepare holy things, according to another notion of עשה, when 'tis applied to a sacrifice, or feast, or office, and then it notes observare, celebrare, præparare, aptare, ordinare, disponere, to prepare, or fit, or dispose, but that belongs not to this place.

c. Ἔργα Θεοῦ

V. 28. Work the works of God] That ἔργα Θεοῦ signifies here the tasks, or commands, of God, is not only evidenced by the Context, but is the affirmation of Procopius in Gen. 2. Τὸν γὰρ ἐνιαυτὸν ὁ Σωτὴρ ἔργον λέγει, ἵστ' ἔστι τὸ ἔργον Θεοῦ, ἵνα πεδίσηται εἰς ὃν ἀπέστειλεν ἐκεῖνος, this is the work of God, the task which God prescribes us, that you believe on him whom he hath sent, the very place that immediately followes here v. 29.

d. Ὁ δίδωσί μοι ὁ πατήρ

V. 37. The Father giveth me] What is the meaning of ὁ δίδωσί μοι ὁ πατὴρ, what my Father giveth me, may thus be discerned; Psal. 2. 8. there is a prediction, or prophecy of Christ (of whom in the words immediately precedent it is said, Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee, v. 7.) that God will give him the heathen for his inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for his possession, where we discern what kind of giving is here meant, giving for an inheritance or possession, and that is for Christ to be Lord or owner of them, and they, as possessions, subject to his power and disposé. And this is done in the conversion of them, (see Note on Rev. 2. 0.) Of this possession of his we find mention, Tit. 2. 14. where the περιούσιος λαὸς peculiar people, are λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν, people for a possession, and those are to be purified by Christ, and his life given for them, that he might redeem them from all iniquity. But who they are that are thus said to be given to Christ by God, will first appear Negatively; 1. not any peculiar number of men, absolutely (without all respect to any qualifications) chosen by God to eternall life; for it is apparent and expresly affirmed of one of this number, that he was finally lost, Those whom thou gavest me, saith Christ, I have kept, and none of them is lost, save the son of perdition, Joh. 17. 12. where through his own wretched default one of those who had by God been given to Christ, totally and finally departed, and was lost from him. Secondly, Not those that are already Actually believers, or by God looked upon as such; For of these that are here given to Christ, it is said πρός ἐμὲ ἥξει, they shall come unto me: Where coming to Christ, is believing on him, and is a consequent of Gods giving them to Christ, not antecedent to it, and therefore when they are given to Christ, they are not looked upon as believers already, but those which will be such; By these Negative considerations, the Positive will, I suppose, be best collected, That they that are so qualified and disposed, as that Christ being proposed and revealed to them, they will follow him, come to him, become his disciples, those are they whom God gives to Christ. For there is a sort and temper of mind, which is most agreeable and proportionable to the believing on, or receiving of Christ, which they that have, are said to be εὐθετοι εἰς βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, fit, or prepared, or disposed, for the kingdome of God, Lu. 9. 62. (such as in that place, are ready and willing to undergoe Christs conditions, to part with all, and follow him, and contrary to these are they that are not worthy of eternall life, Act. 13. 46.) and of such Christ saith that they are not far from the kingdome of God, and that of such is the kingdome of heaven, and S. Luke, that they are πεπαγμένοι disposed, in a readinesse for eternal life; see Note on Act. 13. m If it be demanded what temper this is, I answer it is the honest heart described in the parable of the seed, desiring sincerely to know the truth, and to doe Gods will c. 7. 17. probity of mind, and, an eminent branch of that, humility, the temper resembled by the little children, whose innocence and humility is so remarkable, and of those poor in spirit is the kingdome of God (the Christian state) made up, Mat. 5. 3. and those are Evangelized peculiarly, that is, wrought on by the preaching of the Gospel, and God gives grace to the humble, but resists the proud, refractary, confident person, and accordingly it is set down as the character of the Gospel, that God hath chosen the foolish things of the world, the weak, the base, the despised, 1 Cor. 1. 27, 28. And so of them that are thus qualified it is here truly said, that as God gives them to Christ for his portion, the men that are to be his subjects (the Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile, is the fittest to be a disciple,) So when Christ calls all to come unto him, these shall actually come; as soon as ever Christ is revealed to them, they receive him; As Josephus speaking of Christ, Ant. l. 18. c. 4. saith he was διδάσκαλος ἀνθρώπων τῶν ἡδονῇ ταληθῆ δεχομένων, a teacher of those men that did with pleasure receive the truth; Or as the πεπαγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, as many as were (in this sense) disposed to eternal life, believed, Act. 13. 18. and as Christ saith expresly here c. 7. 17. that if any man will, θέλει ποιεῖν, that is, desire sincerely to doe Gods will, he shall know of the doctrine &c. that is, acknowledge it as divine, and believe on it, whereas on the other side, Envy keeps some, Act. 13. 45. Covetousnesse others, Lu. 16. 14 Love of the praise of men, Joh. 12. 42. keeps others from believing. And generally the unbelieving heart is an evil heart, Heb. 3. 12. and a reprobate mind, (see 2 Cor. 13. 5.) and a heard heart, and a foolish and slow heart in other places. (see ch. 16. 3.) Meanwhile the better dispositions and preparations of the hearts of these here, are to be look'd on as effects wrought by the preventing graces of God, and in that respect they are here said to be drawn by the Father, v. 4. This preventing grace of God, which thus qualifies and disposes them to receive Christ, is by a Metonymie said to draw them to Christ, And that being drawn by God there, is set parallel to Gods giving them here, and is preparatory in both places to coming unto Christ, And then those that thus come to him, Christ will in no wise cast out, that is, by no means reject, but receive them and admit them to him, Onely he may perish after that, as Judas, which was given to Christ, did, if, as he did, he apostatize from him. By this appears also the meaning of διδακτοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ the taught, or the disciples, of God ver. 45. those that have heartily applied themselves to Gods service, that have received this effect or impression of Gods preventing grace, the honest humble hearts, which thereby are qualified to lay hold and adhere to Christ, when others that have not received these precedaneous pious infusions, or are not wrought on by them, resist and stand out against him, (see Note on 1 Thes. 4. c.) And so again what is meant by δεδομένον αὐτῷ ἐκ πατρὸς ver. 5. given to him by, or from, the Father. He that by this preventing grace of God is thus qualified or disposed, it is said to be given him from the Father to come unto Christ, i. e., his coming to Christ is consequent to that that probity of mind wrought by the grace of God in him (As Lu. 1. 74. δοῦναι λατρεύειν Gods giving us to serve him, is his giving ſtrength or grace, or qualifying us for his ſervice.) An effect of this grace it is, and of that probity produced by it, that any man laies hold on, or receives, the faith of Chriſt. And therefore from hence will beſt be diſcerned what is the meaning of the ſheeps hearing the ſhepheards voice and all that is added in that parable ch. 10. 3. The ſheep there cannot be underſtood to be believers or diſciples of Chriſt, for theſe there are ſuppoſed to be ſheep, before Chriſt the ſhepheard comes to them, and in that to be denominated ſheep, that they heare the true ſhepheards voice when he comes, and ſo cannot be they that have already received him, as believers muſt have done, and accordingly ver. 8. of the thieves and robbers that came before Chriſt, 'tis ſaid, that the ſheep did not heare them (They were ſheep therfore before Chriſts coming) and ſo appears by ver. 26. where their not being his ſheep is ſet as the reaſon of their not believing, which were not a proofe, but tautologie, if the ſheep were there believers. By all which it is evident that the ſheep are a ſort of men, not yet conſidered as Chriſtians, but ſuch as are apt to believe in the true Meſſias, whenſoever he comes, and ſo to follow him, as knowing his voice, ver. 4. which laſt expreſſion is a key to open the meaning of the parable, and reſolve who the ſheep are. God the Father is in the ἀναγωγὴν or moral, the chief ſhepheard that is the owner or maſter of the ſheep (as among the Jewes men kept their own ſheep) And the ſheep are thoſe that are beſt reſembled by that emblem, the honeſt and humble hearted men, that by the revelation of Gods will, and ſome meaſure of grace afforded, before the coming of Chriſt, have been formed into all probity and humility of manners, living either as Zachary and divers others are ſaid to doe, walking in the waies of God blameleſſe, or elſe after an ill life, recovered by repentance, and theſe are ſo well acquainted with the waies of God, that when any falſe Chriſt or impoſtor comes with infuſions of impiety or wickedneſſe, they diſcerne them to be contrary to Godlineſſe and ſo will not harken to them; But when Chriſt the true ſhepheard (for his Father and he are one v. 30.) cometh, and that, as with divine miracles to atteſt his miſſion, ſo with doctrines of piety, perfectly agreeable to that which they formerly practiſed, as the will of God, and only more elevated, and of higher perfection, Mat. 5. then theſe diſcerning the agreeableneſſe of his doctrines with thoſe which they have already received from God, and the addition of all the heavenly promiſes, which agree with the notion which they had of God as a rewarder, they know him to be the Meſſias, the ſhepheard which God hath promiſed to ſend them, that is, God himſelf (not any hired ſervant, whoſe own the ſheep are not v. 12. but) the true ſhepheard, who is the owner of the ſheep, and that is the meaning of their knowing his voice, upon which it is that they follow him, whereas ſtrangers they flie from, and doe not know their voice v. 5. By this explication of theſe ſo many phraſes all importing the ſame thing, will appear by way of reſultance, what is the method that God is pleaſed to uſe to bring men to eternall life. He creates them rational, and ſo Voluntary agents, and becauſe of the weight of the Senſitive part of man, that preſſeth downe the ſoule, doth by his precepts of good life, and propoſals of reward to it, and by his preventing graces, endevour and doe his part to draw them, and engage them to the performance of theſe duties, or, upon miſcarriages, recalls them to repentance. Thoſe that by the ſtrength of theſe graces (not deſtroying, but exciting and aſſiſting their free will,) doe make uſe of them to that end, and as farre, as is yet revealed to them, live obediently, theſe are ready to receive and entertain Chriſt, his promiſes, and diviner, more elevated precepts, when they are revealed to them, and to thoſe God elſewhere promiſeth thoſe higher dignations, under the title of more grace, and giving abundantly to him that hath; And when they have thus received Chriſt, his doctrine and his grace going along with it, is moſt proper to take them off from the remaining dregs of corruption, to raiſe them to thoſe pitches (which none but they are qualified to receive) of piety, and ſuffering any thing for Gods ſake, of charity, exceſſes of that, even to enemies, &c. And they that doe not fall off becauſe of theſe heights and ſtrictneſſes, but adhere to Chriſt, and paſſe through all the trialls of this life, conſtant and perſevering, they are daily ſupplied with more grace here, and rewarded with higher proportionable degrees of glory. One thing onely muſt here be farther added, that there are ſome that are ſaid to be given to Chriſt in a more eminent and peculiar degree, and manner, not onely to be believers but conſtant, cloſe attendants of Chriſt, ſuch were the Twelve, who are ſaid to be given him ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, out of the world, ch. 17. 6. For of them it is ſaid that no one is loſt but only the ſon of perdition, v. 12. For them he prayes that they may be conſecrated to the preaching of the Goſpel, v. 17. of them he ſaith that he hath ſent them, &c. v. 18. given them the ſame Commiſſion that he himſelf had. And his praying for them is diſtinguiſhed from his praying after for believers, v. 20, 21. which being there ſet down as in a Parentheſis, he returns to his Diſciples again, v. 22 and the glory which God had given him he gives them, where the giving them the glory which God had given Chriſt, ſeems a diſtant thing from their beholding his glory, ver. 24. the former is the fitting them with gifts to ſucceed him on earth, the latter, the beatifick viſion in heaven. And although it be ordinary for the ſame phraſe to be uſed in a more eminent and reſtrained ſenſe ſometimes then others, and ſo they who are given to Chriſt may ſometimes be believers only, in other places (where the Context enforceth it) diſciples peculiarly, (and accordingly in that 17th chap. v. 9, and 12. it is only they whom thou haſt given me, where yet, as appeared, the diſciples only were meant,) yet this addition of the words ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, out of the world, may be reaſonably thought to denote this by a propriety, whereby the world ſometimes ſignifies thoſe that deale in the affaires of the world, ſecular perſons: Whereas the Twelve forſook the world, their trades and callings there, and followed Chriſt, and ſo were peculiarly given to him, ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, out of the world.

V. 53. Eat the fleſh of the ſon of man and —] What is meant here by the fleſh and blood of the ſon of man muſt briefly be explained, and that firſt by taking notice of a figure, or idiome, frequent in theſe Writers whereby the parts ſet down ſeparately doe ſignifie the whole, which conſiſts of thoſe parts. So is the heaven and the earth ſet to ſignifie the whole compages of the (ſublunary) world (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 3. e.) and many the like. And ſo Chriſts body and fleſh and bones Eph. 5. 30. and here, the fleſh and blood of the ſon of man, is the ſon of man, or Chriſt himſelfe. Secondly, by obſerving the notion of fleſh and blood frequently uſed not only to ſignifie our mortall condition, which this our fleſh and blood is ſubject to, (whereupon, when S. Paul ſaith, that fleſh and blood cannot inherit the kingdome of God, he addes, neither can corruption inherit incorruption, ſee Note on Mat. 16. e. but alſo this mortal nature, as it is ſubject to much weakneſſe, and afflictions, &c. as Iſa. 31. 3. the Ægyptians are men and not God, and their horſes fleſh and not ſpirit, that is, weak helpers, unfit to be truſted in, v. 1. So when S. Paul ſaith, that through the infirmity of the fleſh, that is, in many afflictions, and perſecutions, he preached unto them, And ſo it notes Chriſt in his ſtate of humiliation quite contrary to that which the Jewes expected their Meſſias ſhould come in, that Chriſt which was look'd on now ſo meanly, meanly, and was afterwards crucified by them. 3ly, by obſerving the occaſion of Chriſts diſcourſe here, (as it is ordinary with Chriſt to accommodate his ſpeeches to the occaſions, ſo Mat. 4.19. when he calls the fiſhermen, he tells them he will make them fiſhers of men, ſo Joh. 4. 10. 14. and v. 31. and here v. 26, 27. and many the like,) which was thus begun, They followed him for his loaves, v.26. He reprehendeth that in them, and bids them ſeek, and deſire that food which endureth to everlaſting life, v. 27. that is, that doctrine of his which is food for their ſoules, and being received, and digeſted and turn'd into encreaſe of good life in them, would bring them to immortality. They ask him the way for them to doe this, He tells them plainly, by believing on him, v. 29. They thereupon call for a ſigne, a miracle to be wrought by him, or elſe they will not believe, v.30. And they inſtance in Moſes who brought them Manna from heaven, And they would have him doe ſome ſuch thing, that they may believe on him, v. 31. Upon this occaſion he begins, and compares himſelf with that Manna, and ſhewes how much he ſurpaſſes that, and ſo continues that compariſon betwixt himſelf and bread, as that is a means to preſerve this ſhort life which deſerves not to be call'd life; but he is the author and donour, and publiſher of eternall life, v. 33. Upon this ſpeech of his, the Jewes murmure, v. 41. that he ſhould call himſelf the bread that came down from heaven; Chriſt reſumes that ſpeech, and ſpeaks it with all confidence, I am that bread of life, v. 48. that is, that ſpiritual food, that will bring men to everlaſting life v. 50. and this bread, ſaith he, is his fleſh, which he will give for the life of the world, v. 51. that is, he will die for this end to bring men to immortall life, and that is it which he means by his being the bread of life. Upon this, as if they underſtood nothing all this while (though he had firſt ſpoken to them in plain terms, and expreſs'd all by believing on him, v. 29, and 35. and only took up this more obſcure figurative ſpeech by way of anſwer to their propoſalls) they aske in a ſenſleſſe, perverſe manner, How can this man give us his fleſh to eat? v. 52. To which this verſe is a confident anſwer, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, Except you eat, &c. ſtill meaning, what all this while he had meant in oppoſition to their Manna, that his doctrine, for the preaching of which he was ſent down from heaven, and that grace, which ſhould be purchaſed for them by his death, was the moſt excellent food for their ſoules, which would eſtabliſh, or comfort, or ſuſtain their hearts, that is, maintain ſpiritual life in them, and that which would become eternal, v. 54. All which being put together makes up this complete ſenſe of the words, that Chriſt, this mortall, deſpiſed, crucified Chriſt, that took our fleſh on him, came down from heaven, here lived and died, to reveal his Fathers will unto us, and work belief in us, is the food of our ſoules, the believing, and obeying of whom will, as food ſuſtaines corporal life, beget and maintain ſpiritual life in us, and bring us to eternity. By which alſo appears what Faith it is, which is look'd on by Chriſt as ſo highly neceſſary, even that which is here expreſs'd by feeding on this ſpirituall food, not only eating, but digeſting, and turning it into the nouriſhment of our ſoules, ſuch a believing the doctrine of Chriſt as hath preſent influence on our lives, obeying, not only underſtanding his commands, embracing his promiſes upon the terms on which they are made, undertaking the performance of the condition of them, and not only aſſenting to the truth of them, And ſo for the humility of his life, and the charity and zeale to the good of mens ſoules, and the conſtancy and courage of his death, and the charity ſo great as to lay down his life even for enemies, to tranſcribe, and practiſe that alſo. This is Ἐσθίειν τὴν σάρκα——to eat the fleſh of the ſon of man, and to drink his blood, and without this we have no life in us. Ἐσθ. τὴν σάρκ. καὶ

V. 55. Indeed] One principall notion of ἀληθὴς hath been formerly explained (ſee Note on Lu. 16. a.) to ſignifie truly valuable, or durable, or truly valuable, becauſe it is durable, and ſo here ἀληθὴς or ἀληθῶς βρῶσις true meat, or truly meat is explained to be the bread of life, v. 48. that, on which he that feeds ſhall live for ever, ſo the βρῶσις μένουσα εἰς ζωὴν food that endures for ever, v. 27. and oppoſite to Manna, on which they that feed, die, v. 49. And this 1. as the word ἀληθῶς truly noteth ſome ſpeciall eminency, wherein any attribute belongs to the ſubject, and when it is applied to reſemblances, it then ſignifies that, which is ſpoken of, to be more eminently that, by which 'tis reſembled, then that it ſelf is, As, I am the true vine, that is, A vine by bearing grapes, (which yield wine, which makes glad the heart of man) is not neer ſo able, and proper to refreſh a thirſty perſon, as I am, as my commands and promiſes are. So S. John of Chriſt c. 1. 9. that he is the true light, that is, the moſt excellent. So Heb. 8. 2. Heaven is the true tabernacle, that of which the Tabernacle was but a dark and poor reſemblance, and ſo this is called ἀληθινὸς ἄρτος, true bread, v. 32. and truly ἀληθὴς βρῶσις meat here, that is, more nutritive, and ſtrengthning, and comforting then meat and bread is. 2dly, in reſpect of the particular matter, to which 'tis here applied, viz. βρῶσις food, that which feeds one for an houre, or a day, (and enlargeth his life, but ſo long) being not truly food, not worthy to be ſo called, at leaſt not ſo, in compariſon with that, which keeps him alive, ſo as life is adequately oppoſite to death, that is, forever. And ſo with us the word falſe ſignifies fading, tranſitory, that which will faile us, when it were moſt of advantage for us to receive benefit by it.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. VII.

1. went about preaching through the cities of Galilee,

1. AFter theſe things Jeſus [walked in Galilee, for he would not walk in Jury, becauſe the Jewes ſought to kill him.]

where he rather choſe to doe it, then in Judea, becauſe the rulers of the Jewes, thoſe of the Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem, ſought for ſome advantage, or occaſion to put him to death.

2. Now the Jewes feaſt of tabernacles was at hand.

3. On this occaſion his kindred (v. 5.) ſaid unto him,

3. His brethren therefore ſaid unto him, Depart hence and goe into Judea, that thy diſciples alſo may ſee the works that thou doeſt.]

Goe into Judea again, that the many, which were wont to follow thee there, may ſee the miracles which thou doeſt.

4. For whoſoever would gain an authority among the people, in any reaſon muſt not doe his miracles privately, therefore what ever thou doeſt, doe it in Judea, as publickly as thou canſt.

5. This they ſaid, as not believing on him, but either ſuſpecting the truth of his miracles, or elſe deſiring that he would doe that, which might acquire him that authority, which they conceived him to pretend to.

5. For neither did his brethren believe in him.]

6. Then

† seaſon καιρὸς

6. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, My † time is not yet come: but your time is alwaies ready.

6, 7. Jeſus therefore to rectifie this miſtake of theirs, ſaith unto them, 'Tis not yet fit for me to be ſo publick, becauſe the doctrine that I teach is contrary and odious to the world, or the preſent prevailing power of the Jewes. You may appear whereſoever you will, being not under any ſuch hatred, by any thing that you doe or teach, as I am ſure to be among the Phariſees, and chief of the Jewes.

* ſeaſon is not yet fulfill'd πεπλήρωται.

8. Goe ye up to this feaſt: I goe not yet up unto this feaſt, for my * time is not yet full come.]

8. You may go up to Jeruſalem, to the feaſt, as publickly as you pleaſe, but I ſhall not go yet, when you go, or with you, becauſe my time of going up, in ſuch a publick capacity,

v. 10. is not yet come.

9. When he had ſaid theſe words unto them, he abode ſtill in Galilee.]

9. And accordingly he ſtayed a while after the reſt of his kindred in the place where he now abode.

10. But when his brethren were gone up, then went he alſo up unto the feaſt, not openly, but as it were in ſecret.]

10. Soon after his kindred were gone, he alſo followed, but more privately, with ſmall company attending him, leſt he ſhould ſtirre up the jealouſie of the Sanhedrim.

11. Then the Jewes ſought him at the feaſt, and ſaid, Where is he?

12. And there was much [murmuring] among the people concerning him: for ſome ſaid, He is a good man: others ſaid, Nay, but he deceiveth the people.]

12. diſputing, arguing, among them, ſome affirming him to be an upright man, and one that taught the truth; others denied, and ſaid that he was a falſe prophet, and ſeduced the people.

13. Howbeit, no man ſpake [openly of him, for fear of the Jewes.]

13. by way of oration to the people (ſee note a.) either for him, or againſt him, becauſe the people were ſo divided in their opinions about him, that either ſpeaking for him, or againſt him, would have been perilous.

14. Now about the midſt of the feaſt,] Jeſus went up into the Temple, and taught.

14. Now on ſome middle day of the feaſt, on one of the 15. How comes he to underſtand the books of the Law and Scriptures ſo well, having not been brought up in the ſchools of the prophets? ſee note on Mat. 5. g.

16. Jeſus anſwered them and ſaid, [My doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me.]

16. What I teach is not from my ſelf, but from God, that hath ſent me.

17. If any man will doe his will, he ſhall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I ſpeak of my ſelf.]

17. Any man that hath a willingneſſe to doe Gods will, how contrary ſoever it be to his own, that hath a readineſſe to ſerve God in Gods way, and is not wedded to his own (ſee c. 6. note d.) that man, and none but he, is likely to paſſe a right judgment on my doctrine, whether it be of God or no.

18. He that ſpeaketh of himſelf, ſeeketh his own glory: but he that ſeeketh his glory that ſent him, the ſame is true, and no unrighteouſneſſe is in him.]

18. For that man will thus judge, He that pretends to be ſent by God, when he is not, alwaies ſeeks his own advantages, ſomewhat of glory or profit to himſelf, But he that labours only the bringing honour to God, and in purſuit of that, doth what is moſt contrary to his own intereſts, conceals nothing, though it coſt him never ſo dear, to declare it, He is worth believing (or deſerves to be believed) having no falſe deſigne in what he doth, no deceit, or guile in him.

19. Did not Moſes give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? why go ye about to kill me?]

19. But 'tis otherwiſe with you, You are not of that making v. 17. That law which your own beloved Moſes gave you, and for the maintaining of which you have ſo much zeal, and hate me as a breaker of it, ye doe not your ſelves obſerve, ye doe not (the moſt of you) live according to the rules of it. If ye did, ye would not be ſo forward to embrue your hands in my blood, who have no way offended againſt you, or that; This concludes you not likely to judge what doctrine is of God. A man muſt have purged and regulated affections, to doe ſo (ſee c. 6. note d.)

20. The people anſwered and ſaid, [b] Thou [haſt a devil:] who goeth about to kill thee?

* that I cured a whole man, or made whole a whole man, ὅτι ὅλον ἄνθρωπον ἐποίησα ὑγιῆ ἐν σαββάτῳ

23. If a man on the ſabbath day receive circumciſion, that the Law of Moſes ſhould not be broken, are ye angry at me, * becauſe I have made a man every whit whole on the ſabbath day?]

23. If then you doe a wounding, bloody work about a part of a man, in circumciſion, on the ſabbath day, and yet think that you break not the law of the ſabbath by ſo doing, may not I without being hated, and oppoſed by you, doe a work of charity and mercy to an entire whole man, in working a cure on him on the ſabbath day?

26. And behold, he openly in the Temple, in the preſence of all, (ſee note a.) diſputeth and avowes his actions; and they have nothing to lay to his charge, which he doth not give a moſt ſatisfying account of. 27. This were very ſtrange, for we are aſſured of the contrary, in that we know his birth and parentage; But for the Meſſias, we are taught that he muſt be one whoſe parentage is not known.

28, 29. To this Jeſus anſwered aloud, I know your meaning, when you ſay, You know whence I am, viz. that you know the family whereof I come, But there is a farther truth alſo in your words, By my works, and name, and ſpeeches, you may, if you will, know whence I am, (Juſt. Mart. qu. 140 ad orth.) and indeed I come not in mine own name, nor on mine own errand, but on his, whoſe teſtimony of me cannot deceive, but him you doe not ſo know, as to be competent judges what is his will, what is lawfull and acceptable in his ſight, what not (ſee v. 23.) but I who come with commiſſion from him, doe thus know him.

28. Then cried Jeſus in the Temple, as he taught, ſaying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am; and I am not come of my ſelf, but he that ſent me is true, whom ye know not.

Annotations

a. Παρρησία

V. 4. Be known openly] The word παῤῥησία in the New Teſtament hath divers ſignifications. Firſt it ſignifies ἄδειαν, ſaith Heſychius, boldneſſe, confidence, fearleſneſſe of danger. So Joh. 11. 54. παῤῥησίᾳ περιπατεῖν, to goe about fearleſly, So Act. 28. 31. Phil. 1. 20. Heb. 3. 6. and 10. 35. and 1. Joh 4. 17. boldneſs, or fearleſneſs, when they are called before ſecular tribunals; And ſo παῤῥησιάζομαι in two places of the Acts, ch. 13. 46. where in oppoſition to the ζῆλος, and ἀντιλογία, and βλασφημίαι of the Jewes, their virulency, contradiction, and railing againſt Paul and Barnabas, 'tis ſaid, that they παῤῥησιαζόμενοι εἶπον, ſpake boldly and confidently, that ſpeech of the greateſt danger, that brought all the hatred and perſecution of the Jewes upon them, we depart to the Gentiles. So ch. 26. 26. I ſpeak παῤῥησιαζόμενος, with confidence and courage to Agrippa, who knows of theſe things, though Feſtus doe not. So Eph. 6. 20. and 1 Theſſ. 2. 2. Secondly, it ſignifies freeneſs, or liberty, of ſpeaking, ſaying what a man will; ſo Act. 2. 29. Let me ſpeak παῤῥησίᾳ freely, without any reſtraint, of the Patriarch David (and diſtinctly Elocution (ſuch as is promiſed them Mat 10. 19.) Act. 4. 13. for there it is the gift that they prayed for, and which diſcriminated them from other illiterate men, and came upon them by the Spirit, as had been promiſed Mat. 10. 19.) So 2 Cor. 7. 4. Great is my παῤῥησία πρὸς ὑμᾶς, freeneſs, in ſpeaking largely in their commendation, expreſs'd by the καύχησις following, Great is my glorying of you; ſo Heb. 4. 16. Let us come to the throne of Grace μετὰ παῤῥησίας, with freeneſſe, to declare all our wants, and requeſts to God. So Philem. 8. haveing in, or through, Chriſt πολλὴν παῤῥησίαν, great liberty, or freeneſs of ſpeech, to ſay or to command him what is fit. So 1 Joh. 2. 28. ἔχωμεν παῤῥησίαν, we may have freeneſs of acceſſe to him καὶ μὴ αἰσχυνθῶμεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, and not be turn'd with ſhame from him or as guilty perſons be aſhamed to meet him. So again c. 3. 21. If our heart condemn us not, we have παῤῥησίαν πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, partly confidence toward God in the firſt notion of not fearing any danger from him, and partly in this latter of praying freely to him, asking him what we will, as the next words explain it, Whatſoever we aske, we receive. And ſo again in this latter ſenſe, ch 5. 14. From this there is alſo a third ſenſe of the word, but lightly changed from the ſecond, to ſignifie perſpicuity of ſpeech, as that is oppoſite to darkneſſe, or parabolicall expreſſions, when the matter is free and not involved, or obſcured by words. So Joh. 10. 24. εἰ σὺ ἡμῖν παῤῥησίᾳ, tell us plainly, as that is oppoſed to ψυχὴν αἴρειν, to hold them in ſuſpence. So Joh. 11. 14. having ſaid, Lazarus ſleepeth, which was a figurative, and withall equivocall ſpeech, he then ſpeaks παῤῥησίᾳ, in plain words, Lazarus is dead. So again c. 16. 25. and 29. in both places παῤῥησίᾳ plainly in oppoſition to ἐν παροιμίαις, in parables. So 2 Cor. 3. 12. we uſe πολλῇ παῤῥησίᾳ great plainneſs, that is perſpicuity of ſpeech, in oppoſition to the veile over Moſes's face, the obſcurity of the Old Teſtament, v. 13. Fourthly it ſignifies ſpeaking in any aſſembly, in a Declamatory way of oration, ſpeaking to the people. Thus doth Phavorinus define παῤῥησία, that it is ἡ εἰς τὸ μέσον τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἀτενισοῦν ἐπὶ δημηγορίαν πάσῃ, a going into the midſt of the aſſemby to ſpeak unto the people on any occaſion. And this, ſaith he, according to the making of the word, from πᾶς and ῥῆμα, ῥήσω and ſo παῤῥησιάζομαι (uſed Act. 9. 27, 28. and 14. 3. and 18. 26. and 19. 8.) will be paraphraſed literally, ſaith he, from that of Euripides, Κἂν παεισὰς εἶπον ἐν μέσοις τάδε, or εἰς μέσον ἐλθὼν, to come and ſtand, or ſpeak in the midſt of an aſſembly. Thus is it Mar. 8. 32. παῤῥησίᾳ ἐλάλει, he ſpake it in the hearing of the people. Thus in the 13. v. of this chapter no man ſpake παῤῥησίᾳ publickly, by way of harangue to the people. No man ſo interpoſed either for, or againſt him, and v. 26. behold he ſpeakes παῤῥησίᾳ publickly, and ſo c. 18. 20. I ſpeak to the world παῤῥησίᾳ, in publick aſſemblies. Laſtly, it ſignifies authority, ſo ſaith Heſychius Παῤῥησία, ἐξουσία alſo, power, authority: Thus I conceive it ſignifies in theſe books whenſoever the Prepoſition ἐν (with or in) is joyned with it. Thus Act. 4. 29. μετὰ παῤῥησίας λαλεῖν λόγον, to ſpeak the word with authority, and v. 31. they ſpake it with authority, being back'd with the power of miracles, v. 30. So Eph. 6. 19. that ſpeech may be given me, to open my mouth ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ with authority (as when 'tis ſaid of Chriſt that he taught ὡς ἐξουσίαν ἔχων, Mat. 7. 29. as one that had authority) ſo Col. 2. 15. where ſpeaking of Chriſt, as a Conquerour, he ſaith ἐδειγμάτισεν ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ he made open ſhew of them (that is, δειγματίζειν) with authority, as one that triumphed over them. And ſo ſure 'tis here, when his kindred, not believing in him, v. 5. firſt finde fault with him for doing his miracles ἐν κρυπτῷ in a more private place (δειλίαν ἐγκαλοῦντες ἅμα καὶ ὑποπτεύοντες τὰ γινόμενα ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, ὡς οὐκ ἀληθῶς γινόμενα, ſaith S. Chryſoſtome, accuſing his timidity, and alſo ſuſpecting the things that he had done, as not truly done, doubting whether they were true miracles or no) and thereupon adviſe him to goe up to Jeruſalem to the feaſt, and doe them there; then adde, as looking on the authority, which they thought he ſought for among the people, (or wiſhing that he would look after it) οὐδεὶς ἐν κρυπτῷ τι ποιεῖ καὶ ζητεῖ ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ εἶναι), where none of the four former notions will be agreeable to it, and therefore muſt be rendred in the fifth, No man doth any thing in ſecret and deſires to be in authority. Of this S. Chryſoſtome, τὸ δὲ ἐπαγαγεῖν, ὅτι ζητεῖ ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ εἶναι φιλοδοξίας, the adding that phraſe, ſignifies love of glory, either that they thought he deſired to be followed and magnified among men, to be a great Rabbi among the people, or elſe that they deſired it for him. Thus alſo (in the Accuſative caſe with ἔχω) it ſeems to ſignifie, Heb. 10. 19. where the Chriſtian is ſaid to have παῤῥησίαν, that is, liberty, authority, ἐξουσίαν to enter into the Holies as the Prieſt had typically under the Law, ſo Eph. 3. 12. In whom we have παῤῥησίαν καὶ τὴν προσαγωγὴν, that is, liberty, and acceſſe, or liberty to come freely (not confidence, for that is after expreſs'd by the addition of ἐν πεποιθήσει, with confidence) ſo 1 Tim. 3. 13. when the Deacon aſcends to the καλὸν βαθμὸν, good, that is, higher, degree of Biſhop, he is ſaid to acquire πολλὴν παῤῥησίαν ἐν πίστει, great power in the faith. authority in the preaching of the Goſpel, or in the Church of God, ſo Theophylact expounds it, εὐδοξοτέρους γίνεσθαι to become more honourable, ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ λάμπειν to ſhine in the Church, ἐν πρεσβυτερικῷ βαθμῷ καὶ ἐπισκοπικῷ in the dignity or degree of Presbyter or Biſhop.

b. Δαιμόνιον ἔχειν.

V. 20. Thou haſt a devill] All ſorts of diſeaſes were in thoſe days brought on men (ſometimes) by the devil, and ſo generally they that are brought to Chriſt for cure are ſaid to be poſſeſs'd (ſee Note on Mat. 17. c.) but eſpecially thoſe who were more ſtrangely affected, without any viſible cauſe of it, were generally thought to ſuffer this from the devils getting power to poſſeſſe them; and of this ſort eſpecially mad men (ſuch the δαιμονιζόμενοι Mat. 8. 28. appear to be by their raving temper there) who being not diſcernibly ſick, or ill affected, did yet behave themſelves, as if they were in ſome ſtrong diſtemper, which is oft an effect of diſeaſe or δεισιδαιμονία, and therefore were by them thought to be poſſeſs'd by ſome evill ſpirit. So in Juſt. Mart. Apol. 2. ὡς δαιμονολήπτους καὶ μαινομένους κολάζουσι πάντες they that are poſſeſs'd are by all men called mad. So c. 10. 20. 'tis plainly ſaid, He hath a devill and is mad, and Mat. 11. 18.

c. Οὖν

V. 22. Therefore] 'Tis to be obſerved that as δὲ in other Goſpels, ſo οὖν in this is a particle of tranſition, otherwiſe unſignificant, ſerving only for paſſage, not to import any cauſality. And the ſame is here to be ſaid of διὰ τοῦτο, διὰ τοῦτο in the beginning of this verſe, which is only a form of proceeding in the preſent diſcourſe, and might be rendred, To this purpoſe you may obſerve, that which followes being an account of the lawfulneſſe of working cures on the Sabbath day, and not the concluding this from the former, as διὰ τοῦτο for this cauſe, or therefore, literally would import. But 'tis poſſible that διὰ τοῦτο, here might be the concluding of the former verſe and the reading thus, θαυμάζετε διὰ τοῦτο, ye wonder, or are angry with me, for this; (ſo Theophylact reads it.) But this is a conjecture.

d. διασπορὰ Ἑλλήνων

V. 35. Diſperſed among the Gentiles] The Jewes were diſperſed before this time in ſeverall places among the Gentiles, ſome in Europe, others in Aſia: thoſe in Europe had their chief aſſembly at Alexandria, and there the Septuagints tranſlation of the Bible into Greek was in uſe, and thence they are called διασπορὰ Ἑλλήνων, the diſperſion of the Helleniſts. And of theſe there were many alſo in Jeruſalem which uſed the Septuagints tranſlation, being thus skilled in the Greek tongue, and theſe living not in Greece are yet called Ἑλληνισταὶ Act. 6. 1. Helleniſts, becauſe they uſed the Greek language, and the Septuagints tranſlation, wheras others are called Ἑβραῖοι Hebrews (ſee Note on Acts 6. 2.) The Aſian diſperſion is mentioned 1 Pet. 1. 1. and had Babylon for their Metropolis, and uſed the Targum or Chaldee paraphraſe of Onkelos in their Synagogues; Of theſe two diſperſions ſee Rev. 12. 14.

Ἑλληνισταὶ

c. ἑορτὴ

V. 37. The feaſt] This feaſt was the feaſt of Tabernacles, and that is ſometimes by the Hebrews called, without any more. חג the feaſt, as in Cod. Middoth c. 2. שבו מכנסין צלוחית של מים של ניסוך בחג they carry a veſſell of water through them (that is, through the water gates שער המים) to the Sacrifice of the feaſt, and Joma c. 2. §. 5. בחג ביד אחד צלוחית של מים at the feaſt there was in the hand of one a pot of water, (for ſo that Rabbinicall צלוחית is the Greek word σιλευκὶς, which in Athenæus l. 2. ſignifies a ſort of pots, ſo called, ſaith he, from the name of a King Seleucus:) now it was the cuſtome in that feaſt of Tabernacles to offer up water unto God, to denote the bleſſing of rain, which they then prayed for, as of ſpeciall uſe againſt the approaching ſeed time, as at the Paſſover they offered an Omer, to obtain from God his bleſſing on their harveſt, and at Pentecoſt their firſt-fruits, to obtain from God his bleſſing on the fruits of the Trees; ſee Rab. Levi ben Gerſom on 2 Sam. 23. 16. Theſe waters which they thus offered, they drew out of Siloah, and brought them into the Temple with the ſound of the Trumpet, and offered them with ſinging of voyces and inſtruments. And in relation to theſe cuſtomes of the Jewes at that feaſt Chriſt here is ſaid to have cryed, ἔκραξε, with a loud voyce, ſupplying the ſound of the Trumpet, a voice of proclaiming (as κεκράζειν and κηρύσσειν are but ſeverall variations of the Hebrew קרא) ſaying, If any man thirſt, &c. taking occaſion from their cuſtome of drawing water out of Siloah to excite the people to fetch and draw from him, as from a true fountain, all the gifts of the Spirit, which may tend to the fitting them for a divine heavenly plantation.

f. κοιλία

V. 38. Out of his belly] It was ordinary at fountains or ſprings of water to build receptacles, or veſſels of ſtone, or wells, and in the midle thereof (that is, the κοιλία the belly here, and in the Hebrew בטן 1 King. 7. 20.) to have pipes or ciſterns, Prov. 5. 15. through which the water paſſes, and comes out by Cockes, &c. And thus ſhall it be with every believer, he ſhall be ſo filled with the Spirit of God as a ſpring of water, that it ſhall, out of his heart (καρδία and κοιλία being all one Mat. 12. 40. and both anſwerable to the Hebrew בטן) break forth continually into his actions.

g. ἐπιστήμονες ἐγράμματα

V. 49. This people which knoweth not the law] Among the Jews there were 1. the Doctors of the Law, the wiſemen, γραμματεῖς Scribes, or νομοδιδάσκαλοι teachers of the law, (γράμματα and νόμος, writings and law, being all one, both equally the rendring of the Hebrew סֵפֶר, which ſignifies the book of the Law (by which the Syriack render γράμματα, writings v. 15. ἱερὰ γράμματα the wholy writings 2 Tim. 3. 15.) the expounders of the Scripture, and 2ly. ſtudioſi legis, thoſe that ſtudied the law, diſciples, or (as the Hebrews called them) תלמידי חכמים ſcholars of the wiſemen, and ſuch an one they ſtyle חבר a companion of wiſemen, who is not yet a Rabbi or teacher, cannot be called Doctor noſter excellens, our excellent Doctor, but the next degree to one, one of the ſons of the Prophets, or as the Targum renders חברין companions, Ezech. 37. אחיהון their brethren, that is, ſuch as are of the ſame ſociety or fraternity with the excellentiſſimus doctor noſter: and 3ly. the people of the earth, the illiterate man, εἷς τῶν πολλῶν, one of the many, and theſe are noted by ὁ ὄχλος οὗτος, ὄχλος πᾶς ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον this rout, or multitude, ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον, which knoweth not the law.

h. ἐκ Γαλιλαίας οὐκ ἔστιν προφήτης

V. 52. Out of Galilee ariſeth no Prophet] That Galilee was vnder a reproach among the Jews, appears c. 1. 46. And as there 'tis ſaid, that no good could come out of Nazareth, ſo here that never any Prophet came out of Galilee. But upon ſearch it ſeems to appeare, that the Phariſees here were too large in their obſervation of reproach; for though it happened not often, yet of Jonah we find that he was of Gath Hepher, 2 King. 14. 25. that was a town of the Tribe of Zebulun, Joſh. 19. 13. and conſequently in Galilee, Iſa. 9. 1. and this Jonah propheſyed in the time of Joaſh (when he was oppreſs'd by the Syrians) that by his ſon Jeroboam the kingdome ſhould be delivered out of their hands, 2 King. 14. 25, 26. and was afterwards ſent to Nineve, Jonah 1. 1.

V. 53. And every —] This verſe and the eleven firſt verſes of c. 8 the whole ſtory of the woman taken in the act of adultery, are wholly omitted in many ancient copies. S. Chryſoſtome leaves it out, ſo doth Nonnus and Theophylact, and the Syriack interpreter, and Euthymius ſaith that none of the ancients have taken notice of it in their expoſitions of the Goſpel. Maldonate, who ſtrives for it, to make good the Trent Canon, doth yet confeſſe, that of all the Manuſcript Greek copies none have it but only one with Leontius's Comment, and that in that alſo it is * daſh'd out with a pen, and omitted by the Commentator, that it is not in the moſt ancient copy of the Vaticane, that none of the 23 authors in the Catena mention it. And in the end of the third book of Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. we have theſe words ſpeaking of Papias ἐκτέθειται ἡ κὰ ἄλλου ἱστορία περὶ γυναικὸς ἐπὶ πολλαῖς ἁμαρτίαις διαβληθείσης ἐπὶ τῷ κυρίῳ, ἣν τὸ καθ' Ἑβραίους εὐαγγέλιον περιέχει, He hath related another ſtory of a woman accuſed to Chriſt of many ſins, which the Goſpel according to the Hebrews contains, implying it not to be in any of the four Goſpels; Other later Greek copies there are which have this ſtory in this place, and ſo the Arabick, and moſt of the Latine, ſo the Author of the σύνοψις attributed, but ('tis thought, not truly) to Athanaſius. In this difficulty the reſolution which is given by the learned H. Grotius ſeems to be moſt reaſonable, that this part of ſtory was by word of mouth delivered by the Apoſtles to them that heard them, that Papias and others had it (as is teſtified by Euſeb. l. 3. c. 39.) from the Scholars and hearers of S. John, that though others of Papias's pretended traditions were not, yet this was approved and received by the Church (as ſufficiently teſtified to have come from the Apoſtles, and as S. Jerom. affirmes put in into that which was called the Goſpel of the Nazarens) and ſo in later times after the Syriack, but before the Arabick and ancient Latine tranſlations, put into this place of this Goſpel, and accordingly read in the Church of God.

Paraphraſe.

1. JEſus went unto the mount of Olives.

2. And early in the morning he came again into the Temple, and all the people came unto him, and he ſate down and taught them.

3. And the Scribes, and Phariſees brought unto him a woman [taken in adultery: and when they had ſet her in the midſt,]

3. deprehended in the act of adultery, and brought her forth as to judgment. And

4. They ſay unto him, Maſter, this woman was taken in adultery in the very act.

5. Now Moſes in * the law commanded that [ª ſuch ſhould be ſtoned:] but what ſayeſt thou?

* our law, ſo many copies read μὴν Μωϋσῆς

6. This they ſaid tempting him, that they might have to accuſe him. [But Jeſus ſtooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, † as though he heard them not.]

† As ſome copies read μὴ προσποιούμενος making not ſhew, (as the word is uſed Lu. 24. 28.) viz. to hear or underſtand him, ſo moſt copies now uſed have not this.

6. But Jeſus gave them no anſwer, but as if he heeded not, or underſtood not their queſtion, ſtooped downe, &c.

7. So when they continued asking, he lift up himſelf, and ſaid unto them, He that is without ſinne among you, let him [firſt caſt a ſtone at her,]

7. ſupply the place of the proſecutors, and be the firſt that caſts ſtones at her, Deut 17. 7.

8. And again he ſtooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9. And they which heard it, [being convicted by their owne conſcience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldeſt even unto the laſt: and Jeſus was left alone, and the woman ſtanding in the midſt.]

9. being every one of them convinced in conſcience that he was guilty of ſome as great commiſſion as this, went out one after another, none remaining but Jeſus and the woman, ſhe ſtanding before him in the poſture of an accuſed perſon before a Judge.

10. When Jeſus had lift up himſelf, and ſaw none but the woman, he ſaid unto her, Where are thoſe thine accuſers? Hath no man [condemned thee?]

10. adjudged thee worthy of death?

11. She ſaid, No man, Lord. And Jeſus ſaid unto her, [Neither doe I condemn thee: goe, and ſinne no more.]

11. neither doe I adjudge thee to death, but rather call thee to repentance and reformation.

12. Then ſpake Jeſus again unto them, ſaying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me, ſhall not walk in darkneſſe, but ſhall have the light of life.]

12. Then Jeſus ſoon after the delivering thoſe words, c. 7. 38. and in purſuance of the ſame matter, ſaid to them all publickly, I am come to enlighten the hearts of all men, he that will leave his former courſe, and follow me, I will give him that illumination which ſhall bring him to piety and bliſſe.

13. The Phariſees therefore ſaid unto him, Thou beareſt record of thy ſelf, thy [record is not true.]

13. teſtimony is not to be heeded or credited, is no valid teſtimony, or to be received by us.

14. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Though I beare record of my ſelf, yet my record is true: for I know whence I came, and whither I goe, but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.]

14. Jeſus anſwered, My teſtifying of my ſelf doth not invalidate my teſtimony, my coming from heaven on an embaſſy to you, on anothers, not mine own errand, (and that teſtified by the Spirit to John Baptiſt, and by John Baptiſt to you, if yee would believe, but however to my ſelf undoubtedly known) gives a validity to my teſtimony, and joynes God the Father himſelf in the teſtimony with me. And as the holy Ghoſt hath teſtified, that I am ſent by God, ſo my aſcenſion to heaven (which will ſufficiently prove my miſſion) being known to me before hand, though not to you, and being diſcoverable by the event to you alſo, eſpecially when ſo many eye-witneſſes ſhall have teſtified it to you, it will follow that my teſtimony of my ſelf, though a ſingle one, will be authenticke and valid, though perhaps, as the one is not already, ſo the other alſo will not be heeded by you.

15. Ye judge after the fleſh, I judge no man.]

15. Yee that know not my divine originall, v. 14. judge of me only according to my humane extraction, and in proportion to that, paſſe ſentence of me, I am unwilling to ſay or judge the worſt of you, otherwiſe I could ſay worſe of you.

16. And yet if I judge, my judgement is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that ſent me.]

16. And if I ſhould do ſo, my judgement were valid according to law, becauſe this is the judgement alſo and teſtimony of my father, who by his Spirit, and miracles, and the voyce from heaven, requiring all to believe on me, muſt needs judge them as pertinacious unbelievers, who ſtand out againſt all this.

17. It is alſo written in your law, that the teſtimony of two men is true.]

17. And it is known in all laws, particularly in that of yours, Deut. 17. 6. that the teſtimony of two men is to be received as valid in any cauſe whatſoever.

18. I * am one that bear witneſſe of my ſelf, and the father that ſent me beareth witneſſe of me.]

* witneſſe of my ſelf κἀγὼ ὁ μαρτυρῶν

18. And I and my father are thoſe two, for as I now witneſſe of my ſelfe (which is not againſt law or reaſon for me to doe, for 'tis not mine own cauſe but concerns others, to whom I am ſent, and not my ſelfe, but onely as a witneſſe and declarer) ſo my father alſo by voyce from heaven, deſcent of his Spirit, miracles, prophecies, teſtifies my commiſſion from him.

19. Then ſaid they unto him, Where is thy father? Jeſus anſwered, Ye neither know me nor my father: if ye had known me, ye would have known my father alſo.]

19. They ſay therefore unto him, Is not Joſeph your father, have you any other? Jeſus replyed, you will not receive any knowledge concerning me or my father. Your acknowledging of me is the only way to bring you to the knowledge of my father.

20. Theſe words ſpake Jeſus in the treaſury, as he taught in the Temple: and no man laid hands on him,] for his houre was not yet come.

20. Theſe things Jeſus ſaid in that part of the Temple, where the cheſt ſtood, into which the offerings were put, where he publickly taught the people, and that without any man offering to lay hands on him, God ſo diſpoſing of it for a ſeaſon.

21. Then ſaid Jeſus again unto them, [I goe my way, and ye ſhall ſeek me, and ſhall dye in your ſinnes: whither I goe ye cannot come.]

21. I ſhall depart from hence, and then you ſhall ſeek me unprofitably, and by contemning (or as it is interpreted v. 24. not believing) me now, bring judgements upon your ſelves, as they that take no warning by the preaching of the Prophet Ezech. 2. 9. And then 'twill be too late to wiſh for this time again, for I ſhall be gone farre out of reach of your coming to me.

22. The Jews not underſtanding to what his ſpeech drove ſaid one to another, what will he kill himſelf, &c.

22. Then ſaid the Jews, Will he kill himſelf, becauſe he ſaith, whither I goe ye cannot come?]

23, 24. You and I are from very contrary diſtant originals, your affections, like your ſelves, are of an earthly temper and original, and therefore can phanſie ſuch black interpretations of my ſpeeches as if I would kill my ſelf, when my meaning is that I ſhall aſcend to heaven, whence I came, and if ye believe not that I am the Meſſias, ye ſhall loſe the benefit that I came to bring you, and dye without any remedy in your ſins.

23. And he ſaid unto them, [Ye are from beneath, I am from above: ye are of this world, I am not of this world.

24. I ſaid therefore unto you, that ye ſhall dye in your ſins: for if ye believe not that * I am he, ye ſhall dye in your ſins.]

* I am ἐγώ εἰμι

25. I have told you all this while, He that is ſent from the Father, the Meſſias, and if you ask me never ſo often, I can tell you no otherwiſe.

25. Then ſaid they unto him, Who art thou? And Jeſus ſaith unto them, [Even † the ſame that I ſaid unto you [b] from the beginning.]

† the very ſame which I tell you.

26. I could by many evidences charge and aggravate your infidelity, but I will uſe no other but the teſtimony of my father, which is alone ſufficient to convince you, and having my commiſſion from him, I ſpeak nothing but what that commiſſion extends to.

26. I have many things to ſay and to judge of you: but he that ſent me is true, and I ſpeak to the world thoſe things that I have heard of him.]

27. This ſpeech of his they underſtood not, not yet conceiving that by him that ſent him, he meant the Father.

27. They underſtood not that he ſpake to them of the Father.]

28. After the Romans crucifying of me, which I now foretell you, and that by your inſtance and urging them to it, there will be thoſe evidences yielded you of my being truely, what now you will not believe me to be, (viz. my reſurrection, aſcenſion &c.) that you ſhall have no excuſe to deny it, then ſhall ye be convinced (either to the working your repentance or your deſtruction) that I am the Meſſias, and came from God, and doe nothing but according to my Commiſſion from him.

28. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, [When * ye have lift up the ſon of man, then ſhall ye know that I † am he, and that I doe nothing of my ſelfe: but as my father hath taught me I ſpeak theſe things.]

* ye ſhall have lift up ὅταν ὑψώσητε

† am, and ἐγώ εἰμι, καὶ

29. And as I had at my coming commiſſion from him, ſo is he perpetually preſent with me in all I doe, to advance and promote all the deſignes of my coming, that is, to proſper all I ſet about, for I doe nothing but by his appointment and commiſſion.

c.

29. And he that ſent me is with me, the Father hath not left me alone: for I doe always thoſe things * that c pleaſe him.]

* which he hath appointed

30. As he ſpake theſe words many believed on him.

31. conſtantly practiſe my commands, you are truly and really my followers and diſciples.

31. Then ſaid Jeſus to thoſe Jews which believed on him, If ye [continue in my word, then are ye my diſciples indeed.]

32. And thoſe truths which I ſhall reveal to you, ſhall beſtow upon you a moſt valuable freedome.

32. And ye ſhall know the truth, and the truth ſhall make you free.]

33. Then the other Jews there preſent (not the believers v. 31. but thoſe that were more bloudily diſpoſed v. 37.) replyed ſaying, We are heires to the promiſes made to Abraham, and never yet ſubdued to be ſlaves to any, and beſides we are exerciſed in the ſtudy of the law, and of all ſuch we have a proverb, that ſuch a man is a ſervant to no man, what can the meaning of thoſe words be, that the truth ſhall make us free.

33. They anſwered him. We be Abrahams ſeed, and were never in bondage to any man, how ſayeſt thou, Ye ſhall be made free?]

34. Jeſus anſwered them, I aſſure you you are miſtaken in that opinion of your ſelves, in thinking your ſelves to be freemen, your being born of Abrahams ſeed will not prove it, for living and going on in groſſe courſes of ſin, ye are to know, that there are no ſuch ſlaves as they that live indulgent in ſin.

34. Jeſus anſwered them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, whoſever committeth ſin, is the ſervant of ſin.]

35, 36. And being ſuch, you are far from having any right to be continued in Gods family, which belongs only to ſons. In the common account of the world, a ſervant is ſo far from being a ſon, and ſo from having any right to the inheritance of the family, that he is at the mercy of the ſon when he comes to the fathers eſtate, to caſt him quite out of the family, and unleſſe the ſon make him free, he cannot be free (nor conſequently be ſo much as capable of being adopted) and this is the caſe of all ſuch as you, of every indulgent ſinner, Chriſt muſt loſe him from his ſpirituall bondage, that of his ſin, or elſe he is not capable of any benefit of ſon-ſhip, ſo much as by adoption.

35. And the ſervant abideth not in the houſe forever: but the ſon abideth forever.

36. If the ſon therefore ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed.]

37. And as long as you are ingaged in any ſuch ſinfull courſe (as by your deſigning my death it ſeems you are) 'tis not your being Abrahams children that will make you, or demonſtrate you freemen.

37. I know that ye are Abrahams ſeed, but ye ſeek to kill me, becauſe my word hath no place in you.]

38. I doe after the example of my father, and you of yours in proportion.

38. I ſpeak that which I have ſeen with my father: and * ye doe that which ye have ſeen with your father.]

* ye therefore, or, accordingly ὑμεῖς οὖν

39. in his obedience and vertues be like him, as children reſemble their naturall parents in their nature and feature.

39. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, Abraham is our father. Jeſus ſaith unto them, If ye were Abrahams children, ye would [doe the works of Abraham.]

40. But you are moſt contrary to that, Abraham was an hoſpitable perſon, and obeyed God in all his commands, would have been very far from deſigning the death of any the meaneſt Prophet, for no other crime, but that of bringing Gods truth unto him, And yet this doe ye.

40. But now ye ſeek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham.]

41. Ye have another father not willingly owned by you, and him you are like in your actions, Hereupon they reply, none have dubious parents, but they that are unlawfully begotten, we are not ſuch, we are none of thoſe to whom the ſtyle of children of whoredomes is given, Hoſ. 2. 4. but owned and acknowledged by God as his only children.

41. Ye doe the deeds of your father. Then ſaid they unto him, We be not born of fornication, we have one father, even God.]

42. Jeſus anſwers, your hating of me is a certain argument that God is not your father, for I am ſent immediately from him, I came from heaven, and what I doe is by commiſſion from God, not on mine own motion, or any buſineſſe or errand of mine, or as falſe Prophets without miſſion.

42. Jeſus ſaid unto them, If God were your father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth, and came from God, neither came I of my ſelf, but he ſent me.]

43. If God were your father, whoſe commands you received and obeyed as children, you would know my language, being indeed the very language of that father. But the reaſon

43. Why doe ye not underſtand my ſpeech? even becauſe ye cannot hear my word.]

reaſon is clear, The thing that makes you not believe in me, is not want of means of conviction, that my doctrine comes from God, but becauſe my doctrine is not agreeable to your humour: You cannot abide to hear it, you have not affections capable of it.

* ye delight to do, θέλετε ποιεῖν † ſtood ἑστηκεν

44. Ye are of your father the devill, and the luſts of your father * ye will do: he was a murtherer from the beginning, and † abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him When he ſpeaketh a lye, he ſpeaketh of his own: for he is a lyer, and the father of it.]

44. The practiſes which the devill offers to you, or hath practiſed before you, you like much better, then thoſe which I commend to you, He was from the firſt that we hear of him, malicious, and proud, and bloudy, and ſoon apoſtatized from God and the right way, for he is an enemy of truth and goodneſſe, and therefore for him to lie, and confirme you in infidelity, is naturall, and proper to him.

* But I becauſe ἐγὼ δὲ ὅτι

45. * And becauſe I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.]

45. 'Tis neither the inevidence of my doctrine, nor the weakneſſe of your underſtandings that keeps you from believing me, and embracing my doctrine, the only thing that makes you reject me is my ſpeaking the truth, that heavenly pure perfect rule of practiſe, which, it ſeems, is not for your turne, is vehemently reſiſted by your paſſions and prejudices.

46. Which of you convinceth me of ſin? And if I ſay the truth, why do ye not believe me?]

46. I am ſure you have no fault or impoſture to lay to my charge, nothing to produce or prove againſt me, And the tree will be known by the fruits, and yet you will not believe truth, when I ſpeak it.

47. He that is of God, heareth Gods words: ye therefore hear them not, becauſe ye are not of God.]

47. If you had true piety in you, then certainly my doctrine, being from God, would be acceptable to you, and you would embrace it.

48. Then anſwered the Jewes and ſaid unto him, Say we not well that thou art a [d] Samaritane, and haſt a devill?]

48. To this the Jewes had no other reply, but to fall into reproachfull language againſt him, calling him Samaritan (a word of reproach) and madman. See c. 7. 20. b. d.

49. Jeſus anſwered, I have not a devill, but I honour my father, and ye doe diſhonour me.]

49. That I doe no vicious extravagant thing, appears by my ſeeking no honour to my ſelf, not coming in my own name, but referring all my embaſſie to the honour of God, and you doe all that your malice can invent to defame me.

|| ſeeketh it, ζητῶν

50. And I ſeek not mine own glory: there is one that || ſeeketh, and judgeth.]

50. And this let me tell you, although I doe not ſeek after my own glory, yet my father doth tenderly obſerve, whether I am honoured or diſhonoured, and paſſes ſentence on men ſeverely for it; ſee Deut. 18. 19. otherwiſe, as 'tis no glory of mine I look after, ſo your reproaches would not touch me.

* any one ſhal obſerve my word, he ſhall not ſee death forever τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμὸν τηρήσῃ θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα

51. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, If * a man keep my ſaying, he ſhall never ſee death.]

51. As it is, I cannot be ſo unkind to you as thus to leave you in this contempt, ſo dangerous to you, whereas on the other ſide, your receiving of the meſſage, which I bring you, were the way to bring you to eternall life, and reſcue you from eternall torments.

52. Then ſaid the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou [haſt a devil.] Abraham is dead, and the Prophets, and thou ſayeſt, If a man keep my ſaying he ſhall never taſte of death.

52. art mad, ſee c. 7. 20. b.

53. Art thou greater then our father Abraham, which is dead? and the Prophets are dead: whom makeſt thou thy ſelf?]

53. Abraham and the Prophets were not freed from dying, and what manner of power doſt thou aſſume to thy ſelf, to beſtow priviledges, which God never gave to them whom he ſo much favoured?

* glorifie δοξάζω

54. Jeſus anſwered, If I * honour my ſelf, my honour is nothing: It is my father that honoureth me, of whom ye ſay, that he is your God.]

54. Jeſus replyed, I ſhall ſay nothing of my ſelf, The power which I have, I have from him whom certainly you acknowledge to be greater then Abraham, own him as your God, he hath teſtified ſufficiently of me, by voice from heaven, &c.

† obſerve her word λόγον αὐτῆς τηρῶ

55. Yet ye have not known him, but I know him: and if I ſhould ſay, I know him not, I ſhall be a lyer, like unto you: but I know him, and † keep his ſaying.]

55. This father of mine whom you call your God, you know very imperfectly, you know not what kind of worſhip and obedience it is that he requires, but place it in external legal performances, I come to tell you his will more perfectly, And to this end have my meſſage from him, and ſo cannot but know it diſtinctly, and if in compliance with you, or to avoid your reproaches I ſhould ſay otherwiſe, then what I have hitherto ſaid, or confeſſe that I came not from him, or knew him not, I ſhould be like you, a down right lyer, This I will not be guilty of, but do again profeſſe, that I am ſent with perfect knowledge of his will, and doe exactly obſerve it.

* was exceeding glad that he might ſee my day, and he ſaw and rejoyced, ἠγαλλιάσατο ἵνα ἴδῃ

56. Your father Abraham * rejoyced to ſee my day: and he ſaw it, and was glad.]

56. And becauſe you talke ſo much of Abraham, I ſhall now ſay of him, that he having received the promiſe of the Meſſias, Gen. 11. 35. did thereupon vehemently and with great pleaſure and exiliency of mind deſire to look nearer into it, to ſee my coming into the world, and a revelation of it was made unto him, and in it of the ſtate of the Goſpel, and he was heartily joyed at it.

57. Then ſaid the Jewes unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and haſt thou ſeen Abraham?]

57. To this the Jewes objected that he was not fifty years old, and therefore how could he ſay that Abraham lived ſince his birth, that Chriſt could ſee Abraham, or be ſeen by him?

* was born, γενέσθαι

58. Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, before Abraham * was, I am.]

58. Jeſus anſwer'd that objection of theirs, You are much miſtaken in reckoning my age, For 1. I have a being from all eternity, and ſo before Abraham was born, and therefore as young as you take me to be in reſpect of my age here, I may well have ſeen and known Abraham. But then 2. in reſpect of my preſent appearance here on earth, though that be but a little above thirty years duration, yet long before Abrahams time, it was decreed by my Father, and in kindneſſe to Abraham revealed to him, while he lived, in which reſpect 'tis true, that he knew me alſo.

59. Then took they up ſtones to caſt at him:] but Jeſus hid himſelf, and went out of the Temple, going through the midſt of them, and ſo paſſed by.

59. They therefore conceiving this ſpeech of his to be blaſphemous, after the manner of Zelots, were ready to ſtone him preſently.

a Κατὰ τὸν νόμον εἶναι] V. 5. Such ſhould be ſtoned] That all that are guilty of adultery ſhould be ſtoned we find not in the Law of Moſes, but that they ſhould die the death, which phraſe, ſay the Talmudiſts, generally ſignifies Strangling. This puniſhment of ſtoning belongs particularly to thoſe that are taken in the fact, as here the woman was, v. 4. So ſaith * Philo of ſuch, πάντες θανάτου μυρίων ἐνόμιζον, All men have counted them worthy of many deaths, and ſo of ſtoning, which was a high degree of ſeverity; and ſo Solon in one of his laws, Ἐάν τις μοιχὸν λάβῃ ὅτι ἂν βούληται, χρῆται, If any man take an adulterer in the fact, he may uſe him how he pleaſe; and in the Twelve Tables, Mœchum in adulterio deprehenſum impunè necato, he that takes him, may kill him lawfully and ſecurely.

b Τὴν ἀρχὴν] V. 25. From the beginning] The phraſe ἀπ' ἀρχῆς may here bee Adverbially taken; ſo it is often in other authors: Hippocrates in the beginning of his book περὶ ἀρχ. ἰητρ. Τῷ ἀρχῷ ἂν ἐγὼ ἐπιχειρήσαιμι τέχνην ἰητρικὴν, ὅτ' ἂν ἐζητήθη, and ſo ἀπ' ἀρχῆς in Herodotus in Thalia, cited by Budæus. But for the ſenſe or notation of the phraſe here, Melanctbon Ep. p. 511. ſeems to have made a good conjecture, that it ſignifies prorſus, a note of Affirmation, Even ſo, or altogether, abſolutely. For ſo the Chaldee, when they would expreſſe any thing to be ſimply lawfull or unlawfull, they uſe the word לבתחלה that is, ἀπ' ἀρχῆς literally, from החל incepit, and ſo it will ſignifie no more then ἁπαξαπλῶς omnino, &c. So in Alexander Aphrodiſæus περὶ εἱμαρμ. ſpeaking of that honour, and piety, which is the end of making the ſtatue or image of any, εἰ δ' ἄν ἀπ' ἀρχὴν, ſaith he, ὁ ἀνδριὰς ἐγένετο ἄνευ τοιαύτης αἰτίας, A ſtatue had not at all been made without that cauſe. And after ſpeaking of chance, ἄλλο δὲ ὃ ἀπ' ἀρχὴν μηδὲ ἠλπίζετο, but ſomewhat that was uterly unexpected And again ſpeaking of the duties of man, Without them, ſaith he, the life of man is not a life, οὐδὲ ἀπ' ἀρχὴν ἀνθρώπων ἔτι, nor indeed at all the life of men any longer; and many the like in that one book. But the other interpretation alſo, ἀπ' ἀρχὴν at the firſt, may well enough be born, and hath the example of the Septuagint, Gen. 13. 4. and 43. 18, and 20. and of * Nemeſius περ. φυσ. ἀνθρ. Τὴν ἀρχὴν κατατρήσαντες πρὸς τὸ τέλος ἐνέδωκαν, having held out at the firſt, they yeelded at the end. See Jo. Coch. in Excerpta Gemaræ in Sanhedr. p. 280. And ſo the ſumme of Chriſts ſpeech is, that though they made doubts and diſputes about him, what he was, yet he ſtill made no ſcruple to ſtand to his affirmations of himſelf, he ſtill affirms, that 'tis even as he tells them all this while, abſolutely ſo, and no otherwiſe, he hath not ſpoken any thing too high of himſelf.

* C. 30.

c Αρεσὸν] V. 29. Pleaſe him] The word ἀρεσὸν ſignifies in common uſe the decree or appointment of any court, or judge, or Prince (coming from ἀρέσκω, juſt as δόγμα the ordinary word for an ordinance, doth from δοκέω, agreeable to the form of ἔδοξεν ἡμῖν, Act. 15. 25.) ſo the Principum placita among the Romans, the Arreſts of the Parliament of Paris, &c. among the French, and the Common pleas in England (that is, communia placita or ἀρεστὰ) a phraſe to expreſſe a court of judicature among us, the word pleas denoting Judgments in one court, as the Kings bench a tribunall in another. So here ἀρεστὰ ἀυτῷ may poſſibly be Gods lawes, decrees, determinations, which he as the Judge or Prince of all, of his good pleaſure, determines to be done, and becauſe Commiſſions are iſſued out of courts, and are a kind of decree of thoſe courts, that ſuch a man ſhould have ſuch a power, therefore ἀρεστὰ may be extended to thoſe. So Act. 6. 2. οὐκ ἀρεστόν ἐστι 'tis not thought fit, or appointed, or determined, &c. and ἤρεσεν ὁ λόγος, v. 5. the thing was reſolved on, and agreed on by all, The multitude there having to doe in the choice of the men, as followes, and the Apoſtles conſecrating and impoſing hands on them, v. 6. So Act. 12, 3. when Herod ſaw ὅτι ἀρεστόν ἐστι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, I ſuppoſe the meaning is, that the Jewes had expreſs'd their judgment, paſt their votes in it, that is, either the Sanhedrim of the Jewes, or poſſibly the people of the Jewes, for ſo ſince the power of capital puniſhments was taken from the Jewes, and was now in the Romans hands, the proceeding was after the Roman faſhion, which was, ut injuſſu populi nihil fiat, that nothing ſhould be done without the command of the people. Thus 'twas before in the caſe of Chriſt, Mat. 27. 22. where Pilate asks the multitude, What ſhall we doe with Jeſus? and they all ſaid, Let him be crucified, this was their ἀρεσὸν there, and v. 24. it ſeems the Judge could not reſiſt this vote of theirs, and the whole matter is laid on this ſentence of theirs, Pilate diſclaiming, and waſhing his hands from having any thing to doe in it; and ſo in that of James, the Jewes, it ſeems, had given their votes (ἀρεσὸν Ἰουδαίοις) and Herod ſeeing how forward they were in it, (for ſo Euſebius expreſſes it, πρὸς ἡδονὴν χαρὰς τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, they not only conſented, but joyed in it) to gratifie them farther, he proceeded to apprehend Peter alſo, and of him 'tis added (agreeably to what hath been now ſaid) that Herod meant after the Paſſover to bring him forth to the people, that is, to ask their ſentence, or ἀρεσὸν, or pleaſure, concerning him, and accordingly, if they ſo voted, to put him to death; and therefore v. 11. when he recounteth his deliverance, he calls it not only a reſcue from the hand of Herod, but from the people of the Jewes, and their expectation.

d Σαμαρίτης] V. 48. Samaritan] This title of Samaritan here, is by way of reproach affix'd on Chriſt, not that they thought him ſo, but becauſe this was an odious name among the Jewes; So as Idolaters, Lev. 25. 47. are called Aramai, or Syrians, becauſe the Syrians were antiently ſuch, and thus all cruel men we call, Turks, and covetous, Jewes, not that we think they are ſuch naturally, but that they are like unto them. Or elſe, becauſe Chriſt had converſed with the Samaritane woman, which was againſt the Jewiſh rule, Joh. 4. 9. he is thought a deſertor of the Jewiſh law, and ſo to be one of them.

Σαμαρίτης

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. IX.

1. AND as Jeſus paſſed by, he ſaw a man which was blind from his birth.

2. And his diſciples asked him ſaying, Maſter, who did ſin, [a] this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?]

a. 2. And ſome of his followers asked him, ſaying, Sir, was it any ſin of his own, when his ſoul was in another body, or was it ſome ſin of his parents at the time of his conception, which cauſed this blindneſſe in him?

3. Jeſus anſwered, [Neither hath this man ſinned, nor his parents; but that the works of God ſhould be made manifeſt in him.]

3. Neither his own nor his parents ſins were the cauſe of this blindneſſe of his, but Gods ſecret wiſdome, who meant by this means to ſhew forth in me his miraculous power among you.

4. I muſt work the works of him that ſent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

4, 5. And having received ſuch power from him, I ought, while I am here, to exerciſe it,

5. As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.]

and ſhew the world that I am ſent to enlighten it, by this embleme of curing him that is born blind.

6. When *dirt with the ſpittle, and ſpread the dirt upon the eyes of the blind, σπλὰν-χῆ ἐπέχρισεν τὸν σπλὰν τῶν τυφ-

6. When he had thus ſpoken, he ſpat on the ground, and made * clay with the ſpittle, and anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay.

7. And ſaid unto him, Goe waſh in the poole [of Siloam (which is by interpretation, ſent.)] He went his way therefore and waſhed and came ſeeing.

7. which by the name of it, may put you in mind of the Meſſias (who is ſtyled, The ſent) by whom the cure is wrought.

8. The neighbours therefore, and they that [before had ſeen him, that he was blind, ſaid, Is not this he that ſate and begged?]

8. had oft ſeen him before, and ſo knew that he had been blind, now ſeeing this cure wrought, ſome of them asked if this were not that blind man which was wont to ſit and beg at ſuch a place?

9. Some ſaid, This is he: others ſaid, He is like him: but he ſaid, I am he.

10. Therefore ſaid they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11. He anſwered and ſaid, A man that is called Jeſus, made clay and [anointed] my eyes, and ſaid unto me, Goe to the poole of Siloam, and waſh: and I went and waſhed, and I received ſight.

11. beſmeared

12. Then ſaid they unto him, Where is he? He ſaid, I know not.

13. They brought to the Phariſees him that aforetime was blind.

14. And it was the ſabbath day when Jeſus had made [the clay,] and opened his eyes.

14. that mixture of earth and ſpittle,

15. Then again the Phariſees alſo asked him how he had received his ſight: He ſaid unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I waſhed, and doe ſee.

16. Therefore ſaid ſome of the Phariſees, This man is not of God, becauſe he keepeth not the ſabbath day: Others ſaid, [How can a man that is a ſinner doe ſuch miracles?] and there was a diviſion among them.

16. Certainly ſuch miracles cannot be wrought but by the finger of God, and ſo cannot be the work of an impoſtor, a man of ſinne, a great ſinner.

17. They ſay unto the blind man again, What ſayeſt thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes?] He ſaid, He is a prophet.

17. What opinion of him hath this work of power and mercy to thee wrought in thee?

18. But the Jewes did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his ſight, untill they called the parents of him that had received his ſight.

18. The conſequent of this diſpute was, that the Jewes at length would not believe the plain matter of fact, that the man that now ſaw had ever been blind, till the teſtimony of the parents made that clear.

19. And they asked them, ſaying, Is this your ſon, who ye ſay was born blind? how then doth he now ſee?

19. And asked them theſe three queſtions, 1. whether this were their ſon? 2. whether they will affirm upon their knowledge that he was born blind? 3. whether they know how this cure was wrought, or by whom?

20. His parents anſwered and ſaid, [We know that this is our ſon, and that he was born blind:]

20. For two of the queſtions we anſwer diſtinctly, We know, &c.

† will tell you concerning himſelf, λαλήσει περὶ

21. But by what means he now ſeeth we know not, or who hath opened his eyes we know not; He is of age, aske him, he † ſhall ſpeak for himſelf.]

21. He is of age and underſtanding to anſwer that third queſtion, and certainly is the fitteſt to give you an account for that matter which himſelf is ſo neerly concerned in.

22. Theſe words ſpake his parents becauſe they feared the Jewes: for the Jewes had agreed already, that if any man did confeſſe that he was Chriſt [he ſhould be b put out of the ſynagogue.]

22. he ſhould be ignominiouſly uſed, and put out of the court. b

23. Therefore ſaid his parents, He is of age, aske him.]

23. To avoid which danger it was that his parents waved the anſwering of this queſtion, and put it off to their ſon, For this was a thing of ſuch a nature, that the affirming Jeſus to have done it, was in effect the affirming him to be the Meſſias.

* had been blind, ἦν τυφλὸς

24. Then again called they the man that * was blind, and ſaid unto him, Give God the praiſe, we know that this man is a ſinner.]

24. Then a ſecond time they ſent for, and examined the man that had this miraculous cure wrought on him, attempting to draw him from that opinion of Chriſt which he ſeemed to have, by bidding him aſcribe the praiſe of his cure wholly to God, and not to look on Chriſt with any veneration, telling him that if he did it on the day, and in the manner foremention'd, it was thereby evident, that he was one that broke the ſabbath, and ſo not from God, but an impoſtor, (ſee v. 16. and 2 Theſſ. 2. 3.) who conſequently had no ſuch virtue, or piety, as could contribute anything to this matter.

25. He anſwered and ſaid, Whether he be [a ſinner] or no, I know not: one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I ſee.

25. an impoſtor.

26. Then ſaid they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27. He anſwered them, [I have told you already, and ye * did not heare:] wherefore would you heare it again? will ye alſo be his diſciples?

* ſome copies omit it not, ſaith Rob. Stephanus,

27. I have told you, and you did not heed it; or elſe, I have told you plainly and diſtinctly enough already,

28. Then reviled they him, ſaying, Thou art his diſciple, but we are Moſes diſciples.

29. We know that God ſpake unto Moſes: as for this fellow, we know not [from whence he is.]

29. of any commiſſion from God which he hath, nor can give any account of him.

30. The man anſwered and ſaid unto them, [Why herein is a marveilous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes.]

30. Tis ſtrange that one ſhould doe ſuch miracles as theſe, and you learned men not know whether he be ſent from God or no.

31. Now we know that God heareth not ſinners, but if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth.]

31. It being reſolved on among all men, that an impoſtor or falſe teacher is not enabled by God to work ſuch miracles as theſe (or if he were, God muſt be thought to aſſiſt him in his impoſtures) but only pious and faithfull ſervants of God, that came to doe his will, not their own.

32. Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened] the eyes of one that was born blind.

32. Tis above all humane power to open

33. If

33. If he were not ſent and impowered by God, he could never doe ſuch things as theſe.

34. Thy being born blind is a mark & character of ſome extraordinary ill in thee, which makes thee very unfit to teach Doctors and Rabbi's, in matters of this moment. And they caſt him out of the court (ſee note b.) with diſgrace.

33. If this man were not of God, he could doe nothing.]

34. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, [Thou waſt altogether born in ſinnes, and doſt thou teach us? And they caſt him out.]

35. Jeſus heard that they had caſt him out, and when he had found him, he ſaid unto him, Doſt thou believe on the ſon of God?

36. He anſwered and ſaid, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?

37. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Thou haſt ſeen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38. bowed down, and made a moſt lowly obeyſance to him as to the Meſſias.

38. And he ſaid, Lord, I believe. And he [worſhipped him.]

39. This will be the effect of my coming into the world, not only that thoſe that are blind ſhall receive ſight, but alſo that the moſt ſeeing learned men, Phariſees, &c. will not ſee the things before their eyes.

39. And Jeſus ſaid, [For judgment I am come into this world; that they which ſee not, might ſee; and that they which ſee, might be made blind.]

40. Are we the men that he means by the latter part of his ſpeech? Are we then become blind in his opinion?

40. And ſome of the Phariſees which were with him heard theſe words, and ſaid unto him, [Are we blind alſo?]

41. Jeſus ſaid unto them, It were well for you, if it could be truly pronounced of you, that you are blind, If your ſinne were of impotence or unability to ſee, it would be more pardonable, but now by your acknowledging your ſelves not to be blind, and ſo that all that you doe you doe knowingly and deliberately, your ſinnes receive a very great aggravation.

41. Jeſus ſaid unto them, If ye were blind, ye ſhould have no ſinne; but now ye ſay, We ſee; therefore your ſinne remaineth.]

a. Σαδδουκαῖοι γοῦν.

V. 2. This man or his parents] The Jew that asked this queſtion, ſeems to have been of the Pythagoreans opinion (or, as they call it, de Sapientibus Mechar) who believed the tranſmigration of ſouls from body to body, called μεταγγισμὸς, the removall from veſſel to veſſel, and ſo ſuppoſes by his queſtion that the ſoule of this man, having formerly offended, is now thus puniſhed by being put into a blind body. That this was the conceit of thoſe ancient Philoſophers, that according to the degrees of proficiency either in virtue or ſinne, ſouls were put into more honourable or leſſe honourable bodies; upon demerit removed from the body of a male to a female, then from a perfect to an imperfect man, and after upon demerit again into a beaſt, may be ſeen in Alcinous, δόγμ. Πλατων. and the reſt of the Pythagorean writers, which with other the like opinions certainly enough were infuſed before this time into ſome of the Jewes, and ſo theſe diſciples here might have imbibed this, and not ſo early or ſpeedily have laid it aſide, but might think it poſſible, and ſo ask a queſtion about it. The other part of the queſtion concerning the parents ſin, ſeems to referre to ſome particular ſinne in the act of generation, which might have ſome influence on the child begotten, and make it imperfect in this or ſome other kind. This is by learned Jewes affirmed of that conjugall ſinne, which is forbidden by the Law, Lev. 20. 18. and Ezech. 18. 6. which, they ſay, may reaſonably hinder, on the womans part, a juſt or complete conception. Of Chriſts anſwer to this queſtion, which followeth, ſee Maſius on Joſ. 1. 6. p. 115.

b. Ἀποσυναγωγία

V. 22. Put out of the ſynagogue] That Συναγωγαὶ the Synagogues of the Jewes ſignifie all manner of aſſemblies hath been ſaid, Mat. 6. d. Agreeably the ἀποσυναγωγία removing or turning out of the Synagogues, is the ſeparating any offender from ſuch aſſemblies, ſetting a mark of reproach upon him, that he might not be familiarly convers'd with by any, which is ἀφορίζειν Lu. 6. 22. the Nidui ſo known among the Jewes. This was alwaies done with circumſtances of contumely, and ſo hath ὀνειδίζειν added to it, contumelious uſage, Lu. 6. 22. And ſo v. 35. of this chapter their caſting the man out of the ſynagogue, ſignifies that ceremony of reproach, the officers of the court taking him that was condemned and thruſting him out of the aſſembly. What thus belonged to excluding him out of the aſſembly, though it belonged to civil commerce, yet certainly excluded him out of the ſacred aſſembly alſo, For the loweſt degree of Excommunication among the Jewes, being to the ſeparating for the ſpace of foure paces, this muſt needs belong to all kind of aſſemblies ſacred as well as civil. And therefore S. Chryſoſtome here affirmes ἐξέβαλον ἀυτὸν ἐκ τῦ ἱερῦ, they caſt him out of the Temple, Hom. 59. and Nonnus,

Κερίζειν

Ονειδίζειν

——ἀπήλασε δ' ἔκλοσε ναῦ,

and of the diſciples in Chriſts name,

Ὑμέας ἐξελάσσει θεοκλήϊτοιο μελάθρυ, they ſhall drive you out of Gods houſe. Where only it muſt be obſerved, that this ſeparation being only for foure paces, that is, from familiar commerce, or cum diſcrimine, to ſet a mark upon them, the Excommunication did not alwaies reach to totall excluſion out of the Temple, but confined them to a particular part and entrance into the Temple, called the gate of mourners, and excommunicate perſons, as others were admitted to that of bridegrooms, as 'twas called. This word is, beſide this place, uſed twice more in this Goſpel: c. 16. 2. it clearly ſignifies what here it doth, excluding them from familiar converſation of men, and thoſe liberties which all others enjoyed. But in the third place, c. 12. 42. it doth by accident come to ſignifie ſomewhat more, looſing the dignity of being one of the Sanhedrim; for being there ſpoken of the rulers or members of the Sanhedrim, the interdicting them the aſſemblies, caſting them out, muſt by conſequence deprive them of that dignity or office, as in the Chriſtian Church the excommunicating of a Prieſt muſt neceſſarily be the degrading or ſuſpending him from his prieſthood. This puniſhment among the Jewes (referred to Revel. 22. 15.) being the making of any man infamous (ſhaming, in order to reforming him) is by Chriſt accommodated to Chriſtian, Eccleſiaſticall uſes, by removing men from the Sacrament and prayers of the Church, to work the like reformation on them, when admonitions will not work upon them.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

Paraphraſe:

1. VErily, verily, I ſay unto you, [He that entreth not by the dore into the ſheepfold, but climbeth up ſome other way, the ſame is a thief, and a robber.]

1. He that comes and pretends to be the Meſſias and comes not as he ought to doe, with miracles and doctrine, ſuch as may teſtifie him to be ſent by God, he is to be lookt on as an impoſtor, that means to ſeduce and ruine thoſe that follow him.

2. But he that entreth in by the dore, is the ſhepheard of the ſheep.]

2. But he that thus approves himſelf to be imploy'd and ſent by the owner, or Maſter of the ſheep, he comes on purpoſe to feed and preſerve his ſheep, and is to have power over them.

3. To him the Porter openeth, and the ſheep heare his voyce, and he calleth his own ſheep by name, and leadeth them out.]

3. To him all they who are to guard the dore, and keep out theeves, are by the Maſter of the ſheep commanded to give admiſſion, and to that purpoſe have a token to diſcern him by, The Meſſias is ſo deſcribed in the prophets, and the doctrine truly divine ſo far revealed there, that by accordance with that all the true watchmen of the Church acknowledge him, and all truly pious men obey and follow him, and he on the other ſide looks on theſe as the peculiar flock that he is to take charge of, and hath a particular care of every ſuch pious man, and as the ſhepheard careth for his ſheep, makes all neceſſary proviſion for them.

4. And when he * putteth forth his own ſheep, he goeth before them, and the ſheep follow him, for they know his voyce.]

4. And when he thus brings forth his ſheep (ſee note on Mat. 9. i.) to the water or paſture, it is not his manner to drive, but only goe before: and call or lead them, tell them what they are to doe, and ſhew them the way by his example, and all truly pious men qualified to be diſciples of his (ſee note on ch. 6. d.) they will certainly follow him, diſtinguiſhing his voyce, his doctrine from all others, from all impoſtors.

5. And a ſtranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of ſtrangers.]

5. An impoſtor or falſe Chriſt that teacheth doctrines contrary to piety, they will not follow, but flie from him as from a wolf, having ſuch certain tokens, by which to know the true doctrine of God, the true ſhepheards voice, that they can tell how to avoid all others that come to ſeduce them, by this very mark, becauſe 'tis a ſtrange voice, quite contrary to that piety and probity which they have been taught by God.

6. This parable ſpake Jeſus unto them, but they underſtood not what things they were, which he ſpake unto them.

7. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them again, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, I am the dore of the ſheep.]

6, 7. Thus much Chriſt ſpake thus parabolically and obſcurely to them, And becauſe they underſtood not his meaning in it, he added farther, As the Fathers miſſion and commiſſion v. 1. is the dore by which the ſhepheard himſelf is to enter, (and whoſoever doth not ſo, being not ſent by God, betraies himſelf to be an impoſtor) and as his making known the will of God, not preaching any doctrine contrary to piety, but all to the advancing of it, is a certain evidence of his being ſent by God, ſo in another reſpect, I am the dore, that is, the only way for the ſheep, the true ſervants of God, to enter by, into that fold, the Church, where all are to live regularly, and not to goe out, or depart from him.

*All as many as have come, for many copies leave out πρὸ ἐμοῦ, before me.

8. * All that ever came before me are theeves and robbers: but the ſheep did not heare them.]

8. All others that have come of late pretending to be vindicators of the Jews from the Roman yoke, (ſuch as Theudas, Judas Gaulonites &c.) have been impoſtors, which no pious perſon would heed, as neither coming with commiſſion from God, nor bringing Divine doctrine with them, but doctrines of rebellion and bloodineſſe, and the like.

†made ſafe σωθήσεται

9. I am the dore: by me if any man enter in, he ſhall be † ſaved, and ſhall goe in and out and find paſture.]

9. I am the dore, that all pious men muſt paſſe thorow, and whoſoever doth ſo, he ſhall be (as in a fenced incloſure) in a ſafe, a rich, a plentifull condition, and whereſoever he turns, ſhall find paſture.

10. The theif cometh not, but for to ſteale, and to kill, and to deſtroy, I am come that they might have life, * and that they might have it more abundantly.]

10. Thus contrary am I to thoſe that come without commiſſion, ver. 1. All thoſe impoſtors come to get advantage to themſelves, to deceive and ruine you. But my only end of coming is to help my ſheep to life inſtead of butchering them, to help them to plenty, to provide abundantly for them, not to gain any thing to my ſelf.

11. I am the good ſhepheard: the good ſhepheard † giveth his life for the ſheep.]

11. Nay ſo far am I from the thief that comes to kill the flock, that like the good ſhepheard (which keeps his own ſheep, is not hired to keep anothers, ſee note a.) who ventures when there is occaſion (pawns, engages) his life for his ſheep, rather then they ſhall come to hurt, grapples with wild beaſts that come to deſtroy his flock, ſo doe I.

12. But he that is an hireling, and not the ſhepheard, whoſe owne the ſheep are not, ſeeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the ſheep and flyeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and ſcattereth the ſheep.

13. The hireling flyeth, becauſe he is an hireling, and careth not for the ſheep.]

12, 13. This is farre from the manner of impoſtors, nay it is peculiar to the good ſhepheard, whoſe flock is (not entruſted by another to his keeping, and he paid for that ſervice, but) his own goods, and himſelf makes it his calling to looke to them. He that keeps another mans ſheep and is paid for his labour, will never venture his life to preſerve them, preferres his life before the advantage of his ſervice, and thereupon when ever a wolfe comes, that will endanger his life if he defends his ſheep, he runs away, and to ſave his life deſtitutes them, and this upon this very ſcore, becauſe he is not the owner, but only a ſervant hired to keep the fold. Whereas he whoſe own they are, will hazard his life, rather then leave his flock (his whole eſtate, as 'twas oft among the Jewes) to be torn, and worried by the devourer.

*I know mine own, and γινώσκω τὰ ἐμὰ, καὶ and I know the father, καθὼς γινώσκω

14. I am the good ſhepheard, and * know my ſheep, and am known of mine.

15. As the Father knoweth me, † even ſo know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the ſheep.]

14, 15. Juſt ſuch a ſhepheard am I, who, as I reſemble the ſhepheard in other things, knowing my ſheep particularly, and being known by them (ſee v. 3.) (in the ſame manner, as my Father knoweth me, and I him, my Father owning, and giving me perfect knowledge of his will, and I obeying and following my Father in all things,) So alſo I venture my life for my ſheep, and will moſt willingly ſuffer death, in regard to the benefits that will come to my ſheep, my diſciples (all that receive and obey my voyce) by that means.

16. And other ſheep I have, which are not of this fold, them alſo I muſt *bring, and they ſhall heare my voice, and there ſhall be one fold, and one ſhepheard.]

16. But for you Jewes, let me tell you, my flock is not all within this pale of Judea, I have others that will believe and obey me, receive the faith, beſide and beyond the Jewiſh nation, and the care and rule of thoſe I muſt undertake, and they will follow my call more obediently then the Jews, own and obey me, and all believers both of Jews and Gentiles ſhall unite very ſociably together, and become one fold, under me the one ſhepheard of them all, who lay down my life for them alſo, as well as for the Jews.

17. Therefore

17. This carefull diſcharge of the office entruſted and committed to me by my Father, is that to which it is but proportionable, that my Father ſhould love and value, and reward me, And therefore it is that as I venture my life for my flock, ſo when I ſhall have loſt my life, by the care and power of my Father, I ſhall be able to riſe again, and the lower I ſuffer here, the higher ſhall I be exalted, Phil. 2. 9.

17. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life, that I might take it again.]

18. 'Tis not in the power of man to take my life away from me, if I did not thus voluntarily of my own accord lay it down; I can give my ſelf up to be crucified, and then can riſe to life again. And thus to doe my Father hath appointed me, This is a prime part of my commiſſion.

18. No man taketh it away from me, but I lay it down of my ſelf; I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again, This commandement have I received of my Father.]

19. There was a diviſion therefore again among the Jewes, becauſe of theſe ſayings.

20. He is mad (ſee note on ch. 7. b.) why doe you give any heed to what he ſaith?

20. And many of them ſaid, [He hath a devil and is mad, why hear ye him?]

21. Theſe are neither the words nor actions of a mad man. Can the devil himſelf, or conſequently his being mad, or poſſeſs'd with the devil, help him to doe the things that he doth? to cure one that was born blind?

21. Others ſaid, [Theſe are not the words of him that hath a devil. Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?]

22. And it was the time of the feaſt of Dedication, a feaſt ordained by the Jewes 1 Mac. 4. 59. & 2 Mac. 10. 8. in commemoration of the new conſecrating of the Altar, after it was profaned by Antiochus, which upon that inſtitution was obſerved by them at this time, on November 14. and approved here by the preſence of Chriſt, though it were not preſcribed by God in the Law.

22. And it was at Jeruſalem the feaſt of Dedication, and it was winter.]

23. And according to the cuſtome of that ſeaſon he walked now in Solomons porch under covert, as in the ſummer they uſed to walk in the open ayre in the courts without any roof over them.

23. And Jeſus walked in the Temple in Solomons porch.]

24. By this means the people being all in a narrower compaſſe or leſſer room, they came about him cloſe, and ſaid unto him, How long doſt thou by obſcure expreſſions continue our doubts whether thou art the Meſſias or no? If thou art, tell us perſpicuouſly; ſee note on ch. 7. a.

24. Then came the Jewes round about him, and ſaid unto him, How long doſt thou * make us to doubt? If thou be the Chriſt, tell us plainly.]

* hold our ſoule in ſuſpence? τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἴρεις;

25. Jeſus ſaid, I have told you in words ſignificant enough, if ye would believe, and the miracles that I have done (in my Fathers name, whom I affirm to have ſent me) through his power, and by authority from him, have born teſtimony that I am ſent by him, and therefore that whatever I affirm of my ſelf, is true.

25. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, I told you, and ye believed not: The works that I doe in my Fathers name, they bear witneſſe of me.]

26, 27. But all this works no belief in you, which is an evidence, and demonſtration from the effect, that you are not thoſe ſheep that hear the good ſhepheards voice. v. 3, 4. (ſee note on ch. 6. d.) and are known by him, v. 14. (ſee note a.)

26. But ye believe not, † becauſe ye are not of my ſheep, as I ſaid unto you.

27. My ſheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me.]

28. And I make that proviſion for them intimated v. 10. and my care over them ſhall be ſuch, that while they keep cloſe to me, no devourer ſhall ever be able to annoy them, or pluck them from me.

28. And I give unto them eternall life, and they ſhall never periſh, neither ſhall any man pluck them out of my hand.]

29. Certainly my Father is ſtronger then any that can oppoſe himſelf againſt them, and his ſpeciall work it is, that all the true ſheep of his fold, all truly pious perſons, ſhould come to me, and that infinite power of his is engaged for it, that none ſuch ſhall by any violence be taken from him, deprived of that life, which here I promiſe to give them.

29. My Father who gave them me, is greater then all: and no man is able to pluck them out of my Fathers hand:]

30. And ſeeing my Father and I are one, it follows that I ſhall defend them alſo, and that none ſhall be able to pluck them out of my hand, ver. 28.

30. I and my Father are one.]

31. Upon this again the Jewes attempted to ſtone him.

31. Then the Jewes tooke up ſtones again to ſtone him.]

32. And Jeſus ſaid, Many miracles of mercy to you, miraculous cures &c. have I wrought, as teſtimonies of my miſſion from my Father, and never a deſtructive one, none that you have been the worſe for, For which of theſe my ſaving miracles doe you deſtroy me?

32. Jeſus anſwered them, Many good works have I ſhewed you from my Father, for which of thoſe works doe you ſtone me?]

33. The Jewes ſaid, 'Tis not for any of thy miracles, (which are not denied to be all ſuch, and acts of mercy in thee) for which we think thee worthy of death, but becauſe thou haſt ſpoken blaſphemy, that is, becauſe thou, who art but a man, makeſt thy ſelf God by that ſpeech of thine, ver. 30. (ſee Rom. 16. 25.) where though thou calledſt God thy Father, yet thou affirmedſt that he and thou were one.

33. The Jewes anſwered him, ſaying, For a good work we ſtone thee not, but for blaſphemy, and becauſe that thou being a man, makeſt thy ſelf God.]

34. Jeſus anſwer'd, Theſe words in the Pſalmiſt you cannot but remember, Pſal. 82. 6. I have ſaid, ye are Gods, and that book is canonicall ſcripture with you,

34. Jeſus anſwered them, Is it not written in your law, I ſaid, ye are Gods?]

b. 35. If therefore they who are there ſpoken of by God, that is, rulers or judges ordinarily ſo called, who received their Commiſſion from men, not from God immediately, (only perſons to whom the execution of Gods law was entruſted among men) be by God himſelf called Gods, and whatſoever is ſaid in the books of Scripture is true,

35. If he called them Gods, unto [b] whom the word of God * came, and the ſcripture cannot be broken,]

* was, or was ſpoken.

36. Annotations on Chap. X.

a. Πρόβατα

V.3. His own ſheep] What the προβατα ſheep here ſignifie in this Parable, hath been largely ſet down, (Note on c.6.d.) viz. the obedient ſervants of God conſidered before and without the revelation of Chriſt unto them, who being ſo qualified are moſt ready to embrace the precepts of the Chriſtian perfection, when they are offer'd to them; Theſe alſo is Chriſt ready to receive, or any that having been engaged in ſin come with penitence, and reſolution of minde to be ſuch; And conſequently, when theſe come to Chriſt, they are ſtyled here, and looked on by him, as ἴδια προβατα, that is, either peculiar ſheep, thoſe that by Gods prævenient graces are thus fitted, beyond all others, to come to Chriſt, or elſe, as the 12th verſe imports, (where the ſhepherd is ſet oppoſite to the hireling, whoſe own the ſheep are not) his own ſheep, thoſe to whom Chriſt hath a peculiar title beyond all others, who are therefore ſaid to be given by God to Chriſt as his poſſeſſion; ſee Note on ch.6.d. Now of theſe thus own'd, or acknowledg'd by Chriſt, it is here ſaid, that he doth καλεῖν κατ' ὄνομα, call them by name. That refers to the cuſtom of ſhepherds, that are ſo converſant among their ſheep, that they know them ſeverally, (ſee v.14. and 27. I know them) and have a ſeveral name for every of them, by which they diſtinguiſh and call them, and each of them knows, and anſwers by obediential coming, or following, to that call. So v.3. they hear his voice and know it, v.4. and he is known of them, v.14. Thus among us, huntſmen do with their hounds, and plow-men with their cattle; And it ſeems in Jewry, where the feeding of cattle was the great trade, and where other cuſtoms obtained, then thoſe that are among us, the Shepherd did thus with his ſheep. For want of their art, and uſage of going before, and leading, and calling their ſheep after them, which is known in the Scripture to have been among them, *Pſal.*23.2,3. and *Pſ.*80.1. and *Pſ.*77.20. our ſhepherds now go after, and drive the ſheep. But the change and diverſity of cuſtoms in divers countries is very ordinary. And here it is evident that this cuſtom of the Jews is referr'd to, by v.4. where anſwerable to the ſhepherds calling, and leading, and going before, is the ſheeps following, and knowing his voice, whereas v.5. A ſtranger they will not follow; for they know not the voice of ſtrangers. By which it is clear, that his calling his own ſheep by name, and leading them, is the ſhepherds particular care, and providence for his ſheep, and, in the moral, denotes Chriſts peculiar owning theſe honeſt, obedient, humble creatures, that come to him not in the clothing, but real qualities of the ſheep, and making proviſion for them.

b. ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐγένετο.

V. 35. Unto whom the word of God came] The coming of the word of the Lord to any man ſignifies among the Hebrews frequently in the Old Teſtament, Gods ſending a man, deſigning him, appointing him to any office, and ſo 'tis conſtantly uſed in the writings of the Prophets, who begin their prophecies ſolemnly in this form; The word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying, which is but their ſhewing or vouching their Commiſſion, and ſo when *Rom.*10.17. it is ſaid ἀκοὴ, that is, preaching of the word, (not their hearing, but their being heard, as in Plato in Phædro, Ἐπιθυμῶ πολίμῳ λόγῳ ἀλμυρὰν ἀκοὴν ἀποκλύσασθαι, I deſire to temper the brackiſh hearing with ſweet, or potable ſpeech, where ἀκοὴ hearing is uſed for the word, or ſpeech, which is heard,) is διὰ ῥήματος Θεοῦ, by the word of God, the meaning of it is, that no man muſt preach, except he be ſent, v.15. where the word of God ſignifies not the word which they preach, but the Commiſſion from which they are authorized to preach to others. And ſo for the office of Judge, &c. it is as proper, the word of the Lord ſignifying a Commiſſion from God mediately, or immediately for any ſuch; which when it comes to any man for the execution of power over others, it is the enſtating of him in that office of power, and the ſame will be ſaid of the Sacerdotal alſo. But the truth is, the phraſe here is not, Thoſe to whom the word of the Lord came, upon which ſuppoſition this interpretation is built, but πρὸς οὓς ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐγένετο, to whom the word of God was, or was ſpoken, and that may thus be interpreted, David, *Pſal.*82.1. hath theſe words, God ſtandeth in the congregation of the mighty, he judgeth among the Gods, How long will ye judge unjuſtly? &c. In that place the Judges or Rulers of the Sanhedrim are called Gods by the Pſalmiſt, in the perſon of God, and again v.6. I have ſaid, ye are Gods, and ye are all children of the moſt high; Chriſt referring here to this, ſaith, Is it not written in your law, I have ſaid, ye are Gods? from whence he concludeth, εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε θεοὺς, If he call'd them Gods, to whom the word of God was, that is, to whom, or of, or concerning whom God ſpake in that place of the Law, that is, in the book of Pſalms, (comprehended ſometimes under the word Law (ſee ch. 12.34.) as the whole Old Teſtament is called the Law and the Prophets, though elſwhere there is a third mention of the diviſion of thoſe books, the ἀγιόγραφα, the book of Pſalms contained under that branch) if he called thoſe Gods, and ſons of God, who were but ordinary Judges of thoſe times, choſen by men, and by impoſition of hands of the Sanhedrim advanced to that office, after the common manner of all (nothing peculiar, or extraordinary, or of immediate miſſion from heaven in all this) then how much more may he, whom God the Father hath ſent, with his immediate commiſſion into the world (the Spirit deſcending on him, which is called the ſanctifying of him, and the voice from heaven, This is my beloved ſon, &c. being the very words of his commiſſion) ſay without blaſphemy, that he is the ſon of God? v.36. And this ſeems the moſt obvious clear meaning of the places

5. Now Jeſus loved Martha, and her ſiſter, and Lazarus.

6. When he had heard therefore that he was ſick, he abode two days ſtill in the ſame place where he was.

7. * Then after that ſaith he to his diſciples, Let us go into Judea again.

16. Then ſaid Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow diſciples, [Let us alſo go, that we may die with him.]

17. Then when Jeſus came, he found that he had lien in the grave four days already.

18. (Now Bethany was nigh unto Jeruſalem, about fifteen furlongs off.)

36. Then ſaid the Jews, Behold how he loved him.

37. And ſome of them ſaid, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have cauſed that even this man ſhould not have died?

40. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldeſt believe, thou ſhouldſt ſee [the glory of God?]

* in ſome copies, as alſo in the Syriack and old Latine, & Nonnus, theſe words, καὶ τὸ σουδάριον ἦν περιδεδεμένον, are left out.

41. Then they took away the ſtone from the place * where the dead was laid. And Jeſus [lift up his eyes] and ſaid, Father I thank thee that thou haſt heard me.

41. faſtned his eyes on heaven.

42. And I knew that thou heareſt me always: but becauſe of the people which ſtand by, I ſaid it, that [they may believe that thou haſt ſent me.]

42. they hearing me acknowledge it to be done by thy power, in anſwer to my prayers, may by that be convinced that I came by commiſſion from thee.

43. And when he thus had ſpoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44. And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with [grave-clothes,] and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Looſe him, and let him go.

44. See Note on ch. 19. g.

45. Then many of the Jews, which came to Mary, and had ſeen the things which Jeſus did, believed on him.

46. But ſome of them went their ways to the Phariſees, and told them what things Jeſus had done.

47. Then gathered the chief prieſts and the Phariſees a councel, ſaying, [What do we?] for this man doth many miracles.

47. It is not a ſeaſon for us to ſit ſtill and do nothing, to permit this perſon to go on without interruption.

48. If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him; and b the Romans ſhall come, and [take away both our place and nation.]

48. deſtroy both our Temple and Nation, our religion and government, and wholly enſlave us. b.

49. And one of them named Caiaphas, being the high prieſt that ſame year, ſaid unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50. Nor conſider that it is expedient for us, that one man ſhould die for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not.]

49, 50. And Caiaphas put into the high prieſts office by the Procurator (ſee Luke 3. b.) made a ſpeech, of which this was the ſumme, This is no time of conſulting or conſidering at large what is juſt to do, in what way of juſtice to proceed with this man, We are to conſider what is our intereſt, and 'tis a Politick maxime that we may do any thing (be it otherwiſe never ſo unlawful) to keep the publick from deſtruction.

51. And this ſpake he not of himſelf, but being high prieſt that year, he propheſied that Jeſus ſhould die for that nation.]

51. This he ſpake in words that were a direct prophecie of what God had now deſigned ſhould come to paſs, not that he meant it in that ſenſe, or thought at all of propheſying, but being in place of authority among the Jews at that time, he was a fit perſon for God to make uſe of, as his miniſter, to foretell the purpoſe of God, that Chriſt ſhould die for the Jews.

52. And not for that nation only, but that alſo he ſhould gather together in one the children of God that were ſcattered abroad.]

52. And not for the Jews only, but that he might call all the Gentiles into the ſame fold, the ſame Church, all the ſervants of God, all that would receive the faith all the world over.

53. Then from that day forth they took counſel together for to put him to death.]

52. From that time they entred into a conſultation, which they gave not over, till they had contrived it to have him put to death.

54. Jeſus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews,] but went thence into a countrey neer to the wilderneſs, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his diſciples.

54. Hereupon Jeſus did not publickly (ſee Note on ch. 7. a.) do any thing among the people of Judea.

55. And the Jews Paſſeover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the countrey up to Jeruſalem before the Paſſeover [to purifie themſelves.]

55. That they might be cleanſed from legal impurity, from which till they were cleanſed, they could not celebrate the Paſſeover, and that all that were under any vow of Nazaritiſme might timely perform it, ſee Note on Act. 21. 23.

* he comes not, οὐ μὴ ἔλθῃ

56. Then ſought they for Jeſus, and ſpake among themſelves as they ſtood in the Temple, [What think ye, that * he will not come to the feaſt?]

56. This being that feaſt unto which every one was to come to Jeruſalem, and no excuſe being ſufficient for not coming, but that of invincible neceſſity, what can be conceived the reaſon why he cometh not up?

57. Now both the chief prieſts and the Phariſees had given a commandement, that if any man knew where he were, he ſhould ſhew it, that they might take him.

a. Ταραχθῆναι

V.33. Was troubled] Ταραχθῆναι is to be troubled with any paſſion, but in this Goſpel peculiarly with grief; So ch.12.27. Now is my ſoul troubled, πεταραγμαι) in reſpect of death approaching, ſo ch.13.21. Jeſus having ſaid this ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι, was troubled in ſpirit, to think of his being delivered up by Judas. So in his exhortation to the diſciples, when he tels them of his death, ch.14.1. μὴ ταρασσέσθω, &c. Let not your heart be troubled, and ver.27. 'tis ſet diſtinct from fear the other paſſion, Let not your heart be troubled nor cowardly, ſo here 'tis joyned with groaning in ſpirit as expreſſions of inward grief, as the tears that follow v.35. are outward evidences of it. As for the form of ſpeech in the Greek ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν he troubled himſelf, that is but an idiome of the Hebrews, who oft uſe the reciprocal voice Hithpael for a Paſſive.

Ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν

b. Ῥωμαῖοι ἐλεύσονται

V.48. The Romans ſhall come] The Jews in Councel, ſeeing the miracles which Jeſus did, this eſpecially of raiſing Lazarus, did much fear that profeſſing himſelf to be the Meſſias he would ſoon attempt to make himſelf King, and by the admiration which he had gotten among the people, be quickly aſſiſted to it, if he were not timely hindred. If this were done, the conſequent ſeemed viſible to them, that the Romans, to whom they were ſubject, muſt look upon this as a Rebellion, and be by that temptation provoked to come with an army, and deſtroy them utterly. That this was their fear is evident by their many groundleſs objections made afterwards againſt him, that he forbad to give tribute to Ceſar, that he made himſelf a King, and ſo oppoſed himſelf againſt Ceſar; not that they deſired the continuance of Ceſars power over them, but that their fear of a yet farther conqueſt from the Romans made them unwilling to provoke them, And this the rather, becauſe of a tradition among them, that a little before the end of the world, there ſhould come one to deſtroy them, called ארמילום, (which is by an eaſie change, Romulus.) This ſeems to be but the depravation of ſome prophecie from God, which foretold the coming of the Romans in the laſt days, meaning the days of Meſſias, to deſtroy them, and demonſtrates their expecting and believing, that the Romans were the people from whence the change of their religion, and overtunning their nation ſhould come. And therefore when they ſee the doctrine of Chriſt thrive ſo well, gather ſo many Proſelytes, and that the miracles which he did were ſo great as might well ſet him up for a King, or Meſſias (which they through their unbelief would not acknowledge him to be truly) it follows that they preſently apprehend the Romans coming in (the ארמילום now mentioned) to deſtroy their religion, ſignified by the word place, and carry them out of their countrey (that is, deſtroy their nation) or elſe wholly to change their laws, rule them as conquer'd people. But in this, poor men, they were ſadly miſtaken, the prophecie of the Romans coming in to conquer them and deſtroy their Temple (which I ſuppoſe was ſcatter'd among them, and became the occaſion of their miſtake in expecting ארמילום to deſtroy them) being thus perfectly fulfilled on them, not by their letting Chriſt alone, or believing on him, but by the contrary, by this their reſiſting, and bandying againſt (and at laſt crucifying) him; (ſee Note on Matt. 24. m.)

CHAP. XII.

1. THen Jeſus, ſix days before the Paſſeover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was, which had been dead, whom he raiſed from the dead.

2. There they made him a ſupper, and Martha ſerved: but Lazarus was one of them that * ſate at the table with him.

* lay at meat, συνανακειμένων

3. Then Mary the ſiſter of Lazarus, not Mary Magdalen (ſee Note on Luke 7.6.) took a pound of the richeſt nard, a very coſtly ointment, (ſee Mar.14.a.)

3. Then Mary took a pound of ointment of ſpikenard, very coſtly,] and anointed the feet of Jeſus, and wiped his feet with her hair, and the houſe was filled with the odor of the ointment.

4. Then ſaith one of his diſciples, Judas Iſcarioth, Simon's ſon, [which ſhould betray him,]

5. Why was not this ointment ſold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

6. becauſe he having the office of receiving all that was brought or preſented to Chriſt, and being a covetous perſon, who purloined much to his own uſes, conceived himſelf to be a loſer by what was thus beſtow'd on Chriſt.

6. This he ſaid, not that he cared for the poor, but [becauſe he was a thief and had the † bag, and bare what was put therein.]

7. ſhe hath performed this as a fit ceremony to ſolemnize my approaching death, after which men uſe to be embalmed with perfumes and ſpices, &c.

7. Then ſaid Jeſus, Let her alone: [*againſt the day of my burying hath ſhe kept this.]

* ſhe hath obſerved this for the day of my embalming, εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ μου τετήρηκεν αὐτο.

8. And therefore this was a very ſeaſonable charity in her, ye will have opportunities enough to ſhew your charity to the poor, but this was the laſt opportunity ſhe could have had of expreſſing it to me, who am ſuddenly to be gone from you.

8. For the poor always ye have with you, but me ye have not always.]

9. Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there; and they came, not for Jeſus ſake only, but that they might ſee Lazarus alſo, whom he had raiſed from the dead.

10. And ſeeing that Lazarus was apprehended by the Sanhedrim to be ſo dangerous a means to bring men to believe on Chriſt, upon conſultation it was thought fit to put Lazarus to death.

10. But the chief prieſts conſulted that they might put Lazarus alſo to death.]

11. many Jews forſook the Judaical way of oppoſition againſt Chriſt, upon ſeeing that miracle of his in raiſing Lazarus.

13. Took branches of palm trees and went forth to meet him, and cried, Hosanna, † blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.]

† Blessed in the name of the Lord be he that cometh, the King of Israel, Εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου, ὁ Βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ.

13. Took palm branches (see Note on Matt. 21. a.) and solemnized his entrance into the city with the ceremonies of a Kings inauguration, acknowledging him to be the Messias (see Mat. 11. a.) and using the words of Psal. 118. 29. and styling him King of Israel.

14. And Jesus when he had found a young ass, sate thereon, as it is written,]

14. At the same time also the disciples of Jesus fetching a young ass, and bringing it to him according to his appointment, he rode on it into Jerusalem, And so that other prophecy of scripture, Zech. 9. 9. was fulfilled in him also,

15. Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold thy king cometh sitting on an asses colt.]

15. Now, O Jerusalem, there is matter of rejoycing to thee, for he that is now thy King, cometh in an equipage not of pomp and state, but of humility, as one that is likely to be author of all good to thee.

16. These things understood not his disciples at the first: but when Jesus was glorified, then remembred they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.]

16. These things at first his disciples understood not to be a completion of any such prophecy, till the coming of the holy Ghost upon them, after Christs ascension, then they considered and remembred that that was now done unto him, which had been so long ago, so plainly prophecied of him.

17. The people therefore that was with him, when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.]

17. At this time before the peoples Hosanna's, those of the multitude that had been present at that mighty work of his, in raising Lazarus from the dead, freely made acknowledgement of it in Jerusalem.

18. For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.]

18. And that caused the peoples coming out to him, v. 13. as to the Messias, whom alone they supposed able to do such a miracle, ver. 11.

19. The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? Behold * the world is gon after him.]

* the whole world, for most ancient copies read ὅλος.

19. Upon this the Pharisees said one to another, We are so far from having suppressed him by all our opposition made against him, that all men believe on him in despight of us. And therefore some other sudden course must be taken with him.

20. And there were certain [a] Greeks among them that came up to worship at the feast.]

20. There were at this time some Gentile-worshippers, Proselytes of the Gates, which being not permitted to celebrate the feasts with the Jews, were yet come up to pray in the outward court of the Temple. a.

21. The same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethsaida in Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus.]

21. These living not far from Bethsaida in Galilee, and so having some knowledge of Philip, who was of that city, came to him, and besought him that he would help them to see Jesus, and speak with him.

22. Philip cometh and telleth Andrew, and again Andrew and Philip told Jesus.]

22. Philip first consulteth with Andrew, and both together mention it to Jesus.

23. And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come that the son of man † should be glorified.]

† be glorified, δοξασθῇ

23. Jesus did not refuse or reject these Gentiles from coming to him, but in general words intimated that the preaching the Gospel to the Gentiles was now shortly at hand, And in order to that, Christ should be rejected by the Jews, suffer, rise, and ascend to heaven, and then upon the Jews obstinate holding out, the Gospel should be preached to the Greeks, and all the rest of the heathen world.

24. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.]

24. Assuredly my death, saith he, is a means of bringing more unto the faith, then my life would be, as it fares with corn put into the earth, which by that means dies, but arises with abundance of encrease.

25. He that loveth his life, shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world, shall keep it unto life eternal.]

25. And so in proportion it shall be with you, the venturing of your lives, and sticking fast to me is the thrivingst surest way of preserving your selves.

26. If any man serve me, let him follow me, and where I am, there shall also my servant be; if any man serve me, him will my Father honor.]

26. If any man will be my disciple, (see Luke 8. a.) he must provide to suffer, as I shall. And if he thus keep close to me, he shall fare as well as I do, whatsoever he suffer here, be rewarded by my Father abundantly, (see Note on 1 Tim. 5. d.)

27. Now is my soul troubled, and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I to this hour.]

27. I am not impassible, or subject to no affection, such as desire of life, &c. but in all these, just as you are. The apprehension of that which is now approaching is a great perturbation to me, Which way shall I turn me? shall I pray to my Father to deliver me from the danger, to rescue me from dying? But this was it for which I came into the world, that I might suffer, And therefore I shall not absolutely pray against that.

28. Father glorifie thy name. Then came there [b] a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorifie it again.]

28. No, this shall be my prayer, that my Father will so dispose of me, that I may do whatsoever it is that may most tend to the glorifying of his name in me. Upon his saying those words, there came a clap of thunder, and with it a voice from heaven audible, in these words, I have &c. b.

29. The people therefore that stood by and heard it, said that it thundred. Others said, An Angel spake to him.]

29. And of the multitude there present some took notice of the thunder, with which that voice came, others of the voice it self.

30. Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

30, 31. Upon this Jesus said to them, This voice from heaven came not to answer or satisfie me, but to convince you, and bring you to the faith, or assure you that my death shall tend to the glory of God, and bringing down of sin and Satan; ch. 16. 11.

31. Now is the judgement of this world, now shall the prince of this world be cast out.]

32. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.]

32. And I being crucified (see Note on Mat. 1. h.) will by that means bring a great part of the whole world to believe on me, Gentiles as well as Jews.

33. (This ſpeech Chriſt meant as an intimation not only that he ſhould be put to death, but alſo what kinde of death this ſhould be, viz. crucifixion, which is an elevation, or lifting up to the croſs, and an holding out the hands, as if it were to invite all to him, promiſing an hoſpitable reception. See Note d.)

33. (This he ſaid, ſignifying what death he ſhould die.)

34. To this diſcourſe about his death the people made an objection, that their Doctors had taught them out of ſcripture, Pſal.110. (ſo the word Law ſignifies, ch.10.34. ſee Note a.) and perhaps Iſai. 40.8. that the Meſſias ſhall endure for ever, and never die, and therefore if it were true, what he ſaid, that the ſon of man muſt be put to death, they could not gueſs what he meant by the ſon of man, ſure not the Meſſias.

34. The people anſwered him, We have heard out of the law, that * Chriſt abideth for ever: and how ſayeſt thou, The ſon of man muſt be lift up? Who is this ſon of man?]

* the Chriſt, ὁ Χριστὸς

35. To this he anſwered, I am not likely to ſtay long amongſt you, here on earth, make uſe of me, the light of the world, while I am with you, or elſe you are likely to be left in the dark, in a blinde unhappy condition for ever; and do not, upon your traditions, perſwade your ſelves, that I ſhall alway continue among you here, becauſe I am the Meſsias.

35. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you: walk while ye have the light, leſt darkneſs † come upon you: for he that walketh in darkneſs, knoweth not whither he goeth.]

† ſurprize, καταλάβῃ

36. I ſhall continue with you but a while, and therefore be ſure ye make haſte to learn ſufficient for your whole lives to come, to get your directions complete, that you may live like Chriſtians. When Jeſus had ſaid this, he went away, and concealed himſelf from them (at Bethany probably) for a while.

36. While ye have the light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. Theſe things ſpake Jeſus, and departed, and did hide himſelf from them.]

37. All this did not effectually work on them, but though he had done all theſe miracles in their ſight, yet they did not believe on him.

37. But though he had done ſo many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him.]

38. And thereby the prophecy of Eſaias ch.53.1. was fulfilled, which was to this purpoſe, How few are there that have been by all Chriſt's miracles convinced, that he is the Meſsias?

38. That the ſaying of Eſaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he ſpake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?]

39, 40. That other prophecie alſo had not been fulfilled, had they not thus diſbelieved him, wherein the juſt judgement of God forſaking, and bringing the puniſhment of blindneſs upon them, was pronounced by that prophet againſt the ſtubborn obdurate Jews, who by this means are likely never to be converted or pardoned.

c.

39. Therefore they c could not believe, becauſe that Eſaias ſaid again,

40. He hath blinded their eyes, and hardned their heart, that * they ſhould not ſee with their eyes, nor underſtand with their heart, and be converted, that I ſhould heal them.]

* they ſee not, μὴ ἴδωσι

41. Theſe things were ſpoken by that prophet in ſetting down a viſion of his, when Chriſt's being on the earth was revealed to him, ſee Note on ch.1.b.

41. Theſe things ſaid Eſaias, when he ſaw his glory and ſpake of him.]

42. Yet for all this, many of the rulers of the people, the members of the Sanhedrim, did believe him to be the Meſsias, ſuch was Nicodemus ch.3.1.&c. But the ſect of the Phariſees was of ſuch authority and power in the Sanhedrim, and they were ſo violently bent againſt him, and all that received him, that as Nicodemus ch.7.50. and 19.19. durſt not come to him by day time, ſo the reſt durſt not make any publick acknowledgement of their believing on him, for fear they ſhould be reproachfully cenſured (ſee ch.9.Note b) and being rulers, be turned out of their dignities in the Conſiſtory.

42. Nevertheleſs among the chief rulers alſo many believed on him, but becauſe of the Phariſees they did not confeſs him, leſt they ſhould be put out of the ſynagogue.]

43. For they valued their reputation with men, (eſpecially their places in the Sanhedrim) their reputation with the Phariſees, that they were good Patriots, conſtant to their old way, more then the teſtimony of, or reputation with God himſelf, ſee ch.5.41.

43. For they loved the † praiſe of men, more then the praiſe of God.]

† glory of men, more then the glory of God, δόξαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων μᾶλλον ἤπερ τὴν δόξαν.

44. The believing on me is nothing elſe but the believing on my Father, whoſe commiſſion I have, and whoſe doctrine I teach.

44. Jeſus cried and ſaid, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that ſent me.]

45. And he that ſeeth my miracles, in them ſeeth my Fathers power, the works of miracles which I do, being wrought by my Father.

45. And he that ſeeth me, ſeeth him that ſent me.]

46. I am ſent by my Father to enlighten the world, to lead them, that will receive my doctrine, into all that is neceſſary for them to know for the ordering of their lives, ſo as will be acceptable to God my Father.

46. I am come a light into the world, that whoſoever believeth on me ſhould not abide in darkneſs.]

47. They that hear my preaching, and reject it, I do not mean to accuſe them to my Father, to make any complaint againſt them, 'Twas not the deſigne of my coming, to accuſe any man, and ſo to bring any judgement on any, 'tis more agreeable to my deſigne to reſcue all out of their ſins, and puniſhment due to them for ſin.

47. And if any man hear my words, and || believe not, d I judge him not: for I came not to judge the world, but to ſave the world.]

|| or, keep them not, for the Kg MS, and the old Greek and Latine read φυλάξῃ, and ſo the Syriack and other copies.

48. That which will accuſe, and condemn ſuch an ones, is, that what I teach and he deſpiſeth, is the thing that my Father ſent me to preach, and that on purpoſe to bring them to eternal bliſs that receive and obey it, And the deſpiſing of that which was meant for his ſo great good, and came backt with authority and commiſsion from God the Father, is an accuſation which will be heavily charged on him at the day of judgement.

48. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have ſpoken, the ſame ſhall judge him at the laſt day.]

*49. Every word, or part of doctrine taught by me, is by expreſs commiſsion of him.

49. For I have not ſpoken of my ſelf, but the Father which ſent me, [he gave me a commandement what I ſhould ſay, and what I ſhould ſpeak.]

50. And of this I am ſure that obedience to his precepts, as * they are now preached by me, is the only way to bring men to eternal life.

50. And I know that his commandment is life everlaſting:] Whatſoever I ſpeak therefore, even as the Father hath ſaid unto me, ſo I ſpeak.

a. Ἕλληνες

V. 20. Greeks] The Grecians here are supposed to be proselytes of the gates, who yet were not permitted among the Jews to celebrate the feast with them, but onely either to behold their solemnities, or holy festivities and πανηγύρεις, or, as it is here peculiarly said, ἵνα προσκυνήσωσιν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, that they might worship at that time of publick worship, which in atrio Gentilium, in the court of the Gentiles, they were permitted to do, as appears by the Eunuch, Act. 8. 27. ὃς ἐληλύθει προσκυνήσων εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ, who came to worship at Jerusalem, where that Temple was, which is styled the house of prayer to all people; so the pious men, that is, Proselytes, Act. 2. 5. which came up to Jerusalem at the feast of Pentecost.

Προσκυνῆσαι ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ

b. φωνὴ

V. 28. A voice] The voice here was an articulate sound in the midst of thunder. φωνὴ and βροντὴ voice and thunder are all one among these writers, the Hebrew קוֹלוֹת voices ordinarily signifying thunder. Thus bath col the daughter of voice (the onely way of oracle or revelation of Gods will among the Jews after the Babylonish captivity) is among them, the will of God revealed in thunder from heaven, Ex. 19. 16, 19. Hence it is that in this place ver. 29. the bystanders say, It thunders, and others that an Angel spake, both together saying the truth, that there was a thunder joyned with a voice from heaven, which is the daughter of thunder. This is the meaning of βροντὴ ἢ φωναὶ thunders and voices Apoc. 4. 5. and 8. 5. so Mat. 3. 17. φωνὴ λέγουσα, a voice saying is the thunder uttering such a voice, and so ch. 17. 5. Luk. 9. 35. And by this will be explained a seeming difference in the Acts in the story of Sauls conversion of hearing, and not hearing the voice, which shall be referred to that place, Note on Act. 9. b.

Βροντὴ ἢ φωναὶ φωνὴ λέγουσα

c. Οὐκ ἠδύναντο

V. 39. Could not believe] The οὐκ ἠδύναντο here may be rendred, by Analogie with the same phrase, used ch. 5. 19. so, as to signifie not any impotence in them, but that, as 'tis said v. 39. they believed not. So doth the Hebrew phrase signifie, Gen. 19. 22. and so saith Isidorus Peluſiota of that Joh. 5. 19. expounding τὸ δύνασθαι by ἐνδέχεσθαι, he cannot, that is, he doth not. So the phrase is used Mar. 6. 5. Luk. 16. 2. and so the Context here imports, being no more then this, that this unbelief of theirs was foretold by the Prophets, which indeed was an argument to prove what the effect would be, through their own contumacious wills, but no way a cause of their unbelief, or that which laid an impossibility of believing on them.

Δύνασθαι

d. Κρίνω

V. 47. I judge him not] The word κρίνειν judging here seemeth to be taken in the sense of accusing, as a plaintif, or witnesse accuseth, and not of condemning, which is the office of a Judge. For first it is here v. 41. spoken of the word or Gospel of Christ, which had been preach'd unto them, and not of Christ himself in that place. 2dly. 'tis affirmed of Christ ch. 5. 22. that all judgement is committed to the son, and that he hath authority to execute judgement, and that his judgement is just, &c. And therefore though it may be said that that judgement of his belongs in those places to the judgement, to which his Resurrection instates him, and the place here belongs to his condition here in this world, and so that that Affirmative, and this Negative are reconcileable, yet because the judging v. 48. is also said to be at the last day, it will be fit to assign such a notion of judging in both these verses, as that the saying he judgeth not, may be reconcileable with those other places, where judgement is committed to the son, and that will be by interpreting the judging here, of accusing. And thus it will be agreeable with Joh. 5. 45. do not think that I will accuse you to the Father; There is one that accuseth you, Moses, whose writings producible against them are there said to accuse them, as here Christs words are said to do. Thus Luk. 6. 37. Judge not, and ye shall not be judged, is set as distinct from Condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned, and set preparative to it, as accusing regularly is to giving of sentence in any judicature.

CHAP. XIII.

Paraphrase.

1. NOw before the feast of the passeover, when Jesus knew that his houre was come, that he should [a] depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.]

1. Now on the evening or first part of the Paschal day (see note on Mar. 14. c.) many houres before the time of dressing and eating the Lamb, which was the Paschal feast, Christ knowing that he should not live till then, and consequently that what he had to say or do to his Disciples before his departure, would most fitly be done presently, he thus expressed the constancy of his love, and kindnesse to them.

a, a

2. And supper * being ended (the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simons son, to † betray him.)]

2. When he was at supper, or, in supper time, (see v. 12.) (Judas having taken up that diabolical resolution of delivering up Christ to the Jews.)

* being come, or in supper time, ἐλθόντος γενομένου.

3. Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he * was come from God, and went to God,

3, 4, 5. Jesus knowing sufficiently the dignity of his person that he was the eternal son of God, that came from God, and was now near his time of returning to God again, and of taking possession of all power in heaven and earth, yet thus far humbled himself, He riseth from supper, and after the manner of a waiter, puts off his upper garment, and girt his other under garment to him, (see Luk. 12. b.) and poured out water out of the water-pots or cisterns, (ch. 2. v. 6.) into a lesser vessel, usual for washing, And then he set himself in all humility, as a servant of the meanest quality, to wash the feet of his own disciples, and then wipes them with the linen cloth about him.

* came forth from God, and departeth to, ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθε, καὶ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὑπάγει.

4. He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments, and took a towel and girded himself,

5. After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples feet, and to wipe them with the † towel, wherewith he was girded.]

6. Then cometh he to Simon Peter; and Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, [dost thou] wash my feet?

6. dost thou purpose to

7. Jesus answered and said unto him, [What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.]

7. Thou dost not yet understand what this action of mine meaneth, but hereafter, when thou shalt discharge the office of Apostle in the Church, and consider wherein that dignity especially consists, viz. in serving those who are placed under thee, and in washing from them the sins and sullages of their earthly affections, which still are apt to remain after they are Christians, and must be daily washt off by the work of thy ministery, then thou wilt consider and discern, to what this action of mine emblematically tends.

8. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in me.]

8. But Peter would by no means let him wash his feet. Jesus therefore saith to him, That which is meant by my washing thy feet is so necessary to thee, viz. the purifying thy affections, that without it thou canst receive no benefit from me.

9. Simon Peter saith unto him,] Lord, not my feet onely, but also my hands and my head.

9. Upon that saying of Christ he replies,

10, 11. He that is waſhed all over already, needs no more waſhing, ſave onely for his feet, which by the daily treading, that is, converſing on this earth, will be apt continually to gather ſullage, which will need continual cleanſing, And in like manner 'tis now among my diſciples, The body of them is clean, but yet the feet are foul, viz. one baſe unworthy perſon among them, meaning Judas, the perſon that had now undertaken to deliver him up.

b. 10. Jeſus ſaith to him, [He that * is [b] waſhed, needeth not, ſave to waſh his feet, but is clean every whit; and ye are clean, but not all.

11. For he knew who ſhould betray him, Therefore ſaid he, Ye are not all clean.]

* hath been waſhed, hath no need but that his feet be waſhed, but is all clean, ὁλόλουμένος ἐστὶ καθαρός ἐστιν ὅλος

12. So after he had waſhed their feet, and had taken his † garments, and was ſet down again, he ſaid unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

13. Ye call me Maſter and Lord; and ye ſay well; for ſo I am.

14. to miniſter and ſerve, and do all offices of charity to one another, and to all that ſhall be under you, as you are under me, that is, to all believers in the Church, and labour to cleanſe them from all their ſullages, ſee v. 7.

14. If I then your Lord and Maſter have waſhed your feet, ye alſo ought [to waſh one anothers feet.]

† own garments, and was lain down, ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, ἀνέπεσον

15. For what I have now done, is on purpoſe to ſhew you, how you ought to behave your ſelves in that authority in the Church wherein ye ſhall ſucceed me.

15. For I have given you an example, that ye ſhould do as I have done unto you.]

16. nor you my Apoſtles, that I mean to ſettle Governours of the Church, greater then I, from whom you have your commiſſion, and by whom you are conſtituted.

16. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The ſervant is not greater then his Lord, [neither * he that is ſent greater then he that ſent him.]

* the Apoſtle greater, ἀπόστολος μείζων

17. And woe be to you if you do not practiſe after this example.

17. If ye know theſe things, happy are ye if ye do them.]

18. I ſpeak not of you all, I know whom I have choſen, but that the ſcripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me, hath lift up his heel againſt me.]

I have choſe twelve Apoſtles, and the ſcripture is fulfilled of one of them, that though he be ſo near to me, as to be entertained daily at my table with me, yet he will do me all the miſchief he can.

19. This I tell you now (ſee note on Mat. 23. k.) by way of prediction, that when my ſuffering comes, and may be apt to make you waver in your belief of me, your knowing that I foretold you it, may aſſure you that I know things to come, and the ſecret purpoſes of mens hearts before they ſhew themſelves in act, and from thence conclude that I am the ſearcher of all hearts, and withall that I am the Meſſias, to whom thoſe prophecies belong.

19. Now I tell you before it come, that when it is come to paſſe, ye may believe that I am he.]

20. As for the offices of duty and task and humility which I aſſigne you, v. 14. and now exemplifie them to you in my ſelf, you ſhall not want the comfort and reward of them; For you ſhall be conſidered by me (and ſo ſhall the reception and entertainment that men ſhall give to you) as I my ſelf am by my Father.

20. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that receiveth whomſoever I ſend, receiveth me; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me.]

21. At this time, as he ſpake theſe words, Jeſus was much troubled, not onely in apprehenſion of the approaching danger, but eſpecially he was grieved to think of it, that any diſciple of his ſhould be ſo wicked and ſo unhappy, and told them openly and plainly that one of the twelve ſhould be hired and undertake to deliver him up to the Jews to be put to death by them.

21. When Jeſus had thus ſaid, he was troubled in ſpirit, and teſtified and ſaid, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, that one of you ſhall betray me.]

22. much perplexed to think that one of them ſhould be guilty of ſuch a villany, and not being able to gueſſe who it ſhould be.

22. Then the diſciples looked one on another, [doubting of whom he ſpake.]

23. And John, to whom Chriſt was very kind, the writer of this Goſpel, was placed next to him at the ſupper.

23. Now there was * leaning on Jeſus boſome one of his diſciples whom Jeſus loved.]

* lying in Jeſus boſome ἀνακείμενος τῷ

24. Simon Peter therefore beckned to him, that he ſhould ask who it ſhould be of whom he ſpake.

25. lying next to him with his head in Jeſus boſome, v. 23.

25. He then [lying † on Jeſus breaſt,] ſaith unto him, Lord, who is it?

† at the breaſt of Jeſus στήθει

c. 26. He it is to whom I ſhall give the next piece of bread, which I ſhall take out of the diſh, or platter, and having given him that mark to know him by, he preſently puts his hand into the diſh, and takes out a piece of bread, and gives it to Judas Iſcariot.

26. Jeſus anſwered, He it is to whom * I ſhall give [c] a ſop, when I have dipped it: And when he had dipped it, he gave it to Judas Iſcariot the ſon of Simon.]

* having dipt, I ſhall deliver the piece, or cruſt of bread, and having dipt, he gave the cruſt, ὃ ἐγὼ βάψας τὸ ψωμίον δώσω, καὶ ἐμβάψας τὸ ψωμίον ἔδωκεν

27. And upon his receiving that piece of bread, (together with Chriſts telling him diſtinctly of it, and of the horribleneſſe of the ſin and danger, Mar. 14. 21.) and his not yet relenting, the devil entred into him more forcibly then before, v. 2. and Luk. 22. 3. hurrying him to a ſpeedy execution of his deſignes, (ſee the paraphraſe on Luk. 22. 3, 4.) which Jeſus knowing, ſaid to him accordingly, What thou doeſt, do quickly, intimating that he was now haſtning to do it.

27. And after the † ſop Satan entred into him. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, That thou doeſt, do quickly.]

† cruſt ψωμίου

28. This ſpeech they that were at meat with him underſtood not, unleſſe perhaps John to whom he had given the token, v. 26.

28. Now no man at the table knew for what intent he ſpake this unto him.]

29. See note on Mar. 14. c.

29. For ſome of them thought, becauſe Judas had the * bag, that Jeſus had ſaid unto him, Buy thoſe things that we have need of [againſt the feaſt:] or that he ſhould give ſomething to the poor.

30. He then having received the † ſop, went immediately out; and it was night:

† cruſt ψωμίου

31. Now is the time come for Chriſt to ſuffer, and riſe and return back to heaven, by which means God ſhall receive glory in him, and conſequently ſhall glorifie him immediately.

31. Therefore when he was gone out, Jeſus ſaid, [Now is the ſon of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.]

32. Raiſe him from the dead, and exalt him to more power and dignity by reaſon of this his humiliation, And this ſhall be done preſently.

32. If God be glorified in him, God ſhall alſo [glorifie him in himſelf, and ſhall ſtraightway glorifie him.]

33. Little

33. Little children, yet a little while I am with you, Ye ſhall ſeek me; and, as I ſaid unto the Jews, Whither I go ye cannot come, ſo now I ſay to you.] 33. My beloved friends whom I look on as children ſuddenly to be deprived of their parent, I am now within a very little time to part from you.

34. A new commandement I give unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye alſo love one another.] 34. And being now to take my laſt leave, I give you this ſpecial new command that from the manner and degree of my love to you expreſs'd in venturing, nay loſing my life for you, ye alſo learn and practiſe the ſame degree of loving one another, that is, that all Chriſtians abound one toward another in all charity, and venture their lives for the good of others, eſpecially for the propagating the Goſpel, doing good to the ſouls of other men.

35. By this ſhall all men know that ye are my diſciples, if ye have love one to another.] 35. This is the badge by which I deſire you ſhould be known from all other men of other profeſſions, and religions, your living together in the ſtricteſt bands of love.

36. Simon Peter ſaid unto him, Lord, whither goeſt thou? Jeſus anſwered him, Whither I go thou canſt not follow me now; but thou ſhalt follow me afterwards.] 36. Peter not yet knowing what he meant ver. 33. asketh him whither he meant to go that they ſhould not be able to follow him: Jeſus anſwers him, that though he could not yet, he ſhould ere long follow him, that the very death which Chriſt ſhould now ſuffer, ſhould be his lot hereafter.

37. Peter ſaid unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? I will [lay down] my life for thy ſake. 37. venture, hazard.

38. Jeſus anſwered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my ſake? [Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, the cock ſhall not crow, till thou * haſt denied me thrice.] * ſhalt have ἀπαρνήσῃ 38. As valiantly and reſolutely as now thou promiſeſt me, this I foreſee of thee, that before the morning watch (or ſecond cockcrowing, ſee note on Mar. 13. b.) that is, before three of the clock in the morning, thou wilt deny me three ſeveral times.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Μετάβῃ

V. 1. Depart] This word μεταβῇ paſſe referres to the Paſſeover mention'd in the beginning of the verſe, to ſignifie that that legal Paſſeover, or, the occaſion of it, Gods paſſing over the houſe of Iſrael, and the Iſraelites paſſing or going out of Ægypt, did note the paſſing of Chriſt out of this world, (where he was a ſervant) into the land of liberty, that is, Heaven. See Note on Luk. 9. b.

b. Λούεσθαι Niſſen

V. 10. Waſhed] The Hebrews had their λύσεις, and their βαπτισμὸς or νίψεις, the former waſhing of the whole body, which they call תְּבִילָה, the other two of the hands or feet, of one part alone, either by immerſion, or powring on of water, which they call קדוש, Sanctifying. So in Joma c. 3. §. 3. חמש טבילות ועשרה קדושין טובל כהן גדול ביום הכפורים, the high prieſt on the day of expiation waſhes five waſhings, and ten ſanctifications, that is, waſhes his whole body five times, at every changing of his veſtments once, and his hands and feet ten times, that is, at every waſhing of his whole body twice. The former were uſed by the Prieſt (after the building of the Temple) before the entring into the Temple, (no man, ſaith Joma c. 3. §. 3. enters into the court of the Temple to miniſter, though he be clean, that is, though he be not under any legal pollution, until he have waſhed all over) and ſo alſo by the Proſelytes at their initiation. (See Note on Mat. 3. a.) The latter was of every dayes uſe: And to thoſe our Saviour ἀπλυτος ſeems here to referre, and by the ὁ λελουμένος he means him that hath been totally waſh'd, that is, that hath been initiated, and entred into Chriſt, hath undertaken his Diſcipleſhip, and ſo renounced ſincerely all the profaneneſſe of his former life; and he that had done ſo is καθαρὸς ὅλος ſaid to be καθαρὸς ὅλος, in the words following whole clean, and he hath no need to be ſo waſhed again, that is, all over. For that ceremony of initiation was never repeated, ſay the Jewiſh writers. All that is needful to him is the βαπτισμοὶ or νίψεις the immerſion, or powring of water, and ſo rinſing of the hands and feet, the daily miniſtery of the word and grace of Chriſt (thereby ſignified) to cleanſe and waſh off, and purifie (more and more daily) the frailties, and imperfections, and lapſes of our weak nature, thoſe feet of the ſoul, τὰ σαρκικὰ διαβήματα, ſaith Eulogius, even after he is converted.

c. Ψωμίον

V. 26. A Sop] What ψωμίον ſignifies is clear by Heſychius, ψωμίον (ψωδίον is a falſe print) τὸ ὑποκάτω τῆς ἄρτου, the lower ſide of the bread, and ψωμία (not ψωδία again) τὰ τῆς ἄρτου ὑποθρύσματα, broken pieces of the loaf, cruſts of bread. Such was it that was wont to be given about to each of the gueſts in the poſtcœnium (the breaking of bread after ſupper) among the Jews, to ſignifie that charity that ſhould be among them, and ſo the cup of grace, or charity alſo, μετὰ τὸ δειπνῆσαι after ſupper, ſaith S. Luke, ch. 22. 20. And ſuch was this here, that Chriſt on purpoſe did to expreſſe his love to his diſciples now at parting with them, ver. 1. and to engage them to the like among one another. That this was the poſtcœnium there can be no doubt, if γενομένου δείπνου ver. 2. γενομένου δείπνου be rendred ſupper being ended, for then there could be nothing after that but the poſtcœnium. But although γενομένου being the Aoriſt. Med. importeth no more, but it being come, or when ſupper was come, in ſupper time, yet 'tis apparent that after this he roſe from ſupper, to waſh their feet, and accordingly 'tis ſaid expreſly v. 12. ἀναπεσὼν πάλιν lying down again, which ſignifies that he was before layn down to meat. And therefore in reaſon this waſhing their feet, coming between the ſupper, and the poſtcœnium, that which here followes the waſhing, and his ſecond lying down, is the poſtcœnium, wherein, as it is evident by the other Evangeliſts, he inſtituted the Lords ſupper. See Mat. 26. 26. where it is the laſt thing that is done, but the ſinging of the hymn, before their going to the mount of Olives ver. 30. and ſo Mar. 14. 28. And Luke ſaith expreſly, ch. 22. 20. that he took the cup after ſupper. Which being ſuppoſed, and the mention being here expreſſe of Chriſts giving the ψωμίον, or cruſt to Judas, as it is neceſſarily conſequent, that Judas was preſent at the Inſtitution of the Sacrament, and not onely at the firſt part of the ſupper, which that concluded, ſo it is not probable that the cruſt now mention'd to be given him ſhould be dip'd or moyſten'd in the juyce of the herbs, as it might be thought, if it had been at the former part of the ſupper. For the cuſtome of giving about bread in the poſtcœnium was, ſurely, to give a cruſt of drie bread, broken off from the loaf, or a loaf cut in a diſh, to that purpoſe, to give every one a piece, And the cup of wine following it, there was no uſe, or occaſion of moyſtening it; and beſides, the firſt courſe, and the diſhes of that ſervice were in all reaſon taken away, to give place to this concluding courſe,

b. 10, 11. He that is waſhed all over already, needs no more waſhing, ſave only for his feet, which by the daily treading, that is, converſing on this earth, will be apt continually to gather ſullage, which will need continual cleanſing, And in like manner 'tis now among my diſciples, The body of them is clean, but yet the feet are foul, viz. one baſe unworthy perſon among them, meaning Judas, the perſon that had now undertaken to deliver him up.

10. Jeſus ſaith to him, [He that * is [b] waſhed, needeth not, ſave to waſh his feet, but is clean every whit; and ye are clean, but not all.

11. For he knew who ſhould betray him, Therefore ſaid he, Ye are not all clean.]

* hath been waſhed, hath no need but that his feet be waſhed, but is all clean, ὁ λελουμένος οὐκ ἔχει χρείαν εἰ μὴ τοὺς πόδας νιφθῆναι, ἀλλ' ἔστι καθαρὸς ὅλος

12. So after he had waſhed their feet, and had taken his † garments, and was ſet down again, he ſaid unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

13. Ye call me Maſter and Lord; and ye ſay well; for ſo I am.

† own garments, and was lain down, τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, ἀνέπεσον

14. to miniſter and ſerve, and do all offices of charity to one another, and to all that ſhall be under you, as you are under me, that is, to all believers in the Church, and labour to cleanſe them from all their ſullages, ſee v. 7.

15. For I have given you an example, that ye ſhould do as I have done unto you.]

15. For what I have now done, is on purpoſe to ſhew you, how you ought to behave your ſelves in that authority in the Church wherein ye ſhall ſucceed me.

16. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The ſervant is not greater then his Lord, [neither * he that is ſent greater then he that ſent him.]

* the Apoſtle greater, ὁ ἀπόστολος μείζων

16. nor you my Apoſtles, that I mean to ſettle Governours of the Church, greater then I, from whom you have your commiſſion, and by whom you are conſtituted.

17. If ye know theſe things, happy are ye if ye do them.]

17. And woe be to you if you do not practiſe after this example.

18. I ſpeak not of you all, I know whom I have choſen, but that the ſcripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me, hath lift up his heel againſt me.]

18. But I expect not this obedience from you all, I know I have choſe twelve Apoſtles, and the ſcripture is fulfilled of one of them, that though he be ſo near to me, as to be entertained daily at my table with me, yet he will do me all the miſchief he can.

19. This I tell you now (ſee note on Mat. 23. k.) by way of prediction, that when my ſuffering comes, and may be apt to make you waver in your belief of me, your knowing that I foretold you it, may aſſure you that I know things to come, and the ſecret purpoſes of mens hearts before they ſhew themſelves in act, and from thence conclude that I am the ſearcher of all hearts, and withall that I am the Meſſias, to whom thoſe prophecies belong.

20. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that receiveth whomſoever I ſend, receiveth me; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me.]

20. As for the offices of duty and task and humility which I aſſigne you, v. 14. and now exemplifie them to you in my ſelf, you ſhall not want the comfort and reward of them; For you ſhall be conſidered by me (and ſo ſhall the reception and entertainment that men ſhall give to you) as I my ſelf am by my Father.

21. When Jeſus had thus ſaid, he was troubled in ſpirit, and teſtified and ſaid, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, that one of you ſhall betray me.]

21. At this time, as he ſpake theſe words, Jeſus was much troubled, not onely in apprehenſion of the approaching danger, but eſpecially he was grieved to think of it, that any diſciple of his ſhould be ſo wicked and ſo unhappy, and told them openly and plainly that one of the twelve ſhould be hired and undertake to deliver him up to the Jews to be put to death by them.

22. Then the diſciples looked one on another, [doubting of whom he ſpake.]

22. much perplexed to think that one of them ſhould be guilty of ſuch a villany, and not being able to gueſſe who it ſhould be.

23. Now there was * leaning on Jeſus boſome one of his diſciples whom Jeſus loved.]

* lying in Jeſus boſome ἀνακείμενος ἐν

23. And John, to whom Chriſt was very kind, the writer of this Goſpel, was placed next to him at the ſupper.

24. Simon Peter therefore beckned to him, that he ſhould ask who it ſhould be of whom he ſpake.

25. He then [lying † on Jeſus breaſt,] ſaith unto him, Lord, who is it?

† at the breaſt of Jeſus ἐπὶ τῷ στήθει

25. lying next to him with his head in Jeſus boſome, v. 23.

c. 26. Jeſus anſwered, He it is to whom * I ſhall give [c] a ſop, when I have dipped it: And when he had dipped it, he gave it to Judas Iſcariot the ſon of Simon.]

* having dipt, I ſhall deliver the piece, or cruſt of bread, and having dipt, he gave the cruſt, ὁ ἐγὼ βάψας τὸ ψωμίον δώσω, ἐμβάψας τὸ ψωμίον δίδωσιν

26. He it is to whom I ſhall give the next piece of bread, which I ſhall take out of the diſh, or platter, and having given him that mark to know him by, he preſently puts his hand into the diſh, and takes out a piece of bread, and gives it to Judas Iſcariot.

† cruſt ψωμίον

27. And upon his receiving that piece of bread, (together with Chriſts telling him diſtinctly of it, and of the horribleneſſe of the ſin and danger, Mar. 14. 21.) and his not yet relenting, the devil entred into him more forcibly then before, v. 2. and Luk. 22. 3. hurrying him to a ſpeedy execution of his deſignes, (ſee the paraphraſe on Luk. 22. 3, 4.) which Jeſus knowing, ſaid to him accordingly, What thou doeſt, do quickly, intimating that he was now haſtning to do it.

28. Now no man at the table knew for what intent he ſpake this unto him.]

28. This ſpeech they that were at meat with him underſtood not, unleſſe perhaps John to whom he had given the token, v. 26.

29. For ſome of them thought, becauſe Judas had the * bag, that Jeſus had ſaid unto him, Buy thoſe things that we have need of [againſt the feaſt:] or that he ſhould give ſomething to the poor.

* purſe γλωσσόκομον

29. See note on Mar. 14. c.

30. He then having received the † ſop, went immediately out; and it was night:

† cruſt ψωμίον

31. Therefore when he was gone out, Jeſus ſaid, [Now is the ſon of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.]

31. Now is the time come for Chriſt to ſuffer, and riſe and return back to heaven, by which means God ſhall receive glory in him, and conſequently ſhall glorifie him immediately.

32. If God be glorified in him, God ſhall alſo [glorifie him in himſelf, and ſhall ſtraightway glorifie him.]

32. Raiſe him from the dead, and exalt him to more power and dignity by reaſon of this his humiliation, And this ſhall be done preſently.

c. Ψωμίον

V. 26. A Sop] What ψωμίον ſignifies is clear by Heſychius, ψωμίον (ψωδίον is a falſe print) τὸ κατάκρυμμα τοῦ ἄρτου, the lower ſide of the bread, and ψωμία (not ψωδία again) τὰ τοῦ ἄρτου ἀποθραύσματα, broken pieces of the loaf, cruſts of bread. Such was it that was wont to be given about to each of the gueſts in the poſtcœnium (the breaking of bread after ſupper) among the Jews, to ſignifie that charity that ſhould be among them, and ſo the cup of grace, or charity alſo, μετὰ τὸ δειπνῆσαι after ſupper, ſaith S. Luke, ch. 22. 20. And ſuch was this here, that Chriſt on purpoſe did to expreſſe his love to his diſciples now at parting with them, ver. 1. and to engage them to the like among one another. That this was the poſtcœnium there can be no doubt, if γενομένου δείπνου ver. 2. be rendred ſupper being ended, for then there could be nothing after that but the poſtcœnium. But although γενομένου being the *Aoriſt. And therefore in reaſon this waſhing their feet, coming between the ſupper, and the poſtcœnium, that which here followes the waſhing, and his ſecond lying down, is the poſtcœnium, wherein, as it is evident by the other Evangeliſts, he inſtituted the Lords ſupper. See Mat. 26. 26. where it is the laſt thing that is done, but the ſinging of the hymn, before their going to the mount of Olives ver. 30. and ſo Mar. 14. 28. And Luke ſaith expreſly, ch. 22. 20. that he took the cup after ſupper. Which being ſuppoſed, and the mention being here expreſſe of Chriſts giving the ψωμίον, or cruſt to Judas, as it is neceſſarily conſequent, that Judas was preſent at the Inſtitution of the Sacrament, and not onely at the firſt part of the ſupper, which that concluded, ſo it is not probable that the cruſt now mention'd to be given him ſhould be dip'd or moyſten'd in the juyce of the herbs, as it might be thought, if it had been at the former part of the ſupper. For the cuſtome of giving about bread in the poſtcœniũ was, ſurely, to give a cruſt of drie bread, broken off from the loaf, or a loaf cut in a diſh, to that purpoſe, to give every one a piece, And the cup of wine following it, there was no uſe, or occaſion of moyſtening it; and beſides, the firſt courſe, and the diſhes of that ſervice were in all reaſon taken away, to give place to this concluding courſe, courſe, As we know it is, where ever the cuſtome of the Grace-cup is ſtill retained, And if ſo, there was then no moyſt thing on the table but the wine to dip, or wet it in, and that being in a cup, or pot, and not in a diſh (which is mention'd in Matthew and Mark at his pointing at the traditor,) there is no pretence of believing, that the bread was dip'd in that. Upon theſe grounds it ſeems not unreaſonable to interpoſe a conjecture, that the word βάλας, or ἐμβάλας may here be miſtaken, and miſapplied to ψωμίον, the piece of bread (which from thence is uſually rendred a ſop, ſuppoſing it to be βαπτόμενον, dip'd in wet, and ſo moyſten'd) when it may ſignifie no more then his putting, or dipping, his hand into the diſh. For the putting ones hand into any hollow veſſel, which is made hollow, that it may contain liquids in it, may fitly be thus expreſs'd, although there be not any liquid thing in it at that time. So ἐμβάπτειν χεῖρα, to dip, or put in the hand Mat. 26. 23. ſignifies to take meat, and eat bread (Pſal. 41. 9. and here v. 18.) without any notion of wetting it, & ſo ἐμβαπτόμενον, Mar. 14. 20. which may as well conclude that Judas was made wet in the diſh there, as that the bread was ſopt here. It is ordinary for words to loſe their native ſignifications, and to be uſed in a greater latitude then originally belongs to them, and ſo we know βαπτίζειν, to be dip'd, or waſh'd, is uſed not onely of water, but of the holy Ghoſt, and fire, And then, why may not the words be thus rendred, ᾧ ἐγὼ βάλας τὸ ψωμίον δώσω, to whom having dip'd, I ſhall give the piece of bread, by dipping meaning putting the hand into the diſh, and then ἐμβάλας τὸ ψωμίον δίδωσιν, having dip'd, that is, put in his hand, he gives the cruſt, or piece of bread, to Judas, telling John at the ſame time, that he, that he ſhould next give it to, was he that ſhould deliver him up.

CHAP. XIV.

1. As your believing in God my father will afford you many privileges, and antidotes againſt worldly trouble, ſo will alſo your believing in me.

1. LET not your heart be troubled: * ye believe in God, believe alſo in me.]

2, 3. In heaven there is room for you abundantly as well as for me, and ſo there is no need that I ſhould tell you this truth (which otherwiſe I would have told you, and which would give you cauſe to rejoyce, and not be ſad at my departure) that my going is but as your harbinger to prepare for you, and when I have done that, then, as an harbinger, I will come back again, and meet you, and ſo introduce you thither, Act. 1. 11.

2. In my fathers houſe are many manſions; † If it were not ſo, I would have told you; I go to prepare a place for you.

3. And if I go * and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto my ſelf, that where I am, there ye may be alſo]

4. I ſuppoſe you know the place to which I go, and the way which will bring you thither alſo.

4. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.]

5. Thomas ſaith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goeſt; and how can we know the way?

6. I am the true and living way, ſent by my Father to direct all men to that way, wherein he expects and requires to be ſerved, and there is no other way to come to the knowledge of his will, or the enjoyment of life with him, but by me, and the ſame way that I go before you.

6. Jeſus ſaith unto him, [I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me.]

7. If you had thoroughly known me, who come onely in my Fathers name, and to reveal his will to you, ye had alſo known my Father, who being inviſible is no otherwayes to be known, but as he is revealed in me, and now (ſee Mat. 23. note m.) although ye never ſaw my Father, yet having ſeen and known me, who am his image, ye have both ſeen and known him.

7. If ye had known me, ye ſhould have known my Father alſo; and from henceforth ye know him, and have ſeen him.]

8. Philip not conſidering the ſenſe of that laſt ſpeech, ſaith unto him, Lord, ſhew us the Father, And that one thing, the ſhewing us the Father, will ſure convince all without any other argument.

8. Philip ſaith unto him, Lord, ſhew us the Father, and it ſufficeth us.]

9. I tell thee again, Philip, I am the image of my Father, and ſo he that hath ſeen me, and heard my doctrine, hath ſeen my Father, and knows his will alſo. And after this, this of thine is an impertinent unneceſſary demand.

9. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Have I been ſo long time with you, and yet haſt thou not known me, [Philip? He that hath ſeen me, hath ſeen the Father, and how ſayeſt thou then, Shew us the Father?]

10. Let me ask you, do you not believe confidently, that whatſoever I do or teach I do by the Fathers, appointment, and that it is the power of him that acts in me? whatſoever I ſay or do, doctrine, or miracles, is of him; ſee note c.

17. Even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him, † for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.]

17. This Paraclete is the Spirit of my Father, that shall lead you into all truth, Him carnall and worldly men (that value nothing but the visible pomps and powers of the world, they that have looked for a temporall glorious Messias,) shall make nothing of, because he is farre from any part of that, he is not so much as visible to outward eyes, but only by inward effects, and so neither known nor valued by them. But by you, I suppose, and all true disciples of mine he is highly valued, therefore (see note on Lu. 7. d.) he shall abide with (not only come to) you, he shall forever continue among you, v. 16.

19. Yet a little while and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: † because I live, ye shall live also.]

19. After a little space I shall be taken from this earth, where now I move, and so taken, that the impenitent unbelieving Jewes shall never see more of my miracles, which have hitherto been so uneffectuall among them, never see me again, (so as to take comfort or reap benefit by seeing me) but it is not my death it self that shall separate me from you, I shall rise from death, and appeare to you after my resurrection, and from thence ascend to heaven there to live eternally; and as that shall be matter of great rejoycing to you (see note on 1 Thess. 3. 6.) like the joy of one that hath a friend returned to life again, or like the womans joy after child-birth ch. 16. 21, 22. a wonderfull reviving after your sorrow for my departure, so shall it be attended with all vitall advantages to you, justification Rom. 5. 10. and eternall life hereafter.

20. At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, [c] and I in you.]

20. And when I shall after my death thus appear unto you, and make good what I now promise, then shall ye be convinced (more perfectly then yet ye have been) 1. that I have taught nothing but what is the will of my Father, 2. that by your keeping close to that faith which I have taught you, my power and commission, which I have received from my Father, shall be communicated to you, Lu. 22. 28. c.

21. He that hath my commandements, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me, shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest my self to him.]

21. And this I say to all obedient servants of mine, whosoever they are, not only to you Apostles; Every faithfull lover of me v. 15. shall be loved of my Father, and from me receive that evidence of my love, I will effectually make my self known to him after my resurrection, either by appearing to him my self, or by the testimony of those, to whom I will appear.

23. Jesus answered and said unto him, If any man love me, he will [*] keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.]

24. He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings, and the word which you hear, is not mine, but the Fathers which sent me.]

Be not either troubled with grief (see c. 11. a.) that I must be taken from you, nor feare what shall befall your selves.

28. Ye have heard how I said unto you, I goe away, and come again unto you: If ye loved me, ye would rejoyce, because I said, I go unto the Father: for my Father is greater then I.]

28. I told you v. 19. that I am to go away, and after a few dayes return to you again (see note on Act. 15. c.) and then return to my Father from whom I came. If ye were kind to me, ye would have looked upon it with joy, as on a means of dignifying me, for he that sent is, as such, greater then I who am sent by him, And so my returning to my Father must needs be the advancing me to an higher condition, then that which now I am in.

29. And now I have told you, before it comes to passe, that when it is come to passe, you might believe.]

29. I have not told you all this to afflict you, but to arm you for the expectation of it, by foretelling it, and withall that your seeing my prediction fulfilled, may convince you, that all which I have said to you is true, and so make you believe on me.

30, 31. I shall not now stay long or say much to you, for the Imperiall power (of the Romans, whose Procurator Pilate was) and Satan cometh, and can find nothing in me, for the antient Greek and Latine MS. reads οὐκ ἔχει εὑρεῖν εὑρήν himself himself shall joyne together with the Jewes to destroy me, and when they doe so, shall find nothing to lay to my charge, nor indeed have they power to doe me any hurt, Satan, whose office it is to be Gods executioner on sinners, finds no sinne in me, so to punish, and so could not put me to death, but that in obedience to my Fathers will, I mean voluntarily to lay down my life. Arise from table, let us be gone, meet whatever comes, and, to shew you how willing I am to lay down my life, let us goe to the place where Judas waits to betray me, ch. 18.3.

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

a. Ἀγαπᾶν

V. 15. Love] The notion of loving God in Scripture, but especially in the New Testament, seems most fitly to be taken from one most eminent act, and expression of love amongst all men, viz. that of doing those things which are esteemed most gratefull and acceptable to the beloved, either as tending most to his good, or any other way most desirable to him. For this indeed is the one expression of loving one another, all other being effects of love to our selves. But because God wants no contributions of ours to the advancing of his good or (indeed) of his glory, and our onely way of doing gratefull things to him is our performing what he commands, therefore it is consequent, that our obedience to the will, or commands of God in the highest and most perfect manner, is styled the loving of him, being indeed the prime, if not only way of demonstrating our love to him. So here, If ye love me, keep my commandements, if ye are so affected to me, as to desire to gratefy me, obedience to all my precepts is the way of doing it. So v. 21. He that hath my commandements and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me &c. and I will love him, and (as the most gratefull thing to him, that can be done from one lover to another) I will shew my self to him. So v. 23. If any man love me, he will keep my word, & my father shall love him, and we will (as the most gratefull obliging thing again) come to him, and make our abode with him, and so v. 24. & 1 Joh. 2. 5. He that keeps my word, in him is the love of God made perfect, and ch. 5.3. this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments. And so saith Christ, ye are my friends if ye doe whatsoever I command you. From whence it is, that, as in some places compared together, love is equivalent, or parallel, to keeping the commandments of God, as *Exod.*20.5. *Deut.*5.9. & Gal. 5.6. compared with 1 Cor. 7. 19. (and disobedience to *enmity Rom.*8.7. *Jam.*4.4.) so the whole condition available to our acceptation with God, and salvation, is oft expres's'd by this style of Love. And because those duties that are to be perform'd to God immediatly, are most acceptable, and gratefull to him, but especially that of confessing him, and, in despight of dangers, and death it self, keeping close to him, therefore that is many times expres's'd by loving of Christ, 1 Cor. 8.3. & 16. 22. *Ephes.*6. 24. Ja. 1. 12. *Revel.*2.4. Another notion there is of the love of God, a desire of union, and neer conjunction with him, but this but seldome look'd on in the Scriptures.

b. Παράκλητος

V. 16. Comforter] The word Paraclete in the Greek comes from a word of a large, and so ambiguous signification; and consequently may be rendred advocate, exhorter, or comforter, and every one of these doe fitly accord to the offices of the Holy Ghost among the Apostles (on whom he was to descend) and ever since in the Church, and therefore ought not to be so rendred by any one of these, as to exclude the others, but to be left in the latitude of the signification, which belongs to the Greek word: Yet the truth is, one notion there is of the word, which seems to be especially referr'd to, both here, when he is called Paraclete, and c. 16. 8. as shall there appear, and that is the first notion, that of an advocate or interlocutor, an advocate of the Christian's cause with God, *Rom.*8.26. and so also with men, teaching the Apostles what they shall say, when they are brought before Kings, &c. Mat. 10. 20. and an advocate, or actor of Christs cause against the world of unbelievers, and crucifiers, Joh. 15.26. and efficaciously convincing the adversaries, *Joh.*16.8. and this is the notion of the word retained among the Talmudists, who continue the Greek word without the termination, and set it in opposition to קטנור קלגוסף an accuser. And proportionably to what is here said of παράκλησις, must, I suppose, be resolved of παράκλησις τῆς ἁγίας πνεύματος, *Act.*9.31. not that it be restrained to note comfort particularly, but be taken in the latitude, for the whole work of the ministery, to which the Apostles were set apart, and consecrated, and enabled by the Holy Ghosts coming down upon them, and so indeed the word is generally used in the Acts, to denote the preaching of the word, speaking to the people, as the Apostles did in the synagogues, or elsewhere, to tell them their duty of all kinds. So *Act.*11. 23. παρεκάλει πάντας, the summe of his speech or sermon to them all was, that they should cleave unto the Lord. So Act. 14. 2. παρακαλοῦντες ἐμμένειν τῇ πίστει, preaching to, or interceding with, them to abide in the faith, and 15.32. διὰ λόγου πολλοῦ παρεκάλεσε, and λόγῳ πολλῷ c.22. with much speech they exhorted, or taught, or preach'd to the brethren. So ch. 16. 40. παρεκάλεσε αὐτοὺς, they preach'd to, or exhorted them. So λόγος παρακλήσεως *Act.*13.15. a word of exhortation, according to their custome of saying something seasonably to the people at their publick assemblies, after their reading of the Law, &c. So *Act.*15.31. the whole message of the Synod at Jerusalem, and their decision of the controversie, is called παράκλησις exhortation.

Παράκλησις τῆς ἁγίας πνεύματος

Παρακαλεῖν

Λόγος παρακλήσεως

c. Καγὼ

V. 20. And I in you] The word κἀγὼ in this writer especially, hath oft a peculiar elegancy in it, and is not fully understood, but by adding the word So in the rendring of it, so also I, and then it hath an influence on the former part of the period, and makes that the first part of a similitude or comparison, as it is it self the ἀνταπόδοσις or second. Thus it is oft in other places, see c.6.56. ἐν ἐμοὶ μένει, κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ, as he remaineth in me, so also I in him. So ὁ μένων ἐν ἐμοὶ κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ 1 *Jo.*4.15. ὁ Θεὸς ἐν αὐτῷ μένει, κὰγὼ ἐν τῷ Θεῷ, as God abides in him, so he also in God, and again v.16. and here in this verse, where two parts (not three) of conviction seem to be set down, as the effects of Christs resurrection, &c. 1. They shall know that Christ is in his Father, that is, that he came truly with Comm ssion from him, and hath kept close to the discharge of it, varied not from it in the least, That that is the meaning of being in his Father may appear by the use of it again c.17. 21. that they all may be one as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that is that they may agree in the same doctrine, as my Father and I agree perfectly in the same, I teaching what is his will should be taught, and nothing else. But more evidently here v.10. Dost thou not believe that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? i. e. whatsoever I doe or teach is the power of God, and the doctrine of God in me, as it follows, the words which I speak are not from my self, but the Father that abideth in me, he doth the works, v. 10. & v.11. to the same purpose, that the miracles, which he doth, he doth from God, and that is a proof that his doctrine is the doctrine of God. This the Fathers raising him from the dead, and taking him up to heaven will convince them of, see c. 16.10. where his going to the Father is mentioned as a means to convince them of righteousnesse, i. e. both that he was a righteous person, and that he taught them the true way of righteousnesse. 2ly, They shall know that Christ continues in them, communicates and derives his power to them, that he hath not forsaken them, v. 18. as by his death they were apt to suspect he did, but are convinced of the contrary by his resurrection, 1. by his appearing to them, 2ly, by his going to heaven, only (as he saith) to prepare a place for them, and then to come meet and conduct them thither v. 3. and 3ly, by his sending his Spirit to them to fit them to be his successors on earth, which is the principall thing in this chapter. Now their obedience, and the sincerity thereof to him, is not any third principal thing, that they were thus to be convinced of by this miracle of Christs resurrection, being a thing which if it were in them, they might possibly know without Gods working miracles to testifie it, and again their knowing of this would be an effect, or consequent of those former convictions, & not a principal branch antecedent (as in the order of the words it lies) to the latter of them. That therefore which the mention of ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοὶ ye in me seems to point at in this place, is only this, that whereas the world should never see Christ again, so they that remained in him, his faithfull and obedient disciples, (upon which the whole promise of the Paraclete is built in this chapter v. 15.) should partake of the blessing and fruits of his appearance, and of the Paraclete, and that as they had continued faithful to him, he in like manner would be sure to perform his promise to them, make them his successors in his power in the Church, and preachers of the same doctrine which he had taught from his Father. And so that is the plain meaning of these words, ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοὶ, κἀγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν, as you are in me, so I in you, which was the only second thing they needed to be convinced of. Though by the way, I say, as this was the rewarding of their obedience and fidelity to him, so also would it be a testimony from God of the sincerity of it, which he was pleased thus to accept and reward. That this is the right interpretation of this verse appears by the next verse 21. where he that loves Christ and keeps his commandments, that is, that is in Christ here, is the subject, to whom the promise is made of Christs manifesting himself unto him, which hath appeared to be the importance of κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ, and I in him. By which it appears that the fidelity to Christ is the qualification or condition required in the subject, to make a man capable of the manifestation of Christ to him, which would not be afforded to any others. And the same is the importance of v. 23.

CHAP. XV.

Paraphrase.

1. I Am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman.]

1. And as he was going on the way, he said to those that were neer him, John, &c. I am the true (see ch. 6. f.) generous fruit-bearing vine Jer. 2. 21. my blood as the blood of the grape shall rejoyce the heart of God and man, Jud. 9. 12. And my Father who hath thus planted me in this world here below, hath the whole ordering of all that belongs to me, and every branch, every believer, every member of my mysticall body.

2. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he * purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.]

2. Every barren member of my body, (every unprofitable disciple or Christian) he proceeds to excision of; Every one that is fruitfull, he diligently pruneth, and useth all other probable means to render it more fruitfull.

* Will purge, the antient Gr. & Lat. MS. reads καθαιρεῖ.

3. † Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.]

3. You are already sanctified by the operation of my doctrine and spirit upon you, though you may need farther pruning, in order to that greater degree of fruitfulnesse, v. 2.

† You are already pure because of the word, Ἤδη ὑμεῖς καθαροί ἐστε διὰ τὸν λόγον

4. Abide in me and I in you: As the branch cannot bear fruit of it self, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.]

4. Doe ye therefore take care by your obedience and constancy, that I may be so fastned in your hearts, that I may never be out of them, or be provoked to withdraw my self from you, For this presence of mine is absolutely necessary to you, to make you fruitfull; As a branch cut off from the vine withers presently, is farre from bringing forth any fruit, so he that falls off, or is, by my Fathers just judgment on him, broken off from me, deprived of that grace, which, as juyce, is distributed to all the branches, as long as they are in the body, can never bring forth any good.

5. I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can doe nothing.]

5. He that adheres and keeps fast to me, and consequently I to him, he by the grace communicated from me to him, will be enabled to bring forth much fruit, he and none but he.

6. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered, and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.]

6. If ye break off from me, and are by your selves as branches separated from me, into whom you are ingraffed by faith and obedience, ye straight wither away, and are fit for nothing but the fire.

7. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.]

7. As long as you continue obedient to me and my doctrine, all your prayers shall be heard.

8. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, * so shall ye be my disciples.]

* And ye shall be

8. Your fruitfulnesse is that which alone brings in glory to my Father, and which denominates you truly my disciples.

9. As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love.]

9. My love to you is like that of my Father to me, and that must oblige you to take care to doe those things which are gratefull to me, that I may continue to love you.

10. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Fathers commandments, and abide in his love.]

10. And that will be secured by your constant obedience to my commands, as my obedience to my Fathers commandments hath secured me of the continuance of his love.

11. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.]

11. These things have I largely said to you, that the comfort you have taken in my presence, may in my absence continue to you, and by the addition of that comfort of the Spirit, which shall come when I am gone, your joy may abound.

12. This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13. Greater love hath no man then this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.]

13. No man can expresse greater love to his dearest friends then to adventure to die for them.

14. Ye are my friends, if ye doe whatsoever I command you.]

14. And that I mean to do for you, and the benefit of that greatest kindnesse shall accrue to you, as to my choisest friends, if ye continue obedient to my doctrine and commands.

15. And certainly I have long dealt with you as friends, farre above the condition of ſervants, who uſe not to know their maſters intentions, or counſels, or purpoſes, but onely to doe his commands, but I have received you as friends, and confidents into my boſome, to make known all my Fathers will unto you.

15. Henceforth I call you not ſervants, for the ſervant knoweth not what his Lord doth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you.]

16. And this I have done toward you by way of prevention, out of free undeſerved kindneſſe to you, and of my own accord, put you in this bleſſed courſe, enabled you to fructifie, and bring forth abundance of fruit, to the honour and praiſe of God, appointed you to goe abroad into all the world, and bring in an harveſt of converts to heaven, which is a reall and a durable fruit, and that which ſhall be advantageous to you alſo, devolve on you the benefit of having all your prayers heard by God, all your wants ſupplied by him, which you ſhall preſent to him in my name.

16. Ye have not choſen me, but I have choſen you and ordained you, that ye ſhould goe and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit ſhould remain: that whatſoever ye ſhall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.]

17. All this concerning my love to you I inculcate and repeat on purpoſe, as an obligation to you, that (as the moſt eminent way of return which I expect from you to all this) you live in charity one toward another.

17. Theſe things I command you, that ye love one another.]

18. And if ye find by experience, that impious, and hypocriticall worldlings doe in ſtead of believing, reſiſt and perſecute you, there is no reaſon that this ſhould give you any diſcouragement, you are to expect that, and arm your ſelves againſt it by this conſideration, that ſuch as theſe perſecuted me before you, and ſo as I began in love to you, ſo I have had the firſt taſte of the enmity, and hatred of the wicked men of this world.

18. If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.]

19. Theſe mens oppoſing and hating you will be a comfortable ſymptome to you, that you are a peculiar people of mine, dignified above, and ſeparated from the reſt of men.

19. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but becauſe ye are not of the world, but I have choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.]

20. And that you are likely to meet with ſuch entertainment need not be ſtrange to you, when you remember how oft I have foretold you of it, that you could not in reaſon expect any better treating, then I have met with before you: If they have perſecuted me, in all probability they will perſecute you alſo, and on the other ſide, you have no more reaſon to expect of the world, that it ſhould receive your preaching, then that it ſhould receive mine.

20. Remember the word that I ſaid unto you, The ſervant is not greater then the Lord: If they have perſecuted me, they will alſo perſecute you; If they have a. †[a] kept my ſaying, they will keep yours alſo.] † Obſerved.

21. All the perſecutions that ſhall fall on you being upon the ſcore of their not believing that God hath ſent me.

21. But all theſe things will they doe unto you for my names ſake, becauſe they know not him that ſent me.]

22. If I had not done what I have among them, they might have had the excuſe of ignorance, but now they are utterly without excuſe.

22. If I had not come, and ſpoken unto them, they had not had ſinne: but now they have no * cloke for their ſinne.] * Pretence, πρόφασιν

23. I have done ſo much to evidence my being ſent from God, that now the oppoſing me is a malitious reſiſting of my Father himſelf.

23. He that hateth me, hateth my Father alſo.]

See v. 22, 23.

24. If I had not done among them the works which none other man * did, they had not had ſinne: but now have they both ſeen and hated both me and my Father. * Hath done, they ſhould have no ſin, πεποίηκεν, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχον

25. By this is fulfilled that of the Pſalmiſt Pſal. 35. 19. they have oppoſed me, when they had all reaſon to have received and loved me.

25. † But this cometh to paſſe, that the word might be fulfilled, which is written b. in their law, They hated me [b] without a cauſe.] † But that the word written in their law might be fulfilled, they have ἀλλ' ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ αὐτῶν γεγραμμένος

26, 27. But at the coming of the Holy Ghoſt, that pleader or advocate of my cauſe (ſee note on c. 14. b.) whom I will ſend from the Father, that Spirit, which proceedeth from the Father, and who by his coming will open mens eyes, and give them a right underſtanding of me, he ſhall maintain my cauſe againſt all oppoſers, by coming down on you ſhall give you aſſurance of my being ſent from God, and by the gift of tongues ſhall enable you to convince all others, and ſhall conſtitute you witneſſes of it to all, as being the fitteſt to doe ſo by your having been eye-witneſſes of all that I have done, having been with me at the firſt, and never departed from me ſince.

26. But when the * Comforter is come, whom I will ſend unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he ſhall teſtifie of me.

27. And ye alſo ſhall bear witneſſe, becauſe ye have been with me from the beginning.] * Paraclete ſhall come, ἐλθῇ ὁ παράκλητος Annotations on Chap. XV.

a. Τηρεῖν

V. 20. Kept] The joyning of οἱ ἐτήρησε here with οἱ ἐδίωξαν makes it ſeem a little probable that τηρεῖν ſhould be here taken in an ill ſenſe, for an inſidious obſerving or treacherous watching of Chriſts words, as τηρῶν and παρατηρῶν are ſometimes uſed (ſee *Lu.*20. 26.) and ſo alſo the Hebrew שמר (Pſal. 56. 7. they obſerve, that is, watch, my ſteps, when they lay wait for my ſoul,) and Job 7. 20. נצר, when God is ſaid to be the obſerver of men. But the uſe of this phraſe τηρῶν λόγους in the New Teſtament, eſpecially in the writings of S. John, ch. 8. 55. ch. 14. 23, 24. ch. 17. 6. 1 Joh. 2. 5. Rev. 3. 8. and 10. ch. 22. 7, 9. and that with ἐντολὰς, commands in ſtead of λόγους words very often (and particularly in this Chapter v. 10. twice,) will be ſufficient reaſon to reject this rendring, and to read it literally, If they have kept my word, they will alſo keep your word, that is, obey and obſerve it, making their not obſerving the word of Chriſt an argument that they will not obſerve the Apoſtles neither; or, that by this experiment of their dealing with Chriſt they may learn what kind of dealing or entertainment is to be looked for from the world for the diſciples of Chriſt, agreeable perfectly to what was before ſaid of the worlds perſecuting them alſo.

b. Δωρεὰν

V. 25. Without a cauſe] The Greek Δωρεὰν which properly ſignifies gratis, without any hire, freely, without intuition of wages, and is ſo taken Mat. 10. 8. Rom. 3. 24. 2 Cor. 11. 7. Apoc. 21. 6. 22. 17. is here and Gal. 2. 21. taken for without a cauſe whether Impellent (as here, they hated me without any motive, or impulſive, to hatred on my part offered to them) or Final, as in the Galat. Then did Chriſt die in vain, or to no purpoſe. The reaſon of theſe various acceptions of the word beyond its native extent, is to be fetch'd from the like uſe of the Hebrew חנם, which ſignifies both theſe, and proportionably the Greek, though naturally it doe not extend to theſe. is, according to the cuſtome of theſe writers, uſed in the ſame largeneſſe as the Hebrew is.

Paraphraſe.

* ſcandalized. Σκανδαλισθῆτε

1. THeſe things have I ſpoken unto you, that ye ſhould not be * offended.]

1. All this have I ſaid to fortifie you, that you ſhould not be deterred from my ſervice by the hazards which attend it.

†ſhall ſeem to ſignifie. * Offer God an oblation, or worſhip, λάτρειαν προσφέρειν τῷ Θεῷ.

2. They ſhall put you out of the ſynagogues, yea, the time cometh, that whoſoever killeth you † will think that he * doth God ſervice.]

2. They ſhall remove you from their aſſemblies (c.9.b.) and when they have done ſo, within a while, they ſhall think it not onely lawfull, but acceptable to God (and of the nature of a ſacrifice, which propitiates for other offences) to put you to death.

3. And theſe things will they doe unto you, becauſe they have not known the Father, or me.]

3. And the ground of their doing ſo, is the great impiety of their hearts (ſee c.6. note d.) their not liking either the old commands of my Father, or thoſe which I now bring from him.

‖But I ſpake not theſe things to you from the beginning, ὅτι ταῦτα πρὸς ὑμᾶς οὐκ εἶπον ἐξ ἀρχῆς.

4. But theſe things have I told you, that when the time ſhall come, you may remember that I told you of them. [And ‖ theſe things I ſaid not unto you at the beginning, becauſe I was with you.]

4. Till this time that I am ready to depart from you, I did not think fit to ſay this to you, becauſe whilſt I was here, all the malice of men bent it ſelf wholly againſt me, letting you alone.

5. But now I goe my way to him that ſent me, and none of you asketh me, Whither goeſt thou?

5, 6. But now as you come to be uppermoſt in this employment of revealing my Fathers will, the oppoſition will light on you. This departure of mine fills you with ſadneſſe, and you are ſo intent upon the ſad thought of it, that you doe not ask one queſtion about the end of my journey, or about the benefit that may redound to you by it, and ſhall certainly doe ſo.

6. But becauſe I have ſaid theſe things to you, ſorrow hath filled your heart.]

7. Nevertheleſſe I tell you the truth, It is expedient for you that I goe away: for if I goe not away, the a * Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will ſend him unto you.]

* Paraclete, παράκλητος

7. For let me tell you, the holy Ghoſt is not to come till after my departing, and his coming ſhall be of more advantage to you, then my ſtaying would be.

† And he, when he comes ſhall convince the world concerning ſinne, and concerning righteouſneſſe, and concerning judgment.

8. † And when he is come, he will reprove the world of ſinne, and of righteouſneſſe, and of judgement.

9. Of ſinne, becauſe they believe not on me.

10. Of righteouſneſſe, becauſe I goe to my Father, and ye ſee me no more.

11. Of judgment, becauſe the Prince of this world is judged.]

8, 9, 10 11. And when he comes, he will plead my cauſe againſt the world, and lay againſt it all the three ſorts of actions that are amongſt the Jewes uſuall in their courts,

1. He ſhall charge it with the crime of not believing in me, by the gift of tongues, &c. evidencing, that I, that am to be preached by that means, am indeed the true Meſſias, and ſo likewiſe by the fulfilling thoſe predictions which now I give you. 2dly, He ſhall vindicate and juſtifie my miſſion, and innocence, by my aſcenſion to heaven, taking me away out of the reach of humane malice, and rewarding my patience with his conſolations. 3dly, He ſhall urge and work revenge upon Satan and his inſtruments who crucified me, and retaliate deſtruction back upon them.

12. I have yet many things to ſay unto you, but you cannot bear them now.]

12. Beſide all that I have yet ſaid, I have many things concerning the Chriſtian law to reveal to you, which being ſo diſtant from the law of the Jewes, wherein ye have been brought up, and for which you are ſo zealous, ye cannot yet receive or be patient of them, (ſee Orig. cont. Celſ. l.2.)

* But if

13. * Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he ſhall not ſpeak of himſelf, but whatſoever he ſhall hear, that ſhall he ſpeak: and he will ſhew you things to come.]

13. But when the Holy Ghoſt comes, whoſe title it is to be the Spirit of truth, he ſhall inſtruct you what is to be done, teach you the full of my Fathers will for the laying aſide of the ceremoniall externall law of the Jewes, freeing all Chriſtians from that yoke, &c. For it ſhall be no private doctrine of his own, which he ſhall reveal to you, but either that which I have already taught, but you have either not obſerved or forgotten, or that which you are not yet, but afterwards to doe (how you are to behave your ſelves in the buſineſſe of the Jewes and Gentiles, when the Jewes finally reject the Goſpel, &c.) and which I have not yet revealed to you, as being not yet ſeaſonable.

† Receiveth, The ancient Gr. & Lat. MS. and moſt other read λαμβάνει.

14. He ſhall glorifie me, for he † ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you]

14. What he doth ſhall tend to the illuſtrating of me. For he being ſent from my Father by me, ſhall in all things accord with me, and thereby appear to have his meſſage from me, and to declare nothing to you, but what he hath from me.

15. All things that the Father hath are mine, therefore ſaid I, that he ſhall take of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you.]

15. And when I ſay this, I mean not ſo to appropriate to my ſelf, as to exclude my Father, but becauſe all things are common to me and my Father, and becauſe all my will depends on the Father, and becauſe 'tis my work wholly to attend the will of my Father, therefore whatſoever of this nature he ſhall reveal to you, I call that mine, and the revealing of this, his taking of mine and declaring to you.

* Ye ſee me not, ὐ θεωρεῖτε με

16. A little while and * ye ſhall not ſee me, and again a little while and ye ſhall ſee me, becauſe I goe to the Father.]

16. Within a while I ſhall for a time be taken from you, then again within a little while after that I ſhall be with you again before my aſcenſion, for it is not poſſible for me to be held by death, I muſt ariſe and goe to my Father.

17. Then ſaid ſome of his diſciples among themſelves, What is this that he ſaith unto us, A little while, and ye ſhall not ſee me; and again a little while, and ye ſhall ſee me; and, † Becauſe I goe to my Father?

† I go to him. ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα.

18. They ſaid therefore, What is it that he ſaith, A little while? we cannot tell what he ſaith.

19. Now Jeſus knew that they were deſirous to ask him, and ſaid unto them, Doe ye [enquire] among your ſelves of that I ſaid, A little while and ye ſhall not ſee me; and again a little while, and ye ſhall ſee me?

See v.23, and 30.

20. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, that [ye ſhall weep and lament, but the world ſhall rejoyce; and ye ſhall be ſorrowfull, but your ſorrow ſhall be turned into joy.]

20. You ſhall have a time of mourning, and the world of joy, but your ſadneſſe ſhall be ſoon turned to rejoycing, and theirs ere long into heavineſſe.

21, 22. Your ſorrow at my death ſhall be like the womans pangs of travaile, but when it ſhall appear to you that my death doth but uſher in my reſurrection and aſcenſion, as the pangs of travaile doe the birth of a manchild, then your ſorrow ſhall vaniſh in the preſence of this joy, which ſhall be a durable joy.

21. A woman when ſhe is in travaile hath ſorrow, becauſe her hour is come: but as ſoon as ſhe is delivered of her child, ſhe remembreth no more the anguiſh, for joy that a man is born into the world.

b. 23, 24. When that Spirit is come, he ſhall have taught you all things, ſatisfied all your doubts and ignorances, that you ſhall not need ask me any more queſtions. After my departing you ſhall uſe a new form in your prayers to God which as yet you have not uſed, make your requeſts to him in my name, upon that ſcore of your being my diſciples, and my giving you this authority, and whatever tends to the fulfilling of your joy, to your reall good, ſhall be granted to you.

23. And [b] in that day ye ſhall ask me nothing: Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, whatſoever ye ſhall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

24. Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my name; ask and ye ſhall receive, that your joy may be * full.] * Fulfilled, πεπληρωμένη

25. My diſcourſe to you hitherto may have had ſome darkneſſes in it, which I deſign'd on purpoſe, but the Holy Ghoſt ſhall ſet all before you plainly (ſee note on c. 7. a.) according as 'tis my Fathers pleaſure to have things ordered in the Church, ſee v. 13.

25. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you in proverbs: the time cometh when I ſhall no more ſpeak unto you in proverbs, but I ſhall ſhew you plainly of the Father.]

26, 27. And one benefit that by my aſcenſion and the deſcent of the Spirit ſhall come to you, is, that you ſhall not need my offering up your prayers for you, but you may in my name offer them up to God your ſelves, and God, out of his love and reſpect to thoſe that believe on me, and receive me as the ſon of God ſent from heaven to declare his will to you, ſhall grant all that you ſhall ask.

26. In that day ye ſhall ask in my name: and I ſay not unto you that I will pray the Father for you.

27. For the Father himſelf loveth you, becauſe ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God.]

28. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again I leave the world, and goe to the Father.

See note on c. 7. a.

29. His diſciples ſaid unto him, Lo, now ſpeakeſt thou [plainly] and ſpeakeſt no proverb.

30. Now we diſcern that as thou knoweſt all things, ſo thou art pleaſed to reveale all ſaving truth evidently to us, of thine own accord, This convinces us that God ſent thee, and that thou cameſt to reveale his will.

30. Now are we ſure that thou knoweſt all things, and needeſt not that any man ſhould ask thee: by this we believe that thou cameſt forth from God.]

31. You ſpeak a little confidently of your belief now, at a diſtance from danger.

31. Jeſus anſwered them, [Doe ye now believe?]

32. But the time is now at hand, that ye ſhall flie from me to your homes every one of you, and ſo though ye believe on me, ye will not yet confeſſe me, but forſake me, and, as much as in you is, leave me alone: But although ye forſake me, my Father will not, he will continue cloſe to me, and acknowledge me even in death it ſelf, yea and raiſe me up from death.

32. Behold, the hour cometh, yea is now come, that ye ſhall be ſcattered every man to his own, and ſhall leave me alone; and yet I am not alone, becauſe the Father is with me.]

33. This I have foretold you, that you may depend on me for all kind of proſperity, and, by conſideration of my conqueſt over all that is formidable in the world, take courage, and hold out againſt all the terrors and threats of the world, and the ſufferings in it.

33. Theſe things I have ſpoken unto you, that in me ye * might have peace. In the world ye ſhall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.] * may have, ἵνα ἔχητε

Annotations on Chap. XVI.

2. Παράκλητος

V. 7. Comforter] What is meant by the word Paraclete here attributed to the Holy Ghoſt, hath been mention'd, Note on c. 14. 16. and will more fully be diſcernible by this place. For of the Paraclete, taken in the notion of an advocate, or actor, this is the office, to convince the κατήγορον or accuſer, or, as it is Tit. 1. 9. ἐλέγχειν ἀντιλέγοντας, to juſtifie the cauſe againſt all gain ſayers, to convince them, or to convince others, that they have complain'd or acted unjuſtly. So that all that here follows, muſt in any reaſon ſo be interpreted, as ſhall agree with the cuſtomes of pleading cauſes among the Jewes. Now there were 3 ſorts of cauſes or actions among the Jewes, 1. publick judgments, περὶ ἁμαρτίας, לחטא, that is, concerning criminall matters, and thoſe conſiſted in the condemnation and puniſhing of offenders againſt God, falſe prophets, &c. 2^dly, in the defending of the juſt or upright, againſt all oppreſſion, or invaſion, or falſe teſtimony, and that is called לצדקה, concerning juſtice, or equity or righteouſneſſe, περὶ δικαιοσύνης; the 3^d in pleading againſt any for treſpaſſe againſt his neighbour, as in robbery &c. and urging the law of Retaliation, to ſuffer as he hath done, and this is called למשפט, περὶ κρίσεως concerning judgment. In every one of theſe was the Holy Ghoſt at his coming to be the advocate for Chriſt againſt the world, who had rejected and crucified him; One action he ſhould put in againſt the world of the firſt kind, לחטא, περὶ ἁμαρτίας, concerning that queſtion whether Chriſt were guilty of being a falſe prophet, or they of not believing a true prophet, the Meſſias of the world, and ſhould demonſtrate or prove them guilty of a great crime, viz. of not believing the Meſſias, and that ſhould be managed thus, There are rules ſet down, Deut. 18. 22. to diſcern and diſtinguiſh a falſe prophet from a true, and particularly to diſcern the Chriſt or Meſſias, v. 18. viz. if undertaking to be the Meſſias, and to prove that by foretelling things, which were not in the power of the devil to work or to foretell, all the things which he foretold came to paſſe. Now one of the things foretold by Chriſt, was, that the Spirit or Paraclete ſhould come, Which being fulfilled by his coming, and his coming from God, and not from the devil, but deſtructive to his kingdome, this would be a convincing argument, that he was a true prophet, and ſo the Meſſias, which he affirmed himſelf to be, and ſo that they were guilty of a great ſinne, in not believing on him, of a greater in crucifying him, and therefore that they ought to expect that puniſhment of exciſion, Deut. 18. 19. which after, within a while, did accordingly befall that nation. A ſecond action which the Holy Ghoſt did put in for Chriſt againſt the world, was to vindicate his innocence, though he had ſuffered among them as a malefactor, and his way of managing that was, by giving them aſſurance, and convincing them, that he which was thus condemned and crucified by them, was by God taken up into heaven, (as a clear teſtimony of his innocence) to partake of his own glory there. The third action was that of judgment (or of puniſhing injurious perſons by way of Retaliation) againſt Satan, the cauſe, and author of the death of Chriſt, who put it into Judas's heart, and the chief Prieſts and Phariſees, the former to deliver up, the latter to put him to death: And by the coming of the Holy Ghoſt, and preaching of the word thorough the world, and ſo the ſpreading of Chriſtianity among the Gentiles (which was an effect of this coming, and office of the Holy Ghoſt,) this work of Retaliation was wrought moſt diſcernibly on Satan, or the Prince of this world; he put Chriſt to death, and he himſelf is ſlain, (as it were) his kingdome deſtroyed, his idols, Oracles, abominable ſins, (whereby he reigned every where among the Gentiles in the heathen world) were remarkeably deſtroyed by this coming of the Holy Ghoſt, and to the world, and the Prince thereof judged, ſentenced, and condemned judicio talionis, to ſuffer from Chriſt, as he had dealt with him, and that was the convincing the world περὶ κρίσεως, concerning judgment. This ſeems to be the meaning of this very difficult place, to the underſtanding of which I acknowledge to have received light from the learned Hugo Grotius in his Annotations on the Goſpels, and from Val. Schindler in his Pentaglott. in the word צדקה p. 1521. C.

V. 23. In that day] Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, In that day here, may poſſibly be miſtaken, by aſſigning too reſtrained a ſenſe to it. For if it be applied to that part only of the precedent verſe, But I will ſee you again, which notes the ſpace immediately following his Reſurrection (ſee c. 14. 19.) and antecedent to his Aſcenſion, it will not then be proper to affirm of that ſpace, that they ſhould ask him nothing; for it is evident that at that time of ſeeing him, they asked him many things (ſee Act. 1. 6.) But as this Reſurrection of Chriſt was attended with his Aſcenſion to heaven, and ſending the Paraclete; ſo it is moſt exactly true which here follows, In that day ye ſhall ask me nothing, that is, ſhall have no need of asking more queſtions, The Paraclete ſhall teach you all things. That this is the meaning of ἐρωτήσετε here, which is rendred asking, and not that other notion of asking for praying in the following words, may appear firſt by v. 19. where they being dubious and uncertain what he meant by, yet a little while, and ye ſhall not ſee me, &c. it is ſaid, Jeſus knew that they would ἐρωτᾶν αὐτὸν, ask him, that is, ask him the meaning of that ſpeech, and to that he here referres in the ſame word, In that day, when that courſe ſhall be taken for the inſtructing you ſo perfectly, ἐμὲ ἐρωτήσετε οὐδέν, ye ſhall ask me nothing. 2dly, By the changing of the word in the other part of this verſe, where it is ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε, whatſoever ye ſhall ask or begge, of the Father, &c. and not, as it is here, ἐρωτήσετε. In the ſame ſenſe muſt the phraſe ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, in that day be taken again ver. 26. that which is there ſaid, belonging not peculiarly to that time betwixt his Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, but to the ſtate of them, and all Chriſtians after Chriſts departure from them, to the right hand of his Father.

CHAP. XVII.

Paraphraſe.

1. THeſe words ſpake Jeſus, and lift up his eyes to heaven, and ſaid, Father, [the hour is come, glorifie thy ſon, that thy ſon alſo may glorifie thee.]

1. The time of my ſuffering is come, enable me to go thorough all that is now before me, ready to come upon me, and receive me up into thy glory, v. 5. that in the ſtrength of my reſurrection, the Goſpel may be received, and believed in, over the whole world.

2. As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternall life to as many as thou haſt given him.]

2. According as thou haſt given me power of ſentencing all men, condemning or abſolving them, which power is to be inſtated on me at my reſurrection, that I may give eternall life to all, whom thou haſt ſo given me, ſo inclined their hearts that they cordially and ſincerely come unto me; ſee note on c. 6. d.

3. And this is life eternall, that* they might know thee the only true God, and †Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent.]

*They know thee ἵνα γινώσκωσι σε † Whom thou haſt ſent, Jeſus Chriſt, ὃν ἀπέστειλας Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν.

3. And all that is required to make men partakers of this eternall life, is, beſide the knowledge of the Father, the onely true God, (together with obedience to his commands formerly revealed by him) the embracing Chriſt, and acknowledging his commiſſion from the Father, (and him as the onely true God alſo, 1 Joh. 5. 20.) and ſo receiving and obſerving all that is ſaid and commanded by him.

4. I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finiſhed the work which thou gaveſt me * to doe.]

* That I ſhould doe it, ἵνα ποιῶ.

4. I have teſtified and proclaimed thy will here in this world, and ſo glorified thee here, and have done all, which thou haſt appointed me to doe by way of office or miniſtery here.

5. And now, O Father, glorifie me with thine own ſelf, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.]

5. And doe thou now, O Father, deal with me proportionably, aſſume this paſſible, mortall, humane nature of mine, wherein I have ſerved thee, unto a participation of that honour and dignity and glory, which, before I took this nature on me, I enjoyed with thee before the foundation of the world, even from all eternity, ſee Phil. 2. 6, 9.

6. I have manifeſted thy name unto the men which thou gaveſt me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me, and they have kept thy word.]

6. I have made known thy will to thoſe peculiar diſciples, v. 18. whom thou wert pleaſed by thy grace to fit, and ſo to bring to me, to undertake my diſcipleſhip, and attend me in the neareſt relation, who being ſervants of thine, have received my word, and obeyed it as thine, (ſee note on c. 6. d.) and ſerved me in the publiſhing of it.

7. Now they have known that all things whatſoever thou haſt given me, are of thee.]

7. Theſe have cordially acknowledged that all that meſſage v. 4. on which I was ſent, was committed to me by thee.

8. For I have given unto them the words which thou gaveſt me, and they have received them, and have known ſurely, that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didſt ſend me.]

8. For that meſſage by thee committed to me, I have committed to them, and they have received it, as that which in my name they will communicate from thee to the world, being ſufficiently aſſured that my coming and preaching was all by commiſſion from thee.

9. I pray for them; I pray not for the world, but for them which thou haſt given me, for they are thine.

10. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine, and * I am glorified in them.]

* I have been glorified, δεδόξασμαι

9, 10. I now offer up a prayer peculiarly for them, which I know are moſt pretious in thy ſight (praying for all believers v. 20. and at other times, though not now, for his very Crucifyers) and that prayer for that, which for others I cannot pray, a prayer for their conſtancy (in perſecutions, v. 15.) and continuance in the faith, and union with me, v. 12. this I can ask only for believers, (for they only are capable of it) not for the world of impenitent unbelievers, (who will be ſure to deſpiſe and trample on, and perſecute them, v. 14.) for believers I ſay, and peculiarly for my diſciples, whom thou, by having given them to me in an eminent manner, muſt look on as thine own, and alſo reward them, for having received, and confeſs'd, and performed ſervice to me.

11. And this, becauſe now I am likely to leave them to hazards and perſecutions, and whilſt I am a leaving the world they tarry in it, Therefore, holy Father, I beſeech thee, take them into thy tuition, and protect them in the diſcharge of their Apoſtleſhip, which after my departure lies wholly on them, keep all my diſciples by thy power, (and by that declaration of thy will, which thou haſt afforded me, by the Goſpel, thy power unto ſalvation of all believers) from peril and defection, that they may live to teach and preach uniformly (all agreeing in the ſame) what I have taught them, in like manner as I have taught, (without any alteration) what I had from thee.

11. And now I am no more in the world, but theſe are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, [|| keep through thine own name thoſe whom thou haſt given me, that they may be one, as we are.]

|| keep them through thy name which thou haſt given to me, for the Kings MS and many antient copies read ἐδόθη, and ſo the Syriack, Euthymius, Theophylact, Cyril,

12. All this while of my continuing among them, I have laboured, by revealing thy will to them, to confirm them, and alſo to preſerve them from danger, and it hath ſucceeded well, of all thoſe whoſe hearts were by thy preventing grace ſo prepared, as that they came to me and undertook my ſervice (ſee note on c. 6. d.) none hath miſcarried or fallen off (ſee c. 18. 9. and here v. 15.) but only that wicked traytor propheſied of, Pſal. 109.

12. While I was with them in the world, I have kept them in thy name: thoſe that thou gaveſt me I have kept, and none of them is loſt, but the ſon of perdition; that the ſcripture might be fulfilled.]

CHAP. XVIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. WHen Jeſus had ſpoken theſe words, he went forth with his diſciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entred and his diſciples.

2. And Judas alſo which betrayed him, [knew the place:] for Jeſus oft times * reſorted thither with his diſciples.

Judas therefore furniſhing himſelf with a band of ſouldiers, and ſome of the miniſters of the Sanhedrim, cometh to that place with candles and lamps, many of both ſorts (which, though it were full moon, might yet be needfull, by reaſon of clouds) and withall, weapons, to apprehend, when they had found him.

4. Jeſus therefore knowing all things that * ſhould come upon him,] went forth, and ſaid unto them, Whom ſeek ye?

* were coming upon him, came out, τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἐπ' αὐτὸν.

4. Jeſus therefore knowing all that was done by them, and what was approaching to him,

11. Then ſaid Jeſus unto Peter, [Put up thy ſword into the ſheath: the cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it?]

19. The high prieſt then asked Jeſus of his diſciples, and of his doctrine.

23. Jeſus anſwered him, If I have ſpoken evil, bear witneſſe of the evil; but if well, why ſmiteſt thou me?

23. Jeſus anſwered him, If there were any ill in my ſpeech, accuſe me and prove it; but if there were no crime in me, why doſt thou ſtrike me?

24. Now Annas had ſent him bound unto Caiaphas the high prieſt.

29. Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring you against this man?

30. They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31. Then said Pilate unto them, [Take ye him and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, * [c] It is not lawful for us to put any man to death.]

32. Jesus had foretold that he should be lifted up or crucified, which was a Roman punishment, This prediction of his was now to be fulfilled, and to that tends the Jews saying, that the power of putting men to death was taken from them, and was onely in the power of the Roman Procurator.

33. Then Pilate entred into the judgement hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

34. Jesus answered him, [Sayest thou this thing of thy self, or did others tell it thee of me?]

34. Dost thou ask this question for thine own satisfaction, or as a crime laid to my charge by the Jews?

35. Pilate answered, [Am I a Jew? Thine own nation and the chief Priests have delivered thee unto me: What hast thou done?]

35. Can I know what the Jews out of their books and prophecies expect and promise themselves? The Jews have laid this to your charge, that you pretend to be their King, What have you done to give occasion to this charge?

36. Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.]

36. In answer to Pilat's question, v. 33. Jesus said, I pretend not to, nor aime at any earthly kingdom, If I did, I should engage my followers in a military manner to assist me as their King, and defend me from being delivered into the Jews power; but now by the contrary (as appears by the reproof of Peter ver. 11.) it appears that I do not pretend to any such earthly kingdom.

37. Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a King then? Jesus answered, [Thou sayest that I am a King. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witnesse unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.]

37. It is as thou sayest, I am a King, I was born in humane flesh to this end, namely to be a King, Luk. 1. 32. and for this cause came I into the world, (see note on c. 1. a) that I should testifie the truth of God, therefore I testifie this, and every servant of God is convinced of it, and accordingly receives and obeyes me.

38. Pilate saith unto him, [What is truth?] And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

38. What meanest thou by the truth?

39. But ye have a custome that I should [release unto you one] at the Passeover: will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

39. set one prisoner at liberty at your intreaty

40. Then cried they all again, saying, [Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

40. No by no means, but release to us Barabbas. This Barabbas was one that in an insurrection had been guilty of murther, Act. 3. 14. and was a robber also.

Annotations on Chap. XVIII.

a. φανὸς

V. 3. Lanthornes] The word φανὸς from φαίνω is used, saith Phavorinus, ὅτι ἡ λαμπάδι for a lamp, or light, but that, saith he, expressly μὴ ὅτι ἡ χαρπίνη, not for a lanthorn, but, as he goes on, (ὅπερ ἐστὶ λυχνοῦχον λέγω) any thing that hath a light on it, which being as 'tis there, contradistinct to the lanthorn, is a candle on a candlestick, or somewhat proportionable to that among the Jews, which we usually expresse by the word Lights, that is candles, &c. set out for use and service.

b. Περιτέμνων ἵνα μὴ μιανθῶσιν

V. 28. Left they should be defiled] The Prætors hall was full of Pilates Roman souldiers; now these being Gentiles, are in that condition, of which Maimonides saith, that they are to be accounted for such, as have a perpetual issue of blood upon them, whensoever any thing is to be done wherein the question of cleanness or uncleanness is considerable, As here in the eating the Passeover, of which no unclean person was to partake. So that by presence among the Gentiles this legal uncleanness is contracted, as much as by any thing. Hence is that of Act. 10. 28. Ἀθέμιτον ἀνδρὶ Ἰουδαίῳ κολλᾶσθαι ἢ προσέρχεσθαι ἀλλοφύλῳ, It is unlawful for a Jew to be joyned to, or converse with an heathen: so Act. 11. 3. Why didst thou go in to those that were uncircumcised, and didst eat with them? And Justin out of Trogus speaking of the Jews, and affirming falsly, that they were banish'd out of Ægypt, for fear of infecting the Ægyptians with some disease, Left, saith he, they should be avoided, and hated by all other nations for the same cause, Caverunt nè cum Peregrinis communicarent, quod ex causa factum, paulatim in disciplinam religionémque convertit, they took care never to communicate with strangers, which being first done on this cause (so this Heathen had resolved to defame them) by degrees turned into discipline and religion, that is, became a setled law among them. So Apollonius Molo in Joseph. l. 2. cont. Appion μηδὲ κοινωνεῖν τοῖς καθ' ἑτέρων ζωὴν προαιρουμένοις, They might not converse with them which chose to live after other customes of life.

c. οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἀποκτεῖναι

V. 31. It is not lawful for us to —] The Jewish Rabbines were wont to say, that Fourty years before the destruction of the second Temple, the power of Judicature ture in capital crimes was taken from them, because, say they, murtherers prevailed and dissipated capital punishments from Israel. And accordingly it appears that Christ here was crucified by the Romans, the Jewish form of hanging being by stoning first, and then setting up a stake and a piece of wood acrosse it, and hanging the dead person up (his hands being joyned and nailed together) toward the West, and then taking him down, and burying the wood with him: But for crucifying men alive, as the Romans did Christ, there is nothing to be found among the Jewes, who, if they had had the execution of him, would first have stoned him, which they often attempted to doe. See Paul. Fagius on the Chald. Paraph. Deut. 21.22.

And this is a great aggravation of the sinne of Judas, and the Jewish Sanhedrim, he to deliver me up to them, they to make thee their instrument to serve their malice, in crucifying me, not only an innocent person, but even the son of God himself. This they have had means to know better then thou, and therefore though thy sinne be great, yet theirs being against more light, is much more criminous, and shall accordingly be more severely punished.

30. When Jeſus therefore had received the vineger, he ſaid, It is finiſhed, and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghoſt.]

30. And aſſoon as he had drunk of that, he ſaid aloud, All prophecies are now fulfilled, as farre as belongs to my life, and bowing his head, as in a geſture of adoration and prayer, he ſaid, Father, into thine hands I commend my ſpirit, and ſo expired.

31. The Jews therefore, becauſe it was the preparation, that the bodies ſhould not remain upon the croſſe on the ſabbath day, (for * that ſabbath day was [d] an high day]) beſought Pilate that their leggs might be broken, and they taken away.

31. Then the Jews, that the bodies of the dead might be quickly taken from the croſſe, and not hang there on the day following, which was the firſt day of unleavened bread (to which this day of the Paſch was the eve or preparation) and alſo Saturday, and ſo a feaſt and a ſabbath together.

d. * that was a great ſabbath day)

32. Then came the ſouldiers and brake the leggs of the firſt, and of the other which was crucified with him.]

32. The ſouldiers therefore according to appointment went to take them down, and leſt there ſhould be any life in them, and ſo being taken down they ſhould run away and eſcape, they brake the leggs of the two thieves.

33. But when they came to Jeſus, and ſaw that he was dead already, they brake not his leggs.

34. But one of the ſouldiers with a ſpear pierced his ſide, and forthwith came there out blood and water.

e. 35. And he that [e] ſaw it, bare record, and his record is true, and he knoweth that he ſaith true, that ye might believe.

35, 36. And John the writer of this, teſtified the truth of it, and his teſtimony, though of a ſingle witneſſe, is worthy of belief, becauſe he was an eye-witneſſe, and the thing teſtified agrees with a prophecie, Pſal. 34. 20. A bone &c.

36. For theſe things were done that the ſcripture ſhould be fulfilled, A bone of him ſhall not be broken.]

f. Zach. 12. 10. 37. And again another ſcripture ſaith, [f] They ſhall look on him whom they pierced.

38. And after this, Joſeph of Arimathea (being a diſciple of Jeſus, but [ſecretly,] for fear of the Jewes) beſought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jeſus, and Pilate gave him leave; he came therefore and took the body of Jeſus.

38. Not following him openly,

39. See ch. 3. 2. 39. And there came alſo [Nicodemus] which at the firſt came to Jeſus by night, and brought a mixture of myrrhe and aloes, about an hundred pound weight.

g. 40. Then took they the body of Jeſus and wound it in ‖ linen clothes with the ſpices, as the manner of the Jewes is to * bury.

‖ ſwaths * embalm ἐνταφιάζειν

41. Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden, and in the garden a new ſepulchre, wherein was never yet man layd.]

41. Now neer the place of his crucifixion there was a garden, where this Joſeph had a tomb (Mat. 27. 60.) which he had newly hewed out for his own uſe, and no body had as yet ever been buried in it.

42. See v. 31. 42. There laid they Jeſus therefore, [becauſe of the Jewes preparation day,] for the ſepulchre was nigh at hand.

Annotations

a. Γαββαθὰ Ἑβραϊστί

V. 13. In the Hebrew Gabbatha] The word is Syriack or Chaldee, and ſo called Hebrew here, according to the cuſtome of the New Teſtament, which calls the Syriack language (being at that time the vulgar of the Jews) the Hebrew, and therefore Nonnus in his paraphraſe reads and v. 17.

Γολγοθὰ δ' καλέεσκε Σύρων γλῶσσα, —— and of the inſcription on the Croſſe

Αὐσονίῃ γλώσσῃ τε Σύρῳ, καὶ Ἀχαϊδι φωνῇ

the Syrian ſtill, where the Evangeliſts read Hebrew.

b. Ὡσὰ ὥρᾳ ἕκτῃ

V. 14. About the ſixth hour] Here is a ſeeming difference between the Evangeliſt, and S. Mark, in the ſpecifying the time of day, wherein Chriſt was condemned and led immediately to crucifixion. It is here ὥρᾳ ὡσὶ ἕκτῃ, about the ſixth houre, but there Mar. 15. 25. ὥρᾳ τρίτῃ καὶ ἐσταύρωσαν —— It was the third houre and they crucified him. If the reading of the antient Greek and Latine MS. were here to be heeded, this controverſie were ſoon at an end, for that reads here ὡσὶ ὥρᾳ τρίτῃ it was about the third houre. And ſo Peter Biſhop of Alexandria reads it, adding καθὼς τὰ ἀκριβῆ βιβλία σωίχει, αὐτόπτου τοῦ ἰδιόχειρον τοῦ εὐαγγελιστοῦ ὄντος μάχει τῇ νῦν πρὸ ὀλίγου κρίσει διὰ τὸ ἐν τῇ ἑρμαίων ἀκριβεστάτῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ, καὶ ὑπὸ τῶν πιστῶν ἐκεῖσε φυλασσομένῃ, as the accurate Copies have it, & that written with S. Johns own hand, which is ſtill preſerved in the Church of Epheſus, and is had in great Reverence by the faithful there. But of what authority that relation is may yet be queſtioned, and the antient Alexandrian Copy which we have oft cited by the name of the Kings MS. accords in the main with the printed copies ὡσὶ ὡς ἕκτη it was as it were the ſixth. And it is more probable that the reading τρίτη the third in Mark ſhould move ſome tranſcribers here to read τρίτη too, (to take away this ſeeming difference, and to accord the Evangeliſts, which they conceived to differ, if it were read ἕκτη the ſixth,) then for any to turn τρίτη to ἕκτη, contrary to what was before in S. Mark, if they had found it otherwiſe. This other way then will be more proper to ſalve the difficulty. That the whole νυχθήμερον, night and day, or four and twenty hours, was divided into eight parts among the Jews, is ordinarily known, each of them containing three houres, the third, the ſixth, the ninth, and the twelfth hour, and then the like again for the ſeveral watches of the night; Theſe alſo were houres of prayer, and of going up to the Temple in the day time, and at each of them the trumpet ſounded to congregate, or call pious perſons thither. This ſound of the trumpet was it that gave denomination to the hour; when the trumpet had ſounded to the ſixt-hour-prayers, it was then ſaid to be the ſixth hour, & not till then, Onely when that time approached, and was nigh at hand, it was ſaid to be ὡς, or ὡσεὶ, about, or as 'twere, the ſixth hour. Now not only that time, when that hour came, was call'd by that name, but alſo from that, all the ſpace of the three hours, till the next came, was called by the name of the former; all the ſpace from nine of clock till twelve was called the third hour, All from twelve till three after noon, the ſixth hour. So that the time of Chriſts crucifixion being ſuppoſed to be ſomewhat before, but yet near our twelve of clock, or midday, as it may truely be here ſaid that it was ὡσεὶ ἕκτη about, or as 'twere the ſixth hour, (and ſo S. Luke hath it, chap. 23. 44.) ſo it is as truely and fitly ſaid by S. Mark, that it was ὥρᾳ τρίτῃ the third hour, that ſpace which is call'd by the name of the third hour being not yet paſs'd, though it drew toward an end.

c. Βαστάζων ἑαυτῷ

V. 17. Bearing his Croſſe] Chriſts carrying his croſſe, was a part of the Roman cuſtome of crucifying; ſo ſaith Plutarch, de ſer. Num. Vin. τῷ σώματι τὸν κολαζομένων ἕκαστον τὸν κακούργων ἐκφέρειν τὸν αὐτῷ σαυτοῦ, Every one of the malefactors, that are to be put to death, carries out his own croſſe. So Artemidorus, ὁ μέλλων σταυροῦσθαι τὸν πρῶτον σαυτοῦ βαστάσει, he that is to be nailed to the croſſe firſt carries it upon his ſhoulders, and ſo Plautus diſtinctly, Patibulum ferat per urbem, deinde affigatur cruci, Let him carry it thorough the city, and then be faſtned to it. And whereas in the other Goſpels, there is no mention of this, but onely of their preſſing Simon of Cyrene to carry it for him (which is not mentioned here) the way of reconciling that difficulty is very eaſy, by affirming, that he firſt bare it himſelf according to the Roman cuſtome (which S. John, according to his wont, mentions, becauſe it was omitted by the reſt) but after, meeting Simon by the way, they made him bear it for him.

d. Μεγάλη ἡμέρα τῶν Σαββάτων

V. 31. An high day] That day was the firſt of Unleavened bread, and the ſabbath too, and therefore a ſabbath, and a great day. For that which is among the Hebrews חג a feaſt, מקרא, convocatio cœtus, the day of ſolemn aſſembly in any feaſt, (ſuch were the firſt day, and the laſt of the feaſt of Tabernacles, the firſt, and ſeventh of the feaſt of Unleavened bread, and the day of Pentecoſt) is by the Jews, writing in Greek called μεγάλη ἡμέρα, a great day. So it is rendred by the Greek Iſa. 1. 13. μεγάλην ἡμέραν, where we read calling of aſſemblies. Hence is that of Tertull. cont. Marci. l. 5. Dies obſervatis, &c. Ye obſerve dayes, & among them he names jejunia & dies magnos, faſts and great dayes, ſo Joh. 7. 37. the laſt day of the feaſt of Tabernacles, which was a day of calling aſſemblies, is there call'd μεγάλη ἡμέρα τῆς ἑορτῆς, the great day of the feaſt. See Scal. proleg. de Emend. Temp. p. 7. & 6.

e. Ἑωρακὼς μεμαρτύρηκε

V. 35. Saw it] This ſpeech of this Evangeliſt, and his ſo much care in the teſtifying of this fact from his own ſight of it, is an argument that he looked on it as a very weighty and conſiderable paſſage. And ſo 1 Joh. 5. 6. he makes uſe of it as ſuch; This is he that came Ἦλθε καὶ ὕδατι with water and blood, not by water onely, but by water and blood, and v. 8. There be three that bear witneſſe on earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood, and theſe three agree in one. What the particular is, wherein the weight of this paſſage lies, will be worth conſidering. And firſt it is ordinarily affirmed that there is a capſula, on the left ſide of the heart, called the pericardium, wch hath water in it, of continual uſe for the cooling of the heart, and that the coming out of water with the blood here, was a teſtimony of the wounding his very heart, the entring of that iron, the ſpear, into his ſoul. Againſt this others have framed an objection, that it was not the left, but the right ſide of Chriſt, which was at this time wounded by the ſouldier, and that the Arabick texts generally expreſſe it ſo (ſee Kirſtenius Arab. Gram. p. 5.) and conſequently that the αἱματοδατίνυς, the waters flowing out together with the blood, could not be any natural effect of that wound. But that objection is of little force; for 1. ſuch is the poſture of the heart in the body, rather in the middle then enclining to the left ſide; and 2dly. ſo great is that pericardium, as Anatomiſts find, eſpecially after death when the water much encreaſeth, that if the right ſide were pierced ſo deep as to the heart, it would ſend out water. And therefore this may firſt be reſolved, that this being an evidence of the wounding of the heart, and the Phyſicians Maxime being certain, καρδιόβλητος ἀποθνήσκει he that is wounded in the heart muſt certainly die, and wounds in the heart are abſolutely incurable, this flowing of water with the blood was an evidence and demonſtration of his being truely dead (this one wound being ſufficient to ſecure that, if he had not been dead before, v. 33.) and ſo the confutation of moſt Hereticks of the firſt ages, which affirmed him to have ſuffered death onely in appearance. But beſide this, another concluſion S. John in his Epiſtle is willing to draw from it, viz. that believing Jeſus to be the Son of God, is an effectual means of overcoming the world, 1 Joh. 5. 5. for to the proving of that it is, that this obſervation is made made uſe of by him, This is he that came with water and blood, v.6. And that argument lies thus, The baits, or temptations, which the world uſeth, are of two ſorts, allurements of carnall pleaſures, and terrors from apprehenſion of perſecutions; the Gnoſticks at the time of his writing that Epiſtle made uſe of both theſe to ſeduce the Orthodox Chriſtians, the all kind of carnall pleaſures which they profeſs'd, was one bait, and the perſecutions from the Jewes upon the Orthodox Chriſtians, which the Gnoſticks, by complying with them, avoided, was the other temptation. Againſt theſe two S. John ſets up purity, and patience, as the two prime doctrines, and commands of Chriſt (which every true beleever is ſtrictly concerned in) exemplified by himſelf, (who was 1. pure and ſinleſſe, and yet 2ly ſuffered death, the death of the croſſe) and moſt lively adumbrated by the water and blood, which he had obſerved to come from Chriſts ſide in this place. The water that was the embleme of all ſpotleſſe purity, and the blood was the evidence of his fortitude and conſtant patience, laying down his life for the truth of God, and theſe two μαρτυροῦσι teſtifie, and declare the neceſſity of theſe two (and ſo of overcoming the world) in every one that believes aright in Chriſt. And whereas 'tis there added, that the Spirit teſtifies alſo, and that the Spirit (i.e. the Spirit, as a witneſſe, i. e. the teſtimony of the Spirit) agrees in one with theſe two, i.e. with the teſtimonies of the water and blood, that is thus to be interpreted, not only that the Spirit coming down on Chriſt, who was after crucified by the Jewes, did teſtifie that he was the beloved ſon of God in whom he was well pleaſed, i.e. perfectly innocent, though he ſuffered for ſinne, but alſo that the Spirit after the reſurrection of Chriſt, coming on the Apoſtles, came as Chriſts advocate to defend him, and convince the world, both in that action concerning righteouſneſſe, proving that Chriſt was a moſt innocent and righteous perſon, and that other concerning judgment, in puniſhing and retaliating his crucifiers, the Jewes, and Satan himſelf, deſtroying their kingdome for their deſtroying of him, (ſee Note on c. 16. a) Beſide this importance of the water and blood, the ancients have obſerved another alſo, that by a ſpeciall act of Gods providence there flowed at this time from Chriſts ſide the two Sacraments of his Church, Baptiſm, and the Supper of the Lord.

V. 37. They ſhall look on him whom——] This is one of the places in which (as alſo Rev. 1. 7.) the Evangeliſt quotes the teſtimony of the Old Teſtament, not from the Septuagint, but from the Hebrew text. For in the place of Zach. 12. 10. the Septuagint or Greek tranſlators read ἐπιβλέψονται πρὸς μὲ ἀνθ' ὧν κατηρχήσαντο, reading, it ſeems, דקרו for דקרו by the miſtake of the two letters which are ſo like, ר and ד.

V. 40. Linen cloths] Ὀθόνιον as ὀθόνη in Heſychius ſignifies σινδών, ζώνη, πελαμών, and πελαμὼν is by him rendred δεσμὸς, φασκία, a band or ſwath; ſo ch. 20.7. and ſo the κειρία in the ſtory of Lazarus, c. 11. 44. which word is by Grammarians derived from κὴρ mors, and ſo ſignifies peculiarly thoſe ſwathes that belong to dead men, wherein their whole body was wound, ſaith Nonnus. In relation to which it is that Act. 5.6. they are ſaid to wind up Ananias, when he is dead.

——πανικλῄσιν ὅλον δέμας εἶχε κερείας,

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XX.

1. Came Mary Magdalene (and divers other women, that had followed Jeſus in his lifetime Lu.24.10.)

1. THe firſt day of the week [cometh Mary Magdalene] * early when it was yet dark, unto the ſepulchre, and ſeeth the ſtone taken away from the ſepulchre,

* In the morning, πρωΐ

2. John, the writer of this Goſpel, and told them, The body of the Lord is taken

2. Then ſhe runneth away and cometh to Simon Peter, and to [the other diſciple, whom Jeſus loved, and ſaith unto them, They have taken away the Lord] out of the ſepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3. Peter therefore went forth, and that other diſciple, and came to the ſepulchre.

4. So they ran both together, and that other diſciple did outrun Peter, and came firſt to the ſepulchre.

5. † And he ſtooping down and looking in, ſaw the linen clothes lying, yet went he not in.

† And ſtooping down to look, ſees the ſwathes, παρακύψας βλέπει

6. Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the ſepulchre, and ſeeth the linen clothes lie,

7. And the napkin that was about his head not lying with the linen clothes, but * wrapped together in a place by it ſelf.

* Folded, ἐντετυλιγμένον

8. And then upon his report John alſo, that other diſciple which came before Peter (ſee ch. 1. c.) to the ſepulchre, went in, and ſaw how the ſwathes and napkin were laid, and believed what Mary and Peter had told him, and was thereby convinced that he was riſen.

8. † Then went in alſo that other diſciple, which came firſt to the ſepulchre, and he ſaw and believed.]

† Then that other, ἐτότε

9. For as yet they were not aſſured by the prophecies of ſcripture that it was to be ſo, neither did they believe the teſtimonies of thoſe that ſaw him riſen, Mar. 16. 11, 12, 13, 14.

9. For as yet they knew not the ſcripture, that he * muſt riſe again from the dead.]

* Ought, δεῖ

10. Then the diſciples went away again † unto their own home.

† To their own ſelves, εἰς ἑαυτοὺς, ſee note it.

11. But Mary ſtood without at the ſepulchre weeping, and as ſhe wept, ſhe ſtooped down, and [a] looked into the ſepulchre,

12. And ſeeth two Angels in white, ſitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet [where the body of Jeſus had layen.]

12. of the tomb.

13. And they ſay unto her, Woman, why weepeſt thou? She ſaith unto them, becauſe they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14. And having ſaid ſo, and received anſwer from the Angels that he was riſen from the dead, and that ſhe ſhould go and tell his diſciples &c. Mat. 28. 5, 6. Mar. 16 6, 7. Lu. 24. 6 ſhe went from the ſepulchre toward the place where the diſciples were, Mat. 28. 8. and as ſhe goes, (ſee note a.) ſhe ſees a perſon ſtanding, which indeed was Jeſus, though ſhe knew him not.

14. And when ſhe had thus ſaid, ſhe turned her ſelf back and ſaw Jeſus ſtanding, and knew not that it was Jeſus.]

15. Jeſus

15. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Woman, why weepeſt thou? whom ſeekeſt thou? She ſuppoſing him to be the Gardner, ſaith unto him, Sir, if thou have born him hence, tell me where thou haſt laid him, [and I will take him away.]

15. and I will carry him to his grave again, or provide ſome other burying place for him.

16. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Mary. She turned her ſelf and ſaith unto him, Rabboni, which is to ſay, Maſter.

17. Jeſus ſaith unto her, [Touch me not, for I am not yet aſcended to my Father; but goe to my brethren, and ſay unto them, I aſcend unto my Father, and your Father, and to my God, and your God.]

17. This is not a time for me to company with you, as I was wont, but I go to prepare a place for you in heaven, where you ſhall hereafter enjoy me.

18. Mary Magdalen came, and told the diſciples that ſhe had ſeen the Lord, and that he had ſpoken theſe things unto her.

19. * Then the ſame day at evening, being the firſt day of the week, when the dores [were ſhut, where the diſciples were aſſembled for fear of the Jews,] came Jeſus and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaith unto them, Peace be unto you.

19. dores of the roome where they were together were ſhut, for the more ſecrecy to avoid danger from the Jewes,

20. And when he had ſo ſaid, he ſhewed unto them his hands and his ſide. Then were the diſciples glad, when they ſaw the Lord.

21. Then ſaid Jeſus to them again, [Peace be unto you. As my Father hath ſent me, even [b] ſo ſend I you.]

21. I take my leave of you (ſee c. 14. 27.) And doe now give you the ſame commiſſion to execute in the Church when I am gone, which my Father gave me at my coming. b.

22. And when he had ſaid this, he breathed on them, [and ſaith unto them, [c] Receive ye the holy Ghoſt.]

22. And by that emblem ſignified to them the holy Ghoſt which ſhould ſhortly come down upon them, (and thereby all thoſe gifts of the Spirit of God, which ſhould be neceſſary to fit them for the diſcharge of their office) Act. 2. 1. till which time they were to wait at Jeruſalem, Lu. 24. 49. c.

23. [d] Whoſeſoever ſins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whoſeſoever ſins ye retain, they are retained.

23. See Mat. 16. note h. and Tract, Of the Power of the Keyes. d.

24. But Thomas one of the twelve, [called * Didymus] was not with them, when Jeſus came.

24. otherwiſe called Didymus, which by interpretation ſignifies the Twin.

25. The other diſciples therefore ſaid unto him, We have ſeen the Lord. But he ſaid unto them, Except I ſhall ſee in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thruſt my hand into his ſide, [I will not believe.]

25. I ſhall not be perſwaded that it is he.

26. And [e after eight daies again his diſciples were within, and Thomas with them; then came Jeſus, the dores being ſhut,] and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaid, Peace be unto yon.

25. the week after, the next week, that day ſeven nights, the diſciples were again met at the ſervice of God, and Thomas was with them, and when the dores had been faſt ſhut for the more ſecrecie and ſecurity, Jeſus again as v. 19. came in upon them. e.

27. Then ſaith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thruſt it into my ſide, and be not faithleſſe, but believing.

28. And Thomas anſwered, and ſaid unto him, [My Lord and my God.]

28. I acknowledge that thou art my very Lord, and Maſter, and that is an evidence to me that thou art the omnipotent God of heaven.

29. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Thomas, becauſe thou haſt ſeen me, thou haſt believed, [bleſſed are they that have not ſeen, and yet have believed.]

29. Thy faith would have been more excellent, and more eminently rewardable, if without ſuch demonſtrative evidence, thou hadſt believed, and ſo is their faith, who have believed without it.

30. And many other ſignes truly did Jeſus in the preſence of his diſciples, which are not written in this book.

31. But theſe are written that ye might believe that Jeſus is the [Chriſt,] the ſon of God, and that believing, ye might have life through his name.

31. Meſſias.

Annotations on Chap. XX.

V. 11. Looked into the ſepulchre] Some difference there ſeemeth to be betwixt theſe narrations in this and in S. Lukes Goſpel, As 1. Maries going to Peter, and his coming to the ſepulchre are here ſet down before the appearance of the Angels, but in Luke the viſion of the Angels is firſt mentioned c. 24. 4. and her going v. 9. and Peters running to the ſepulchre v. 12. And in the other Goſpels there is no mention of her going, till ſhe had ſeen the viſion. This ſeeming difference will be reconciled only by obſerving this one thing (which hath been formerly obſerved Note b. on the Title of the Goſpel, and Lu. 6 Note d.) that Luke writing from notes, which he had collected from eye-witneſſes, and not from his own knowledge, obſerves not ſo exactly the order of time, where things were done or ſpoken, but oft-times in another method, puts together things of affinity to one another, though not done or ſaid at the ſame time, and ſo here ſets down all that concerns the women together, and then after, that which concerns Peter, though part of that which concern'd the women were done after that which is mentioned of Peter. The punctuall obſervation of the order being not neceſſary, when the things themſelves are truly recited. The true order of the ſtory ſeems to ſtand thus, Mary and the women came to the ſepulchre, Mat. 28. 1. Mar. 16. 2. Lu. 24. 1. Joh. 20. 1. and coming they find, that before they came, an Angel with an earthquake had rolled away the ſtone, Mat. 28. 2. where the Σεισμὸς ἐγένετο, there was an earthquake, muſt be taken in the time perfectly paſt, there had been an earthquake, and an Angel had rolled away the ſtone, for in all the other Goſpels it is ſaid at their coming, Mat. 16. 3. that it was rolled away, and they found, Mat. 28. 2. and here, ſhe ſeeth the ſtone rolled away, and then, going in, they found not the body of Jeſus, Lu. 24. 2. Upon this Mary runs to Peter & John, which paſſage is only mentioned here, Then Peter, Lu. 24. 12. and Peter and John here, run to the ſepulchre and ſatisfie themſelves of the truth of her report, & having done ſo, Peter in Luke, and both of them here, v. 10. return to their own abodes. Where by the way the phraſe Σεισμὸς ἐγένετο.

ᵃ Ἀπῆλθον εἰς ἑαυτὸς

here uſed for their returning home, being ἀπῆλθον πάλιν εἰς ἑαυτὸς, they went away again, or back to themſelves, gives us reaſon to think that Lu. 24. 12. the words ſhould not be read καὶ ἀπῆλθε, πρὸς ἑαυτὸν θαυμάζων τὸ γεγονὸς, and he departed, wondring in himſelf, &c. but he departed to himſelf, that is, to his place of abode, wondring, &c. While they returned, the women, it ſeems, ſtay at the ſepulchre, Mary here v. 11. and the women Lu. 24. 4. doubting what it ſhould be; and then follows the appearance of the Angels one or more, two here v. 12. and Lu. 24. 4. one in Matthew and Mark, ſitting on the ſtone, Mat. 28. 2. on the right ſide of the monument, Mar. 16. 5. which being ſuppoſed to be one and the ſame Angel, doth not yet exclude a ſecond mentioned by theſe other two Evangeliſts. The Angels ſpeake to the women, in all the Goſpels, and aſſure them of the reſurrection of Chriſt, and upon that the women depart to tell the news. This is here ſaid in ἐστράφη ὀπίσω

theſe words, Ταῦτα εἰποῦσα ἐστράφη ὀπίσω, having ſaid this ſhe turned backward, not that ſhe did ſo, before ſhe received any anſwer to her ſpeech, but the anſwer being at large ſet down in all the Goſpels, that Chriſt was riſen, that he had before told them he ſhould riſe, Lu. 24. 7. that they ſhould carry the diſciples word of it, and that they ſhould ſee him in Galilee, Mat. 28. 7. Mar. 16. 7. there was no need for John that wrote thoſe things eſpecially that were omitted by the other, to mention this. And therefore ſuppoſing that anſwer to intervene after her ſpeech to the Angel, it follows agreeably to the other Goſpels, that ſhe departed from the ſepulchre, now the ſecond time, to report his reſurrection to all his diſciples, according to the Angels appointment. And in that paſſage all the Evangeliſts concurre, Lu. 24. 9. the women returned, which is all one with, ſhe turned backward here, And in Matthew, and Mark, they went out with haſt to tell the diſciples.

b. V. 21. So ſend I you] The Jews have a ſaying that A mans Apoſtle is as himſelf, that is, his vicarius or proxy. For the Jews had Apoſtles, whom they ſent on their affairs into the countries, and are not to be looked on as bare meſſengers, but as their proxies or deputies to receive their dues, and to act for them. So Saul was an Apoſtle of the Conſiſtory to Damaſcus Act. 9. with letters of Commiſſion from the Rulers. Thus the Twelve, after Chriſts departure, had others, whom they ſent on ſome parts of their charge, and then they were called their Apoſtles; So Paul and Barnabas had John, Act. 13. 5. Paul had Timothy and Eraſtus, Acts 19. 22. and Marke, 2 Tim. 4. 11. Theſe when they were employed in preaching the Goſpel to them that had not yet received it, the Scripture calls Evangeliſts, that is, diſciples of the Apoſtles, ſent with commiſſion by them to publiſh the Goſpel, where the Apoſtles could not go, and therefore are by S. Paul placed next the Apoſtles, 1 Cor. 12. 28. Epheſ. 4. 11. Thus Philip the Deacon, being employed by the Twelve to Preach at Samaria, is called Philip the Evangeliſt, Act. 8. 5, 12. and c. 21. 8. ſo was Steven to the Jews, Act. 6. 9. and ſo Timothy 2 Tim. 4. 5. Phil. 2. 19. and ſo Luke and others are called Apoſtles of the Churches 2 Cor. 8. 18, 19, 23. and, as ſuch, δόξα Χριστοῦ, the glory of Chriſt, the word which is uſed to denote the preſence of God in any place, and ſo there intimates the preſence of Chriſt in them his ſubſtitutes or proxies. Thus S. Peter preached at Rome by himſelf, at Alexandria by S. Mark, his Apoſtle; S. Paul at Rome by his Apoſtles, of whom Andronicus and Junias were the moſt eminent, Rom. 16. 7. which ſeems to be the reaſon of the difference among the Eccleſiaſticall writers about the next ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles in ſome Sees. By all this appears the meaning of this ſpeech of Chriſt, that as he was Gods Apoſtle or meſſenger, and ſo his proxy or vicarius on the earth, ſo the Diſciples were now made his, μαθηταὶ diſciples, attendants of his, before, v. 20. but now by this ſending, ἀπόστολοι Apoſtles for ever after; ſent as Commiſſioners to ſupply his place, to performe thoſe offices over the world (to plant a Church) which he being now about to return to his father, could not corporally do, and ſo to ſucceed him in his office, and they again to ſend or conſtitute others in the like manner; ſee Note on Lu. 6. d.

V. 22. Receive ye the Holy Ghoſt] Λάβετε πνεῦμα ἅγιον, receive the holy Ghoſt, ſignifies here not the actual giving of the holy Ghoſt (for that came not on them till Act. 2. and they are appointed to ſtay at Jeruſalem Lu. 24. 49. till they were endued with power from above, which therefore, now before his Aſcenſion they had not received, and when the Spirit came it would lead them into all truth, and as yet it appears by their queſtion Act. 1. 6. that they were not thus led into all truth) but only the confirming to them his former promiſe, (and, by the ceremony of breathing on them, to expreſſe the τὸ πνεῦμα, the eternall breath, and Spirit of God, ſealing it, as it were ſolemnly unto them) and preparing and fitting them for the receiving of it. So ſaith Theophylact, τὸ δὲ [λάβετε πνεῦμα] ἀντὶ τοῦ γίνεσθε ἐπιτήδειοι πρὸς τὸ λαβεῖν πνεῦμα, The words [receive the holy Ghoſt] ſignifie, be ye ready to receive him. And again, ἐμφυσᾷ, ἵνα τὴν τελείαν δωρεὰν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος νῦν αὐτοῖς νέμων, &c. He breathed on them, not now diſtributing the perfect gift of the holy Ghoſt, for that was to be done at Pentecoſt, but fitting them for the receiving of it. For though in the next words, whoſe ſignes, &c. the power of the Keys, or ſtewardſhip in the Church were actually inſtated on them, yet was not this to be exerciſed by them, till the holy Ghoſt came down upon them, as Epheſ. 4. 8. It is firſt, he gave gifts unto men, (at the deſcent of the Spirit) and then, gave ſome Apoſtles, &c. v. 11. This interpretation of this place, will direct to the full importance of thoſe words Lu. 4. 49. I ſend the promiſe of my father upon you ſo as to render them directly parallel to this. The promiſe of the Father was the holy Ghoſt Joh. 15. 26. and the I ſend upon you all one with λάβετε receive him, And then the power from on high in the end of the verſe, clearly ſignifies that viſible miſſion of the holy Ghoſt. And all this moſt aptly delivered for the proof of the words here immediately precedent, As my father ſent me, ſo ſend I you, intimating that as at his miſſion from his father to his office, he was anointed, or conſecrated with, or by the holy Ghoſt Act. 10. 38. by deſcent of the holy Ghoſt on him at his Baptiſme Lu. 3. 23. ſo the Apoſtles at their miſſion or entrance on their power ſhould be conſecrated alſo.

d. V. 23. Whoſoever ſins ye remit] That the power of binding and looſing in Saint Matthew, firſt promiſed c. 16. then farther deſcribed for the manner of it c. 18. the power of the Keyes, of admitting and excluding out of the Church, and ſo the power of Excommunication put into the hands of the Apoſtles firſt, and from them communicated to the ſucceeding Governours of the Church, is it which is here given by Chriſt, may appear by the words ἀφιέναι remit, and κρατεῖν retain, which are perfectly all one with λύω and δέω looſing and binding in S. Matthew. If there be any difference, it is only this, that δέω ſignifies to bind, κρατέω ſignifies to keep bound as well as to bind, in which reſpect κρατέω is here more proper in this place, then the other, becauſe the order is here inverted, and κρατῆτε retaining put after ἀφῆτε remitting, and ſo the word which ſignifies to keep bound, is more critically adapted to this place, then δέω to bind would have been, and yet when binding is mentioned firſt, δῆσαι, (as in the other places) is as exact as κρατῆσαι. This ſlight difference being granted, the words are otherwiſe to all uſes perfectly Synonymous, ἀφῆτε remit and λύσητε looſe, eſpecially as applyed to ſin, both ſignifie forgiving of it, the firſt referring to ſin in the notion notion of a debt or thraldome (to both which it is applied in the New Testament, to ὀφειλήματα debts Mat. 6. 12. αἰχμαλωσία captivity Lu. 4. 18.) the second to sin in the notion of a band, so Gen. 4. 12. μείζων ἡ ἀνομία, or ἁμαρτία μὴ τῦ ἀφεθῆναι, my sin is greater then can be forgiven. So Exod. 32. 21. εἰ μὲν ἀφὲς αὐτοῖς ἁμαρτίαν, O that thou wouldest forgive them that sin. And so λύειν Job. 42. 9. ἔλυσε τὴν ἁμαρτίαν αὐτοῖς διὰ Ἰὼβ, he forgave them their sin by Job, that is by, his mediation, where the Hebrew read נשא פני איוב God accepted the person of Job. So also for δέω and κρατέω, the same Hebrew word עצר is by the Septuagint rendred by both of them, δέω Jer. 33. 1. κρατέω Dan. 10. 8. & 11. 6. and so Act. 2. 24. κρατεῖσθαι being holden is set opposite to λύσας loosing, and so must signifie being kept bound, and so almost in all other places it signifies to hold fast, or take hold of, and is sometimes joyned with ἔδησαν (as holding fast is preparative to binding) Mat. 14. 3. κρατήσας ἔδησε laying hold on him bound him, and Rev. 20. 2. ἐκράτησε καὶ ἔδησε he held fast and bound. So in S. Basil speaking of the freedome of Christians in their bands, he saith they are κεχαλιμένοι ἀκράτητοι, bound but not capable of binding. And accordingly it is affirmed by Theophylact on Mat. 13. that Christs promise of the power of binding and loosing was fulfilled in these words, Whose sins you do remit they are remitted, &c. And therefore whatsoever is brought by *some to avoid the force of those places in S. Matthew, and to cast off the censures of the Church, (by affirming that to bind there, is to declare forbidden, and to loose, to declare lawfull) being utterly unappliable to this place, where it is not whatsoever, as there, (which is more lyable to that misinterpretation) but whose sinns, &c. (which is no way capable of it; for it cannot be imagined that Christ should mean whose sinnes ye shall declare lawfull, or unlawfull) by this one method of searching the meaning of these two words in this place, is proved utterly uneffectuall. Of this see more at large in the Tract of the power of binding and loosing.

V. 26. After eight daies] The phrase μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀκτώ, signifies after another week (that is, as it seems, on the first day of the week, as before ver. 19. For so the Jews expresse a week by eight days; So Josephus Ant. lib. 7. cap. 9. having said ἐπὶ ἑπτὰ ἡμέρας ὅλας, presently he explains it by ἀπὸ Σαββάτου ἐπὶ Σάββατον from week to week, Thus when S. Luke saith cap. 9. 28. ὡσεὶ ἡμέραις ὀκτώ, about eight days, S. Matthew c. 17. 1. hath μεθ' ἡμέρας ἓξ, after six days, the truth being that it was that day seven-night, which including the first and the last day is called eight days, and excluding them, and referring onely to the intervall betwixt, is called six days. Thus do we in the distinction of Agues, which we call the quartan and the tertian, in each including the two days which are the extremes, and not onely the intervall between the fits.

CHAP. XXI.

Paraphrase.

1. AFter these things, Jesus shewed himself again to the disciples at the [sea of Tiberias,] and on this wise shewed he himself.

1. lake of Gennesareth (see note on Lu. 8. c.)

the Twinne διδυμος

2. There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called * Didymus, and [Nathaniel of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee,] and two other of his disciples.

2. Bartholomew perhaps (see note on c. 1.) and James and John,

3. Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee.] They went forth and entred into a ship immediately, and that night they caught nothing.

3. And Simon returning to his trade again, called the rest to go to fishing, and they agreed to do so, And

4. But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore, but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.]

4. But either he was so disguised, or their eyes so held by Gods power and pleasure, that though they saw a man, they knew not who it was.

5. Then Jesus saith unto them, Children,] have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

5. Then Jesus calling to them in a familiar manner, asked them, saying,

6. He said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find: They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

* upper garment or apron about him, τὸν ἐπενδύτην

7. Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his a * fishers coat unto him (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea.]

7. Hereupon John told Peter, Assuredly it is Jesus: Now when Peter heard it was Jesus, he would not stay, but only put on his upper garment (having nothing before but his inner garment upon him,) and went into the lake to goe to him.

8. And the other disciples came in a little ship, (for they were not farre from land, but as it were two hundred cubits) dragging the net with fishes.]

8. And the rest of them did not so, but being not farre from land, where Jesus was, went to him by boat, dragging the net, full of fishes, along with them.

9. As soon as they were come to land, [they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon and bread.]

9. they discern a greater miracle then the former, a fire of coals, and a fish laid on it, and bread, all created or produced out of nothing, by the power of Christ.

10. Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish, which ye have now caught.

11. Simon Peter went up] and drew the net to land, full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three, and for all there were so many, yet was not their net broken.

11. Simon went into the ship, or boat,

12. Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13. Jesus then cometh and taketh bread and giveth them, and fish likewise.]

13. took bread and fish, and eat himself, and gave them to eat, to signifie to them the reality of his resurrection, See note on Mat. 26. f.

14. This is now the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead.]

14. This was the third day of Christ's appearing to his disciples after his resurrection, though the sixth time of his appearance, and the fourth that he appeared to the disciples, yet the third time also that he appeared to all, or more of them together.

15. Peter, Is thy love to me ſo great as thou didſt ſeem to affirm it, when Mat. 26. 23. thou ſaidſt though all men ſhould forſake me, thou wouldſt not? Is thy love ſurpaſſing the love of all other my diſciples? Or is thy love agreeable to this thy expreſſion of it, in caſting thy ſelf into the ſea to come to me? v. 7. And he anſwered, Lord, thou knoweſt that I love thee ſincerely, though now being taught by my former fall, I ſhall not make compariſon with all others. He ſaith unto him, Let thy love be expreſs'd to me, in thy care of that flock committed to thee.

b. 15. So when they had dined, Jeſus ſaith to Simon Peter, [Simon, ſon of † Jonas[b], loveſt thou me more then theſe? He ſaith unto him, Yea Lord, thou knoweſt that I love thee. He ſaith unto him, Feed my lambs.]

† John, for the Greek and Latine copie reads Ἰωάνου, others Ἰωαν- νᾶ and Nonnus Ἰωαννᾶ

16. He ſaith unto him again the ſecond time, Simon ſon of Jonas, loveſt thou me? He ſaith unto him, Yea Lord, thou knoweſt that I love thee. He ſaith unto him, Feed my ſheep.

17. Jeſus to exemplifie to him, how he was to uſe the power of the keyes promiſed to him, Matth. 16. calls him here three times (proportionably to his threefold denial) to confeſſe Chriſt, and his love to him, and ſo to clear himſelf, 2 Cor. 1. 11.

17. He ſaith unto him the third time, Simon ſon of Jonas, loveſt thou me?] Peter was grieved becauſe he ſaid unto him the third time, Loveſt thou me? And he ſaid unto him, Lord, thou knoweſt all things, thou knoweſt that I love thee. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Feed my ſheep.

18. In the former part of thine age thou haſt been free to doe what even now thou didſt, ver. 7. to live at thine own pleaſure, but age ſhall bring preſſures and afflictions on thee, within 40 years thou ſhalt be taken, and doe as captives doe, when they yield to the greater force, and be bound (ſee Lu. 12. b.) and carried to the croſſe, the place of execution.

18. Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, [when thou waſt young, thou girdedſt thy ſelf, and walkedſt whither thou wouldeſt; but when thou ſhalt be old, thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thy hands, and another ſhall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldeſt not.]

19. This ſpeech of Chriſt was a figurative expreſſion that crucifixion was the kind of death, by which he ſhould confeſſe Chriſt. And to this he added theſe words, Follow me, that is, thou ſhalt follow me in ſufferings, as before thou didſt in diſcipleſhip.

19. This ſpake he ſignifying by what death he ſhould glorifie God. And when he had ſpoken this, he ſaith unto him, Follow me.]

20. John, Chriſt's beloved diſciple, who at his laſt ſupper was next unto him, c. 13. 13. and asked him that queſtion,

20. Then Peter turning about, ſeeth [the diſciple, whom Jeſus loved, following, which alſo leaned on his breaſt at ſupper, and ſaid,] Lord, wchih is he that betrayeth thee?

21. But what ſhall this mans fate be?

21. Peter ſeeing him, ſaith to Jeſus, Lord, [* and what ſhall this man doe?]

* But what ſhall this man? ὗτος δὲ τί;

c. 22. I told you of ſome that ſhould eſcape the fury of the evil times approaching, and continue to the time, that I ſhall come in judgement againſt Jeruſalem, and deſtroy it by the Romans: And what harm is it to thee? and how art thou concerned to know, if John be one of theſe? thou art likely to follow me to the croſſe, and the cheerful doing of that, becomes thee better then this curioſity.

22. Jeſus ſaith unto him, [If I will that he tarry c till I come, what is that to thee, Follow thou me.]

23. †Then went this ſaying abroad among the brethren, that that diſciple * ſhould not die: yet Jeſus ſaid not unto him, he ſhall not die, but if I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

† Hereupon or therefore. * dyeth not. οὐκ ἀποθνήσκει

24. This is he that is the author of this Goſpel, which he preach'd in Aſia, and about two and thirty years after Chriſts aſcenſion, by the entreaty of the Aſian Biſhops wrote and publiſh'd it, And the Chriſtians of Aſia, eſpecially of the Church of Epheſus know ſo much of his good life, miracles and veracity, and withall of the agreeableneſſe of his time of death with what is here affirmed to be foretold by Chriſt, that we cannot but approve his teſtimony, and affixe our ſeal to all that is in this Goſpel affirmed by him.

24. This is the diſciple which teſtifieth theſe things and wrote of theſe things, and we know that his teſtimony is true.]

d. 25. Thus much was written by S. John, but much more was done by Jeſus, many miracles &c. all which if they were diſtinctly ſet down in writing, they would even fill the world, the volumes would be ſo many.

25. And there are alſo many other things which Jeſus did, the which if they ſhould be written every one d I ſuppoſe that even the world it ſelf could not contain the books which ſhould be written.] Amen.

Annotations on Chap. XXI.

Ἐπενδύτης. V. 7. Fiſhers coate] What ἐπενδύτης ſignifies, may thus be collected. 1. Sam. 18. 4. Jonathan is ſaid to put it off, and give it to David. Where, as the Hebrew hath אֶת הַמְּעִיל, pallium (ſee Matt. 5. Note r.) the upper garment, ſo by Jonathans giving it to David, it appears it was of ſome value, and that agrees alſo to the upper garment, which was ſuch. Now though Suidas in one place interprets it τὸ ἐσώτατον ἱμάτιον, ὃ καὶ ὑποκάμισον λέγεται, the inner garment, or ſhirt, yet it is clear by him elſe where, that this was his notion not of ἐπενδύτης, but ὑπενδύτης, for ſo he ſets down the difference between theſe two, making ὑπενδύτης, to ſignifie τὸ ἐσώτερον ἱμάτιον, the inner garment, and ἐπενδύτης, τὸ ἐπάνω, the outer. So the old Greek and Latine Lexicon, Ἐπενδύτης Inſtita ſuperaria, garments that are put over. Nonnus expreſſes this here to be caſt over them, to cover their thighs,

——κεχαλασμένον ὡς πλύχα μηρῶν
Ἰχθυβόλοι φορέεσκον ἀθηήλα σκέπας αἰδῶς,

A covering to their nakedneſs, Theophylact gives a larger deſcription of it, ἐσὶ λινοῦν τι ὑπόνιον, ὅπερ φοίνικες καὶ οἱ Σύριοι ἁλιεῖς περιελίττουσιν ἑαυτοῖς—— It is a linnen garment that the Phenician and Syrian fiſhermen gird about them, either when they are naked, or when they have other garments on, ſuch as the Painters put on the Apoſtles, over their other cloths; and this was the reaſon why Peter being naked, toyling about catching of fiſh, to cover his nakedneſs, girt this garment about him. This deſcription of his inclines me to believe that it was ſimply an apron, which is worn over cloths ſometimes to keep them clean, ſometimes is caſt over the naked body to hide the ſhame, as we read in the ſtory of Adam.

V. 15. Loveſt thou me?] To love Chriſt is ſo to love, as to hold out in confeſſing of him in the time of the greateſt danger; ſee Note on Rev. 2. 4. that love that caſteth out fear, 1 Joh. 4. 18. So here it is oppoſed to renouncing, or denying of Chriſt in the time of triall. Peter had reſolved he would never thus renounce Chriſt, though all others ſhould, which was in effect that he loved Chriſt more then any other diſciple did. But having failed foully in that particular, at the time of Chriſts arraignment, and denied him three times, when no other diſciple, ſave Judas did once, Chriſt now calls calls to his mind that former ſpeech and contrary performance of his, and by thrice repeating this queſtion, Peter loveſt thou me? in reſpect of his three denials, and the firſt time adding the words, more then theſe? in reſpect of his magnifying his love beyond all others, he now engageth him by the ſenſe of his fall, to a better diſcharge, and more conſtant expreſſion of his love in converting men to the faith of Chriſt, and labouring in the Goſpel, and to raiſe him up with ſome comfort after ſo ſharp an admonition, he foretells him, that now indeed he ſhould ſuffer death for the teſtimonie of this truth.

ἐως Ἐρχωμαι V. 22. Till I come] What is oft meant in the Goſpels by the coming of Chriſt (viz. that famous execution upon the Jews,) hath been oft mention'd, (ſee Note on Matth. 16. o. & 24. b.) This John did ſurvive; Peter, of whom Chriſt propheſies here ver. 18. being put to death in Neros time, but John continuing not only till Titus's time, but through Domitians and Cocceius Nervas to Trajans reign, above an hundred years after Chriſts birth, and ſo thirty years after this coming of Chriſt was paſt. So ſaith Iren. l. 2. p. 192. A. and by what he adds of the Seniores qui non ſolùm Joannem viderint, ſed & alios Apoſtolos, the Elders which ſaw not John only, but the other Apoſtles alſo, 'tis probable, that ſome others of the Apoſtles lived to that time of Trajane alſo.

V. 25. I ſuppoſe that——] That S. John wrote this Goſpel at the entreaty of the Biſhops of Aſia, conſtituted by him, is affirmed by Euſebius, To which it is agreeable that they ſhould ſet their ſignall, or Teſtimonie to it, to recommend it to other Churches reception, And accordingly, the atteſtation is given in the plurall number, ver. 24. οἴδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθὴς, we know that his teſtimony is true. And then this laſt verſe, though it may be a concluſion of S. Johns, (the former atteſtation being included as in a parentheſis,) yet may it alſo well be a part of that atteſtation, cauſed by the conſideration of the fabrick of this Goſpel, on purpoſe deſigned not to ſet down all the paſſages of Chriſts ſtory, but ſome eminent ones, paſs'd by the other Evangeliſts: The reaſon of which is here rendred, becauſe it would be too long to ſet down all; One only objection there is againſt the Biſhops of Aſia being authors of this laſt verſe, becauſe the word οἶμαι I ſuppoſe is here in the Singular number; but that is anſwered by obſerving that that word is a form uſual in hyperbole's, which as it keeps this, and the like ſpeeches from being falſe, as they would be, were they by way of poſitive affirmation, ſo is it uſed indifferently, whether it be one, or more that ſpeak it. c. Οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθὴς οἶμαι

THE ACTS OF THE HOLY APOSTLES.

Πράξεις Ἀποστόλων.

THat which is usefull to be premised concerning this book of the Acts of the Apostles, may be reduced to these few heads: 1.

1. That Saint Luke the Physitian, which wrote the Gospel from the advertisements, which he had received from the followers and disciples of Christ which were present and eye-witnesses of the relations, wrote this history partly from other mens, partly from his own knowledge, being a companion of S. Pauls travails, for some time.

2. That this story is confined to the passages of two (not enlarged to the travails of all the) Apostles, viz: of S. Peter and S. Paul, and so doth no way pretend to give us any full relation of the plantation of Christianity in all parts, (whither all the rest of the Apostles must be presumed to have gone out, as to their severall μερίδες, or κλῆροι, or τόποι, c. 1. 25. their lots, or places, or provinces,) but only affords us an essay, or tast first of what was done in Judæa and Samaria among the Jewes remaining there, and in other cities of Syria, Asia, Macedonia, &c. even to Rome, among the Jewes in their dispersions; and secondly of the revealing the Gospel to the Gentiles, first to some single families, as that of Cornelius, and, after the Jewes had given evidences of their obstinate resolutions of opposing them (upon that account especially, that they preach'd to the Gentiles) then to whole cities and regions, profess'dly departing to the Gentiles, as those among whom they were assured of better successes then they had found among the Jewes. According to which pattern it is reasonable to believe (what we learn not from holy Scriptures more particularly, but from other stories) that the rest of the Apostles proceeded and acted in their severall journyings, and so likewise other Apostolical persons imployed by the Primary Apostles, whither they were not at leasure to go themselves. All which as it concludes the usefulnesse, and necessity of other histories to give us a perfect knowledge of those first Apostolical times, so it is farre from prejudging the authority and credit of those other Records and relations, which having no sacred character upon them, are yet written by those, whom we have no reason to suspect as deceivers, though we acknowledge them fallible.

3. That of S. Peters actions, or travails, the relations here given us are very few, not to be compared with the many other, which are not mention'd, And they proceed no farther then to his deliverance from Herods imprisonment, and the death of that persecutor, which happen'd in the year of Christ 44. After which he is known to have lived four and twenty years, and certainly was not an unprofitable steward of Gods talent entrusted to him all that time.

4. That the passages of S. Pauls travails are also but summarily and shortly set down, save only for some part of that small space, wherein S. Luke, the writer of this story, was present with him; and accordingly as from the conversion of S. Paul Anno Ch. 34. there is very little said of him, till his coming to Iconium, which was twelve years after, so the story proceeds no farther then his first coming to Rome An. Ch. 58. After which he lived ten years, and having preached the Gospel in Spain and other parts of the West, at last came to Rome again and suffered martyrdome there, after Cestius's siege of Jerusalem, and the Christians departure to Pella, which consequently both he and S. Peter lived to see, and died both of them (before the taking of it by Titus) An. Ch. 68.

Annotations on Chap. I.

2. Βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν ἁγίῳ πνεύματι

V. 5. Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt] What is meant by this phraſe βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν ἁγίῳ πνεύματι, ye ſhall be baptized with the holy Ghoſt in this place, is determined by the circumſtance of the time, then future, and yet not many daies after Chriſts ſpeaking of it; And it is clearly meant of the holy Ghoſts viſible deſcending upon the diſciples, c. 2. 2. by which he ſhould doe two things eſpecially, 1. He ſhould give them teſtimony of the truth of all that Chriſt had ſaid unto them, Joh. 15. 26. as by his deſcending on Chriſt at his Baptiſme he teſtified (and thereby God the Father himſelf) that Chriſt was the beloved ſon of God, in whom he was well pleaſed, i. e. who declared nothing, but the truth and good pleaſure of God to them. 2ly. He ſhould teſtifie to others, that whatſoever they ſhould teach, was alſo the will of God, and ſo authorize them for the ſolemn teſtifying of Chriſts reſurrection, &c. give them power, and commiſſion, and graces to diſcharge their whole miniſtery, as witneſſes now deſigned, and pointed out by him to declare and teſtifie to all Iſrael what Chriſt had done, and ſaid in their preſence, v. 8. and that he was riſen from the dead, v. 22. This may the more appear by taking notice of the oppoſition here ſet betwixt Johns baptizing with water, and the baptizing of the Apoſtles with the Spirit, here ſpoken of. To baptize is to waſh or purifie, belonging to all the kinds of purifications among the Jewes, (ſee Note on Mar. 7. c.) and from thence more eſpecially to the receiving of Proſelytes, admitting Diſciples: This John did, after the manner of the Jewes, by water onely, or by the ceremony of immerſion in water, which among them was the way of ſanctifying any thing (i. e. fitting or ſetting apart for holy uſes) and therefore the Prieſts waſhings of himſelf, before his officiating, are called in the Talmud קדושין (Joma c. 3. §. 3.) ſanctifications. Beſide this, John did nothing elſe to his diſciples, or thoſe that came in to him upon his preaching; But Chriſts diſciples, that were to be conſecrated to an office, in a more eminent manner then Johns, being to have the whole power of diſſeminating the Goſpel, and governing the Church of Chriſt after him, were not only to be received in, as Proſelytes, with that ceremony of waſhing, but God from heaven was viſibly to inſtate this power upon them, and withall to teſtifie the truth of that doctrine, which they were to preach; And this was to be done by the holy Ghoſts deſcending in a viſible manner, i. e. revealing himſelf gloriouſly by the appearance of Angels (whoſe appearance ſignifies Gods peculiar preſence.) And thus we ſee it fulfilled Act. 2. 2, &c. And what befell the Apoſtles there, as the firſt fruits of the Church of the Jewes, converted to Chriſtianity, the ſame was, in the effects of it, vouchſafed by God to Cornelius, and his family, as the firſt fruits of the Gentile-converts, Act. 10. 44. which, ſaith S. Peter, put him in mind of this ſpeech of Chriſts, that John baptized with water, but ye ſhall be baptized with the holy Ghoſt, c. 11. 16. i. e. was a demonſtration to him, that God had accepted theſe Gentiles, and ſo that they were fit to be baptized, Act. 10. 47. By this will appear the meaning of thoſe places in the Goſpels, Mat. 3. 11. I baptize you, i. e. John baptizeth you, with, or by water (that was the ceremony of his receiving men to repentance, or abſolution, and pardon of ſin upon repentance, and that was all that John did, but he that comes after me, he ſhall baptize you with the holy Ghoſt, and with fire, i. e. Chriſt ſhall ſend the Holy Ghoſt, in a glorious appearance, in flames of fire, to come down viſibly upon you, and ſo to aſſure you of the truth of the doctrine which I teach you, or elſe (as fire was uſed for conſecration, fire upon the altar, to devour the ſacrifice, and that fire firſt coming down from God to doe it, Levit. 9. 24. and fire from the altar, a coal from thence, to touch Iſaiahs lips, and ſet him apart for his Prophetick office) to ſeparate, and conſecrate you for your Apoſtleſhip, and after that, upon all unreformed impenitents, he ſhall come with fearfull judgements; ſee Mat. 3. 11. Act. 2. 17, 19. &c. So 'tis alſo Luc. 3. 16. mentioning both the holy Ghoſt, and the fire too, though Mark 1. 8. and John 1. 33. mention not the fire, but only the holy Ghoſt. Beſides theſe two ſpeciall uſes of the holy Ghoſts deſcending on them, one common conſtant uſe there was alſo, which belonged to all Chriſtians, not only Apoſtles (as appears by Joh. 7. 39. where Chriſt mentions the Spirit, which not only the Apoſtles, but believers in common, i. e. all Chriſtians ſhould receive after his Aſcenſion) the giving them ſtrength to perform what God now required of them, and therefore all that came into the Chriſtian Church, as proſelytes of Chriſt (not only thoſe that were ſet apart for the miniſtery) are ſaid to be born anew, i. e. received as Chriſtian proſelytes, and baptized with water, and the holy Ghoſt, Joh. 3. 5. not only made partakers of the ceremony of Johns Baptiſme, water, which ſignifies purging from ſinne, but, over and above that, made partakers of the holy Ghoſt, being received into the Chriſtian Church by thoſe, on whom the holy Ghoſt came down, Act. 2. (and that not onely for themſelves, to confirm the truth of Chriſts preaching, and to give them their commiſſion, but alſo) to reſt upon them, as the founders of the Chriſtian Church, ſo that they might communicate the benefit, and influences of it to others, to the end of the world, ſo farre as was uſefull to the condition of every one; And that is to fit every one, and enable him to diſcharge that calling, whereunto he is admitted; As if he be admitted barely into the Church, to be a Chriſtian, then beſide water, wherein he is baptized, after the manner of all other Proſelytes, he hath alſo from God, by the Apoſtles bleſſing of him, the holy Ghoſt beſtowed on him, i. e. thoſe benefits of it, which belong, and are neceſſary for every Chriſtian, viz: pardon of ſinne, and grace to lead a new life; and this ſtyled being born anew of water, and of the holy Ghoſt, Joh. 3. 5. and is intended to be an effect, or conſequent of Chriſts Aſcen[illegible] v. 13, 14. (after which it was that the holy Ghoſt came down upon upon the Apostles here) and to be a superior thing (and that which more effectually tended to the salvation of believers, that is, Christians, Joh. 3. 15.) then either the Jewish or Johns Baptisme, which, being the Baptisme of water alone, was not able to bestow this, and therefore it is, that they that had been baptized onely with Johns Baptisme, Act. 19. were by the Apostles, when they knew it, baptized farther in the name of the Lord Jesus, (see c. 2. Note d.) In like manner, they that were admitted into the Church, to any speciall function, as to that of Bishops, (which consisted in the exercise of Censures, and in the power of ordaining others) or c. 6. to that of Deacons, (and of Presbyters afterwards) who had some parts of sacred functions communicated to them, that of preaching the Gospel Act. 8. 12. and of baptizing, were thus admitted also by the Apostles (and after them by the Bishops their successors) by laying their hands on them, and blessing, or consecrating them, that is, giving them the holy Ghost also, that is, that externall commission, which here they had, by the holy Ghosts descent upon them, and also (for some time) extraordinary gifts of tongues, and miracles, and prophecying, usefull for the discharge of those functions.

b. V. 7. The seasons] The word καιρὸς, which sometimes signifies an opportunity, or seasonable time, sometimes also signifies a moment, or least particle, of time. Thus 'tis wont to be defined καιρὸς ἐστιν, ἐν ᾧ οὐκ ἔστι χρόνος, it is that wherein there is no time; And so it seems to signifie here, where Gods reserving the χρόνους καὶ καιροὺς times and moments, in his own hands, so that they shall not be known by them, seems parallel to the day and hour knoweth no man, the day, and the times noting a larger proportion of time, and the hour, and the moment a lesser, and accordingly the Vulgar reads vel momenta, or moments.

c. Νεφέλη V. 9. A cloud] The appearance of Angels is ordinarily described by a cloud, as hath been formerly said; and so here the clouds receiving him, signifies the Angels receiving him. Thus when Exod. 25. 22. it is said of the covering of the arke, There will I meet thee, and commune with thee from betwixt the two Cherubims, &c. It is Lev. 16. 2. I will appear in the cloud upon that propitiatory, or covering, of the ark.

d. Ὑπερῷον V. 13. An upper roome.] It is said by the writer of this book Lu. 24. 53. that the Apostles after Christs Assumption returned to Jerusalem, and were διαπαντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, continually in the temple, praising, and blessing God (which clearly signifies that the Temple at Jerusalem was the place (not of their continuall abode, but) of their constant daily performance of their devotions; see Lu. 2. 37.) and so he concludes that Gospel. And here where he begins another book, and, in that, the story after the Ascension of Christ, and so repeats that again v. 9. &c. he adds v. 12. as he had said in the Gospel, that they returned to Jerusalem, and when they came thither, ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ὑπερῷον, they went up into an upper room, and there, that is, in that upper room, saith he, (the same S. Luke, that before had said, they were continually, or at the times of devotion, constantly in the Temple) all the eleven disciples ἦσαν καταμένοντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ καὶ τῇ δεήσει, continued unanimously in prayer and supplication, that is, did there daily perform their devotions, and religious offices, manifestly referring to the ὑπερῷον, or upper room, where they daily did so; And so ch. 2. 1. where they are said to be all unanimously ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ together (a phrase to denote their sacred assemblies, or ἐπισυναγωγαὶ) this sure denotes the ὑπερῷον, the upper room, as the constant place of their daily devotions. From the comparing of these two places, and the phrases used in the severall places, ἦσαν διαπαντὸς, they were continually, and ἦσαν διαμένοντες, they were continuing, being perfectly equivalent, some difficulty would arise, how the Temple should by the same historian be set down as the daily constant place of their devotions, in one place, and the upper room in the same manner and phrase, to be it, in the other, were not this way of reconciling that difficulty neer at hand, (taken notice of by some late Criticks, but not favoured by others) viz: that the Temple had many chambers, and upper rooms in its circuit, which served not only for the uses of the Priests, and for the keeping of the holy things, but stood open some of them for religious meetings also.) So 1. Chron. 28. 11. in the pattern that David gave to Solomon, we have expresse mention of the Porch, and the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, &c. So again in Solomon's building 1 Kin. 6. 5, 6. chambers round about, of the first, 2d, and 3d story, and 2. Chron. 3. 9. he overlaid the upper chambers with gold, and so, I suppose, Jer. 26. 10. the chamber of Gemariah in the higher court, might be one of these. And so in the second Temple there will be little reason to doubt, the structure being the same, though not so sumptuous, as the former, and the names of the severall parts continuing in the New Testament, which had belonged to the first building, as Solomons Porch, &c. And so often in the Talmud, Joma, c. 1. the chief priest seven daies before the day of expiation is fetch'd from his owne house, ללשכה פרהדרין to the chamber of the paredrin, and so in the Gemara, he that offered the red cow, was brought ללשכת בית האבן to the chamber of the house of the stone, and many the like, as to the chamber of the house Abtines, and that peculiarly called עליות בית אבטינס the high, or upper room of the house Abtines, and so in like manner, the chamber where the Priest wash'd himself, is described to be over the הפרוה and so to be an upper room. And so these upper rooms being parts of the Temple, whosoever were assembled in any of them (as it is said the Apostles were) are truly said to be in the Temple. If this be granted, as it will be hard to give any other tolerable sense of it, then, in all probability, the κατ' οἶκον c. 2. 46. the house where they brake bread, or received the Sacrament, joyned with their continuing daily with one accord in the Temple, will be this place also, where they did that more privately, which could not, we may presume, be done in the Temple in any more publick place. For that the phrase κατ' οἶκον signifies no more then ἐν οἴκῳ in the house may appear by comparing Rom. 16. 4. with 1 Cor. 16. 19 where the Church in their house in one place, is κατ' οἶκον αὐτῶν in the other; see note on 1 Cor. 16. c. And for the word House that οἶκος that is used for the Temple, or any part of it, even for these upper rooms, which we now speak of, is clear both by comparing the Gospels, Mat. 23. 35. with Lu. 11. 51. (where that which is οἶκος house in one, is ναὸς temple in the other) and also by the Talmud where the Temple it self is frequently called בית house, and so also the severall rooms or chambers in it, בית האבן before mentioned, the house of the stone, בית השבילה, the house of washing, Joma c. 3. §. 2. (and that called קדש, an holy place in opposition to common or profane) על בית הפרוה over the house of Happarvah; Which house of Happarvah, being explained what it is, in Middoth c. 5. (to wit, the place where the skins of the sacrifices were salted) is there called שכת הפרוה Conclave Happarvæ, the chamber of Happarvah, House, and Chamber, being there used in the same notion, and noting the severall chambers in the Temple to be called οἶκοι houses, and those, holy places, fit for sacred uses, and so here used by the Christians for their meetings, to eat the Lords supper together, which they could not hope to be permitted to doe more openly in the Temple; the Christian religion being not much favoured by the Jewes. Of these rooms or houses in the Temple we find mention in Epiphanius de ponder.

ch. 14. where of Adrian he ſaith, that viſiting Jeruſalem, he found the Temple demoliſhed παρεκλὸς ὀλίγων οἰκημάτων, except a few houſes, ᾗ τῆς τῦ Θεῦ ἐκκλησίας μικρᾶς ὄσης, &c. and the little Church of God, where the diſciples returning from the mount Olivet went up to the upper room, ἐκεῖ γὰρ ᾠκοδόμηλο, τυλέσιν ἐν τῷ μέρει Σιὼν, &c. for there it was built, that is, in part of mount Sion, which clearly affirms this upper room to have been a part of Sion, and ſo of the Temple, as was ſaid, and afterwards to have been by the Chriſtians built into a Church. And accordingly Theophylact and Oecumenius, οἶκον τὸ ἱερὸν νῦν λέγει, ἐν ᾧ πῶ γὰρ ἤδιον, by the houſe he means the Temple, for in that they did eat.

e. 'Ονομα

V. 15. Names] That the word ὄνομα name is here taken for a perſon, not literally a name, will eaſily appear by the like uſe of שם in the Hebrew; for though that primarily ſignifie a name, yet 'tis ordinarily uſed in the Hebrew writers in this other ſenſe for perſon, and with an Emphatical adjunct (השם, the name) it is commonly ſet to ſignifie God, who is καὶ ἐξοχὴν, ὁ ὤν he that is; And from thence, in Ignatius's Epiſtle to the Epheſians, τὸ ὄνομα φέρειν, to carry the name, is to carry God, that is, Chriſt about with him (the importance of that Martyrs title Θεοφόρ) and is therefore rendred by the vulgar tranſlator, Nomen Chriſti circumportare, to bear about the name of Chriſt. And ſo S. Cyprian uſes the word nomen, name. So S. Chryſoſtome Hom. 1. in Rom. * οὐδὲ ἱκανοὶ ἀρκῦντες ὀνόμασιν, not ſufficient for twenty names, that is, for an aſſembly of ſo many perſons.

* p. 4. l. 1.

f. Ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ

1b. Together] Ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ is the Greek expreſſion in the Old Teſtament to interpret the Hebrew word, יחד together, ſo Pſal. 2. 2. נוסדי יחד, Συνήχθησαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, they aſſembled together, as in a councell, all about the ſame buſineſſe, and deſigne, all as one man, and ſo here, and c. 2. 1. and 1 Cor. 11. 20. the phraſe ſignifies, and notes theſe aſſemblies for the ſervice of God, to be deſigned for the uniting of the prayers and ſervice of all into one, every action being to be accounted not the action of private men, but of the whole body, and therefore 1 Cor. 11. the eating there Ἴδιον δεῖπνον, v. 21. a mans own meal, a mans eating that there which himſelf had brought, is ſet contrary to the κυριακὸν δεῖπνον, the Lords ſupper, or the Church meal, which is eaten Συνερχομένων ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, when they are come together to one, or the ſame, that is, all to be as one, not as ſeverall.

g. πρηνὴς

V. 18. Falling headlong] That Juda's death was cauſed by a ſuffocation of grief was ſhewed, Note on Mat. 27. a. The death is here deſcribed by πρηνὴς γενόμενος, and that doth not neceſſarily import any more than falling forward on the face, (contrary to ſupinus, falling or lying on the back) as it is on the place in Matthew, expounded from the Grammarians; but it is poſſible alſo it may denote the throwing himſelf down a precipice, which among humane authors is frequently mention'd of thoſe, who through exceſſe of melancholy, or oppreſſion of conſcience, eſpecially upon guilt of blood, are weary of their lives, and have this ready way to deliver themſelves from that burthen. 'Twere impertinent to multiply teſtimonies to that purpoſe; The authors of the Ἰταλικὰ mention it of other creatures, that on occaſion of great ſadneſſe have done the like. But whether this were the manner of his death or no, the Context gives us no means to define.

h. Ἔλακησε Μέσος

1b. Burſt aſunder] The word ἔλακησε is the Greek by which the old Gloſſary renders diſſiluit, not as that ſignifies to leap down, but to break aſunder, & μέσος added to it ſignifies no more then in Latine, medius diſcerpitur or diſrumpitur, or ἐχύθη μέσον Lu. 23. 45. that is, that he was broken in pieces, a naturall conſequent of which it is, which here follows, that his bowels guſhed out at the wound, or rupture.

i. Ἐπισκοπὴ

V. 20. Biſhopricke] The word ἐπίσκοπὴ and ἐπίσκοπος, is frequently uſed in the Old and New Teſtament. In the Old Teſtament there be two Hebrew words rendred by the Greek ἐπίσκοτος, 1. אל, which as it is oft rendred θεὸς, κύριος, ἄγγελος, God, Lord, Angel, ſo once ἐπίσκοπος. So among profane authors 'tis all one with ἄρχων ruler, (as in * Ariſtides, where after the mention of Kings are added οἱ καθ' ἑκάστην ἐπίσκοποι ἀφικνέμενοι, they that come annually as Epiſcopi, overſeers, of which he had ſaid before, ἡγεμόνες ἢ ἡμῖν ἐν νόμῳ φοιτῶσι καθ' ἕκαστον ἔτος, there come rulers by law every year, by which it appears that ἡγεμόνες and ἐπίσκοποι rulers and Biſhops are all one, and ſo Juſtinian calls thoſe which Ariſtides ſpeaks of, ἄρχοντες ἐπαρχιῶν and μητροπόλεων, the rulers of provinces and Metropoles, and accordingly Heſychius explains ἐπίσκοπον by βασιλέα king or governour.) The 2d Hebrew word which is rendred by it, is מפקד, and other the Derivatives of פקד viſitavit, פקוד, פקיד, all which note a prefect or governour, or any impowr'd by commiſſion to exerciſe any authority entruſted to him. And as 'tis ſometimes rendred ἐπίσκοπος, ſo elſewhere ἐπισάτης, προστάτης, ἄρχων, τοπάρχης, κωμάρχης, all words of government, or prefecture, and once θυρωρὸς, dore-keeper, to whom the keyes of the houſe of the Lord were committed, Ezech. 44. 2. when 'tis rendred ἐπίσκοπος, 'tis taken in five ſenſes, 1. in an army ἐπίσκοπος τῆς δυνάμεως, Num. 31. 14. Judg. 9. 28. 2 Kin. 11. 15. the captain of the hoſt, 2dly, among workmen, the principal that were ſet over all others in the building of the Temple, 2 Chron. 34. 12, 17. 3dly, in the city, the ruler or prince, Neh. 11. 9, 14. and eſpecially of the Prieſts, v. 10. and of the Levites, v. 15 4thly, in the miniſtery of the Temple, Eleazar the ſon of Aharon, (who Num. 3. 32. is ἀρχόντων τῶν Λευϊτῶν ἄρχων, the ruler of the rulers of the Levites) Num. 4. 16. is called ἐπίσκοπος Ἐλεάζαρ, biſhop Eleazar. 5thly, in the houſe of the Lord, over which he that was ſet is ἐπίσκοπος ἐπὶ τῷ οἴκου κυρίου, 2 Kin. 11. 18. the biſhop over the houſe of the Lord. By all which it appears that agreeable to the notion of the word in the Old Teſtament, ἐπισκοπὴ here (and ἐπίσκοπος elſwhere) in the New, denotes prefecture, or ruling power in the Church, viz: that Apoſtolick power, which at the coming of the Holy Ghoſt was to be inſtated upon him that ſhould now be choſen into Judas's place, to be an Apoſtle. See Note on Phil. 1. b.

* Or. de concord ad Aſiat. Civ.

V. 25. His own place] What is here meant by ὁ τόπος ὁ ἴδιος, may be beſt collected from the κλῆρος διακονίας καὶ Ἀποστολῆς, lot, or portion, of miniſtery and Apoſtleſhip, that is, of Apoſtolical miniſtery, in the beginning of the verſe, the taking of which is preparative here, to his going to this. That certainly ſignifies μέρος, λαχμὸν, μερίδα, in Phavorinus, a part, or portion that falls to any, particularly a province that belongs to any Governor, and (if that be a Biſhop or Governor of the Church, then) ſuch a Province, (ſtyled, v. 20. out of the Pſalmiſt, ἐπισκοπὴ, Biſhoprick) which he that ſucceeds in, is ſaid λαβεῖν to take there, as here λαβεῖν κλῆρον to take the portion of miniſterie, &c. And then that which is thus become any mans aſſigned Province, cannot more fitly be expreſs'd than by ἴδιος τόπος, the place, or Province, proper to that man, aſſigned to him. This therefore regularly belonging to Judas, if he had not, by his treaſon againſt his Maſter, forfeited it, (which is here ſaid as in a parentheſis, being incloſed with two comma's, ἐξ ἧς παρέβη Ἰούδας,) Matthias now ſucceeds him in it, takes his κλῆρον lot or portion, and ſo is now to go to this, as his own place or Province, which had elſe belonged to another. Many prejudices there are againſt underſtanding this phraſe of Hell, as ſome have underſtood it; as the place whither Judas was to go. For 1. That was not his ἴδιος τόπος, the proper place or aſſignation, of Judas, but common to all other damned

ed spirits. 2. 'Twas not S. Luke's office to pass sentence on Judas, any farther, then by setting down the hainousness of his crime, which he had done v. 16, 17, 18, 19. and was not to proceed to judge, or affirme ought of Gods secrets, such is his going into hell. And 'tis S. Chrysostomes observation on v. 16. Ἰδὲ τὸ φιλόσοφον τῆς ἀνδρὸς, πῶς οὐκ ὑβρίζει, οὐδὲ ἐνδελεῖαι, behold the wisdome of S. Luke, how he doth not reproach or insult on Judas; but simply sets down the matter of fact, without any descant on it, and what he addes, περὶ τῆς παρούσης δίκης διαλέγεται he discourses of the present vengeance, belongs evidently to what befell him in this present world, and so excludes all inlarging to his future damnation. 3. There is no propriety in saying of the one, that he sinned to go to hell, but of the other 'tis most proper so say, that he was elected to such a κλῆρος or portion, to go, or that he might go, to it. To this accords Theophylact, ἴδιον τόπον —— He calls that his own place which Matthias should obtain. —— So Oecumenius, ἢ ὅτι τῆς Ἰούδα ἐξαποστάντος ἴδιον σχοίη, τοῦτον ἐκεῖνος λαμβάνων ἐπισκοπὴν It may be interpreted of Matthias, that Judas being fallen, he should have his place for his own, receiving his Bishoprick, making place and Bishoprick Synonyma. So Didymus; the word τόπος among many things signifies, saith he, an order, as the place of a Bishop or an Elder. So the Ordinary Gloss, ut abiret in locum suum, that is, sortem Apostolicam, his own place, that is, the Apostolical lot, making κλῆρος and τόπος all one, just as I have interpreted it.

l. 26. Was numbred] The word συγκαλεψηφίσθη is acknowledged to come from ψῆφος calculus, a stone, or the like, of which there were two uses, one in choises, or judgments, wherein they gave their votes by this means, Rev. 2. 17. the other in accounting or numbring. Hence ψῆφος is expres'd in Hesychius by λόγος, as that signifies counting, and by κρίσις, judgement. Now for the use of it in this place, first it is evident that Matthias, being here chosen by lot, was not chosen by the suffrages or votes of men; 2dly that καταψηφίζω proportionably to ψῆφος, signifying Originally two things, numbring, as well as choosing, it may most probably in this place signifie being numbred, and so συγκαλεψηφίσθη μετὰ τῶν ἕνδεκα he was numbred together with the eleven Apostles, will be all one with κατηριθμημένος ἦν σὺν ἡμῖν, he was numbred with us, v. 17. (or with σὺν ἡμῖν γενέσθαι to be with us, v. 22.) and that is explained by ἔλαχε κλῆρον, he obtained his portion of this ministery, that is, office Apostolical; Or if it should possibly refetre to the notion of election, it must then denote Gods choice of him v. 24. by the disposing of the lot, and not any votes, or suffrages of others, which had nothing to doe in this matter: for though Joseph, and Matthias were by the Eleven nominated, or chosen, to prepare for the lot, yet that Matthias was pitch'd on and added to the Eleven, it was meerly the decision of the lot, and so the disposition of the Lord. So vain is the pretension of those, that will have this rendred, Communibus calculis annumerabatur, he was by common votes, or suffrages, added to that number, and then make their own deductions from thence.

CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

1. AND when the day of Pentecost * was a fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.]

* was come

1. On the approach of the Lords day following the sabbath, on which the Jewish Pentecost was celebrated, they were (all the Apostles together) assembled at the service of God, in their accustomed place. See c. 1. 13. & note c.

† violent winde brought or coming, φερομένης πνοῆς βιαίας.

2. And suddainly there came a sound from heaven, as of a † rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.]

2. And whilst they were so imploy'd, suddenly they heard a great noise come down from heaven, like that of a mighty boisterous wind (to note the efficacy of this Spirit of God now descending) and it came into the upper room where they were assembled, and filled all the room.

3. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.]

3. And there was an appearance of somewhat, like flaming fire, lighting on every one of them, which divided asunder, and so became the resemblance of tongues, with that part of them which was next their heads, divided, or cloven, (see note on Mat. 3. k.)

4. And they were all filled with the holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them * utterance.]

* to speak ἀποφθέγγεσθαι

4. And they were endued every one with gifts of the holy Ghost, That of speaking with tongues, which they never had learnt, and other miraculous powers, this coming of the holy Ghost bestowed on them.

† were abiding, κατοικοῦντες

5. And there † were [dwelling at Jerusalem, Jewes, devout men out of every nation under heaven.]

5. abiding at Jerusalem many Jewes that came up to that feast of Pentecost, and likewise proselytes (see v. 10.) which had come from severall nations of all quarters of the world to worship the true God at Jerusalem. (See note on Mat. 23. e. and Joh. 12. a.)

6. Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, [and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.]

6. and were astonished, because they being of severall nations, every of them heard the Apostles speak the language of his nation.

7. And they were all amazed, and marvailed, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these, which speak, [Galileans?]

7. men born in Galilee, and that have lived there all their times?

8. And how hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born?]

8. And how doth every of us hear them speak every of those languages which are native to us?

9. Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia,

10. Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Lybia about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, * Jewes, and Proselytes,

† What will this be? τί ἂν θέλοι τοῦτο εἶναι;

12. And they were all amazed and were in doubt, saying one to another, [† What meaneth this?]

12. This certainly abodes some great matter.

15. That theſe men are not drunk, as ye ſay, for it is but nine in the morning, the time of morning prayers, to which the Jews generally came faſting (ſee note on Mat 12. a.)

15. For theſe men are not drunken, as ye ſuppoſe, ſeeing it is but the third hour of the day.]

16. But the truth is, that which is now done is the completion of a famous prophecy, Joel. 2. 28.

16. But this is that which is ſpoken by the prophet Joel,]

b. 17, 18. In the daies of the Meſſias, ſaith God, there ſhall be a moſt remarkable effuſion of the Spirit of God upon men of all ranks, and qualities, enabling them which were never brought up in the ſchools of the prophets to goe and preach the Goſpel of Chriſt in every city (and this was fulfilled in the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt upon the diſciples, ſending them to preach and fitting them with the gift of prophecy, and of tongues, both as a miracle to beget faith, and as a means to ſpeak inteliigibly to men of all languages.)

17. And it ſhall come to paſſe in the [b] laſt daies (ſaith God) I will pour out of my Spirit upon all fleſh: and your ſons and your daughters ſhall prophecy, and your young men ſhall ſee viſions, and your old men ſhall dream dreams:

18. And on my ſervants, and on my handmaidens, I will pour out in thoſe daies of my Spirit, and they ſhall prophecy.]

19, 20, 21. And after that there ſhall be many fearfull ſtupendious ſights and prodigies, and many great ſlaughters in Judea, as forerunners and preſignifications of the great famous deſtruction (ſee Mat. 3. 11, 12.) which ſhall befall this people (foretold by Chriſt, Mar. 24. ſee Heb. 10. a.) for their crucifying of Chriſt, and from which the only way to reſcue any, is to repent and acknowledge Chriſt, which to gain men to, was the deſign of the coming of the holy Ghoſt, Joh. 16. 8.

19. And I will ſhew wonders in heaven above, and ſignes in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of ſmoke.

20. The ſun ſhall be turned into darkneſſe, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come.

21. And it ſhall come to paſſe that whoſoever ſhall call upon the name of the Lord * ſhall be ſaved.] * ſhall eſcape, σωθήσεται

22. This Jeſus of Nazareth being demonſtrated to be ſent from God by the mighty works which by him God hath done among you, all which you know to be true, and of which ye your ſelves are witneſſes.

22. Ye men of Iſrael hear theſe words, [Jeſus of Nazareth, a man † approved of God among you by miracles, wonders and ſignes, which God did by him in the midſt of you, as ye your ſelves alſo know,] † marked out by God, ἀποδεδειγμένον ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ

23. Him, being permitted by God to fall into your hands, God withdrawing that protection, which was neceſſary to have preſerved him from them, (and this by his decree, that he ſhould lay down his life for his ſheep, in order to that great deſigne of mans ſalvation, toward which he did by his foreknowledge diſcern this the fitteſt expedient) ye apprehended and crucified moſt wickedly.

23. Him being delivered by the determinate counſell and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and ſlain.]

c. 24. But God hath raiſed him again, delivering him from the power of death, not ſuffering him to continue dead, the goodneſſe of God being ingaged in this, not to ſuffer an innocent perſon (ſo unjuſtly and unthankfully handled by the Jewes) to lie under death, and, beſides many other things, the prophecies of him neceſſarily requiring that he ſhould not.

24. Whom God raiſed up, having looſed * the [c] pains of death: becauſe it was not poſſible that he ſhould be holden of it.] * the bands, ὠδῖνας

25. For of him ſaith David, Pſ. 16. 8. I waited and looked with all affiance and confidence on God, for he is my defender, ſo as to keep me from miſcarrying.

25. For David ſpeaketh concerning him, I foreſaw the Lord alwaies before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I ſhould not be moved.]

26. For this, my glory, that is, my tongue (becauſe that is the member, the inſtrument of glorifying God) ſhall rejoice, and my fleſh ſhall reſt confident.

26. Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad: moreover alſo my fleſh ſhall reſt in hope.]

27. For though I die, yet ſhalt thou not leave me ſo long dead, as that my body ſhould be putrefied, that is, thou ſhalt raiſe me from death before the third day be paſt.

27. Becauſe thou wilt not leave my ſoul in † hell, neither wilt thou ſuffer thine holy one to ſee corruption.] † hades, ᾅδου

28. Thou haſt cheered me, & abundantly refreſhed me with thy favour.

28. Thou haſt made known to me the waies of life, thou ſhalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.]

29. Let me therefore ſpeak to you freely and without any reſervedneſſe (ſee note on Joh. 7. 13.) concerning that David that thus ſpake, that he died like other men, and had a ſolemn interment, and we ſtill have his monument to ſhew, from whence he never roſe.

29. Men and brethren, let me freely ſpeak unto you of the Patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his ſepulchre is with us untill this day.]

30. And therefore not ſpeaking of himſelf but by way of prediction of the Meſſias, knowing that he ſhould infallibly ſpring from his loynes, that was to be prince and ruler of his Church,

30. Being therefore a prophet, and knowing that God had ſworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loynes according to the fleſh, he would raiſe up Chriſt to ſit on his throne,]

31. This ſpeech of his was prophetick, referring to this reſurrection of Chriſt, whereupon 'tis ſaid, that his ſoul ſhould not continue in ſtate of ſeparation from the body, In which ſtate though it were for a while, yet it continued not ſo long, till the body was corrupted, that is, not the ſpace of 72 houres, or three daies.

31. He ſeeing this before, ſpake of the reſurrection of Chriſt, that his ſoul was not left in hell, neither his fleſh did ſee corruption.]

32. And accordingly hath God raiſed up Chriſt within that ſpace of time, within three daies, and all we Apoſtles are eye-witneſſes of it.

32. This Jeſus hath God raiſed up, whereof we all are witneſſes.]

33. Being therefore aſſumed to his regall ſtate, and office in heaven, and God having performed to him, (as all his other, ſo peculiarly) this promiſe made to him, of giving him power to ſend the holy Ghoſt, he hath accordingly now ſent him, and this prodigie, which ye now ſee, and hear, is an effect of that, viz. the ſpeaking with tongues, which the hour before they underſtood not.

33. Therefore being * by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt, he hath ſhed forth this which we now ſee and hear.] * exalted to the right, τῇ δεξιᾷ

34. For

† went not up, οὐκ ἀνέβη

34. For David † is not ascended into the heavens, but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand,

35. Untill I make thy foes thy footstool.]

34, 35. For this cannot be interpreted of David himself, though he spake it in his own person, for he never went to heaven bodily, and so cannot be said to be exalted to God's right hand, while his enemies are made his footstool: But he speaks of him, of whom this was to be verified, as of his Lord, The Lord, saith he, said to my Lord, Psal. 110. 1.

36. Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.]

36. This great important truth therefore I now proclaim unto you, that that Christ whom ye Jewes have crucified, God the Father hath raised up, and by assuming him to his right hand, setled him there, as a head of his Church, instated him in the true kingly office of the Messias.

37. Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter, and to the rest of the Apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we doe?]

37. Upon these words of Peter, they had great compunction, and as men that were willing to doe any thing to rescue themselves from the guilt of so horrible a sinne, as crucifying the Messias, they cried out most passionately to Peter, and the rest of the Apostles that were present, beseeching their directions what to doe in this case.

38. Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sinnes, and ye shall receive the d gift of the holy Ghost.]

38. And Peter answered them, that there was now but one possible way left, and that was with true contrition, and acknowledgement of their sinne, to hasten out of this infidelity, and with a sincere and thorough change to come as proselytes to Christ, and enter upon Christian profession with a vow of never falling off from it, and so to receive baptisme from the Apostles, that sacrament, wherein Christ enabled them to bestow, or convey from him, remission of sinnes to all true penitents, farther promising them that they should be made partakers of the holy Ghost also, and of those gifts which by the descent of the Spirit were powr'd out on the Church, and some among them of those miraculous powers which they now saw and admired in the Apostles (see c. 4. 31. and note on c. 6. c.) d

39. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afarre off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.]

39. For to you, saith he, the benefit of that promise appertains, if you will lay hold on it; and indeed primarily to you Jewes this promise of the holy Ghost was made, on purpose for this, that by our preaching to you, ye might be converted, and convinced of the vileness of what you have done, and upon repentance be received into mercy, and receive absolution from us, as the deputies and proxies of Christ, which is gone. And as the advantage hereof belongs primarily to you, to whom our first addresse was to be made; so in the next place, upon your rejecting it, it must be extended to the rest of the world, to all the Gentiles which shall obey and come in to Christ at his call, or upon our preaching to them.

Escape out of, σώθητε ἀπὸ

40. And with many other words did he testifie and exhort, saying, * Save your selves from this untoward generation.]

40. And many other discourses he made to them, all to this effect, conjuring and hastening them with all speed to get (as the Angel did Lot out of Sodome, Gen. 19. 17.) out of this state of high provoking infidelity, wherein the multitude of Jewes were engaged.

41. Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand soules.]

41. And all that were really affected by what he said came and renounced their former courses, and approved the sincerity of their change, and received baptisme: and that day about 3000 men were converted to Christianity.

42. And they continued † stedfastly in the Apostles doctrine, and e fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.]

42. And all that were so, continued assiduous in hearing the Apostles teach, and in bringing their goods liberally for the use of them that wanted, v. 45. and in eating the Lords Supper, and praying together. e

43. And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signes were done by the Apostles.]

43. And a generall astonishment surprized men to see first those strange operations of the holy Ghost v. 4. (a consequent of which was this wonderfull accession of converts v. 41.) And withall the Apostles did many miracles of very different sorts, some of cures, and some of exemplary severities, and thereby came to have a very great authority among all that heard it, ch. 5. 5.

44. And all that believed were together, and had all things common,

45. And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.]

44, 45. And all that received the faith assembled together for the service of God, observed constant times of publick prayers, and receiving the sacrament of the Lords supper, (see note on ch. 1. e.) the richer communicated their goods to the poorer as freely, as if they had been theirs.

brake bread in the house, and simplicity, liberality, ἀπλότητι, see note on ch. 6. 1. charity to those that escape, σωζομένους.

46. And they continued daily with one accord in the Temple, and * breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and † singleness of heart,]

46. And they daily assembled in the Temple, and received the Lords supper in some of those upper rooms (see note on ch. 1. d.) and eat together in a most pious charitable manner, with great cheerfulness, and cordiall sincere bounty and liberality,

47. Praising God, and f having * favour with all the people. And the Lord added to the Church daily † such as should be saved.]

47. Blessing the name of God, and exercising works of mercy to all that wanted: and God daily moved the hearts of some or other to come in to this number, gave the Apostles a fruitfull harvest, every day brought them in some that obeyed the exhortation given them, ver. 40. repented and got out of the actions and wicked lives of that crooked generation, and betook themselves to the obedience of Christ, see note on Lu. 13. 23. b. f

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. συμπληροῦσθαι

V. 1. Fully come] The word συμπληροῦσθαι here is all one with the simple πληροῦς in other places. And that is taken in a peculiar notion, when 'tis applied to times, signifying that such a time is come. So Gen. 25. 24. when her daies to be delivered were fulfilled, that is, when her time of child-birth was come. For which the Evangelist reads ἐπλήσθη ὁ χρόνος τοῦ τεκεῖν αὐτήν, The time of her bringing forth was filled, Lu. 1. 57. So Gen. 29. 21. My daies are fulfilled, that is, the time agreed upon for my taking her to marriage is now come. So Mar. 11. 15. πεπλήρωται ὁ καιρός, the time is fulfilled, that is, now is that due season come, the criticall point, wherein, if they repent not, they shall perish. So Lu. 21. 24. Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, untill the times of the Gentiles πληρωθῶσι be fulfilled, that is, till the peculiar season concerning the Gentiles (see the place) doe πεπλήρωται ὁ καιρός

πληρωθῶσι καιροὶ ἐθνῶν

come. And this very συμπληρῶσθαι is ſo uſed *Lu.*9.51. ἐν τῷ συμπληρῶσθαι τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ἀναλήψεως αὐτοῦ, when the daies were fulfilled, that is, were come, of his being taken up. Accordingly ἐν τῷ συμπληρῶσθαι ἡμέραν τῆς πεντηκοστῆς here, is no more then, when the day of Pentecoſt was come, or upon that day.

b. Ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις

V.17. Laſt daies] Ἔσχατα ἡμέρα, the laſt daies, doe in that place of Joel literally ſignifie the laſt daies of the Jewes, immediately preceding their deſtruction, called there, the great and terrible day of the Lord: And accordingly the laſt daies have among the Jews proverbially ſignified the daies of the Meſſias, which they call אחרים הימים the laſt daies; and both theſe notions are very reconcilable. For as the coming of the Meſſias ſignifies, beſide the coming of him in the fleſh, his entring on his kingdome, and as a branch of that, his coming to be avenged on his crucifiers, *Matth.*24.1. ſo the laſt daies here ſignifie peculiarly the time beginning after the Reſurrection, and Aſcenſion of Chriſt, as here appears by the powring of the Spirit, and the prodigies, ver.19. before the great and terrible day of the Lord, ver.26. that is, this deſtruction of Jeruſalem. So 2 *Tim.*3.1. ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, in the laſt daies, that is, not long after the Reſurrection of Chriſt, ſhould come thoſe hard times, to wit, before the deſtruction of the Jewes, and ſo in the latter times, 1 *Tim.*4.1. So *Hebr.*1.2. ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, the daies of the Meſſias, and 1 *Cor.*10.11. we, τέλη αἰώνων that is, Chriſtians, on whom τὰ τέλη τῶν αἰώνων κατήντησεν, the end of the ages are come. So *Jam.*5.3. ſpeaking of the wealthy Jewes, he ſaith, that they have treaſured up their wealth as fire, ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, in, or againſt, the laſt daies, that is, againſt thoſe times of deſtruction, when their wealth ſhould but doe them miſchief, mark them out for prizes and preyes before Καιρὸς ἔσχατος other men. So 1 *Pet.*1.5. ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ, in the laſt time, noting, no queſtion, that time then at hand, wherein the incredulous Jewes ſhould be deſtroyed, and the believers reſcued out of their perſecutions and Σωτηρία ἑτοίμη ἀποκαλυφθῆναι dangers, which is there denoted by σωτηρία ἑτοίμη ἀποκαλυφθῆναι, deliverance ready to be revealed, according to the notion of σωτηρία formerly mentioned Lu. Ὀλίγον ἀφʼ 1.23.a. and again by ὀλίγον ἀφʼ (οὗ δέον ἐστὶ) v.6. after a little time yet of temptations or ſufferings. So again for the time of Chriſt in generall 1 Pet. 1.20. ἐπ᾽ ἐσχάτων τῶν χρόνων, and 2 *Pet.*3.3. and Jude 18. ἐν ἐσχάτῳ χρόνῳ ἐν ἐσχάτῳ χρόνῳ, in the more ſpeciall ſenſe, that there ſhould be Atheiſticall ſcoffers, that ſhould accuſe Chriſt of breaking his promiſe in coming to avenge himſelf on the crucifiers, and to reſcue the Chriſtians Ἐσχάτη ὥρα from their perſecutors. So 1 *Joh.*2.18. ἐσχάτη ὥρα ἐστὶν, It is the laſt hour, to the ſame ſenſe of that approaching judgment, which was then yet neerer at hand. And all this taken from that prophecy of Moſes, Deut. 31.29. Evil will befall you in the latter daies. In reciting this parcell of Joels prophecy, it ἐπιφανῆ ἡμέραν may not be unworthy our notice, that where the Prophet mentions the great והנורא and terrible day of the Lord, the Hebrew word being regularly derived from יראה to feare (and accordingly 'tis rendred by the Chaldee דחילא fearfull, and ſo by the Syriack alſo) yet the LXXII there render it ἐπιφανῆ, conſpicuous, or notable, as if it had been נראה from ראה to ſee, to behold, to obſerve; (ſo Deut. 1.19. where the Hebrew hath, that great והנורא and terrible wilderneſſe, the LXXII read ἐπιφανὲς, illuſtrious, or notable; ſo 2 *Sam.*14.15. for יראני made me afraid, they read ὄψεταί με, ſhall ſee me, as if it were יראני from ראה) and yet from them Saint Luke here reteines it, μεγάλῃ καὶ ἐπιφανῆ, great and conſpicuous, or notable. The account of this is cleer, 1. becauſe thoſe, for whoſe uſe he wrote this book, made uſe of the LXXII, for whom therefore he was to recite it, as there he found it; 2. becauſe this Greek did very fully expreſſe what was deſigned in the Hebrew, the word ἐπιφανὴς, obſervable, notable, illuſtrious, being perfectly applicable to fearfull, as well as gratefull appearances, and when it is ſo, expreſſing the great terribleneſſe and dreadfulneſſe of them.

c. Ὠδῖνας

V.24. Paines of death] The Hebrew חבל ſignifies two things, a cord or band, and a pang, eſpecially of women in travail. Hence the Septuagint meeting with the word *Pſal.*18.2. (where it certainly ſignifies χοιλία cords or bands) have yet rendred it ὠδῖνες pangs, and ſo again 1 Kin. 20.31. and in other places; and from their example here S. Luke hath uſed τὰς ὠδῖνας θανάτου, the pains, or pangs of death, when both the addition of the word λύσας looſing, and κρατεῖσθαι being holden faſt, doe ſhew that the ſenſe is bands or cords.

d. Δωρεὰ πνεύματος ἁγίου

V.38. Gift of the Holy Ghoſt] What δωρεὰ πνεύματος ἁγίου, the gift of the holy Ghoſt, ſignifies, in relation to the perſons that here are ſpoken to, as many as ſhould now repent, and believe on Chriſt, is apparent by the proceſſe of the ſtory. There were that day three thouſand which received the faith of Chriſt, ver.41. and theſe aſſociated, and joyned themſelves with the Apoſtles, ver. 42. and that in a wonderfull, charitable manner, had all things common, &c. ver.44. In the third chapter, the Apoſtles work that cure on the impotent man, and on that occaſion preach Chriſt to the Jewes again, and chap.4. the Sanhedrim, &c. apprehend them, and upon conſultation diſmiſſe them again, and they return to their auditors, the believers foremention'd, ver.23, 24. And they bleſſing and praiſing God, and applying the Pſalmiſts predictions to their preſent condition, and praying to God for his powerfull aſſiſtance to propagate the Goſpel, it follows ver.31. that as they prayed, the place was ſhaken, (in like manner as chap. 2. 2. when the holy Ghoſt deſcended on the Apoſtles,) and they were all filled with the holy Ghoſt, that is, certainly all the believers forementioned, (not the Apoſtles, who were thus filled before.) And ſo this promiſe of S. Peters was punctually fulfill'd upon them. What the effect of this gift was among them is no farther there ſet down, then that they ſpake the word of God with boldneſſe; that is, they were wonderfully confirmed by this means in their aſſurance of the truth of the Goſpel, and ſo making no queſtion of the truth of what they had learn't from the Apoſtles, they ſpake of it among themſelves, and to others with all cheerfulneſſe and confidence, deſpiſing the terrors of the Jewes, as they did their worldly poſſeſſions, ver. 32. and continuing that high pitch of charity, which had before been obſerved to be among them chap. 2.44. And ſo thus farre this gift of the holy Ghoſt ſignifies no more then a miraculous Confirmation of theſe believers (formerly Baptized) in the faith, and Chriſtian practiſes, which they had received; but this no doubt then attended with other extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, in reſpect of which they are there ſaid to be fill'd (ἐπλήσθησαν) with the holy Ghoſt. And then the onely difficulty will be, what kind of gifts theſe were, whether inward or outward. For both theſe are promiſed indefinitely to believers. To the inward that ſpeech of Chriſt John 7.38. ſeems to pertain, He that believeth on me, out of his belly ſhall flow Ῥεύσουσιν κοιλίας rivers of living waters; where the belly denoting the heart, or inward part of the man, the flowing of the living water from thence, denotes ſome effects of the holy Spirits deſcent upon, and in the hearts of believers, the Evangeliſt there diſtinctly referring thoſe words to the then-future deſcent of the holy Ghoſt, ver. 39. This he ſpake of the Spirit which they which believe on him ſhould receive, οὔπω γὰρ ἦν πνεῦμα, for as yet the holy Ghoſt was not (among, or upon them) becauſe Jeſus was not yet glorified.

glorified. Where it is evident that that speech of Christ belonged to some inward gifts in the hearts of men, which upon the descent of the holy Ghost upon the Apostles, should be powred upon the Christian world, convey'd by the preaching, baptizing, confirming and other ministery of the Apostles, their farther instructing them in the Gospel, which is therefore elsewhere call'd διακονία πνεύματος, the ministration of the Spirit, or means of communicating it to believers. What this inward gift is appears in severall places; wisdome, ch. 6. 3. knowledge, 1 Cor. 12. 8. and so likewise the assistances of Gods Spirit, joyned with his word, enabling humble, sincere Christians for the duties of Christian life, which are required of them, called the renewing of the holy Spirit, and joyned, as here, to the Laver of regeneration, Tit. 3. 5. and so the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts, 2 Cor. 1. 22. See Note on Act. 1. a. The outward gifts are those χαρίσματα, gifts of tongues, of healing, &c. And those are evidently called the δωρεὰ πνεύματος ἁγίου, the gift of the holy Ghost, Acts 10. 45. and that was there powred upon the Gentiles of Cornelius's family, immediately on their receiving the faith, even before Baptisme. And to these belongs another promise of Christ, Mar. 16. 17. These signes shall follow those that believe, They shall take up serpents, &c. Now for the resolving of the Quare, what sort of gift it is which is here meant, the surest way will be, not so to define of either, as to exclude the other, but to comprehend both under this phrase; not that both, and every branch of each should be powred on each believer, but that they all should be scatter'd among them, the inward by Baptisme or Confirmation signed on all, and the outward bestow'd on some of them, to testifie to all the truth and excellency of the Gospel, and to fit and prepare some persons for sacred imployments; not all the outward again, upon each, on whom the outward were bestow'd, but some on one, some on another, the gift of tongues to one, of healing to a second, of propheſying to a third: and they that had most, or the highest degrees of these, are call'd πλήρεις, full of the Spirit, see chap. 6. Note b. and note on Eph. 1. c.

Πλήρης πνεύματος.

V. 42. Fellowship] The word κοινωνία is to be rendred (as from the verb κοινωνέω) not communion, but communication, by that, meaning distribution, liberality, effusion, or participation, by which any are made partakers of some gift, spirituall or temporall, such as here beneficence to the poor, &c. Thus in Simplicius on Aristot. Phys. l. 1. describing magnanimous men, ὀλίγοις ἀρχομένους, καὶ οἷς ἔχουσι κοινωνικὰς ἑτοίμους, they are, saith he, content with a little, and distribute, or communicate, readily of that which they have. And in Lucian, ὅπερ. Κελεύ. Κοινωνοῦντας οἷς ἔχουσι τοῖς πενεστέροις, communicating to the poorer sort of what they have; and again, εἰ φθονήσει κοινωνοῦντι καὶ διδόντι; will he envy him that communicates and gives? Where it signifies liberality, or giving to the poor. Thus is almesgiving defined by the Arabians, communicatio in miseriis, Abul Faraii de Mor. Arab. p. 29. And thus Cassander out of Chrysostome renders μυστηρίων κοινωνίαν, Mysteriorum communicationem, Liturg. p. 14. As Excommunication is defined by Tertullian exclusion from communication (not from Communion as that is now used for the Sacrament) à communicatione orationis, & conventus, & omnis sancti commercii relegatio, a banishing from participation of all prayer, assembly, and sacred commerce (and not onely of the Sacrament) so as the word be compounded, like exlex, without any change of the termination. In this notion is the word generally used in Scripture for liberality, or some kind of distributing, or dispensing to others. So here προσκαρτεροῦντες τῇ κοινωνίᾳ, καὶ τῇ κλάσει ἄρτου, καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς, continuing in liberality and breaking of bread, and prayers; where, as προσευχαὶ signifies publick prayers, and κλάσις ἄρτου the breaking of bread in the administration of the Sacrament, so κοινωνία is the peoples bringing and presenting of the bread and wine, and the fruits of the earth, for the acknowledging God the Creator of all, part of it to be eaten in commemoration of Christs sacrifice, and the rest to be distributed among the poor, ver. 44. Whereupon κοινωνῆσαι in Hesychius and Phavorinus (for which the copies read corruptly κοινῶσαι) is προσενεγκεῖν, to offer, or present. From which Glossaries these explications also of the word are to be had, κοινωνικὸν, μεταδιδοτὸν, to distribute, or dispense, κοινωνία μετάληψις τῶν μυστηρίων ἁγίων, participation of the holy mysteries, κοινωνῶ σοι δόξης, συμμετέχω, to partake, κοινωνοῦσιν οἱ μεταδιδόντες ἀλλήλοις, καὶ μεταλαμβάνοντες παρ' ἀλλήλων φιλίας ἢ γνώσεως, &c. They are said to communicate who distribute to one another, and they that partake and receive from one another, whether friendship or knowledge. Whence it appears 1. that the word signifies both to distribute, and to receive, to make others partake, and to be partaker; 2ly, that it is appliable to friendship or societie, no otherwise then to knowledge or any thing else. Thus Rom. 15. 26. κοινωνίαν ποιήσασθαι, is to make a contribution. So 2 Corinth. 8. 4. τὴν χάριν καὶ τὴν κοινωνίαν τῆς διακονίας τῆς εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους, charity and communication of administration, that is, liberality, toward the saints. So ἁπλότης τῆς κοινωνίας, 2 Corinth. 9. 13. liberality of distribution: so κοινωνία εἰς εὐαγγέλιον, Phil. 1. 5. liberality toward the preaching, or propagating, the Gospel. So Hebr. 13. 16. where 'tis joyned with εὐποιΐα, beneficence, as 1 Tim. 1. 18. εὐμεταδότους and κοινωνικοὶ, distributive, and communicative, are all one: so Philem. 6. κοινωνία τῆς πίστεώς σου, is his liberality to the poor, (by which the bowels of the saints are refresh'd, ver. 7.) flowing from his faith. From this notion of the word κοινωνία, as it strictly signifies liberality toward the poor, may be fetch'd the sense of that Article in the Creed, κοινωνία τῶν ἁγίων, the communication, or liberality, of the saints, to note this great liberality here mentioned of the first converts to Christianity in the Apostles time, (see Philo of the ἀσκηταὶ in Ægypt, in Euseb. Hist. l. 2. c. ιζ'.) especially in their meetings for the commemorating of Christ in the Sacrament, as appears in this chapter, v. 44, 45, 47. where, saith the Text, They had all things common, sold their possessions and parted them to all, as every man had need, &c. living all as it were out of one common stock, as those that are joynt-sharers, and partners in all. To which purpose it is obſervable from Levit. 6. 2. that the common or joynt-interest, that Merchants or Tradesmen ofttimes have in Traffick, called there by the Hebrew חשומת יד, the putting to of the hand, is by the Septuagint rendred κοινωνία, communication, or communion, or (which is used also in this sense of joynt-interest) fellowship, and in the Chaldee, שותפות ידא, a society of hand, from שתף sociavit, participem fecit, a trading of partners; and so in the Syriack also, in the same word, which they use in the New Testament to render κοινωνία, and particularly here in this 42. verse. And this is thought fit to be recorded by the Apostles among the very few things, fit to be preach'd and proclaim'd by those that declared the Gospel to all the world, that, when the height of the Pythagorean philosophy was to have all things common, and Epicurus went yet higher (not by bringing all together into some common magazine, (which, said he, was an argument of diffidence, and so unreconcileable with friendship) but) by cheerfull communicating to every one that had need, out of that which every man hath, the Christian religion might appear to have arrived to the highest pitch; Every man selling that which he had immoveable, that so he might have ready to distribute to any, nay, that he might not trust himself in the distribution, bringing and laying it at the Apostles feet, that they might distribute it most impartially, and so approving themselves to be עם נדבותיך a people of free-will-offerings in the day of Christs power, *Psal.*110. now when he was installd in his kingdome. So in a spirituall sense, κοινωνία τοῦ 1 *Cor.*1.9. is the participation of the Son, or communication, liberality, all one with his ἀνεξιχνιάσος πλοῦτος Ephes. 3.8. his unsearchable riches, as they are powred out on us. So *Ephes.*3.9. κοινωνία μυστηρίου the communication of the mysterie, or that mysterie kept hid so long, is now communicated or made known; so Phil. 3. 10. κοινωνία παθημάτων, is the communicating his sufferings to us, that is, our partaking and so suffering with or after him, in a spirituall sense, dying to sinne, as he dyed to the world, which is there called being conformed to his death. So 1 Corinth. 10. 16. κοινωνία σώματος and αἵματος, the participating of the body and blood of Christ. So κοινωνία πνεύματος, communication of the Spirit, *Phil.*2.1. that liberall effusion of graces from the Spirit of God. And so when in the solemn close of the Epistles, κοινωνία τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, the communication of the holy Spirit, is joyned with χάρις Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ, the grace of Christ, and love of God, 2 *Cor.*13.14. it must signifie proportionably to these many other places, the liberall effusion of that holy Spirit: and so 1 John 1.3. ἵνα κοινωνίαν ἔχητε μεθ' ἡμῶν, that you may have partnership with us, καὶ ἡ κοινωνία ἡ ἡμετέρα μετὰ τοῦ πατρὸς, and our partnership is indeed with the Father, &c. the gifts and life that God and Christ hath, are communicated to us, and ver.6. ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι κοινωνίαν ἔχομεν μετ' αὐτοῦ, if we say that we are partakers with him of that grace and life, &c. By this might be explained the use of the κοινωνικὰ γεώμματα in the ancient Church, but that the words are not found in Scripture, and will be mention'd more seasonably on occasion of the Ϛυναλικὰ ἐπιστολαὶ 2 *Cor.*3. Note a.

V.47. Having favour] Ἔχειν signifies to use, or to exercise, as when Christ saith, to him that hath shall be given, and let us have grace, Hebr. 12. 28. And as for χάρις, that is the very word Charity, and is by Cicero so rendred, and frequently signifies liberality (as in Epicurus's book entitled περὶ δώρων καὶ χάριτος, of gifts and charity or liberality, mention'd by Sextus Empir. l. cont. Gramm.) and so is used 2 Cor. 8.4. and so *Act.*4.33. where μεγάλη χάρις is by the Syriack rendred טיבותא רבתא, that is, great goodnesse, or benignity, (though Guido Fabritius render it gratia magna, following the notion which, it seems, he had of the Greek, without considering the Syriack) and so the consequents demonstrate it to signifie: and therefore the phrase ἔχοντες χάριν is by the Syriack rendred יהיבין ברחמא that is, they gave almes before all the people, not, as Guido Fabritius again renders the Greek, rather then that, cùm iniissent gratiam, when they got favour; for יהב signifies dedit gave, and רחמא misericordia, gratia, eleemosyna, σπλάγχνα, bowels of mercy, abundant liberality; see 2 *Cor.*8.1. and Note on 1 *Pet.*3.d.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

1. At three in the afternoon, which was one of the times of day generally set apart for prayer.

1. NOw Peter and John went up together into the Temple [at the hour of prayer, being the ninth houre.]

2. And there was an impotent man, who was so from his birth, who was therefore

2. And a certain man, lame from his mothers womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the Temple, which is called Beautifull, to ask almes of them that entred into the Temple.]

daily carried by others, and laid at the gate of the Temple toward the East, in Solomon's porch, ver.11. which was called the beautifull gate, that there he might beg and receive the almes of those that went up daily to pray there, by which means this man was known to all the pious men of the city that used to go that way, v.10.

3. Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the Temple, asked * an almes.

4. And Peter fastning his eyes on him, with John, said, Look on us.

5. And he † gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

* to receive an almes, λαβεῖν ἐλεημ.

6. I cannot give thee that almes thou lookest for, that of money to relieve thy wants; but that which will eminently supply all thy wants, and make it unnecessary for thee to ask any more, I am able and willing to bestow upon thee.

6. Then Peter said, [Silver and Gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee.] In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk.

7. He was able to stand and goe, was perfectly cured of his lameness.

7. And he took him by the right hand, and lift him up; and immediately [his feet and ancle-bones * received strength.]

8. And he demonstrated the perfectnesse of the cure by using his legs to all services, was unwilling to depart from them, from whom he had received so great a mercy,

12. Why doe you look upon this cure as a strange thing to be wrought? (the miracles of Jesus are farre greater then this,) or, why doe ye attribute any thing to us in this matter, as if 'twere any thing of our own, either strength to doe such a work, or excellency (for which we might be thought worthy to be used in these works, rather then other men) to which this were to be imputed?

12. And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, [why marvell ye at this, or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holinesse we had made this man to walk?]

13. hath given this power of working miracles to that Jesus whom ye delivered up to Pilate to be crucified, and when he would fain have released him, ye refused to have him released, and absolutely against Pilate's will, required him to be put to death.

And this faith, or believing on him, working not by its ſelf, but by his power on whom we believe, is it that hath wrought this ſo remarkeable cure on him, which you all ſo wonder at.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ἀναψύξεως καιροὶ

19. Times of refreſhing] Καιροὶ ἀναψύξεως daies of refreſhment, or comfort, are proverbially taken among the Hebrewes, for the time of any ſpeciall deliverance, whether temporall here, or eternall in the Reſurrection; ſo Gen. 21. Jonathans Chaldee Paraphraſe ſaith, that Leviathan is prepared ליום נחמתה for the day of conſolation, that is, the day of deliverance, and feſtivity in commemoration thereof, wherein, ſaid the Jewes, God was wont to make merry, and to ſport with Leviathan. So the name of Noach, from that ſame Hebrew word, which is rendred conſolation, ſignifies deliverance, and was impoſed as a prophecy, that mankind, which otherwiſe had been univerſally deſtroyed, ſhould in him be reſcued from that utter ruine. To this belongs the reviving, Ezr. 9. 9. which ſignifies their reſtoring from captivity. So for the other deliverance, when Hoſ. 6. 3. wee read, after three daies he ſhall quicken, Jonathan reads again ליומי נחמתה in the daies of conſolation, which ſhall come ביום אחיות מיתיא in the day of the reſurrection of the dead. And ſo when Joh. 11. 24. we read he ſhall riſe in the reſurrection, the Syriack reads בנוחמא in the conſolation. Now the connexion of this with the exhortation to repentance lies thus, Should Chriſt come again in judgment upon the Jewes, foretold Mat. 24. while you lie impenitent in your ſins, his coming muſt be the greateſt judgment in the world (and ſo it will be to the impenitent Jews, utter deſtruction and vaſtation,) That therefore that coming of his (which as it is a terrible time to the impenitent, ſo is a time of deliverance to all penitent believers) may in that notion of conſolation and deliverance befall you, that God may thus ſend his ſon to you, Doe you now timely repent, ſo as to have your ſins blotted out, Ἀπολύτρωσις ſee 2 Pet. 3. 6. The ſame thing is called ἀπολύτρωσις deliverance, Lu. 21. 28. and σωτηρία ſalvation, or deliverance again, Rom. 13. 11. ſee Note c.

b. Δέξεσθαι ἐ. ρανόν V. 21. The heaven muſt receive] Beſide the ordinary rendring of ὃν δεῖ δέξασθαι οὐρανὸν whom heaven muſt receive, another there is, of which the words are capable literally, and to which the Context more enclines them, that Chriſt muſt, or that God hath decreed he ſhould receive heaven, in the ſenſe that Camillus is ſaid δέξασθαι πόλιν to receive the city, that is to undertake the government of the city, parallel to that of Pſal. 75. 2. ſpeaking of Chriſts exaltation, when I ſhall receive the congregation, and ſo this place will be all one with 1 Cor. 15. 25. he muſt reign, &c. and that peculiarly in the ſubduing and conquering all his enemies, converting ſome, and rooting out (v. 23.) all others, who ſtand out in hoſtility againſt him.

c. ἀπὸ Σαμουὴλ V. 24. Samuel] The acount of the prophets is here begun from Samuel, becauſe the ſchools of the prophets were firſt inſtituted, and erected by him, and not that there was no Prophet before him. Thus we read 1 Sam. 19. 20. the college, or company, of the prophets at Ramah, and Samuel ſtanding as appointed over them, making him the Preſident of that College, as after Elias was, and therefore before his aſcenſion he goes about from one college to another 2 Kin. 2. 3, &c. and after him, Eliſha, to whom therefore the ſons of the prophets ſay, The place in which we dwell before thee, (that is, under thee, under thy government) is too narrow for us, and ſo they build a larger. Theſe ſons of the prophets ſpent their time in ſtudying the Law, and praiſing, and ſerving of God (ſee Note on Lu. 1. m.) and of them, becauſe (though ſome were, yet) all were not call'd by God to the prophetick office, ſent of meſſages to the people, therefore 'tis here added, ὅσοι ἐλάλεσε, as many as ſpake, that is, as many as out of the ſchools of the prophets were by God call'd to that publick office, προκατήγγειλαν, foretold what was now to come to paſſe.

d. 26. In turning away] It is matter of ſome queſtion whether the ἀποστρέφειν turning refer to Chriſt, or the Jewes. It may fitly refer to Chriſt, turning them by his grace, and ſo bleſſing them. But Oecumenius refers it to the Jewes, εἰ θέλοι ἕκαστος ἐπιστρέψαι, if ye will turn every one from his iniquities. And ſo it may be alſo as an effect of Chriſts grace in us, and as a condition to qualifie us to receive benefit by his Reſurrection and bleſſing of us.

5. And it came to paſſe on the morrow, that [their Rulers, and Elders, and Scribes,

6. And Annas the high prieſt, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the a kindred of the high prieſt, were gathered together at Jeruſalem,] a.

7. And cauſing the diſciples to be brought before them, they examined them on theſe interrogatories, 1. how they came to be able to doe that miracle, ch. 3. 7. and whoſe name they called upon that infirm man (ſee ver. 10.) in the working of the cure, (ſee ch. 3. 6.) and conſequently from whom they pretended to have commiſſion to doe what they did, thus to preach unto the people ?

7. And when they had ſet them in the midſt, they asked, By what power or by what name have ye done this ?]

8. Then Peter being by the Spirit of God (ſuch as was promiſed Mat. 10. 19, 20.) endued with a great extraordinary preſentneſſe of ſpeech, and elocution, v. 13.) and taking great boldneſſe and confidence upon him, began thus,

8. Then Peter filled with the holy Ghoſt, ſaid unto them,] Ye rulers of the people, and Elders of Iſrael,

9. of an action, which is ſo farre from being a crime, that 'tis an act of ſpeciall mercy,

9. If we this day be examined [of the good deed] done to the impotent man, † by what means he is made whole,

† by whom, ἐν τίνι

10. by no other means, but by calling upon him the name of Jeſus of Nazareth; (whom ye put to a ſhamefull death, but God moſt miraculouſly raiſed again) this miracle on the lame man was wrought.

10. Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Iſrael, that [by the name of Jeſus Chriſt of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God hath raiſed from the dead, even by him doth this man ſtand here before you whole.]

11. This is he that was propheſied of under the title of a refuſe ſtone rejected by you, the chief men among the Jewes, and looked upon with deſpight and contempt, but is now by his reſurrection inſtall'd in all power and dignity (an effect of which is this miracle wrought in his name) and is indeed become the ruler and king of the whole Church, the prime foundation ſtone of the whole fabrick.

11. This is the ſtone which was ſet at nought of you builders, which * is become the head of the corner.]

* is or was made for the head, εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας

12. And by him, and him only, by receiving and embracing of his doctrine, ſalvation muſt now be hoped for by all, For there is no other religion in the world, whether that which was delivered by Moſes, or by any other, by which ſalvation can be had for thoſe, which doe not now come in to this, at the preaching of it.

12. Neither is there ſalvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we muſt be ſaved.]

13. Now when they † ſaw the boldneſſe of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and * ignorant men, they marvailed, and they † took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jeſus.]

13. And when they obſerved the elocution v. 8. and freeneſſe of ſpeech, with which they taught (ſee note on Joh. 7. a.) and withall conſidering that their education had not thus elevated them above other men, being neither skilled in the learning of the Jewes, nor, as men of place, or magiſtracy among them, inſtructed in their lawes, they were amazed at it, but withall they either remembred or were told that they were thoſe that had been attending on Jeſus, in his life time.

14. And beholding the man which was healed ſtanding with them, [they † could ſay nothing againſt it.]

14. though they were as malitiouſly and petulantly affected toward them, ver. 16. as was poſſible, yet they had nothing to object, or except againſt the whole action, either as it reſpected the man that was cured, or the Apoſtles that wrought it.

15. But when they had commanded them to goe aſide out of the councell, they conferred among themſelves,

16. Saying, What ſhall we doe to theſe men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifeſt to all them that dwell in Jeruſalem, and we cannot deny it.

17. But that it ſpread no farther among the people, let us ſtraightly threaten them that they ſpeak henceforth to no man in this name.]

17. And being not able to conceal what was already known, they had nothing to doe but to keep others from knowing it, and thereupon their decree in councel was to ſend for them, and to forbid them upon ſevere penalties to preach Chriſt and his reſurrection and Goſpel any more.

18. And they called them, and commanded them not to [ſpeak at all, nor teach in the name of Jeſus.]

18. talk privately, or teach publickly any thing concerning the faith of Chriſt.

19. But Peter and John anſwered, and ſaid unto them, Whether it be right in the ſight of God, to hearken unto you, more then unto God, judge ye.

19 But Peter and John made light of this interdict, or terrors, and told them plainly they were commanded by God to preach, and that in all reaſon God muſt be obeyed before them, or the greateſt magiſtrate on earth, and that they themſelves could not but confeſſe ſo much.

20. For we cannot [but ſpeak the things which we have ſeen and heard.]

20. chooſe but teſtifie of Chriſt thoſe truths of ſo high importance, made known to us peculiarly to that end, that we ſhould proclaim them to others from our certain knowledge, being our ſelves the eye, and ear-witneſſes of them.

21. So when they had farther threatned them, they let them goe, finding nothing how they might puniſh them, becauſe of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done.]

21. And ſo not knowing what elſe to ſay to them, being not able to deny the force of their argument, they added more threatnings, if poſſibly that might terrifie them, and ſo diſmiſs'd them, having nothing to lay to their charge, but the curing of the lame man in the name of Jeſus, and for this all the people looked on them with admiration, and counted it an act of Gods immediate infinite mercy, for which they, that were inſtruments of it, ought to be bleſſed, not puniſhed by them, and therefore they durſt not puniſh or cenſure them for this.

22. For the man was about forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was ſhewed.]

22. For it was an inveterate lameneſſe, from his very birth, ch. 3. 2. and had been now above forty years upon him, when this cure was wrought by Peter.

23. And being let goe, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief prieſts and Elders had ſaid unto them.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Ἀρχιερατικὸν

V. 6. Kindred of the high Prieſt] What is meant by ὅσοι ἦσαν ἐκ γένους ἀρχιερατικοῦ as many as were of the kindred of the high prieſt, will be reſolved by the Context, where an aſſembling or meeting of the Sanhedrim is deſcribed, v. 5. which conſiſting of three ſorts of men, Prieſts, Elders and Doctors of the Law (ſee Note on Mar. 5. c.) is oftimes expreſs'd by the enumeration of thoſe parts, Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ γραμματεῖς καὶ πρεσβύτεροι, High prieſts, Scribes, and Elders, Mat 26. 3. and very often in the Goſpels. In this place there is another way of enumeration then is uſuall, The Rulers and Elders and Scribes, and Annas the chief prieſt and Caiaphas and John and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high prieſt. Where yet Ἄρχοντες Rulers ſeems to be a generall word, denoting, as elſwhere, men in authority. Then Annas was the Naſi or chief perſon among them, (ſee Lu. 3. Note b.) and Caiaphas the perſon, that by the Procurator was put into the Pontificate in ſtead of the Aaronicall line. And ſo there remains onely the Elders and Scribes, and ὅσοι ἦσαν, not Indefinitely, as many as were, but, in a more limited notion of ὅσοι, thoſe that were, in the Sanhedrim of this ſort, of the kindred of the high prieſt, (and of that number John and Alexander by name) which therefore appear to be the ſame with ἀρχιερεῖς high prieſts joyned with the Elders and Scribes in other places, that is, that third ſort of the Sanhedrim, conſiſting of Prieſts. Now the reaſon of this titles being applied to them is evident. For as of Aarons poſterity the lineal deſcendent onely ſucceeded him in the high prieſts office, ſo of his two ſons, Eleazar and Ithamar, ſprang 24 families (betwixt whom the Prieſts office was divided by David, 1 Chron. 24.) which ſhould by weekly turns perform the ſervice of the Sanctuary (ſee Lu. 1. 5.) ſixteen of the ſons of Eleazar, and eight of Ithamar. Of every one of theſe families and courſes there was a chief, the head of the family, and theſe are conſequently called ἀρχιερεῖς chief prieſts, and ἐκ γένους ἀρχιερατικοῦ of the kindred of the High-prieſt, viz. as ſpringing from Aaron, and ſtill allied to the one high-prieſts family, as inferiour branches of it; And many, if not all theſe, were members of the Sanhedrim (for here they ſit in Judicature with Annas and Caiaphas, as with Moſes and Aaron, and the Elders, and the Scribes, ver. 7.) and being four and twenty in number, would make up a third part of the whole number of 72, leaving the other two portions to be divided between the Elders and the Scribes, if there were, as it is not certain there was, this equall diviſion.

V. 28. Thy hand and thy counſel] What is meant by the latter part of this ſpeech, whatſoever thy counſell hath determined before to be done, hath little difficulty in it. The truth is clear, that God decreed that thoſe things ſhould γενέσθαι, be done, although he decreed not that the Jewes ſhould doe them, but only permitted them to doe what he foreſaw they would doe, if they were thus permitted. The only difficulty is, what is meant by ἡ χείρ σου, thy hand, and that will beſt be explained by looking on the Law of Moſes, Levit. 16. 8. where Aaron caſts lots on the goats, One lot, on which was written לשם for the Lord, another on which לעזאזל for the Azazel, or ſcape-goate; For the manner was thus, The two goates were ſet one at his right hand, t'other at his left, and two lots were caſt into the Kalphi or veſſel (that is the word uſed by the Rabbines from the Greek κάλπις urna or pitcher, of which ſaith Lucian in Hermot. κάλπις ἀργυρᾶ, εἰς ταύτην ἐμβάλλουσι κλῆροι μικροὶ, ὅσον δὴ κυαμιαῖοι τὸ μέγεθος, ἐπιγεγραμμένοι, little lots are thrown into the ſilver pitcher about the bigneſſe of a bean, with inſcriptions on them) and the Prieſt drawes out one in one hand, and the other in the other, Then by the command of the סגן (that is, vicarius ſacerdos, the firſt of the ordinary prieſts, that miniſtred to the High-prieſt) he lifts up the hand in which was the lot for the Lord, and if it were the right hand, he puts it upon the head of the goat at his right hand (if the left, on that at the left) and that goat was holy to the Lord, and was preſently ſlain before him (the other being ἀποπομπαῖος ſent into the wilderneſſe) ſee Cod. Joma c. 4. §. 1. And certainly this diſtribution of the lots was from the Lord, according to that of Solomon, Prov. 16. 23. Now by this ceremony of the goat, is Chriſts paſſion typified, and ſo that phraſe here, ἡ χείρ σου, thy hand, referres to that elevation of the hand, wherein was the lot for the Lord, and ſo notes this whole action thus to have been diſpoſed of by God, who decreed that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer, and that juſt as the goat did under the Law, which was offered up to God for the ſinnes of the people.

1. BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, ſold a poſſeſſion,]

1. And one of thoſe that came in to the faith of Chriſt, named Ananias, and Sapphira his wife, with joynt conſent devoted their eſtate, all that they had, to the uſe of the Church, and to that purpoſe made ſale of it;

2. And kept back part of the price, his wife alſo being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the Apoſtles feet.]

2. And when they had done ſo, conſented alſo, or combined together to keep ſome part of the money, for which 'twas ſold, for themſelves: and accordingly they did, and came with the other part only, and preſented it to the Apoſtles.

3. But Peter ſaid, Ananias, [why hath Satan [a] filled thine heart * [b] to lie to the holy Ghoſt, and to keep back part of the price of the land?]

* that thou ſhouldſt deceive the holy Ghoſt

3. How hath Satan emboldened thee, that thou ſhouldſt dare thus to deceive, and rob the holy Ghoſt, as thou haſt clearly done, in keeping back and purloining part, when thou hadſt conſecrated all to Gods ſervice, for the uſe of the Church?

a. b.

4. †[c] Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and when it was ſold, was it not in thine own power? why haſt thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou haſt not lyed unto men, but unto God.]

† Was not the poſſeſſion or demean thine own? and being ſold

4. Before it was ſold, was it not wholly thine, no other man having right to any part of it? (ſo the Syriack reads it) and when it was ſold, didſt not thou receive the whole ſumme or price for which 'twas ſold? was it not all in thine hand and power, ſo as thou might'ſt have fully performed thy vow? what motive hadſt thou to doe ſuch a thing as this? The falſity which was committed, in telling us that thou hadſt ſold thy poſſeſſions, and brought the whole price of it for the uſe of the Church, (when thou didſt keep a part of it for thy ſelf) was an injury not only to the Church, nor ſo much to us the Apoſtles, as to God himſelf, to the holy Ghoſt, who came lately down to plant this Church, and hath ſuch a peculiar relation to it, that what is done to that, is by interpretation done to the holy Ghoſt, who had the privity of the vow, and knew that 'twas the conſecrating of all, and not of this part onely which thou haſt brought to us.

5. And Ananias hearing theſe words, fell down, and gave up the ghoſt, and great fear came on all them that heard theſe things.]

5. And as Peter ſpake theſe words, Ananias fell down dead in the place immediately, to the great aſtoniſhment and terrifying of all thoſe that were there preſent.

6. And the young men aroſe, wound him up, and] carried him out and buried him.

6. And the men of inferior rank, the officers, to whom it belonged to bury the dead, (ſee note on Phil. 1. c.) took him, and ſtript and ſwath'd him, as they uſed to doe the dead (ſee note on Joh. 19. g.) and taking him up

7. And it was about the ſpace of three houres after, when] his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

7. And about three houres after this judgement fell on Ananias, Sapphira,

8. And Peter anſwered unto her, Tell me whether you ſold the land for ſo much. And ſhe ſaid, Yea, for ſo much.]

8. And Peter examined, and asked her, ſaying, Was that ſumme which ye brought, the full ſumme for which the field was ſold? And ſhe anſwered, It was.

9. Then Peter ſaid unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together [to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the dore, and ſhall carry thee out.]

9. to provoke and dare God, (ſee note on Mat. 4. c.) to try whether he will puniſh your fraud or no. Behold (that thou mayſt ſee, what a provocation this hath been to God) the men are coming in which have buried thy dead husband, and now they ſhall doe as much for thee.

10. Then fell ſhe down ſtraightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghoſt, and the young men came in, & found her dead, and carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11. And great fear came upon all the Church, and upon as many as heard theſe things.]

11. And all the believers were ſtricken with a great reverence, and ſo were all others to whom it was related.

12. And by the hands of the Apoſtles were many ſignes and wonders wrought among the people. [(And they were all with one accord in Solomons porch.]

12. (And they ſolemnly met together to preach and doe miracles in the entrance to the Temple, called Solomon's porch.

13. And of the reſt durſt no man joyne himſelf to them, but the people magnified them.]

13. And no other of the believers, or Chriſtians (called the Church v. 11.) durſt conſort with the twelve Apoſtles, through the reverence v. 11. which theſe late acts had wrought in them; but the people that ſaw and heard what was done, magnified them.

14. And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)]

14. And theſe miracles that wrought ſuch a reverence in the believers, were a means alſo to work faith in all the common ſort of the people.)

15. Inſomuch that they brought forth the ſick into the ſtreets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the leaſt the ſhadow of Peter paſſing by might overſhadow ſome of them.]

15. And the people v. 12. had ſuch confidence in their power of working miraculous cures, that they believed that the very ſhadow of Peter, walking by a diſeaſed man, would work a cure on him, and thereupon they brought forth their ſick and impotent friends, thoſe that were not able to goe or ſtand, and laid them upon beds, &c. in the paſſage, that as Peter came by, his ſhadow might come over ſome of them.

16. There came alſo a multitude out of the cities about unto Jeruſalem, bringing] ſick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean ſpirits, and they were healed every one.

16. And the fame of their miracles ſpread into the countrey, and region, and other cities about Jeruſalem, and from thence they brought

18. And apprehended the Apoſtles, and impriſoned them in the common gaole.

19. But the Angel of the Lord by night opened the priſon dores, and brought them forth, and ſaid,

20. Goe

20. Goe, ſtand, and ſpeak in the Temple to the people [all the words of this life.]

21. And in obedience to that direction, they betook themſelves early in the morning to the Temple, and there expounded the ſcripture and taught the doctrine of Chriſt and ſent ſerjeants to the priſon

21. And when they heard that, they entred into the Temple early in the morning, and taught: but the high prieſt came, and they that were with him, and called the councell together, and all the ſenate of the children of Iſrael, and ſent to the priſon to have them brought.]

22. But when the officers came, and found them not in the priſon, they returned, and told,

23. Saying, The priſon truly found we ſhut with all ſafety, [and the keepers ſtanding without before the dores: but when we had opened, we found no man within.]

24. And when the Sanhedrim of the Jewes, as alſo the captain of that band of ſouldiers, who had ſet the guard upon the priſon, v. 23. (ſee ch. 4. 1. and Lu. 22. f.) had this word brought to them, they were much perplext, and wondred, how it could come to paſſe, that the priſon being ſhut, and the watch at the dores, yet none of the priſoners ſhould be within, and conceived that this did abode ſome ſtrange matter.

26. And the captain that guarded the Temple (ſee note on Lu. 22. f.) together with his ſouldiers went to the Temple, and apprehended them.

26. Then went the captain with the officers and brought them] without violence: (For they feared the people, leſt they ſhould have been ſtoned.)

27. brought them before the court, and the high prieſt examined them.

27. And when they had brought them, they [ſet them before the councell: and the high prieſt asked them,]

28. not to publiſh this doctrine of Chriſt, and ye contrariwiſe have publiſhed it in the Temple to all the city, and done your beſt, by laying his blood to our charge, to raiſe up to the people againſt us, as againſt murtherers.

28. Saying, Did not we ſtraightly command you, [that you ſhould not teach in this name? And behold, ye have filled Jeruſalem with your doctrine, and † intend to bring that mans blood upon us.]

† you would bring, βούλεσθε ἐπαγαγεῖν

29. And the Apoſtles anſwered, as before they had done, ch. 4. 19. We were commanded by God to publiſh it, and then your interdict was not to have any force. Though magiſtrates are to be obeyed in all their lawfull commands, and their puniſhments to be endured without reſiſtance (as they were by us, v. 18, & 26.) yet when God fetches us out of priſon, and commands us to goe into the Temple and preach the faith of Chriſt (as he did by his Angel v. 20.) we are to render obedience to him, and not to your contrary interdicts.

29. Then Peter and the other Apoſtles anſwered and ſaid, We ought to obey God, rather then men.]

30, 31. The God of Iſrael, acknowledged by us all, hath ſent the Meſſias into the

e. world furniſhed with his ſpeciall Commiſſion, and when ye crucified him as a malefactor, raiſed him from death, took him into heaven, and inſtated him in his regall power, (that he might be a ſpirituall prince, reigning in mens hearts) at his father's right hand, from thence to ſend the Spirit of his Father (who was not to deſcend, till he was aſcended) and by that means to give you Jewes place of repentance, that if ye yet come in and repent, and believe on him, ye may have pardon of ſinne.

30. The God of our fathers raiſed up Jeſus, whom ye ſlew and hanged on a tree:

32. And we are his wineſſes of theſe things, and ſo is alſo the holy Ghoſt, whom God hath given to them that obey him.]

f. 33. And upon this anſwer of theirs, they fell into great fierceneſſe againſt them, and entred into conſultation of putting them to death.

33. When they heard that, they † were [f] cut to the heart, and took counſell to ſlay them.]

† were mad againſt them

34. Then ſtood there up one in the councell, a Phariſee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in great reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the Apoſtles forth a little ſpace,

35. And ſaid unto them, Ye men of Iſrael, take heed to your ſelves * what ye intend to doe as touching theſe men.

For we have examples of men that have gathered followers, and raiſed ſeditions among the people, and come to nothing; as for inſtance, Theudas, that undertook to be a Generall, boaſting that he was ſent by God to that purpoſe, and ſo got 400 men to follow him, but ſoon miſcarried, and was himſelf killed, and all put to flight that adhered to him, and ſo his deſigne was utterly fruſtrated.

36. For before theſe daies roſe up [g] Theudas, boaſting himſelf to be ſomebody, to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joyned themſelves; who was ſlain, and all, as many as obeyed him, were ſcattered, and brought to nought.]

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Πληρῶν καρδίαν

V. 3. Filled thine heart] The phraſe πληροῦν καρδίαν, to fill the heart, is uſed by the Hebrews in the Old Teſtament for to make one bold, ſo Heſt. 7. 5. Who hath filled his heart to doe this? the Greek, τίς ἔτος ὃς ἐτόλμησε; who is it that hath dared, &c. So Eccl. 8. 11. The heart of the ſons of men is filled to doe evil, that is, is emboldened, where the Greek read, ἐπληροφορήθη, is filled.

b. Ψεύδομαι

Ib. To ly] The Verb ψεύδομαι hath among authors theſe three diſtinct uſes, and agreeably three notions and interpretations proportioned to them. 1. 'tis uſed with a Genitive caſe, and then it ſignifies Paſſively, to be deceived, fruſtrated, cheated of any thing, ψεύδεσθαι ἐλπίδος, to be fruſtrated, defeated of his hope, and in Plato Apol. τότε ἂν ἐψευσθην, In this I was not deceived or miſtaken. But this clearly belongs not to this place. 2dly, 'tis uſed with a Dative caſe of the perſon, or (which is all one) with a præpoſition εἰς or πρὸς joyned to the perſon, and then 'tis abſolutely to lie. So 'tis here v. 4. οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις, ἀλλὰ τῷ Θεῷ, Thou haſt not lied to men, but to God, the lie which thou haſt told, was not told to men only, or was not injurious to men only, but to God alſo. So Jam. 3. 14. ψεύδεσθε κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας, ye lie againſt the truth, your lying is contrary to the Goſpel-doctrine and temper, and deſtructive to it. So Col. 3. 9. μὴ ψεύδεσθε εἰς ἀλλήλους, lie not againſt one another. 3dly, 'tis uſed with an Accuſative caſe of the perſon again, and then it ſignifies Actively, to deceive, rob, deprive; τὸς στρατιώτας ψευσάμενος καὶ ἀπατήσας, in Herodian. l. 2. having deceived and cheated the ſouldiers, and in Ariſtoph. νεφέλ. Μὰ τὸν Δι' οὐ ψεύσῃ γε μὲ, certainly thou ſhalt not deceive, or cheat, me: and that is the very notion of it here in this place, ψεύσασθαι τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, to deceive the holy Ghoſt, Deum in pollicitatione fallere, to deceive God in that which was promiſed to him, ſaith S. Auguſtine; and again, detrahere de pecunia quam Deo voverat, to keep back ſome of the money which he had devoted to God; and accordingly by Aſterius, Ananias and his wife are called τῶν οἰκείων ἀναθημάτων ἱερόσυλοι, guilty of ſacriledge in their own offerings. And although if the matter ſpoken of extended no farther then ſpeaking a falſe thing (without any reall purloining, or ſtealing, or withholding what was conſecrated to the Church or to God) it would then proportionably ſignifie no more then to deceive, or tell a lie to the Holy Ghoſt; yet when the matter extends it thus much farther, not to bare words, but to the ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, v. 2. purloyning part of that price, which was all given to the Church, and by their own act put out of their own power v. 5. (according to that rule of the Law, data, eo ipſo quòd dantur, fiunt accipientis, whatſoever is given, by that very act becomes the proper goods of the receiver) this ψεύσασθαι ἅγιον πνεῦμα, deceiving the holy Ghoſt, muſt needs referre to the not-keeping, not-obſerving, not-doing what was by them vowed, or to thoſe contrary actions, the purloyning or withholding part of that price, which was wholly given to the Church, and being not actually brought in and beſtowed on it, is ſaid to be the deceiving of the Holy Ghoſt, that is, robbing, depriving him of that which was beſtowed on him. This very ſame being expreſ't alſo by νοσφισάσης ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, that follows, that is, purloyning, as 'tis rendred Tit. 2. 20. and as the word is uſed of Sacriledge by the Septuagint, Joſh. 7. 1. ἐνοσφίσαλο ἀπὸ τῶν ἀναθήμαλων, he purloined of the accurſed thing, or that which was conſecrated, c. 6. 19. So 2 Mac. 4. v. 32. Menelaus χρυσώματά τινα νοσφισάμενος, ſtole, purloined ſome golden veſſels of the Temple. And ſo both phraſes joyne to make up the very thing which is called ἱεροσυλία or ſacriledge ordinarily in ſacred or heathen writers; which therefore by this place appears to be a ſinne againſt God, not againſt men, v. 4. (and ſo Mal. 3. 8.) and particularly the robbing of the Holy Ghoſt, which came down on purpoſe to perfect what Chriſt had begun, to formalize the ſociety of believers into that which we now call a Church, and ſo to fit it for continuance and perpetuity. And by what we ſee done in theſe firſt chapters of the Acts, immediately after the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, we have great reaſon to believe theſe two things: 1. that it was an effect of his inclining the hearts of the believers, that wealth was ſo liberally brought in unto the Apoſtles, & layd at their feet: and 2dly, that what was thus given, was really accepted of by the Holy Ghoſt, as given to him, and not to men only. For as among the Jewes, what was given to God, was brought unto the Temple, and preſented to the Prieſt (κελεύει τὰς ἀπαρχὰς εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν κομίζεσθαι πρότερον, εἶτ' ἔνθενδε τοὺς ἱερεῖς λαμβάνειν, he commanded that the firſt fruits ſhould be carried to the Temple, and received there by the Prieſts, ſaith Philo, De ſacerdot. honorib.) ſo here 'tis brought to the Apoſtles as Chriſt's receivers, for the uſe of all the poor Chriſtians, that ſhould want, to be by the direction of the Apoſtles diſpenſed to them; and that what is thus by the liberality of Chriſtians (κοινωνία ἁγίων in the Creed) inſtated on the Church, cannot afterwards by the very doners (much leſſe by any elſe) be purloined or taken back again, without the guilt of that great ſinne of deceiving and robbing God himſelf.

c. Τὸ Μένον

V. 4. Whiles it remained] There is ſome difficulty in this verſe: and the beſt way of clearing it, is, by ſetting the firſt word right, τὸ μένον, (which is commonly rendred, whilſt it remained) That ſure ſignifies a poſſeſſion immoveable, an eſtate in land, which is called a demeane in this very notion of μένειν remaining, becauſe when the fruit is taken off, the land remains, and ſo is applied here to κτῆμα a poſſeſſion v. 1. Upon the ſame account again 'tis called an eſtate, as being a ſtanding, remaining, continuing poſſeſſion. Proportionable to this, τὸ πραθὲν is wealth in money, of land ſold, or put into money. And then the meaning of the whole is clear, οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἔμενε; was not the land, eſtate, demeanes, thy own land, eſtate, demeanes? καὶ πραθὲν ἐν τῇ σῇ ἐξουσίᾳ ὑπῆρχε; and was not the price, for which

Κτῆμα

ἐν τῇ σῇ ἐξουσίᾳ

it was ſold, wholly in thy power? that is, in thy hand, as ביד in the hand, ſignifies in the power, not as of an owner, but as a receiver; as Gen. 24.10. 'tis ſaid of Abrahams ſervant, that all the goods of his maſter were in his hand, as in the ſtewards hand, to receive and look to. So that in both reſpects, the poſſeſſion being wholly thine, and the money coming wholly to thy hands, paid wholly to thee, (the contrary of either of which would have allowed him ſome pretence and excuſe) there was no excuſe for thy not bringing, according to thy vow, the whole value of it.

d. Ζωὴς ταύτης ῥήματα

V. 20. This life] What ῥήματα ζωῆς ταύτης the words of this life here ſignifies, will ſoon be diſcerned by the uſe of ζωὴ life in the Goſpel, for that doctrine which is the ſetting down of the way, which will bring him that walks in it to eternall life. Thus Joh. 12. 50. I know (ſaith Chriſt of the meſſage which he brought from his Father) that his commandment is eternal life, where eternal life muſt ſignifie that way which leads to it; ſo Joh. 17. 3. This is eternal life, that they may know thee the only true God, that is, their knowing (and performing faithfull, ſincere obedience to) the only true God, is the ſure way to eternall life. And accordingly the words of this life are the ſumme of this Chriſtian doctrine, which being obeyed will bring any man to life eternal, and ſo 'tis all one with S. Peters expreſſion to Chriſt, Lord to whom ſhall we goe? thou haſt the words of eternal life, the word [ταύτης this] being here Emphatical, and denoting that more valuable, ſpiritual, and eternall life.

Ταύτης

c. Ἀρχηγὸς Σωτὴρ

V. 31. A Prince and a Saviour] Theſe two words ἀρχηγὸς captain, and σωτὴρ Saviour, in the ſtyle of the Old Teſtament ſignifie ſuch an one as Joſhua and the Judges were (ſee Note on Rom. 13. c.) expreſs'd here c. 7. 27. by ἄρχων καὶ δικαστὴς a Ruler and a Judge, by διδόναι σωτηρίαν v. 25. giving deliverance, bringing them out of their ſlavery in Ægypt; and therefore ver. 35. (in ſetting down the Iſraelites miſtake, when they ask'd Moſes, who appointed him ἄρχοντα καὶ δικαστὴν, a Ruler and a Judge?) S. Stephen tells them, God had by the hand of an Angel ſent Moſes ἄρχοντα καὶ λυτρωτὴν, a captain & deliverer, by λυτρωτὴν deliverer meaning the ſame that by σωτηρία deliverance. v. 25. and by σωτὴρ Saviour here, one that leads, and rules them, manages their military affaires, to the avenging them of their enemies, and preſerving them ſafe and quiet. Such an one was Chriſt to be unto the people of God, and was ſent to be ſuch particularly to the Jewes; but this not in that manner that they expected, but (as his kingdome was not of this world) in a ſpiritual manner, to goe in and out before them againſt their ſpiritual enemies, Satan and ſinne: To which end it was, that after his exaltation and inſtalment to his Regal office, the firſt thing was his ſending of his Spirit, thereby giving them (as here it follows) place of repentance, if upon the preaching of the Apoſtles, they will come in, and believe on him. In this ſenſe is it that Heb. 2. 10. Chriſt is called ἀρχηγὸς σωτηρίας, the captain of ſalvation or deliverance, that is, a captain deſigned on purpoſe to ſave or deliver them, to lead them, as 'tis there, through ſufferings to bliſs, through the wilderneſs, and the land of the Anakims, to Canaan, as Moſes and Joſhua the captains and ſaviours of the Jewes did; ἀρχηγὸς and σωτὴρ, captain and ſaviour, being an ἐνδιάδυοῖν, two words together to expreſſe one thing, and ſo directly the ſame with this other expreſſion of ἀρχηγὸς σωτηρίας, captain of ſalvation.

Ἀρχηγὸς Σωτηρίας

f. Διεπρίοντο

V. 33. Cut to the heart] What διεπρίοντο here ſignifies will be beſt reſolved from Heſychius's rendring of the word, The ordinary copie hath it Διαπρίεσθαι, διαγοράζει, μαίνεσθαι. But that is a miſtake, It ſhould certainly be read ἀγριάζει, or διαγριάζει, grows wild, or angry, for that is all one with μαίνεσθαι is mad which followes, but διαγοράζει is quite another matter, and would rather belong to διαπρίεσθαι (which might be the cauſe of this miſtake by the neerneſſe of the words) as πριάμενος and ἀγοράσας are all one. By this then the word appears to ſignifie rage or vehement diſpleaſure (as ἀγριάζει is ὀργίζεται) ſuch as is in Bears and other wild beaſts, when it makes them tear in pieces thoſe that are next to them, or againſt whom it is conceived; As here it follows, they conſulted to put them to death.

g. Theudas

V. 36. Theudas] A ſtory there is of one Theudas which Joſephus mentions Ant. l. 20. c. 5. and Euſebius Hiſt. l. 2. c. ια'. who undertook to be a Prophet, and promiſed that he would divide Jordan, &c. But that was in Claudius's time, in the time of Fadus's præfecture, who deſtroyed him and his followers. And ſo that cannot be the perſon here mention'd, for this here was before Judas Galilæus v. 37. and he was in the time of Cyrenius's being Governour of Syria (ſee Note h.) This Theudas here then muſt needs be ſome other perſon, whom they had recorded in their writings, and from thence Gamaliel here recites the ſtory, though we have not other record of it.

h. Ἰούδας Γαυλανίτης *See Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccl. l. 1. c. 7.

V. 37. Judas of Galilee] Of this Judas of Galilee, and of this enrolling, Joſephus's teſtimony is moſt clear, * Antiq. l. 18. c. 1. Cyrenius, ſaith he, came to Syria, ſent from Ceſar, (or under him) δικαιοδότης τῶν ἐθνῶν, καὶ τιμητὴς τῶν ἰδίων γενησόμενος, as judge of the nation, and to take the valuation of their eſtates. Upon this, Judas Gaulonita ἐπεὶ γέλῳ ἐπὶ ἀποστάσει, rebell'd, or made defection, and Saddochus with him, τὴν ἀποτίμησιν οὐδὲν ἄλλο ἢ ἀγλιγεῦς δουλείαν ἐπιφέρειν λέγοντες, ſaying that this valuation of their eſtates (the enrolling here) brought in direct ſervitude upon them, καὶ ὡς ἐλευθερίας ἐπ' ἀντιλήψει παρακαλοῦντες τὸ ἔθνος, and therefore called the whole nation to follow them, and vindicate their liberties. So again de Bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 12. Τὶς ἀνὴρ Γαλιλαῖος Ἰούδας εἰς ἀποστασίαν ἐνῆγε τοὺς ἐπιχωρίους, καλίζων, εἰ φόρον τε Ῥωμαίοις τελοῦν ὑπομένουσι, καὶ μετὰ θεὸν ὄντας θνητοὺς δεσπότας, Judas led them to make a defection, reproaching them, or making it a great crime in them, if they ſhould endure to pay tribute to the Romans, and acknowledg mortal rulers, after God had been their King. This doctrine of the unlawfulneſſe to pay tribute to men, upon pretenſe that they muſt acknowledge no other power but that of God over them, was it for which this Judas is by Joſephus ſet down as the leader or head of a fourth Hereſie among the Jewes (Τῇ δὲ τετάρτῃ ὁ Γαλιλαῖος Ἰούδας ἡγεμὼν κατέστη) And the texts of Scripture on which he grounded it may be thought by the words of Joſephus even now cited φόρον τελεῖν, to pay tribute, and μετὰ τὸν θεὸν θνητοὺς δεσπότας, mortal Lords after God, to be that of Deut. 23. 18. in the Septuagints reading of it, οὐκ ἔσται τελεσφόρος ἀπὸ θυγατέρων Ἰσραὴλ (which * Tertullian renders, non erit vectigal pendens ex filiis Iſrael, none of the children of Iſrael ſhall pay tribute,) καὶ οὐκ ἔσται τελεσκόμος πρὸς πᾶν εὐχὴ ἀπὸ υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, and that of Deut. 6. 13. thou ſhalt fear the Lord thy God and ſerve him, (by way of excluſion of all others.) The falſneſſe of which concluſion from theſe premiſes will appear not only from the Hebrew text, Deut. 23. CHAP. VI.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND in thoſe daies [when the number of diſciples was multiplied, there aroſe a murmuring of * the [a] Grecians againſt the Hebrews, becauſe their widows were neglected in the daily miniſtration.]

1. the number of Chriſtians increaſing, the Jewes that underſtood Greek, and

2. Then the twelve called [b] the multitude of the diſciples unto them, and ſaid, It is not † reaſon that we ſhould leave the word of God, and ſerve tables.]

2. And the twelve Apoſtles calling the Church together, ſaid unto them, We have reſolved or decreed (ſee note on Joh. 8. c.) that it is no way fit or reaſonable, that we

3. Wherefore, brethren, Look you out * among you ſeven men of honeſt report, [c] full of the holy Ghoſt and wiſdome, whom we may appoint † over this buſineſſe.]

3. Therefore doe you nominate to us ſeven men, who have approved themſelves to be faithfull truſty perſons, the moſt eminent of the believers among you, that we may conſecrate or ordain them to this office of Deacons in the Church, and intruſt them with the task of diſtributing to them that want, out of the ſtock of the Church: And in the choiſe of them let it alſo be obſerved, that they be perſons of eminent gifts, and knowledge in divine matters, ſee v. 10. (who conſequently may be fit to be employed by us in preaching the Word, and receiving proſelytes to the faith by baptiſme, ch. 8. 5, 12.)

4. But we will * give our ſelves continually to prayer, and to the miniſtery of the word.]

4. And by that means we ſhall be leſſe diſturbed or interrupted in our daily employment of praying and preaching the Goſpel.

5. And the ſaying pleaſed the whole multitude: and they choſe Stephen, a man full of faith, and of the holy Ghoſt,] and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicholas a proſelyte of Antioch.

5. And the thing was thus agreed on by thoſe other that aſſociated with the Apoſtles.

And they pitched upon Stephen firſt, a very worthy perſon, that was richly inſtructed in the doctrine of Chriſt, and was by the holy Ghoſts coming upon him fitted with elocution and all other abilities to preach the Goſpel.

6. Whom they ſet before the Apoſtles: and || when they had prayed they laid their hands on them.]

6. Theſe ſeven the whole number of diſciples that aſſociated with them preſented to the twelve Apoſtles, and they, that is, the Apoſtles, by prayer and impoſition of hands (ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. f.) conſecrated or ordained them to this office of Deacons.

y pray- and-laid ευξαμε- νοι,

7. And the word of God increaſed, and the number of the Diſciples multiplied in Jeruſalem greatly, and a great company of the Prieſts were obedient to the faith.]

7. And the faith of Chriſt was propagated, and a very great number of men in Jeruſalem aſſociated with the Apoſtles, every day more and more; and many of the Jewiſh prieſts received the Goſpel thus preached by the Apoſtles.

8. And Stephen full of faith and power] did great wonders and miracles among the people.

8. And Stephen the deacon, being endued with great abundance of Chriſtian knowledge, and alſo with the power of working miracles

9. Then there aroſe certain of the ſynagogue, which is called the ſynagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia, and of Aſia, diſputing with Stephen.]

9. And as he preached the faith of Chriſt, ſome men of that ſynagogue which was called by the name (becauſe perhaps built at the charges) of the Libertines (that is, thoſe which were the ſons of them which being Jewes had been made free deniſons by the Romans, or were born of Jewiſh parents in cities which had thoſe privileges under the Romans, ſuch as Tarſus, (ſee note on c. 22. e.) where Paul was born, who was an active perſon in this buſineſſe ch. 7. 58. ſome, I ſay, of thoſe Jewes) and of thoſe that dwelt in Cyrene, and Alexandria, and in Cilicia, and Aſia, oppoſed Stephen, and contradicted him.

10. And they were not able to reſiſt the wiſdome, and the Spirit by which he ſpake.]

10. And he ſpake with ſo much knowledge and conviction of argument, and with ſo great excellence of elocution, that they were no way able to deal with him.

11. Then they ſuborned men, which ſaid, We have heard him ſpeak blaſphemous words againſt Moſes, and againſt God.]

11. And being overcome by his reaſons and power of ſpeaking, they betook themſelves to other viler arts, and hired ſome men to accuſe him falſly, and to make complaint to the Sanhedrim, that they had heard him ſpeak diſhonorably of the Jewiſh religion.

12. And they ſtirred up the people, and the Elders, and the Scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the councell,]

12. And having incenſed the Sanhedrim againſt him, and alſo the people at Jeruſalem, they apprehended and carried him before the Sanhedrim.

13. And ſet up falſe witneſſes, which ſaid, This man ceaſeth not to ſpeak blaſphemous words againſt this holy place and the Law.]

13. And brought thoſe witneſſes which they had hired or ſuborned, v. 11. to give in their teſtimony, which was thus, This Stephen is continually a foretelling deſtruction to the Temple, and threatning the change of all the Moſaicall rites.

14. For we have heard him ſay, that this Jeſus of Nazareth ſhall deſtroy this place, and ſhall change the [cuſtomes] which Moſes delivered us.

14. rites, ceremonies.

15. And all that ſat in the councell looking ſtedfaſtly on him, ſaw his face, as it had been the face of an Angel.]

15. And all the Judges that were preſent in the Sanhedrim, as they looked on him, ſaw a great ſplendour about him, juſt as it is when an Angel appeareth.

a. Ἑλληνισταὶ

V. 1. Græcians] The word Ἑλληνισταὶ is by the Syriack rendred Jewes that underſtand Greek; and by S. Chryſoſtome, τὰς Ἑλληνιστὶ φθεγγομένας thoſe that ſpeak Greek, in oppoſition to the βαθεῖς Ἑβραῖοι, the profound, or deep, Hebrews: ſo ſaith Phavorinus, Ἑλληνίζω, Ἑλληνικῶς φθέγγομαι, καὶ τὰ Ἑλλήνων φρονῶ, to Hellenize is to ſpeak Greek, and to have skill in the Greek learning. So ſaith Scaliger, Ἑλληνίζειν non eſt habitare in Græcia, ſed linguâ Græcâ uti, It is not to dwell in Greece, but to uſe the Greek language. And ſo thoſe here that uſed the Septuagints tranſlation of the Bible, are called Ἑλληνισταὶ Helleniſts. And ſo are differenced here from the Ἑβραῖοι Hebrews, which uſed the Jeruſalem-paraphraſe. Thus are Ἑλληνισταὶ Act. 11. 20. differenced from the Jewes in generall v. 19. not that thoſe Helleniſts were not Jewes (for there v. 20. 'tis ſaid that they preached to them, whereas v. 19. 'tis clear that they preached to none but Jewes) but that theſe Jewes underſtood Greek, and uſed the Greek Bible, and therefore are called Helleniſts. And thus ch. 9. 28. when the other Jewes, thoſe of the profounder ſort, had ſuch an averſion to S. Paul the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, that they would not ſee him, ſaith S. Chryſoſtome, he was yet admitted to ſpeak and diſcourſe with the Helleniſts. See Note on Joh. 7. d.

b. Πλῆθος μαθητῶν Πάντες Πλείονες

V. 2. The multitude of the diſciples] Τὸ πλῆθος τῶν μαθητῶν, multitude of diſciples here are the community or ſociety of Chriſtians, called ſometimes πάντες the All, 1 Tim. 5. 20. πλείονες the many, 2 Cor. 2. 6. anſwerable to the multitude here, and ſometimes χριστιανοὶ Chriſtians, or followers of Chriſt, in reſpect of whom as their Doctor, or Maſter, they are here called μαθηταὶ diſciples; and both ordinarily united together in the word ἐκκλησία Church, and ἀδελφοὶ the brethren: ſee c. 15. 3, & 4, & 23. & Mat. 18. 17. Now what power the Church, or brethren, conſidered in this notion, the ſociety of Chriſtians doe here appear to have, may be conſiderable. The choice of the perſons of the Deacons is here committed to them: But that firſt by the appointment of the Apoſtles declared to them. The twelve called to them the multitude, and ſaid, Look out, &c. v. 2, 3. Secondly, they had by the Apoſtles theſe bounds ſet them, 1. to take ſeven, the number ſpecified by the Apoſtles, not left arbitrary to them; 2ly, to pitch on ἄνδρας μαρτυρουμένους, men generally known and well reputed of; 3dly, with theſe qualifications, 1. faith, ſuppoſed in the ἐξ ὑμῶν ſome of you, that is, believers, Chriſtians; 2dly, fulneſſe of the holy Ghoſt, extraordinary gifts; 3dly, fulneſſe of wiſdome, fitted by all theſe for this employment. And when by the Apoſtles appointment, together with the obſervation of theſe preſcribed rules, the multitude have ſought out the perſons, then ſtill the Apoſtles reſerve the κατάστασις, the Ordination, or Conſtitution of them to themſelves, v. 3. In the nomination of Biſhops and Deacons in other Churches, the like may be concluded from the Epiſtles to Timothy and Titus, viz. that ſomewhat was referred to the Church, particularly their teſtimony concerning the qualifications of the Perſons. For the Biſhop that was to ordain is by S. Pauls direction firſt to enquire, as it were upon Articles, (εἴ τις ἐστὶν ἀνέγκλητος, if, or whether, he be blameleſſe, &c.) which concerning a Biſhop are fifteen, Tit. 1. 6. ſeventeen, 1 Tim. 3. 1. fewer concerning a Deacon: And all of them being matters of fact and manners, Timothy, which was newly entred upon his province, and Titus lately left in Crete, could not poſſibly be inſtructed ſufficiently from their own experience, and therefore muſt be ſuppoſed to have it by enquiry of the Church. So in the Cenſures of the Church, the offender muſt be rebuked before the many, 2 Cor. 2. 6. ἐπιτιμία ὑπὸ τῶν πλειόνων, before the Church, Mat. 18. 17. ἐνώπιον πάντων, before all, 1 Tim. 5. 20. Where yet it is Timothy the Biſhop, that muſt ἐλέγχειν rebuke the offenders, onely in the preſence, and with the notice of the Church, to make the rebuke more conſiderable, to produce ſhame and reformation. Laſtly, in the Councel at Jeruſalem, with the Apoſtles and Elders, or Biſhops of Judæa, is joyned ὅλη ἐκκλησία the whole Church, ch. 15. 22. in the chooſing, and ſending meſſengers to Antioch; but that with a moſt diſcernible diſtinction, The Apoſtles and Elders, as they, whoſe decree or appointment it was, ἔδοξε τοῖς Ἀποστόλοις καὶ πρεσβυτέροις, it pleaſed or ſeemed good to the Apoſtles and Elders to ſend choſen men, the choice and miſſion belonging to them, and the perſons ſent ἄνδρες ἐξ αὐτῶν, men of them, Biſhops of the Councel, but this with the knowledge and approbation of the whole Church (σὺν ὅλῃ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ) joyned with them, as of thoſe that were acceſſories, not principalls in the ſending. So in the Inſcription of the Epiſtle of the Councel v. 23. The Apoſtles and Elders and brethren ſend greeting: Not that any but the Apoſtles and Elders, that is, Biſhops of Judæa, were members of the Councel, or had voices in it, (for that is cleared v. 6. at the firſt mention of their convening, The Apoſtles and Elders came together to conſider of this matter, the debate of the queſtion, and the deciſion, belonging only to them) but that the whole Church joyned with the Apoſtles and Biſhops, ſhewing their conſent and approbation, and ſubmiſſion to the decree of the Councel. And thus in following times have Lay-men ſubſcribed the Acts of Councels in this form, Conſentiens ſubſcripſi, I have ſubſcribed conſenting, or teſtified my conſent under my hand. As for the decree of the Councel, though that be in the ſtyle of ἡμῖν, us, v. 28. which may be conceived to referre to all thoſe that are named in the front, and ſo to the ἀδελφοὶ, brethren, yet 'tis apparent by v. 25. ἔδοξεν ἡμῖν γενομένοις ὁμοθυμαδὸν, it ſeemed good to us being aſſembled together, that that belongs onely to thoſe that were aſſembled or ſat in the Councel, that is, the Apoſtles and Elders, v. 6. and ſo it is expreſly ſet, c. 16. 4. δόγματα τὰ κεκριμένα ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀποστόλων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων, the decrees ordained by the Apoſtles and Elders.

c. Πλήρεις πνεύματος ἁγίου

V. 3. Full of the holy Ghoſt] What is meant by πλήρεις πνεύματος ἁγίου, full of the holy Ghoſt in this place, may perhaps be beſt collected by a farther conſideration of the words of Chriſt, Mar. 16. 17, 18. But ſignes ſhall attend them which believe theſe things (ſo Σημεῖα δὲ τοῖς πιστεύσασι ταῦτα παρακολουθήσει may be rendred) or theſe ſignes ſhall attend, or follow, them that believe. Theſe words ſeem to contain a promiſe of extraordinary gifts (of caſting out Devils, ſpeaking ſtrange languages, healing, &c. v. 17, 18.) to others (beſide the Apoſtles) under the name of believers. For the believers there πιστεύσαντες are all one with the he that believeth ὁ πιστεύσας, and is baptized v. 16. and that is thoſe that upon the Apoſtles preaching ſhall believe, and enter into the Church, or be added to it. But this not ſo unlimitedly on one ſide, as that all that did believe ſhould have thoſe gifts beſtow'd upon them, (ſee Note on ch. 2. d.) for then here would have been no choice; all being full of the holy Ghoſt, they could not look out men that were full; nor yet with ſuch reſtrictions on the other ſide, as that none had theſe gifts, but thoſe that were ordained to ſacred functions, for then theſe, who were not yet ſo ordained, could not thus be full. But I ſuppoſe the truth is in the middle. At the Apoſtles preaching and mens receiving the Goſpel, many of them that believed had extraordinary gifts, miraculous powers beſtowed upon them, for the teſtifying to themſelves and others the truth of the Goſpel in thoſe firſt times, and to qualifie them for the ſervices of the Church, when they ſhould be called to it. And agreeably thoſe that were thus

Πιστεύσασι

Πιστεύσας

ἐνώπιον Πλήθους. Ἐκκλησία. ἐνώπιον Πάντων

thus endowed, were generally choſen to ſuch imployments, (before others who had them not,) as there was need of them; And ſuch I ſuppoſe are here meant under the phraſe of Full of the holy Ghoſt, and that phraſe mention'd by the Apoſtles, as a qualification required in thoſe whom they would appoint Deacons here, and, beſide the care of the poor, communicate the power of preaching and baptizing to them, which 'tis evident Philip had. This may moſt probably be it, which is affirmed of Cornelius's family Act. 10. 44. The holy Ghoſt fell on all them which heard the word, and the gift of the holy Ghoſt was powr'd upon them, 45. for they ſpake with tongues, &c. 46. So again ch. 19. 6. the Epheſian diſciples being newly baptized in the name of Jeſus, v. 5. by the Apoſtles benediction, and impoſition of hands, the holy Ghoſt came upon them, and they ſpake with tongues, and propheſied. And ſo ch. 2. 38. when Peter tells them, that upon their Repentance and Baptiſme, they ſhould receive δωρεὰν the gift of the holy Ghoſt, (the very phraſe which is uſed of Cornelius's family) it follows accordingly ch. 4. 31. the place was ſhaken, and they were filled with the holy Ghoſt, and ſo, beſide the inward gifts and graces of the Spirit, they were, many of them, endowed with thoſe extraordinary gifts, which c. 2. 1. had fall'n upon the Apoſtles and were uſefull for the confirming them in the faith, and to teſtifie to them and others the truth of what was preach'd to them. And of them that were at that time converted, they are now to chooſe ſome here, for the office of Deacons, men full of the Spirit, &c.

δωρεὰν τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα

CHAP. VII.

Paraphraſe.

1. THen ſaid the high Prieſt, Are theſe things ſo?]

1. And the chief prieſt asked him, Whether this, whereof he was accuſed, ch. 6. 14. of foretelling the deſtruction of this people, and religion of the Jewes, were true or no.

2. And he ſaid, Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken, The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Meſopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran,]

2. And fitting his ſpeech to the point in hand (that is, to prove the approaching deſtruction of the Temple, by ſhewing the little merit, and great provocations of that people, and the no reaſon why they ſhould be preferred before other nations, the free choice, and thereupon free promiſe of God, being the only ground of all the mercy that befell them) he ſaid, I beſeech you to give audience; The one eternall God of heaven and earth appeared, and ſpake to our father Abraham, whilſt he was in Meſopotamia (as that (ſee Judith 5. 3.) in a wider notion contains that whole region on the other ſide of Euphrates from Canaan, v. 2. Syria, ‖ Chaldea, Meſopotamia, and Babylonia) that is, whilſt he was in the place of his birth, Ur of the Chaldees, Gen. 15. 7. & 11. 31. before the time that his father Terah and he dwelt in Haran, Gen. 11. 31. (where in the way from Ur to Canaan, they ſtayed ſome yeares, till Terah's death, v. 32.)

3. And ſaid unto him, Get thee out of thy countrey and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I ſhall ſhew thee.]

3. And when he appeared, he commanded him, ſaying, The countrey where thou art is overrun with all villany, and therefore that thou mayſt keep thy ſelf free from their idolatries, and other vices accompanying them, I command thee to forſake that place, and thy fathers houſe, Gen. 12. 1. and remove into another land which I ſhall appoint, and direct thee to, viz. the land of Canaan, which though now poſſeſs'd by others, yet I will give unto thee, and to thy ſeed entirely, Gen. 13. 14. and by thy readineſſe to take this journey on this command I ſhall diſcern thy obedience to me.

4. Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land wherein ye now dwell.]

4. Then in obedience to that command, he went out of that countrey of his, (and his father Terah with him, as farre as Haran, Gen. 11. 31.) and after he had dwelt in Haran ſome years, according to God's command, he removed into Canaan, Gen. 12. 5.

5. And he gave him none inheritance in it, no not ſo much as to ſet his foot on: yet he promiſed that he would give it to him for a poſſeſſion, and to his ſeed after him, when as yet he had no child.]

5. And there he pitched his tent, and built an altar v. 7, 8. (but was ſoon fain to remove into Ægypt ver. 10. and there to ſojourn) having received a promiſe of God, that he would give him this whole land of Canaan, ch. 12. 7. for him and his ſeed to poſſeſſe, when as yet he had no child, nor likelyhood to have any, nor any kind of eſtate in the land, but was a ſtranger, or ſojourner there, Gen. 17. 18. & 20. 1. & 21. 34. & 23. 4.

6. And God ſpake on this wiſe, that his ſeed ſhould ſojourn in a ſtrange land, and that they ſhould bring them into bondage, and intreat them evil [a] four hundred years.]

6. And Gen. 15. 13. God ſpake to him again concerning this matter, that before this promiſe ſhould be performed to him, his poſterity ſhould firſt ſojourn in Canaan, and then go down to ſojourn in Ægypt, and there ſhould ſuffer, and be for ſome time oppreſſed, like ſlaves, till the end of 400 years from the time of the birth of Iſaac (not from the time of the going into Ægypt) untill the time that the iniquity of the ſeven nations, all concluded there (as Amos 2. 9, 10.) under the generall name of the Amorites, which inhabited this promiſed land, ſhould be filled up, and ſo they fit for God in juſtice to deſtroy them, and give away their land from them, Gen. 15. 16.

7. And the nation to whom they ſhall be in bondage will I judge, ſaid God: and after that ſhall they come forth, and ſerve me in this place.]

7. And then in the 4th generation (Gen. 15. 16.) after Jacob, (Moſes and Aaron, which brought them out, being the ſons of Amram, the ſon of Cohath, the ſon of Levi, one of Jacob's ſons that went down with him into Ægypt) when the time comes of bringing them out of their Ægyptian ſlavery, and giving them this land, I will, ſaith God, Gen. 15. 14. lay heavy puniſhments on the Ægyptians, and by that means make them releaſe thy poſterity, and ſo they ſhall come and poſſeſſe this land, and ſerve me in it.

8. And he gave him the covenant of circumciſion: and ſo Abraham begat Iſaac, and circumciſed him the eighth day; and Iſaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat the twelve Patriarchs.]

8. And God made a covenant with him, and appointed circumciſion as a ſeal of it; and accordingly Abraham, when Iſaac was born, circumciſed him the eighth day; and Iſaac begat and circumciſed Jacob, and Jacob his twelve ſons, the heads of the twelve tribes, of which this people conſiſted.

9. And the Patriarchs * moved with envy, ſold Joſeph into Ægypt: but God was with him,]

* being inraged, ζηλώσαντες

9. And thoſe ſons of Jacob were much diſpleaſed with one of their brethren, viz. Joſeph, and ſold him into Ægypt; but when he was there, God protected, and provided for, and advanced him miraculouſly.

10. And delivered him out of all his † affliction, and gave him favour, and wiſdome in the ſight of Pharaoh king of Ægypt; and he made him governour over Ægypt, and all his houſe.]

† afflictions, θλίψεων

10. And when he was caſt into priſon there, God brought him out, and at the ſame time brought him into favour and eſtimation for deep wiſdome with Pharaoh the king of Ægypt: and he entruſted the affairs of his whole houſhold, yea and the whole kingdome to his managery.

11. At this time of Joſeph's power with Pharaoh there came a terrible famine upon Ægypt, and Canaan, for ſeven years ſpace, and our father Jacob and his children being then in Canaan, were like to have periſhed for want of food.

11. Now there came a dearth over all the land of Ægypt and Canaan, and great affliction, and our fathers found no ſuſtenance.]

12, 13. And Jacob underſtanding, that, though the famine was as great at preſent in Ægypt as in Canaan, yet there was a magazine of corn reſerved from the former years plenty, and ſo there was now ſufficient for themſelves and to ſell to others, ſent his ſons twice into Ægypt to buy corn: And though the firſt time Joſeph dealt a little harſhly with them, yet the ſecond time he made himſelf known to be their brother, and made it known alſo to Pharaoh.

12. But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Ægypt, he ſent out our fathers firſt.

13. And at the ſecond time Joſeph was made known to his brethren, and Joſeph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.]

14. And by Pharaoh's appointment, Joſeph ſent for his father and brethren, and their wives and children, which, reckoning in ſome of their children born in Ægypt, together with Joſeph and his ſons, and ſons ſons, made up ſeventy five perſons.

b. 14. Then ſent Joſeph and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, [b] threeſcore and fifteen ſouls.]

15. And accordingly Jacob went down to him with his whole family; and he and all his ſons died there.

15. So Jacob went down into Ægypt, and died, he and our fathers,]

c. 16. And Joſeph and ſome (ſay the ancients) of his brethren, being firſt buried in Ægypt, were after, at the Iſraelites going out, removed to Sichem, Joſ. 24. 32. and buried in the field bought by Jacob of the children of Hamor; and Jacob himſelf never buried in Ægypt, but by his ſons carried, and buried, Gen 50.13. in the field of Machpelah, bought by Abraham of Ephron ſon of Zoar, Gen. 23. 8. or of the ſons of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. And ſo, ſaith Joſephus, ſome of his ſons alſo.

16. And were [c] carried over into Sichem, and laid in the ſepulchre that Abraham bought for a ſumme of money of the ſons of Emmor the father of Sichem.]

20, 21. At this point of time Moſes was born, and being a very beautifull child, he was firſt kept cloſe in his fathers houſe three moneths, Exod. 2. But when that could no longer be done, he was put in a cradle of bulruſhes by a rivers brink; and being there left and expoſed, the providence of God preſerved him. For it happened that Pharaoh's daughter found him there, and took him, and put him to nurſe to his own mother, Exod. 2. 9. and ſo afterwards educated and brought him up as her own ſon.

e. 20. In which time Moſes was born, and was [e] exceeding fair; and nouriſhed up in his fathers houſe three moneths.

(ſee Note on 2 Tim. 3. a.) and was thereby a perſon of great abilities above other men, both for ſpeaking (viz. in reſpect of eloquence and power of ſpeech, though for the manner of utterance he had ſome ſtammering in his ſpeech) and alſo for managery of buſineſſe. Very able both to give counſel, and to act any great affairs.

22. And Moſes was learned in all the wiſdome of the Ægyptians; and was mighty in words and in deeds.]

23. And when he was forty years old, God having ſome way revealed unto him (ſee Note on 2 Tim. 3. a.) his purpoſe of delivering the Iſraelites out of their ſlavery by his hands, and making him their Leader, and inſtrument of his vengeance on their oppreſſors the Ægyptians, (ſee v. 25.) thereupon he reſolved to viſit them, and ſee how it was with them.

23. And when he was full fourty years old, it came into his heart to viſit his brethren the children of Iſrael.]

24. And ſeeing an Ægyptian doe injury to an Iſraelite, he took the Iſraelites part againſt him, and in defence of the Iſraelite, kill'd the Ægyptian.

24. And ſeeing one of them ſuffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppreſſed, and ſmote the Ægyptian.]

25. This he did as an act of that office, to which God had deſigned him, that of a Saviour or deliverer of his countrey-men: and although he had not yet received his commiſſion to that office, but only ſome notice of Gods deſignation, yet thinking that the Iſraelites did alſo know that he was thus deſigned, he thought fit to doe this (which lawfully he might, in the defence of an innocent perſons life againſt an unjuſt aſſault or violence, which could not be averted but by this means) viz. in defence of the one to kill the other, as a firſt eſſay, or exerciſe of that office. But in this he was miſtaken, for the Iſraelites knew nothing of this purpoſe of God to imploy him, and from this act of his had not that ſagacity to diſcern it.

25. * For he ſuppoſed his brethren would have underſtood how that God by his hand would deliver them; but they underſtood not.]

* But, or, And he thought that his brethren did underſtand, Ἐνόμιζε συνιέναι τοὺς ἀδ.

26. The next day he interpoſed himſelf again as a pacifier or compoſer of controverſies among them, to ſee how that would be accepted by them, whether they would be likely to receive him as a Judge, to goe in and out before them, which was another part of the office to which he was deſigned.

26. And the next day he ſhewed himſelf unto them as they ſtrove, and †would have ſet them at one again,] ſaying Sirs, ye are brethren, why doe ye wrong one to another?

† perſwaded them to peace, συνήλασσεν αὐτοὺς εἰς εἰρήνην

27. But he that did his neighbour wrong thruſt him away, ſaying, Who made thee a ruler, and a judge over us?

28. Wilt thou kill me, as thou didſt the Ægyptian yeſterday?

29. And Moſes ſeeing himſelf thus repulſed, and on the other ſide fearing that what he had done already, might, by being known, bring hazard on him (as it did Exod. 2. 15. when Pharaoh heard of it, he ſought to kill him) he fled from thence to Midian, and there ſojourned with Revel, Exod. 2. 18. or, which is all one, with Jethro, ch. 3. 1. the prieſt or prince of Midian, Exod. 2. 16. and he kept his ſheep, and married his daughter Zipporah, by whom he had two children, Gerſhom, ſo named for his being a ſtranger or ſojourner there, and Eliezer, from God's helping him or delivering him from the hand of Pharaoh, that ſought his life, Exod. 18. 2, 3, 4.

29. Then fled Moſes at this ſaying, and was a ſtranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two ſons.]

30. And at the end of a ſecond part of three of his life, i. e. of a ſecond 40 years, which was alſo the period of the 400 years prefix'd, v. 6. as Moſes was feeding his ſheep about Horeb or Sinai,

30. And when fourty years were expired, there appeared unto him in the wilderneſſe of mount Sinai an Angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a buſh.]

that mount after so famous for Gods delivering the Law out of it, and therefore called the flaming mountain of God, Exod. 3. 2. he saw a flame of fire in a bush, but the bush was not hurt nor consumed by it, which was the appearing of an Angel, according as 'twas usuall for Angels to appear (see note on Mat. 3. k.)

31. When Moses saw it, he wondred at the sight: and as he drew neer to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him,

32. Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. [Then Moses trembled and durst not behold.]

32. And this voice of God by an Angel speaking (and perhaps, as it was usuall, thunder joyned with it) was so terrible to him, and the flame that appeared in the bush so glorious and illustrious, that he durst not look upon it, but hid his face, Exod. 3. 6.

33. Then said the Lord to him, [Put off thy shooes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.]

33. This appearance of an Angel is an argument and evidence of my peculiar presence, from which any place is called holy, and therefore, in reverence due to such a presence, put off thy shooes, &c.

34. I have seen, I have seen the * afflictions of my people which is in Ægypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will send thee into Ægypt.]

34. Now is the time come wherein I will certainly visit & relieve that people of mine, the children of Abraham, which, according to what I foretold him (see v. 6.) have been used like slaves in Ægypt a long time; and to this purpose now I have sent down my Angel, the only way of my peculiar presence in any one place, that I may commune with thee, and send thee on this message, as my Commissioner to bring them out thence.

35. This Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a Ruler and a Judge? the same did God send to be a Ruler and Deliverer, by the hands of the Angel, which appeared to him in the bush.]

35. And so that Moses that they would not receive to 'avenge their injuries, or compose their quarrels, ver. 27, 28. was now sent by God to lead them and bring them out of Ægypt, and to this end an Angel sent to talk with him, and give him his commission, which was done in a glorious manner by a flame in (but not consuming) the bush.

36. He brought them out, after that he had shewed wonders and signes in the land of Ægypt, and in the Red-sea, and in the wilderness fourty years.]

36. And at last, after the working of many terrible prodigies, first in Ægypt, then at their departure in the Red-sea, he rescued them out of Pharaoh's hands, and after fourty years spent in the wilderness, to punish their murmuring, and to shew forth more of God's power and miracles in sustaining them there, they were at last brought by Joshua into Canaan.

37. This is that Moses which said unto the children of Israel, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren like unto me; him shall ye hear.]

37. Now what was this Moses all this while, but a Prophet foretelling the purpose of God to send another great prophet to you in these later daies, the Messias, which (though he were God from heaven, yet) should here be born in an ordinary condition of a daughter of Abraham, and warning you to be sure to receive and entertain him, when he should come, assuring you that if you hear not (receive not) him, you shall (which was the point in hand, which Stephen was all this while a demonstrating, in answer to what was laid to his charge ch. 6. 14.) be utterly destroyed? Act. 3. 32.

38. This is he that was in the † Church in the wilderness with the Angel, which spake to him in the mount Sinai, and with our fathers, who received * the lively oracles to give unto us.]

39, 40. And after all these prodigies and miracles used by God to give him authority among them, the Israelites murmured, & rebelled against him still, and had more mind to be in Ægypt again, then under his government, and to that purpose made them pictures of the Ægyptians Gods to goe before, and lead them, as Moses did, viz. a calf v. 41. only upon pretense that Moses had forsaken them, was gone they knew not whither, when indeed he was only called by God unto the mount, to receive commandements to give unto them.

41. And they made a calf in those daies, and offered sacrifice unto the Idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.]

41. And when they had made this calf they very solemnly worshipt it, and by sacrifice and festivities celebrated that idol (which they themselves made) in the same manner, as God himself is wont to be worshipped.

42. Then God turned and gave them up to worship the host of heaven, as it is written in the book of the Prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts, and sacrifices by the space of fourty years in the wilderness?]

42. This provoked God to forsake them, to leave them to themselves, to permit them to follow their own hearts desires into all the madness they led them to, and so by not restraining, to deliver them up to worship the starres of heaven, in stead of God, upon which it is that God expostulates with them, Am. 5. 25. Were the sacrifices which you offered up in the wilderness all those fourty years, offered to me, O ye house of Israel?

43. Nay, as the grossest idolatry, ye set up a chappiet or shrine with an image in it (see note on c. 19. e) and that image the image of one of the Ægytian Kings, under the title of Mars; and again the picture of Saturn, another planet denoting another Ægyptian god: and these images of these false gods have been made by you on purpose to be worshipt by you: which idolatry together with your consequent sinnes, hath brought that captivity upon you, Am. 5. 26.

44. These fathers of ours in the wilderness had the tabernacle of the testimony, that is, the tabernacle with the ark in it, called the ark of the testimony, (because of the tables of the law put there, which were the testimonies and evidences of Gods will, how he would be served) or else the tabernacle, where God promised to meet them, the place where he would record his name, Exod. 20. 24. where they were to commemorate his mercies to them, and where he would answer their prayers, bestow blessings on them, and this built exactly according to the pattern shewed Moses by God.

47. But this Temple was not thought fit to be built by him, becauſe, though he were a very excellent perſon, yet he had had great warres and ſhed much blood, 1 Chron. 22. 8. & 28. 3. in which reſpect God would not permit him to have this honour of building the Temple, a place deſtined to all peaceableneſſe, purity and holineſſe, this therefore was reſerved for Solomon, who accordingly built it in a moſt ſumptuous manner.

47. But Solomon built him an houſe.]

48, 49, 50, 51. But ſure God doth not ſo dwell in this Temple (who hath the whole world for his palace) as that he ſhould be bound to preſerve this for ever from being deſtroyed, when you have by crucifying his Son thus provoked his vengeance againſt you, (and this brings home Stephen's diſcourſe in this chapter to the poin: which he had in hand ch. 6. 14.) and continue in the rebellions of your fathers: for ſure if David's bloodguiltineſſe made him uncapable of building it, yours will render you uncapable of having it continued to you.

Annotations on Chap. VII.

a. Τετρακόσια ἔτη

V. 6. Foure hundred years] That the four hundred years here mention'd, as alſo Gen. 15. 13. or the four hundred & thirty, Exod. 12. 40. are not to be interpreted of the ſpace wherein the Iſraelites continued in Ægypt, ſo as to begin at Jacobs and his ſons coming thither; and to end at Moſes's carrying them out, is ſufficiently manifeſt by all ſtory of thoſe times. The Chaldee paraphraſt, and the generality of the Jews determining that ſpace to be but two hundred and ten, only Joſephus defining it two hundred and fifteen years. Firſt then it muſt be obſerved, that the words here, and in thoſe other places, being not ſtrictly reſtrained to their dwelling in Ægypt, but ſo as to contain alſo their ſojourning in Canaan, the γῆ ἀλλοτρία, ſtrange land, here may fitly comprehend both of them, and the πάροικον ἔσαι, ſhall ſojourn, may doe ſo too; for Abraham ſojourned in Canaan, before his poſterity were ſojourners in Ægypt, yea and himſelf firſt ſojourned in Ægypt Gen. 12. 10. And ſo the words in Gen. 15. 13. are in the ſame latitude, thy ſeed ſhall be a ſtranger in a land which is not theirs, and ſhall ſerve them; Where the land which is not theirs, diſtinctly the γῆ ἀλλοτρία, a ſtrange land here, is common to both thoſe lands, where they ſojourned, and where they were ſervants. And in the place Exod. 12. 40. the words in our Engliſh, the ſojourning of the children of Iſrael who dwelt in Ægypt, are reconcileable with this alſo, their ſojourning being defined to be ſo many years, part of which they dwelt in Ægypt, but not their ſojourning in Ægypt ſo many years. And therefore when the Septuagint read it Ἡ δὲ παροίκησις τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, ὧν παῴκησε ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ, the ſojourning of the children of Iſrael which they ſojourned in Ægypt, they adde by way of neceſſary paraphraſe, καὶ ἐν γῇ Χαναὰν, and in the land of Canaan, and ſo the Samaritan Pentateuch read; and Solomon Jarchi & in terris aliis, and in other lands, in ſtead of it. Secondly, it muſt be obſerved what latitude belongs in that place of Exodus 12. 40. to that phraſe children of Iſrael, not ſo as to denote the poſterity of Jacob only, but incluſively them and their fathers, Jacob, and Iſaac, the poſterity of Abraham: This is done by a figure Synecdoche, ordinary in all languages; and therefore the Septuagint, to expreſſe it more plainly, thought fit to enlarge their paraphraſe, and having added Canaan to Ægypt, they adde alſo to the children of Iſrael, αὐτοὶ, καὶ οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν, both they, and their fathers, and ſo read that whole verſe thus, Ἡ δὲ παροίκησις τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, ὧν παῴκησε ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ καὶ ἐν γῇ Χαναὰν, αὐτοὶ καὶ οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν, ἔτη πεντακόσια τριάκοντα, The ſojourning of the children of Iſrael, which they and their fathers ſojourned in the land of Ægypt and Canaan was four hundred and thirty thirty years. And though some copies of the Septuagint have not that latter addition of, they and their fathers, yet S. Augustine in Exod. qu. 47. acknowledgeth both additions. Mean while the words both here, and Gen. 15. 13. have no need of such a paraphrase, assigning it to Abrahams, not to Jacobs seed. And so saith Josephus Antiq. l. 2. Κατέλιπον δὲ τὴν Αἴγυπτον μηνὶ Ξανθικῷ πέμπτῃ καὶ δεκάτῃ καὶ σελήνῃ, ἀπὸ ἔτη τριάκοντα καὶ τετρακόσια ἢ μικρῷ πρόσθεν μετοικήσεως ἦν τοῖς τὴν Χαναναίαν ἐλθοῦσιν, they left Ægypt in the month Xanthicus on the fifteenth day, four hundred and thirty years after our father Abraham came into Canaan. So that now the only difficulty behind is to accord the four hundred years here, and in Genesis, with the four hundred and thirty in Exodus: And that must be by distinguishing of the beginning of the account, which may be either from Abrahams leaving of Chaldæa, and receiving the first promise of Canaan, or else from the birth of Isaac, Abrahams seed. If the account be begun from the leaving Chaldæa, Abrahams own countrey, when his sojourning did begin, then it falls right to be four hundred and thirty years, as it is in Exodus; for Abraham being born in the year of the world 2007, and the warning of God to him to goe out of his countrey, being in the seventieth year of his age, that is, in the 2077th of the world, four hundred and thirty years added to that number make up 2507, and in the next year after that, is the departure out of Ægypt placed by the best Chronologers. But if the account begin from Abrahams seed, that is, from the birth of Isaac, which we know was in the hundredth year of Abrahams age, and so thirty years after his departure from Chaldæa, then it must consequently be thirty years lesse from thence to the departure out of Ægypt; and so that will accord exactly with the four hundred years here, and in Genesis, which are assigned to his seeds sojourning in a strange land. Thus the Jewes in Seder Olam collect from that place in Genesis, thy seed shall be a stranger four hundred years, that is, Isaac, from his birth, and his posterity, till the delivery out of Ægypt by Moses. Of which space, the servitude and oppression of the Israelites in Ægypt came not, say they, to much above an hundred and thirty years, but their stay after Jacobs descent, to two hundred and ten; to which adding one hundred and ninety years from Isaacs birth to Jacobs going down into Ægypt, (which is accordingly placed by Chronologers, An. M. 2298.) the whole four hundred years are made up exactly.

Γῆ ἀλλοτρία Πάροικον ἔσαι

b. Ἑβδομηκοντὰ πέντε.

V. 14. Threescore and fifteen] The difference of the number of those which are here said to have gone down into Ægypt, from that computation which we find Gen. 46. 27. & Deut. 10. 22. where they are but threescore and ten, hath made some writers think fit to change the reading. Th. Beza, from Cor. Bertram is willing to believe πέντε five mistaken for πάντες all. Others rather phansie πάντως all together, but without any pretense of antient or later copie for either: nay on the contrary, the Syriack and Arabick and Latine translations are all for that which we now have, and so make those conjectures unseasonable. The matter sure is to be imputed to another Original. S. Luke, we know, was one of those which made use of the Greek translation of the Old Testament, and accordingly citeth his testimonies constantly out of the Septuagints reading. Now in the Septuagint, Gen. 46. where this account is made, it is clear that the summe set down ver. 27. is not seventy, as we now read out of the Hebrew, but seventy five: and that that is no mistake of the transcriber by confounding of numeral letters, as some are willing to suppose, appears by the view of the retail, there being five names more set down in their translation, then we find now in the Hebrew, viz. the sons of Manasses Machir, and Machir begat Galaad: and the sons of Ephraim, Sutalaam, and Taam; and the sons of Sutalaam, Edem. Against this it is of no force that is objected, that these five came not down with Jacob into Ægypt, for by that reason the number of seventy could not be made up; for of them Joseph and Manasseh and Ephraim are three; and 'tis certain, Joseph came not into Ægypt with Jacob, and Manasseh and Ephraim were born in Ægypt and never were out of it. Nay among them we find the sons of Pharez, Hezrom and Hamul, v. 12. and ten sons of Benjamin, v. 21. who certainly were not born at the time of Jacobs going into Ægypt. The number whether of seventy, or seventy five, belongs not precisely to those that came into Ægypt, but to the progeny of Jacob there, of which because a greater part came down with him thither, therefore the greater part giving the denomination to the whole, it is said that so many went down with him, though some of that number were born there, who consequently were then in the loins of their parents (according to the sacred style, and by a figure frequent there) as Levi is said by the Author to the Hebrews, to have paid tithes to Melchisedek, though he were not born till many years after that Abraham did so; or as in the enumeration of Leahs progeny in this very chapter of Gen. v. 15. where having reckoned both her children and childrens children to three generations, of which only six sons and a daughter were born in Padan-Aram, or Mesopotamia, and all the rest in Canaan, he yet addes, These be the sons of Leah which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-Aram, with his daughter Dinah, all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

c. Μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχέμ.

V. 16. Carried over into Sichem] Some difficulty there is in reconciling this passage of the burying place of the Patriarchs, with that which is said in Genesis. There 'tis clear there were two burying places, one bought by Abraham of Ephron the Hittite, Gen. 23. in Machpelah, before Mamre, that is, in Hebron, which is in the land of Canaan v. 19. and this cost four hundred shekels of silver ver. 15. the other bought by Jacob of the children of Emor in Salem, a city of Shechem, in Canaan also, Gen. 33. 19 and that cost an hundred lambs, or pieces of money with that signature. If we referre to that which Abraham bought, then that was not bought of the children of Emor or Hamor; if to that which was bought of the children of Hamor, then the name of Abraham cannot be retained. Hence it is that Andr. Masius (a learned man) on Joshua 24. 32. hath thought necessary to put in into the text here the name of Jacob in stead of that of Abraham. And another expedient there is, that the word Abraham may be retained, but must signifie Jacob, as sometimes the children are expres'd by the name of their father: so David is set to signifie the Messias that should come from him, Ezech. 34. 23. Jer. 30. 9. and Joseph for his sons, Gen. 48. 15. and David for Rehoboam his grandchild, 1 Kin. 12. 16. and elsewhere Rehoboam for his son Abia. But if we look into the story, Gen. 49. 30. we shall find that the burying place here referred to (as farre as concerns the αὐτὸς he, that is, Jacob v. 15.) was that in Machpelah bought of Ephron by Abraham, and therefore this way of reconciling will not be so commodious. The emendation possibly will be more proper, by setting the name of Heth in stead of Emmor (For the τῷ Συχέμ which is added, is wanting in the Syriack and Arabick interpreter, and the Kings MS. reads τῷ ἐν Συχέμ. not, the son of Sichem, but, that dwelt in Sichem) or else for τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμὸρ, the sons of Emmor, τῶν υἱῶν Ζοὰρ the son of Zoar, (for so is Ephron, Gen. 23. 8.) If this may be accepted, then the sense of the whole verse may be this, The Patriarchs, Jacob and our fathers v. 15. were buried, the latter, viz. Joseph, Josh. 24. 32. in Sichem in the field bought of the children of Hamor by Jacob (and so some others of his brethren too, ſaith S. Jerome in Paula's Epitaph) the former in Machpelah (bought by Abraham of Ephron ſon of Zoar, Gen. 23. 8. or of the children of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. compared with ch. 23. 20.) viz. Jacob Gen. 50. 13. and ſo (ſaith Joſephus, Ant. l. 2. c. 4.) ſome others of Joſephs brethren alſo. And ſo both places of buriall may be here referred to in this verſe, and that after the uſuall Scripture-manner by way of ἐπάνοδον or regreſſe, thus, Jacob died and our fathers, v. 15. (then v. 16. beginning with the latter firſt) καὶ μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχὲμ, and they, that is, our fathers, Joſeph, &c. were removed to Sichem) (removed, becauſe they had been before buried in Ægypt, Joſh. 24. 32.) καὶ ἐτέθησαν and they were put, that is, Jacob (and after him ſome others) was buried (without removing) in the tomb that Abraham bought of the ſons of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. or of Ephron, ſon of Zohar, Gen. 23. 8. which word Ζοὰρ might eaſily be turned into Ἐμμὼρ. As for the ἀργυρίου τιμὴν, price of money, that here the field is ſaid to be bought for, when the Chaldee, the Septuagint, and vulgar Latine, in Geneſis read lambs in ſtead of it, this falls out by the double ſignification of the word קסיטה, which ſignifies both ἀμνὸν a lamb, (which in Engliſh we call coſit, and Caſtellio Job 22. 11. renders Quæſitam, from the Hebrew word) and a piece of money, that had that ſignature upon it, as the ſhekel had the Arke and the Rod of Aaron; and ſo ſaith * Buxtorfe out of Rabbi Aquila, that in Africk money was called Cheſitah. And to this double acception of this word, S. Peter ſeems to referre 1 Pet. 1. 18. Τιμίῳ ἁίματι ὡς ἀμνοῦ Ye are redeemed not ἀργυρίῳ with ſilver, but τιμίῳ ἁίματι ὡς ἀμνοῦ, with the precious blood as of a lamb.

d. Ποιεῖν ἔκθετα. V. 19. They caſt out] What ποιεῖν ἔκθετα ſignifies, there can be ſmall doubt. 'Tis after the Hebrew idiome no more than ἐκτιθέναι to expoſe, or caſt out helpleſſe, to certain ruine, in the ſame manner as ποιῆσαι ἔλεον to do mercy, Luc. 1. 72. is ἐλεῆσαι to pity, or commiſerate. All that is here to be taken care of is, that τῷ ποιεῖν be ſo rendred, as that it may with truth belong to Pharaoh the agent in this verſe, and not to πατέρες ἡμῶν the Iſraelites, who were ſo ill handled by him. As it lyes in our ordinary Engliſh, and the Vulgar Latine, it ſeems to refer to the Iſraelites expoſing their own children, Pharaoh dealt ſubtilly with our Fathers, ſo that they caſt out, that muſt be, our Fathers caſt out, and ſo the Latine, ut exponerent infantes ſuos, which perhaps was thought to have truth in Moſes's mother, Exod. 2. 3. But it muſt be remembred, that what ſhe did, was by her deſigned (as the hiding, v. 2.) to the preſerving of the childe, whereas here the expoſing the children is ſaid to be εἰς τὸ μὴ ζωογονεῖσθαι, to the end they might not be preſerved, or kept alive. It muſt therefore be reſolved that τῷ ποιεῖν belongs to Pharaoh; he that evill intreated the Iſraelites did it in, or by, expoſing, or caſting out, their children; for ſo the Infinitive mood with, or without the Article, but eſpecially with it, is to be rendred, after the manner of a Gerund, faciendo, in, or by expoſing: without the article 'tis Act. 15. 10. why tempt ye God, ἐπιθεῖναι in, or by, impoſing a yoke; with it, ſo Ruth 1. 6. where the Hebrew read, the Lord had viſited his people לתת להם לחם (which we rightly render) in, or by, giving them bread; the Greek hath ἐπέστρεψεν τοῦ δοῦναι, and in Aſulanus's copy, τῷ δοῦναι, as here τῷ ποιεῖν. And Pſ. 78. 18. they tempted God in their hearts לשאל (we rightly render) by asking meat for their luſts; the Greek in all copies hath, ἐπείρασαν τοῦ αἰτῆσαι they tempted God by, or in, asking. Now what Pharaoh did by his bloody Officers, or by his people, that is, the Ægyptians to whom the charge is given Exod. 1. 22. himſelf is fitly ſaid to do.

e. Ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ V. 20. Exceeding faire] Ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ faire to God, may be an Hebrew phraſe for exceeding fair; for ſo the word God may ſometime import an ἄυξησις or increaſe. But it is poſſible that the τῷ Θεῷ here may be a miſtake of the Scribe for τῷ ὁρᾷ to ſee or look on, for ſo Exod. 2. 2. where this is related, it is ſaid, when ſhe ſaw him, that he was a goodly child, and Heb. 11. 23. εἶδον ἀστεῖον, they ſaw him a fair, or comely child.

V. 43. Tabernacle of Moloch] That the word Μολὸχ Moloch, is originally the Hebrew מלך a King, there is no doubt. And ſo here it notes ſome deified King of the Ægyptians, that is, an Idol, falſe god, worſhip'd and placed among the ſtarres; and accordingly, an old Ægyptian Alphabet, that ſets down the names of the Planets, hath for Mars, μολόχ. See Kercher. Prodrom. Copt. c. 5. Now for the Σκηνὴ here, the tabernacle of Moloch, that is ſure ſome little cabinet, wherein the image of this falſe god was kept, ſuch as the ναοὶ ἀργυροῖ τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος, the ſilver chappels of Diana, (ſee Note on ch. 19. e.) This is in Amos ch. 5. 26. סכות מלככם the tabernacle, or Succoth, of your King or Moloch, that is, the chapplet, where that image of your falſe god call'd here τύπους, a figure made to be worſhip'd, was enſhrined, or dwelt; (ſo σκηνῶν ſignifies) and the like ſeems to be underſtood by Succoth Benoth, the tabernacle of Venus, ſome little Chappel or ſhrine, where her image was kept and worſhip'd.

f. Μολὸχ. Σκηνὴ. Τύπους.

Io. Remphan] Diodorus Siculus l. 1. mentions Remphis ſon of Cephna as King of Ægypt, about the time that Jacob went down thither, and ſaith of him that he gathered an infinite maſſe of wealth, and left behind him at his death 4000000 talents; which makes it probable that he was that Prince, which in the famine, by Joſephs advice, got all the wealth of Ægypt and the neighbour-countreys. This perſon was afterwards worſhipped as a God for having preſerved Ægypt, and accordingly placed among the ſtarres, and ſo the image of one of the planets, here called ἄστρον, a ſtarre, ſet to ſignifie him. This ſtarre, it ſeems, was Saturne, for ſo that Ægyptian Alphabet (mention'd Note f.) which ſets down the names of the planets, for Saturne hath PHωaN ῥηφάν. Of this perſon that tradition in Suidas is very intelligible, where of Apis the Ægyptian god it is ſaid, that he was ὑποδοχεύς τις a certain rich man, to whom at his death they erected a Temple, ἐν ᾧ βοῦς ἐτρέφετο, in which an Ox was fed, as being the Hieroglyphick of an husband-man. By which alſo it appears that this was that calf or bullock worſhip'd by the Iſraelites: Saturne being among the Gentiles preſident of husbandry, and therefore ſometimes worſhip'd in the ſhape of that beaſt, (under the name of Apis,) as being the chief inſtrument in ploughing of the ground; but withall faſtened among the ſtarres in heaven, and the image of him here called ἄστρον a ſtarre, or as it ſeems to be beſt rendred, Am. 5. 26. the ſtarre-images of your God &c. referring to both the Images precedent, (to which alſo the τύποι figures in the plural, that follow, doe belong.) For that Chiun, which is there in Amos put in ſtead of Remphis, or Cevan, or Caivan, was among the Perſians and Arabians another name of their Saturne, hath been obſerved by others. So in Plautus's ſecond Punick ſcene, Molechianna is by learned enquirers diſcovered to be no more then מון לכיון the image of Chiun, all one with temunah ſel ucoch in the former ſcene, that is, תמונה שאל וכוך an image which is El God, and ſculpture, that is, God engraven; the word אל God among the Phœnicians ſignifying peculiarly Κρόνος Saturne. And this is the reaſon why Bacchus Pericionius is ſaid to be placed in the eighth ſpheare, becauſe that ſpheare encompaſſeth the planet Saturne. So in the Arabick Lexicon (called Camus, Caiwano Zohalo mamnuon, Caiwano is Zohalo (or Saturne,) which is nomen invariabile. Which Lud. de Dieu miſtaking for Raialon mamnuon, he renders it vir rigidus, &c. See Mr Pocock on Abul Farasi p. 394. Now that they are here ſaid for this ſinne to be carried into Babylon is agreeable with with that notion which the Jewes generally had, who were wont to ſay, that in every plague and captivity that fell upon them, there was an ounce of the calf, God continuing to puniſh this ſinne in all their poſterities, that continued to provoke him with the like.

* Cod. Talm. de Novi Anni initio c. 3. fol. 26.

h. Σκηνὴ μαρτυρίου

V. 44. Tabernacle of witneſſe] That which is rendred by the Septuagint σκηνὴ μαρτυρίου the tabernacle of the teſtimony (and ſo made uſe of here by S. Luke) is generally in the Hebrew אהל מועד Exod. 27. 2. c. 30. 26. c. 31. 7. & 38. 21. the tabernacle of meeting, viz. of meeting with God, whither every one that ſought the Lord was to goe, Exod. 33. 7. This we render, the tabernacle of the congregation, (as if it referred to our meeting with one another) but certainly it muſt be taken in that other ſenſe of meeting with God, as appears Exod. 29. 42. at the dore of the tabernacle מועד of meeting before the Lord, where I will meet you to ſpeak there unto you. So c. 30. 36. the tabernacle of meeting where I will meet with thee, and ſo Numb. 17. 4. Now this place of Gods meeting with men is ſo called in two reſpects; 1. Becauſe there he communicates his will, makes known his pleaſure to them. 2dly, Becauſe there by his appointment his Name being recorded or commemorated by men, his acts of mercy praiſed and magnified, there he evidences his preſence, to accept thoſe offerings, to bleſſe thoſe perſons, Exod. 20. 24. In all places where I record my name (or in every place where the memoriall that I ſhall appoint of my name, ſhall be) I will come unto thee, and I will bleſſe thee. In the former reſpect, the Tabernacle is called the tabernacle of teſtimony, becauſe of the Arke containing the two Tables, wherein Gods covenant or commands concerning men were made known and teſtified by God, and that is oft called κιβωτὸς μαρτυρίου the arke of the teſtimony. In the ſecond reſpect the Tabernacle is called the tabernacle of the teſtimony, in reſpect of our acknowledging, and teſtifying, and recording of God, and Gods owning, and recording and bleſſing of us, evidencing and teſtifying his accepting of us.

V. 51. Stiffenecked] Σκληροτράχηλοι proverbially ſignifies undiſciplinable, fooliſh people; according to a rule in Phyſiognomy, that thoſe that have necks that doe not eaſily bend, are ſuch: ſo ſaith Adamantius Phyſiog. l. 2. c. 26. σκληροτράχηλοι, ἀμαθεῖς, hard-necked perſons are indocile and ignorant; and again τισὶ διὰ μοχθηρίαν γίνονται ἀκλινεῖς τράχηλοι, ſome men have necks that will not bend, and this is an argument of folly. But I ſuppoſe the meaning of S. Stephen is not to be fetch'd from this notation of the word, but from the Metaphor of beaſts, oxen, &c. that till they be diſciplined, and accuſtomed to the yoke, are not willing or patient to bend down to it. And ſo hard or ſtiff-neck'd ſignifies no more then refractary, diſobedient, undiſciplinable, and ſo 'tis here ſet to denote them that doe alwaies reſiſt the holy Ghoſt, in all Gods methods toward them walk contrary to him. i. Σκληρὰ τράχηλα

V. 60. Lay not this] Μὴ στήσῃς may here be rendred by referring to the uſe of that word, (among theſe writers) of lones or ſales, which were done by weighing out the money, and receiving it back again by weight. This is called στήσας Iſa. 32. 9. ἔστησα αὐτῷ ἑπτὰ σίκλους, I weighed him, or, I told him out, ſeven ſhekels; whence Heſychius στάσιμον τὸ δεδανεισμένον, that that is weighed, is that that is lent, for, ſaith he, παλαιῶς ἐδάνειζον, anciently they lent by weight. Thus the Hebrew שקל which is anſwerable to it, is oft rendred τίειν & ἀποτίειν, as to weigh out, is to pay, that is, to puniſh. So that the importance of Stephens prayer is, that God would not require back this debt, that is puniſh them for this ſinne. And that this prayer was heard for them that had an hand in Stephens blood, appears by Gods ſpeciall mercy to Saul, who was a principall perſon in it, and is miraculouſly converted in the ninth chapter, according to that ſaying of the Father, Si Stephanus non oraſſet, Eccleſia Paulum non habuiſſet, If Stephen had not prayed, the Church had not had S. Paul. k. Στήσῃς

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſe.

* well pleaſed with the killing of him, συνευδοκῶν τῇ ἀναιρέσει αὐτοῦ

1. AND Saul was * conſenting unto his death: and at that time there was a great perſecution againſt the Church which was at Jeruſalem; and they were all ſcattered abroad throughout the regions of Judæa and Samaria, except the Apoſtles.

1. And Saul which was after, chap. 9. ſo ſtrangely converted, and becam: ſo renowned an Apoſtle, was then one of thoſe that liked well the ſtoning of Stephen and joyned in it, ch. 7. 58. And at the ſame time that they dealt thus whith Stephen, they vehemently oppoſed the profeſſing of the faith at Jeruſalem, and perſecuted all that did ſo. And all ſuch, but the Apoſtles, particularly the reſt of the ſeven Deacons, and diverſe others c. 11. 19. went out of Jeruſalem, and were diſperſed into ſeverall places through Judæa, and Samaria, and as farre as Phœnice, and Cyprus and Antioch, ch. 11. 19. and in all thoſe places thoſe that were thus diſperſed (being filled with the holy Ghoſt ch. 4. 31.) preached to the Jewes, and onely the Apoſtles continued at Hieruſalem, being not yet (all) gone out from thence.

* prepared Stephen for

2. And devout men * [a] carried Stephen to his buriall, and made great lamentation for him.]

2. And ſome proſelytes that were there (ſee note on c. 10. a.) made a ſolemn funerall for Stephen, and mourned at it. a.

3. As for Saul, he made havock of the Church, entring into every houſe, and haling men and women committed them to priſon.

† paſſed along publiſhing, διῆλθον εὐαγγελίζ-

4. Therefore they that were ſcattered abroad, † went every where [b] preaching the word.]

4. And thereupon they that were driven from Jeruſalem into Judæa and Samaria ver. 1. reſted not there, but went farther off, and all the way they went, publiſhed the glad tidings of the Goſpel, told every where what they knew of it. b.

* a city, πόλιν

5. Then Philip went down to * the city of Samaria, and preached Chriſt unto them.]

5. Then Philip the deacon, not the Apoſtle (and therefore Peter and John ver. 15. are ſent to impoſe hands) went from Judæa to Samaria; and though the Jews converſed not with them, and though in the firſt going out of the Apoſtles, Mat 10. 5, they were appointed not to go to any city of the Samaritans, yet now in this diſperſion, and perſecution from the Jews at Jeruſalem, v. 1. it was thought fit to preach the Goſpel unto them, and Philip accordingly preached it in Sebaſte, an eminent city in Samaria.

6. And the people with one accord gave heed unto thoſe things which Philip ſpake, hearing and ſeeing the miracles which he did.]

6. And all that city were perſwaded by Philip to receive the faith of Chriſt, being convinced by the miracles wrought by him,

7. For unclean ſpirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were poſſeſſed with them:] and many taken with palſies, and that were lame, were healed.

7. For out of many that were poſſeſt, they caſt out devils, which at their coming out made loud acknowledgment of the irreſiſtibleneſſe of the power by which they acted.

8. And there was great joy in that city.

9. But

9. But before this preaching and miracles of Philip, there had been in the city one Simon, which was a Magician, which had done ſome ſtrange things, which pozed and amazed the ignorant people, by which means he took upon him to be a divine perſon.

9. But † there was a certain man, called Simon, which before-time uſed ſorcery in the ſame city, and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himſelf was ſome great one.]

† before this there was or had been in the city a certain man, Simon by name, which uſed ſorcery, and aſtoniſhed &c. Ἀνὴρ δέ τις ὀνόματι Σίμων προϋπῆρχεν ἐν τῇ πόλει μαγεύων, καὶ ἐξιστῶν * small to great. μικροῦ † the power of God called the Great. So the Kg. MS. and the ancient Gr. & Lat. MS. read it δύναμις Θεοῦ ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη, See 2 Theſſa. 4. note e. f.

10. the divine power, which in every nation is acknowledged ſometimes under one, ſometimes under another name, Jehovah, Jupiter, and the like.

10. To whom they all gave heed from * the leaſt to the greateſt, ſaying, This man is [† the great power of God.]

11. he had by ſorcery or the help of the devil done ſuch ſtrange things, that they were amazed at them, (ſee ver. 13.) and knew not what to think of him.

11. And to him they had regard, becauſe that of long time [he had bewitched them with ſorceries.]

12. But when Philip (one of the ſeven v. 5. and ch. 6. called Evangeliſt c. 21. 8. becauſe of his preaching the Goſpel here, ſee note on Joh. 20 b.) by preaching the Chriſtian faith, and doing farre greater miracles, had converted them to Chriſtianity, they all came in as proſelytes to the Goſpel, and received baptiſme of him, all of all ſorts.

12. But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdome of God, and the name of Jeſus Chriſt, they were baptized both men and women.]

13. was himſelf amazed at the miracles Philip did, as the people had been at his, v. 9. 11.

13. Then Simon himſelf believed alſo: and when he was baptized he continued with Philip, and [* wondred, beholding the miracles and ſigns which were done.]

14. And when the Apoſtles that remained at Jeruſalem v. 1. heard that by Philip's preaching the whole countrey of Samaria was converted and baptized, and knowing that Philip had no farther power, they ſent two of their own company, Peter and John,

14. Now when the Apoſtles which were at Jeruſalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they ſent unto them Peter and John:]

* was aſtoniſhed, ἐξιστάνων, ſee v. 9.

15. To confirm them, and to ordain them Elders or Biſhops, (in every city one,) by prayer and impoſition of hands.

15. Who when they were come prayed for them, that they might receive the holy Ghoſt.]

16. (For Philip had not done either of theſe, nor conſequently provided for the neceſſaries to the continuance of a Church; onely he had preached the faith, and baptized them with that baptiſme which Chriſt commanded to be uſed, Mat. 28. 19. that in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt.)

16. (For as yet he was fallen upon none of them; onely they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jeſus.)]

c. 17. Then Peter and John confirmed and ordained them Elders or Biſhops in all their cities, to rule or govern them in the faith, and in doing it, they uſed that ceremony of impoſition of hands (known among the Jewes, Deut. 34. 9.) and thereby was beſtowed on them the gift of the Holy Ghoſt, working of miracles, ſpeaking with tongues, &c.

17. Then [c] laid they their hands on them, and they received the holy Ghoſt.]

18. And Simon the ſorcerer ſeeing thoſe miraculous effects conſequent to the Apoſtles impoſition of hands, offered to give them money for this power.

18. And when Simon ſaw that through laying on of the Apoſtles hands the holy Ghoſt was given, he offered them money,]

19. he may receive thoſe gifts and graces of working miracles, &c.

19. Saying, Give me alſo this power, that on whomſoever I lay my hands, [he may receive the holy Ghoſt.]

20. I will not receive thy money, and thy offering it ſhall bring miſchief upon thy ſelf, for thinking ſo meanly of this Apoſtolicall priviledge beſtowed on us by Chriſt, which ſure is not to be bought like earthly commodities with the price of money.

20. But Peter ſaid unto him, [Thy money † periſh with thee, becauſe thou haſt thought that the gift of God may be purchaſed with money.]

† be with thee to deſtruction, σὺν σοὶ εἴη εἰς ἀπώλειαν

21. Thou ſhalt never have any part of this priviledge, nor right of diſpenſing or adminiſtring of theſe holy things; for thy deſigne in deſiring this is not the enlarging Chriſt's kingdome, but the getting an opinion of power to thy ſelf.

21. Thou haſt neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the ſight of God.]

22. Repent therefore and humble thy ſelf before God for this wicked project of thine (and humbly beſeech his pardon; and 'tis not impoſſible but that it may yet be obtained by thee.)

22. Repent therefore of this thy wickedneſſe, and pray God if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee.]

d. c. 23. For I perceive thou art in a condition poyſonous to thy ſelf, and bitter to God, very dangerous to thee, and diſpleaſing to him, and makeſt this propoſall out of a villanous treacherous deſigne, not to advance Chriſt's kingdome, but to deſtroy it, and accordingly thou art to expect to be dealt with by God.

23. For I perceive that thou art in the [d] gall of bitterneſſe, and in * the [c] bond of iniquity.]

* a wicked conſpiracy

24. And Simon beſought them that they would pray for him, that God would pardon this wickedneſſe of his, and not inflict on him ſuch puniſhment, as they ſeemed to foretell would fall upon him.

24. Then anſwered Simon and ſaid, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of theſe things which ye have ſpoken come upon me.]

25. And when they had confirmed thoſe in the faith (bearing witneſſe to the truth which Philip had taught) who were baptized by him, they returned to Jeruſalem, and as they went, preached the Goſpel to all the villages of Samaria, where Philip had not preacht it, and had good ſucceſſe in it.

25. And they, when they had teſtified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jeruſalem, and preached the Goſpel in many villages of the Samaritanes.]

26. And Philip had a viſion, and therein an Angel from heaven ſpake unto him,

30. And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read Isaias the prophet, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest?

35. Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.] 35. And on occasion of this scripture, which, though it had one literall completion about the time of Isaiahs writing it, yet had another higher completion in Christ, Philip began and preacht to him the whole Christian faith.

36. And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the Eunuch said, See here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?] 36. And the Eunuch was by him brought to the faith, and desired baptisme of him.

37. And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayst. And he answered and said, [I believe that Jesus Christ is the son of God.] 37. I believe these prophecies of the Messiah to be fulfilled in Christ, and consequently that he is the Son of God.

38. And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both in to the water, both Philip and the Eunuch; and he baptized him.

39. And when they were come up out of the water, [i the Spirit] of the Lord caught away Philip, † that the Eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing. 39. An Angel, see note f. i.

40. But Philip was found at Azotus: and passing through he preached in all the cities till he came to Cæsarea.

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Συγκομίζειν

V. 2. Carryed Stephen] Συγκομίζειν is to dresse, and fit the dead body for the funerall, and differs both from ἀνακομίζειν, and ἐκκομίζειν; so saith the scholiast on Æschylus, Συγκομιδὴ signifies ἡ περὶ τὸ τάφῳ πᾶσ ἐπιμέλειαν, all the care that is used before the buriall, ἐκκομιδὴ, ἡ πρὸς ἡ τάφον ἀπαγωγὴ, the carrying out to the grave or sepulchre, ἀνακομιδὴ, ἡ ἐκ τάφου εἰς τάφον μετάθεσιν, the removing from one sepulchre to another. The same is expressed ch. 5. 6, by ζωσεέλαβο winding the dead body in a sheet.

b. Εὐαγγελιζεσθαι τὸν λόγον Κηρύσσειν

V. 4. Preaching the word] Some difference may perhaps be here observed between εὐαγγελιζόμενοι ἡ λόγον v. 4. and κηρύσσειν ἡ Χριστὸν ver. 5. but this not in respect of the matter of their preaching, but of the manner of it, and of the qualifications of the persons that did it. The latter of these, κηρύσσειν to preach Christ, doth generally signifie a publick, solemn proclaiming of him, as when a κήρυξ herald or crier, doth pro officio, by way of office, proclaim any thing; but εὐαγγελίζεσθαι imports no more then the telling it, making it known, as good newes is published without the voice of an herald, or cryer, by all that have heard, to all they meet with: and although in one respect, (that of proclaiming anew what was not known before) this κηρύσσειν to preach, and εὐαγγελίζεσθαι to tell the glad tidings doe agree, (see Note on Mat. 9. l.) yet in this other respect they differ sometimes: Not that εὐαγγελίζεσθαι is never used of that publick, authoritative proclaiming; for it is sometimes used of the Apostles Act. 5. 42. & c. 15. 35. and the word εὐαγγελιστὴς Evangelist is the name of an office in the Apostles times, and then, whensoever it was done by way of office either Apostolical, or by mission from them, it is evident that Εὐαγγελίζεσθαι and κηρύσσειν are in all respects the same; but I say that sometimes, and particularly in this place, εὐαγγελίζεσθαι may belong to whatsoever publishing of the Gospel of Christ, and by whomsoever, that is, by those that have no calling to it. For when the doctrine of Christ was first preacht by the Apostles, and the miraculous gifts exercised in their presence, and a multitude of men, Jewes and proselytes, received the faith, and for doing so professedly, were presently persecuted, and driven out of Jerusalem, v. 1. it is not to be imagined but that all. whersoever they came, both men and women, published what they knew, both of the doctrine, and the miracles whereby it was confirmed, and of their own sufferings for it; though that all these, even women (who by S. Pauls decree, are not permitted to speak in the Church) should by the Apostles be intrusted with the preaching of the word, by way of office, it cannot be imagined. And therefore, when of Philip, which was a Deacon, ordained by the Apostles, it is related in this chapter, that he preached Christ to them, it followes that he baptized them also, ver. 12. But of these other disciples, there is no more said, but that they passed along beyond Judæa and Samaria (the terror that drove them from Jerusalem pursuing them farther) εὐαγγελιζόμενοι ἡ λόγον publishing this good newes, the Gospel, which they had received, but no mention of gathering disciples, or baptizing. And accordingly, c. 11. 19. when there is mention, in the processe of the story, of these very men, that being scattered by the persecution, which was about Stephen, they passed as farre as Phœnice, Cyprus, and Antioch, and that they spake the word, or published the Gospel, to none but the Jewes, the phrase used there is observable to this matter, λαλοῦντες ἡ λόγον, speaking the word, the word λαλεῖν being known τὸν λόγον to belong to any way of reporting, or relating, by talke, or diſcourſe. And ſo ver. 20. ἐλάλουν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστὰς, they ſpake, talked, to the Helleniſts, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν, telling them that good newes, the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt: and upon the ſucceſſe of this, through Gods proſpering hand, and many receiving the faith, it followes, that when the Church of Jeruſalem heard of it, they ſent Barnabas to viſit and confirm them. Thus of the believers in common chap. 4. 31. it is ſaid indefinitely, that they ſpake (ἐλάλουν) the word of God with boldneſſe, according as they had prayed they might v. 29. noting thereby a valiant profeſſion, and publiſhing of the Goſpel, notwithſtanding the terrors of men. And though it be there ſaid of them, that they were all filled with the holy Ghoſt, and ſo that may be taken for a commiſſion and authority given to all them, and ſo theſe here being contained in that number, the ſame will be competible to theſe; yet 1. it cannot be imagined that all ſimply, that is, every believer there, women as well as men, had any ſuch authority then given them, but that there are other meanings of the phraſe, filled with the holy Ghoſt, beſides that one of being ſent into the miniſtery; and the very courage of profeſſing and publiſhing the Goſpel, was one ſuch gift or effect of the holy Ghoſt. And 2dly, it is clear in the proceſſe of this ſtory, that ſome others, which were not ſo qualified as theſe, that is, that had not received the holy Ghoſt, or aſcended any farther then the Baptiſme of John, did thus publiſh the Goſpel, as theſe here are ſaid to doe. Thus Apollos chap. 18. 25. ἐλάλει, καὶ ἐδίδασκεν ἀκριβῶς τὰ περὶ τοῦ Κυρίου, ſpake, and taught exactly the things concerning the Lord, knowing onely the baptiſme of John (and Aquila and Priſcilla expounded to him more exactly the way of God) and ſo I ſuppoſe did the Epheſian diſciples, ch. 19. who had not received the holy Ghoſt, ver. 2. nor gone any farther then Johns Baptiſme, at the time of Pauls coming to them.

c. Χεῖρας ἐπιτιθέναι

V. 17. Layd they their hands on] The ſeverall uſes of impoſition of hands are at large ſet down Note on 1 Tim. 4. f. Three in the Old Teſtament; 1. as a ceremony in prayer, 2. in paternal benediction, 3. in creating officers. And proportionably to theſe, many more in the New. 1. For Curing diſeaſes, 2. for Abſolution of penitents, 3. for Bleſſing of infants, or thoſe that are to be baptized, to prepare them to it, 4. in Confirmation, 5. in Ordination of Officers for the Church. Of the three former of theſe there is none which can pretend to be here meant; and ſo all the difficulty is, whether of the two latter it was. That it was Confirmation, may appear probable, becauſe it ſo ſoon attended their Converſion and Baptiſme: when the Apoſtles which were at Jeruſalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they ſent unto them Peter and John v. 14. which agrees well with that of Confirmation, which is an act reſerved to the Rulers of the Church, and not communicated, or allow'd to inferior officers, ſuch as Philip, the Deacon, here. And accordingly the Biſhops are called διδάσκαλοι Doctors, as that ſignifies the farther inſtructing them, to whom the Goſpel hath formerly been preach'd, and as εὐαγγελίζεσθαι differs from διδάσκειν, preaching from teaching. And in Confirmation it was, that in thoſe firſt times the extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt uſed to be conferr'd on them, (ſee Note on c. 2. d. & Act. 19. 6.) But it is probable alſo, that the faith being here planted by Philip, and the Apoſtles coming down to confirm them, and thoſe not ſtaying there, but returning to Jeruſalem v. 25. they did at their being there ordain Elders or Biſhops in the ſeveral cities, as we know Paul and Barnabas did c. 14. 23. and Titus in Crete Tit. 1. 5. This, ſaith * Clemens Romanus, the Apoſtles did in their journeyings, when they went out preaching the Goſpel, κατὰ χώρας οὖν καὶ πόλεις κηρύσσοντες, καθίσανον ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους τῶν μελλόντων πιστεύειν, preaching through regions and cities, they conſtituted their firſt-fruits, (thoſe that firſt believed) Biſhops and Deacons of thoſe which ſhould afterwards believe. And thus before this time, they had at Jeruſalem conſtituted James the brother of the Lord Biſhop there, in the firſt year after Chriſts Aſcenſion, and ſeven Deacons to attend him ch. 6. And therefore it is not reaſonable to believe that the Apoſtles, Peter and John, ſhould thus come down to Samaria, where the Goſpel had been ſo univerſally received v. 6. and having taken care to confirm them, ſhould not alſo ordain ſome Governours over them before they returned again. That therefore which is moſt reaſonable is, ſo to interpret this laying on of hands, and their receiving the holy Ghoſt here, as to comprehend Confirmation and Ordination both, the holy Ghoſt by their miniſtry coming on all the ſincere believers, and endowing them with inward, and ſome of them with extraordinary external gifts, of healing, prophecie, &c. (ſee Note on ch. 2. d.) and the Apoſtles by laying on their hands on ſome ſpeciall perſons among them, ordaining them Biſhops and Deacons in ſeveral cities: A power which belonged onely to the Apoſtles to exerciſe, and ſo was not competible to Philip, who yet had power to preach and to baptize.

* Ep. 1. ad Cor.

d. Χολὴ πικρίας

V. 33. Gall of bitterneſſe] What is the importance of χολὴ πικρίας (or πικρία χολῆς, as the antient Gr. and Lat. MS. read it) will be beſt diſcerned (ſee Note on Mat. 27. f.) by Deut. 29. 18. where apoſtaſie or falling from God is deſcribed to be a root bearing gall and bitterneſſe, ſay the Vulgar, gall and wormwood, ſay our Engliſh, and the Septuagint, φύουσα ἐν χολῇ καὶ πικρίᾳ, ſpringing up in gall and bitterneſſe: but the Hebrew ראש, which we render gall, ſignifies alſo a poyſonous herb, and ſo muſt ſignifie there, where 'tis joyned with a root bearing or bringing forth; and ſo the wormwood following will beſt agree with it, and both together will expreſſe that ſinne to be a root, whoſe effects are poyſonous and bitter, very hurtfull and infectious to men, and moſt diſpleaſing to God. Anſwerable and equivalent to this is the χολὴ πικρίας here, which therefore ſignifies this apoſtaticall condition of Simon, ſo lately baptized, to be dangerous to him, and odious in Gods ſight, he being that firſt-born of Satan, as he is ſtyled, and an Apoſtate from the Chriſtian faith. And accordingly his followers the Gnoſticks, and the poyſon of their hereſie (together with him, the root from whence all thoſe peſts of the primitive Apoſtolick Church did ſpring) are expreſs'd Heb. 12. 15. by ῥίζα πικρίας ἄνω φύουσα, Leſt, ſaith the Apoſtle, there be any root of bitterneſſe ſpringing up, (not ἐνοχλῇ as we read it, but as by the Greek now cited from Deut. 29. 18. and by the agreeing of the participle φύουσα with the like ὑστερῶν precedent, ſeems the moſt probable reading) ἐν χολῇ in poyſon, a root of wormwood bringing forth, or fructifying, in poyſon, that is, bringing on the perſon that which is ruinous to himſelf, or on others that which is poyſonous or infectious to them. And ſuch moſt eminently was the hereſie of the Gnoſticks at that time.

e. Σύνδεσμος ἀδικίας

Ib. Bond of iniquity] The word σύνδεσμος ſignifies, in the Septuagint of the old Teſtament, treaſon, 2 Kin. 11. 15. and 12. 20. and Jer. 11. 9. a conſpiracy, league, or covenant, and by it the Hebrew קשר is rendred Jer. 11. 9. where Symmachus reads συνωμοσία conſpiracy The Hebrew חרצבות which Iſai. 58. 6. is rendred σύνδεσμος, is, ſaith David de Pomis, æquivalent to קשרים, and ſo ſignifies a binding together of minds; and both there and here, with ἀδικίας unrighteouſneſſe added to it, it denotes, by an hypallage, a moſt unrighteous, impious treaſon or treachery, a villanous piece of hypocriſie, (ὰς μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας, the mammon of unrighteouſneſſe, is all one with the falſe or deceitfull mammon) mammon) Simons deſigne in this propoſall being not to advance Chriſts kingdome, by his having that power of giving the holy Ghoſt, but to ſet up for himſelf, as he after did, in oppoſition to Chriſt, and to have this addition of miracles ſuperadded to thoſe which by his ſorcery he was able to doe.

f. πνεῦμα

V. 29. The Spirit ſaid] It may here be queſtion'd, what is meant by τὸ πνεῦμα, the Spirit's ſaying unto Philip. Some kind of extraordinary revelation it certainly was, but whether in a viſion by appearance of an Angel, or 2dly, by a voice from heaven, or 3dly, by afflation of the Spirit of God, after the manner that Prophets received Revelations, it is uncertain. Of the firſt ſort there are examples in this book; ch. 10. 3. Cornelius in a viſion ſaw an Angel of the Lord coming, and ſaying to him, and ſo here v. 26. the Angel of the Lord ſpake unto Philip: Of the ſecond, at the Baptiſme of Chriſt, and at the converſion of Saint Paul: And of the third chap. 10. 19. where after his Viſion of the ſheet, as he thought thereupon, the Spirit ſaid unto him; and the ſame is repeated again, ch. 11. 11. & ſo ch. 13. 2. as they were miniſtring, that is, praying and faſting, the holy Spirit ſaid, Separate to me Barnabas and Saul: Which as it was not in any dream or viſion, ſo that it was by voice from heaven, doth not appear probable by any argument diſcernible in the ſtory; but on the other ſide the frequent teſtimonies of the Spirits revealing by way of Prophetick afflation, who ſhould be ſet apart for the offices of the Church, are evidences that it was ſo here. Thus * Clemens tells of thoſe times, that they ordained Biſhops πνεύματι δοκιμάσαντες diſcerning by the Spirit who ſhould be ordained, and again that they did it παγίνωσιν εἰληφότες τελείαν having received perfect foreknowledge who ſhould be conſtituted Biſhops, as Moſes, ſaith he, foreknew by revelation from God, that Aaron ſhould have the Prieſthood, and accordingly that without the direction of the Spirit they advanced none to this dignity. So ſaith S. Paul of Timothy that the χάρισμα, or Epiſcopal office, διὰ προφητείας ἐδόθη was given him by prophecie, 1 Tim. 4. 14. & ch. 1. 18. that is, by Revelation, as Propheſying is of things preſently to be done, as well as predictions of the future, and ſignifies no more 1 Cor. 14. 24, 31. then having ſomewhat revealed to him v. 30. So ſaith S. * Chryſoſtome, Τὸ δὲ διδασκαλίας καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα μέγα ὂν καὶ τῆς Θεοῦ δεῖται ψήφου, &c. The Epiſcopal dignity being great, wanted Gods ſuffrage, to direct on whom it ſhould be beſtow'd (ſee Note on 1 Tim. 1. e.) Thus Act. 20 28. it is ſaid of the Biſhops of Aſia, that the holy Ghoſt had ſet them over the flock. And in this ſenſe it may fitly be affirmed of Philip, that being full of the holy Ghoſt, ch. 6. 3. he had the afflations of the Spirit of God, ſuch as Prophets, and by ſuch an afflation the Spirit here bad him, &c. Thus Agabus ſignified by the Spirit, that is, by prophetick revelation, that there ſhould be a famine, ch. 11. 28. Thus the holy Ghoſt witneſs'd in every city, that is, prophets foretold, c. 20. 23. & 21. 11. that bonds and afflictions did abide Paul. One onely objection I foreſee againſt this expoſition in this place, that ver. 39. it is ſaid that the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, which probably is to be underſtood of an Angel carrying him away out of his ſight, and then why ſhould not the Spirit here, as well as the Spirit of the Lord there, ſignifie an Angel alſo? eſpecially when there is mention of an Angel ſpeaking to him ver. 26. But to this the anſwer will be very ſufficient, if the reading of the Kings MS. be accepted in that verſe, (and that is atteſted by many other copies own'd by Eraſmus & Beza, and ſo cited by S. Jerome, Dial. Orthod. & Luciferian.) the holy Spirit fell upon the Eunuch, &c. but the Angel of the Lord caught away Philip, (ſee Note i.) For then as the Angel bad him go to the Eunuch, ſo he carried him away again, which no way hinders but that the Spirit here may be taken in that other ſenſe.

V. 31. The place of Scripture] Περιοχὴ is the Hebrew פֶּרֶק, the name of a ſection or leſſer diviſion of Scripture, of which there be two in the firſt chapter of Matthew, and ſo forward. The Greeks call them τμήματα partitions or ſections. g. Περιοχὴ

V. 33. In his humilition] This verſe is acknowledged to be a citation of Iſa. 53. 8. not out of the Hebrew, but the Septuagints tranſlation, which therefore muſt be interpreted by looking back on the Original there. And that will be beſt rendred thus, מֵעֹצֶר by an aſſembly (ſo the word is uſed Jer. 9. 2. and rendred σύνοδος ſynode) that is, by the Sanhedrim of the Jewes, who had determined to have him put to death, and made the people cry out againſt him, Αἶρε, αἶρε, away with him, away with him (whereas the Greek ſeems to have read מַעֲצַב, ἐν ταπεινώσει) וּמִמִּשְׁפָּט and by judgement; or the ſentence of the Roman Procurator Pilate, לָקַח, he was taken away, diſtinctly ſignifying the manner of his being put to death, which being ſo foul, and irrationall, and ſtrange, that he that came to ſave, ſhould not onely not be believed, but be alſo put to death by them, be entertained ſo coldly, and uſed ſo barbarouſly, the Jewes and Romans both conſpiring in it, the exclamation that followes יֹאתַ דורו מי ישוחח, who ſhall deſcribe his generation? will moſt probably ſignifie, what an accurſed wicked generation was that, wherein he was born? for ſo the word דורו his generation ſignifies, as Gen. 6. 9. perfect ἐν γενεᾷ αὐτοῦ in his generation. So where 'tis called a wicked generation, Deut. 32. 5. this word is uſed. This though it be not the ſound of the words in Greek, muſt be reſolved to be the meaning of the Prophet, whoſe words here S. Luke having occaſion to name or ſet down onely (as the paſſage the Eunuch was reading) not to make any uſe of them, was in all reaſon to repeat in the Septuagints tranſlation of them, which the Eunuch was a reading, and which they uſed, for whom he wrote this ſtory, but not to affix any new ſenſe to the original prophecie. Yet becauſe the words, as they lie in the Greek, may have a commodious ſenſe alſo, though that differing from the Hebrew, I have in the paraphraſe ſet down that alſo, upon this ground, that Job 34. 5. taking away his judgement ſignifies dealing unjuſtly with him. h. ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει Κρίσις αὐτοῦ ἤρθη Γενεὰν αὐτοῦ τίς διηγήσεται

V. 39. The Spirit] In this verſe the Kings MS. reads thus, πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἐπέπεσεν ἐπὶ τὸν Εὐνοῦχον, Ἄγγελος δὲ Κυρίου ἥρπασε τὸν Φίλιππον, The holy Ghoſt fell upon the Eunuch, and the Angel of the Lord caught, or ſnatch'd away Philip. i. Πνεῦμα ἐπέπεσεν

CHAP. IX. Paraphraſe.

1. AND Saul yet breathing out threatnings and ſlaughter againſt the diſciples of the Lord, went unto the high prieſt, Conſiſtories, ſee note a Mat. 6. d.

2 And deſired of him letters to Damaſcus, to the * ſynagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jeruſalem.]

1, 2. But the death of Stephen did not ſatiate the bloody mind that was in Saul, or allay his zeal againſt Chriſtians, but being very intent upon it, he came to the Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem, and deſired the high prieſt to give him letters of commiſſion to the Conſiſtories of other cities of Syria (as being under Jeruſalem, the grand Metropolis of Syria, as well as Judæa) and his Commiſſion was to impower him v. 14. to ſeize upon any Chriſtians whatever, and ſecure them, and bring them up to Jeruſalem to be judged by the Sanhedrim there.

3. a bright ſhining cloud (ſuch as Mat. 17. 5.) encompaſſed him.

3. And as he journeyed he came neer Damaſcus, and ſuddenly [there ſhined round about him a light from heaven.]

4. And it ſtruck him with great terror, as at the preſence of God, which he knew was wont thus to exhibit himſelf. This made him fall proſtrate on his face, and as he did ſo, there came to his eares a clap of thunder, and out of that this ſpeech directed to him,

4. And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice ſaying unto him,] Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me?

5. It is thy beſt way to be obedient to the commands that ſhall now be given thee, and not to be refractary.

10. And there was a certain diſciple at Damaſcus, named Ananias, and to him ſaid the Lord in a viſion, Ananias. And he ſaid, Behold I am here, Lord.

11, 12. who having earneſtly pray'd that he may recover his ſight, in his prayer hath been in an extaſie, and therein had it revealed to him, that one Ananias ſhould come in, and by bare laying hands on him, recover his ſight.

12. And hath ſeen in a viſion a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his ſight.]

13. Then Ananias anſwered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy ſaints at Jeruſalem.

17. And Ananias went to him, and laying his hands on him, told him that Jeſus (that appeared to him as he came to Damaſcus) had ſent

17. And Ananias went his way, and entred into the houſe, and putting his hands on him, ſaid, Brother Saul the Lord (even Jeſus that appeared unto thee in the way, as thou cameſt) hath ſent me that thou mighteſt receive thy ſight, and be filled with the holy Ghoſt.] him to him, not only to reſtore his ſight to him, but to endow him with many extraordinary gifts and graces, thereby to fit him for Gods ſervice in the Church, to which he had deſigned him, and to which he is conſecrated, ch. 13. 2.

18. And he recovered his ſight immediately, and was baptized.

18. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been skales, [and he received ſight forthwith, and aroſe and was baptized.]

19, 20. And taking food after his long faſting he ſoon recovered ſtrength perfectly. Soon after this he went from Damaſcus into Arabia, Gal.

19. And when he had received ſome meat, he was ſtrengthned. Then was Saul certain daies with the diſciples which were at Damaſcus.

20. And ſtraightway he preached Chriſt in the ſynagogues, that he is the Son of God.] 1. 17. (of which journey Luke, being not with him, makes no mention) and from thence returned again to Damaſcus, and having ſpent ſome time with thoſe Jewiſh Chriſtians which were driven from Jeruſalem ch. 8. 1. to Damaſcus, by virtue of his call from heaven, and of Chriſts meſſage by Ananias to him, ver. 15, 16 and being filled with the holy Ghoſt, ver. 17. he ſet preſently about the preaching of the Goſpel, and that publickly in the Jewiſh ſynagogues, and proclaimed that Chriſt was indeed the Meſſias, the eternall Son of God.

21. And all that heard it were amazed at this ſudden change, remembring that he had ſo lately been a ſpeciall perſon in the ſtoning of Stephen, and very vehement againſt all Chriſtians, and was come to Damaſcus with commiſſion for this very purpoſe.

21. But all that heard him were amazed, and ſaid, Is not this he that deſtroyed them which called on this name in Jeruſalem, and came hither for that intent,] that he might bring them bound unto the chief prieſts?

22. But Saul grew every day in ſpirituall ſtrength, and

c. was ſoon able to repell all the Jewes arguments to the contrary, and preſſed them with ſuch evidence that they were not able to avoid, collecting from the chara[illegible] and prophecies of the Meſſias (and thereby demonſtrating) that this Jeſus is the Meſſias.

22. But Saul increaſed the more in ſtrength, and confounded the Jewes which dwelt at Damaſcus, † [c] proving that this is very Chriſt.] † teaching

31. Now all the Chriſtian aſſemblies through Judæa, Galilee, and Samaria, were permitted a quiet uſe of their religion, and daily more and more confirmed and improved, ſuperſtructing all Chriſtian doctrine, and pure pious practice on that foundation already laid, and more were daily converted to them by the Apoſtles diſcharging that office and duty, to which they were deſigned by the coming of the holy Ghoſt the Paraclete upon them, (ſee note on Joh. 14. b.)

32. And it came to paſſe, as Peter paſſed thoroughout all quarters, he came down alſo to the ſaints which dwelt at Lydda.]

37. And it came to paſſe in thoſe daies, that ſhe was ſick and died; [whom when they had waſhed,] they laid her in an upper chamber.

40. But Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed, and turning him to the body, ſaid, Tabitha, ariſe. And ſhe opened her eyes: and when ſhe ſaw Peter, ſhe ſat up.

a. πρὸς τὰ κέντρα λακτίζειν

V. 5. To kick againſt the pricks] It was a proverbial ſpeech to kick againſt the goad, ſignifying to be refractary to puniſhment and diſcipline, when it comes to teach us our duty; for then the refractarineſſe doth but involve us in more guilt and puniſhment. So in Æſchylus Prometh.

Οὐκουν ἐμοίγε χρῄζων σὺ διδασκάλου Πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ὀκλάσεις, — and in his Alex.

Πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λάκτιζε, μὴ πήσας μογῇς,
If thou wilt take my counſel, thou ſhalt never kick againſt the goad, for thou wilt bring more ſufferings upon thy ſelf by that means. Parallel to this is Ἀδάμαντα πατεῖν, ſtriking the Adamant, Πῦρ πατῶν, treading on the fire, in * Chryſoſtome; So * again, Ὁ δὲ τὸν ἀδάμαντα πλήττων αὐτὸς ἐστὶν ὁ πληττόμενος. καὶ ὁ κέντρα λακτίζων αὐτὸς αὐτός ἐστιν ὁ κεντέμενος, He that ſtrikes the Adamant is himſelf ſtricken, and he that kicks the goads is himſelf goaded: ſtimulos pugnis cædere, in Plautus, to beat the goades with his fiſts, Truc. 4. 2. For this of goades was uſed not to beaſts only, but ſervants, which he calls ſtimuleum ſupplicium, Mil. 2. 6. And the ſervant thus handled ſeverely is by him call'd Carnificinum cribrum, his back was a kind of ſieve full of holes.

* Hom. 42. in Matt. p. 278. l. 2.

b. V. 7. Hearing a voice] What is here ſaid of thoſe that were with Paul, that they heard the voice, ſeems directly contrary to what is affirmed, ch. 22. 9. τῆς φωνῆς οὐκ ἤκουσαν, they heard not the voice. As for the way of reconciling it, by ſaying that the former belongs to Pauls voice, the latter to the voice of him that ſpake to him, there is little ground in the text for that nicety; but on the contrary the μηδένα θεωροῦντες, ſeeing no man, which follows in this place, belongs ſurely not to their not ſeeing of Paul, but of him that ſpake to him. The onely way of reconciling the difficulty is by obſerving the notion of the word קול in Hebrew, which ſignifies φωνὴ and βροντὴ, a voice, and thunder, and thoſe promiſcuouſly taken the one for the other. So Heb. 12. 26. whoſe voice ſhook the earth, that is, whoſe thunder and lightnings and voice of a trumpet exceeding loud, Exod. 19. 16. and ſo Lu. 9. 35. the voice of a cloud, ſaying, was the thunder with a voice in it, a revelation from heaven given in thunder. So Mat. 3. 17. a voice from heaven ſaying, that is, a thunder from heaven ſending forth this voice, which therefore was wont to be called בת קול the daughter of voice, or a voice coming out of it, or as the voice from heaven, Joh. 12. 28. is expreſs'd by the by-ſtanders, by βροντὴν γεγονέναι, that it thundred, and an Angel ſpake to him, which is explained diſtinctly by S. John Rev. 4. 5. where βρονταὶ and φωναὶ both are named, and ch. 10. 3. Ἑλάλησε ἑπτὰ βρονταὶ τὰς ἑαυτῶν φωνάς, the ſeven thunders delivered their voices. By this the difficulty will be cleared: For here c. 9. τῆς φωνῆς the voice ought to be rendred (according to the notion of קול for βροντὴ) thunder, which was here joyned with lightning, which ſhone or flaſh'd about him v. 3. ἐξαίφνης περιήστραψε φῶς. As for the φωνὴν λαλοῦντός μοι the voice of him that ſpake to me, c. 22. 9. that was the voice of the Angel ſpeaking out of heaven, or out of the cloud. Both which put together ſignifie no more then this, that S. Pauls companions at that time ſaw the light or the lightning, and heard the noiſe of the thunder (which is the importance of the place here) but heard not the articulate voice that came out of the thunder, that is, the Saul, Saul, &c. the voice of the Angel ſpeaking to him.

V. 22. Proving] Συμβίβασις, πῶσις, διδαχὴ, πίστις, ſaith Heſychius. It ſignifies perſwaſion, doctrine, faith; and συμβιβαζόντες, διδαχθέντες, διαλεχθέντες; and συμβιβάτω (it ſhould be συμβιβασάτω) διδαξάτω, all to the ſame purpoſe, that the word ſignifies to teach, or perſwade. And ſo it is uſed in the Septuagint Exod. 4. 12. Ἀνοίξω τὸ στόμα σὺ συμβιβάσω, I will open thy mouth and teach thee; and ſo Jud. 13. 8. and Pſ. 31. 8. and Iſai. 40. 13. c. Συμβιβάζων

V. 31. Edified] Οἰκοδομεῖν ſignifies properly to build, or ſuperſtruct, upon a foundation, and adde all the perfection of the building deſigned or belonging to it. And ſo, being accommodated to ſpirituall matters, it ſignifies to teach the whole Chriſtian doctrine of ſtrict and pious life, of which Chriſts being the Meſſias ſent from God, is the foundation or corner-ſtone, and the receiving and practiſing all that he commands, is that which is naturally and neceſſarily built upon it: and therefore to their being edified here, is added in the next words, walking in the fear of the Lord. The word is elſewhere very often uſed in theſe books, eſpecially in S. Pauls Epiſtles; and therefore it will here be fit to premiſe that which may give light to it in all thoſe places. 'Tis generally uſed in this Metaphorical ſenſe, with application to the Church of God, and the ſpiritual building thereof, partly in reſpect of knowledge, but principally in reſpect of Chriſtian practice. The Church is the houſe of God, οἶκος πνευματικὸς, 1 Pet. 2. 5. a ſpiritual houſe, and every Chriſtian one of the λίθοι ζῶντες living ſtones, which οἰκοδομοῦνται are edified or built, and of which this houſe is made up. And the building it ſelf, that is, edification, is the compacting, or orderly joyning together of theſe living ſtones, in belief of the truth, and charitable living together, from both which proceeds the ſtrength and comelineſſe of the ſtructure, and the fitneſſe for the uſe and honour of him whoſe it is, that is, Chriſt. So that whatſoever tends in any eminent manner either to the converting of Infidels, bringing them into the Church, to the advancing of Chriſtian knowledge, or eſpecially of piety, in any one or more particular men, or to the planting of unity, peace, and charity, in any particular National, or in the Univerſal Church of God, that is ſaid to edifie, or build up: and which of theſe ſenſes peculiarly belongs to the word in any place, muſt be judged by the Context, and circumſtances of the place where it is found, and may not be here ſet down more particularly. d. Οἰκοδομὴ

CHAP. X.

1. There was in Cæſarea, a ſtately city upon the Paleſtine coaſt, ſome 70 miles from Jeruſalem, a guard of ſouldiers, kept by the Romans to awe the conquered Jewes, and to defend the Roman Preſident there, and part of that was called the Italian band, and one Cornelius a Roman was captain thereof.

1. THere was a certain man in Cæſarea, called Cornelius, a centurion of the band called the Italian band,]

a. 2. And this Cornelius was a Proſelyte of the Jewes, and ſo one that worſhipped the true God, he and all his family, though he were not circumciſed, and he was a very charitable and devout perſon, and prayed daily at the ſet times very conſtantly.

2. [a A devout man, and one that feared God with all his houſe, which gave much almes to the people, and prayed to God alway.]

3. about three of clock in the afternoon, one of the times of his devotions, had a viſion, and in it he ſaw an Angel (ſee note on c. 8. f.)

3. He [ſaw in a viſion evidently about the ninth houre of the day an Angel] of God coming in to him, and ſaying unto him, Cornelius.

b. 4. And he diſcerned it to be a meſſage from God, and with an earneſt intent look, and great dread he ſaid, What is thy pleaſure, Lord? And he ſaid, Thy prayer ſo conſtantly obſerved at thy ſet times, and thy many works of charity on all occaſions, have been accepted by God as a ſpecial ſacrifice, and brought down a ſpeciall bleſſing upon thee.

4. And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and ſaid, What is it, Lord? And he ſaid unto him, Thy prayers and thine almes are come up for a [b] memoriall before God.]

5. And now ſend men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whoſe ſurname is Peter.

6. He

6. He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea side; he shall [tell thee what thou oughtest to doe.]

6. give thee knowledge of the mercy designed thee, and directions for thy whole future life.

7. And when the Angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household-servants, and a [devout souldier of them that waited on him continually.]

7. a souldier which was also a Proselyte, and lived continually with him.

8. And when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them] to Joppa.

8. And telling them the whole matter of the vision, he sent them accordingly.

9. On the morrow as they went on their journey and drew nigh unto the city, Peter [went c up upon the * house to pray about the sixth houre.]

9. went up to the roof of the house, (as a place commodious for devotion) about twelve of the clock, or midday, which was another time of prayer, used by pious men. c.

10. And he † became very hungry, and would have eaten: but while they made ready, [he fell into d a trance,]

† was fasting, ἐγένετο ὁ ἐπείνασεν

10. he fell into a trance, such as in which men are wont to receive visions from heaven. d.

11. And saw] heaven opened, and a certain * vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet, knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth,

* utensil, σκεῦός, see Mar. 11. 16. and note on Mat. 21. b.

11. And in a vision he seemed to see

12. Wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowles of the ayre.]

12. In which were all sorts of creatures, clean and unclean, those that by the Jewish law a Jew might touch, and those that he might not, noting the Gentiles and Jewes together, (see note on Mat. 23. d.)

13. And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter, kill and eat.]

13. And the voice bid him eat freely and indifferently of them all, that is, converse and preach freely to the Gentiles, as well as the Jewes.

† polluted, κοινόν

14. But Peter said, Not so, Lord: for I have never eaten any thing that is †common or unclean.]

14. But Peter refused, as having thought himself bound to eat nothing that was forbidden by the law, concerning clean and unclean.

15. And the voice spake unto him again the second time, [What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.]

15. God hath taken away those interdicts concerning some meats, and consequently those differences and separations between Jewes and Gentiles signified by them: And therefore where God makes no distinction, doe not thou make any.

16. This was done thrice, and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17. Now while Peter doubted in himself, what this vision, which he had seen, should mean, behold the men which were sent from Cornelius had made enquiry for Simons house, [and stood before the gate]

17. and were just then come to the gate, or dore.

18. And called and asked, Whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there?

19. While Peter thought on the vision, [the Spirit said unto him,] Behold three men seek thee.

19. It was revealed to him by divine affliation, (see note on ch. 8. e.) saying

20. Arise therefore, and get thee down, and goe with them, [doubting nothing; for I have sent them.]

20. making no question upon those Jewish scruples of the unlawfulnesse of conversing with Gentiles, for it is by my appointment that they are come to thee.

21. Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius, and said, Behold I am he whom ye seek: what is the cause wherefore ye are come?

22. And they said, Cornelius the Centurion, a just man, and [one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jewes, was warned of God by an holy Angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.]

22. a Proselyte of the Jewes, and generally well esteemed by them, hath seen a vision, and therein was by an Angel of God commanded to send for thee to come to him, and say somewhat of eminent concernment to him.

23. Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24. And the morrow after they entred into Cæsarea: and Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinsmen and neer friends.

25. And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and [fell down at his feet and worshipped him.]

25. took him for an Angel, or one sent immediately from heaven to him, and accordingly did behave himself toward him in great humility.

26. But Peter took him up, saying, Stand up, I my self also am a man.]

26. And Peter would not receive that expression from him, telling him that he was an ordinary man, though thus employed on God's errand to him.

27. And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together:

28. And he said unto them, [Ye know that it is an unlawfull thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation: but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.]

28. Ye all know that the lawes of the Jewish religion permit not a Jew to converse familiarly with any Gentile: but God hath by vision revealed to me, that I should not make any difference between Jewes and Gentiles.

29. Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30. And Cornelius said, Four daies agoe I was fasting untill this hour, and at the ninth houre I prayed in my house, and behold [a man stood before me in bright clothing,]

30. an Angel appeared to me in the shape of a man in bright shining apparel.

31. And said, Cornelius, thy prayer is [heard, and thine almes are had in remembrance in the sight of God.]

31. accepted so farre as to bring down this mercy of God on thee, and thine acts of mercy are now likely to be rewarded by God abundantly.

32. Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whoſe ſurname is Peter: he is lodged in the houſe of one Simon a Tanner, by the ſea ſide, who when he cometh, ſhall ſpeak unto thee.

33. I thank thee (Phil. 4. 14.) for coming, And now we all here are ready to receive any meſſage from God, and to undertake any courſe that God by thee ſhall appoint us.

33. Immediately therefore I ſent to thee, and [thou haſt well done, that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here preſent before * God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.]

† and gave him to be made manifeſt, ἐμφανῆ γενέσθαι, * ordained before, προχειροτονημένοις, ſee c. 14. a.

41. But this manifeſtation was not immediately made to all the multitude of the Jewes, but only to his diſciples, perſons whom God had enclined to leave all, and follow Chriſt, and to receive the faith which he preach'd to them, and to repoſe their whole truſt in him: For being crucified by the Jewes, and taken from them, and ſo they left deſtitute and hopeleſſe for a while, God was pleaſed to revive him again; and as he had choſen them to be witneſſes of all that Chriſt did when he was alive, ſo he choſe them to be the witneſſes moſt diſtinctly of his reſurrection, giving them the honour to eat and drink with him, and to ſee him eat and drink, after he roſe from the dead.

41. Not to all the people, but unto witneſſes, * choſen before of God, even to us who did eat and drink with him, after he roſe from the dead.]

42. Whom therefore he appointed to preach the Goſpel of Chriſt to the world, and to proclaim to all that this crucified Chriſt is raiſed to Gods right hand, to be judge of all men, that ſhall die before, and that ſhall be found alive at the day of doome.

42. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and teſtifie that it is he which was ordained of God to be the judge of quick and dead.]

43. This is he of whom all the Prophets foretell, that in him God would ſtrike a new covenant with mankind, of which this is the ſumme, that although men were ſinners, yet upon receiving of him, embracing his doctrine, they ſhould by their prayers, offered to God in his name, obtain pardon and remiſſion.

43. To him give all the Prophets witneſſe, that through his name whoſoever believeth in him ſhall receive remiſſion of ſins.]

44. Whilſt Peter was thus ſpeaking, the holy Spirit (either by ſome way of viſible appearance, ſuch as that was on the Apoſtles, Act. 15. 8. or elſe manifeſting himſelf in them by the effects, the ſame that had attended the viſible deſcent, Act. 2. the gift of tongues, &c. v. 46.) came down upon them, ſee v. 47. and c 11. 15. and gave unto thoſe that heard him (power of doing miracles, of ſpeaking ſtrange languages v. 46. to ſome, to others) other gifts and graces, fitting them for ſeverall conditions in the Church, ſee ch. 19. 6.

44. While Peter yet ſpake theſe words, the holy Ghoſt fell on all them which heard the word.]

45. And they of the circumciſion which believed were aſtoniſhed, as many as came with Peter, becauſe] that on the Gentiles alſo was poured out the gift of the holy Ghoſt.

45. And the Jews which had received the Goſpel, and came with Peter, wondred extremely, 46. bleſſe God for his great mercies to them.

46. For they heard them ſpeak with tongues, and [magnifie God.] Then anſwered Peter,

47. Is there any doubt or queſtion to be made of the baptizing of theſe, and receiving them into freedome of the congregation, to whom, although they be Gentiles, God hath himſelf allowed that which is more then baptiſme, viz. the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt upon them, thereby fitting them for offices in his Church, in the ſame manner as by deſcent of the holy Ghoſt we received our commiſſion? Act. 2.

47. Can any man forbid water, that theſe ſhould not be baptized, which have received the holy Ghoſt † as well as we?]

† in like manner even as we? τὸ πνεῦμα ὡς ἡμεῖς

48. And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

Ευσεβεῖς 3dly, εὐσεβεῖς the pious men here of Cornelius, and Φοβούμενοι v. 7. of ſome of his ſouldiers. And 4thly, φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, thoſe that fear God, here, of Cornelius again, and ſo Act. 13. 16. Ανδρες Ισραηλῖται, καὶ οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, men of Iſrael, and ye that fear God, and again v. 26. οἱ ἐν ὑμῖν φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, they among you that fear God, Proſelytes of your gates: ſo ſaith Oecumenius expreſly, φοβυμένους τὸν Θεὸν προσηλύτους καλεῖ, by thoſe that fear God he means the Proſelytes. And

c. i. p. 116.

Σεβόμενοι 5thly, and above all, σεβόμενοι Act. 13. 43. and σεβόμενοι Ελλήνες, Act. 17. 4. the worſhippers, and the Gracian worſhippers (and ſo the Eunuch went to Jeruſalem to worſhip, c. 8. 27.) of which Oecumenius again, Σεβομένους ἰδίως προσηλύτους καλῶ, by worſhippers he means peculiarly proſelytes: and agreeably to many Τιμόθεος of theſe was the name Τιμόθεος, Timotheus, which ſignifies in the Greek a worſhipper of God, the name of one whoſe father was a Greek, though his mother were a Jew, and being himſelf a proſelyte as his father was, yet not circumciſed, till Paul cauſed him to be ſo afterward. Sixthly and laſtly, Προσερχόμενοι τῷ Θεῷ προσερχόμενοι τῷ Θεῷ, they that come to God, Heb. 10. 6. which is the very word προσήλυτος lightly changed.

b. Μνημόσυνον. 4. Memorial] The notion of μνημόσυνον a memorial in this and ſome other places, is here fit to be obſerved: it is a forme of ſpeech ſignifying an oblation or ſacrifice. So Lev. 2. 9. The prieſt ſhall take from the meat offering a memorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, it is an offering made by fire of a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord: where it is clearly affirmed of the אזכרתה μνημόσυνον αὐτῆς the memorial, that it is an offering, &c. So v. 9. 16. and c. 5. 12. c. 6. 15. and oft elſwhere. And ſo the aſcending, or coming up, before God inclines it here; for that is proper to ſacrifices and oblations, to go up and render a ſweet ſavour to God; and this is here fitly attributed to his prayers and almes, which are the Chriſtians ſacrifice, an odor of ſweet ſmell, θυσία δεκτὴ, a welcome ſacrifice to God, Phil. 4. 18. and Heb. 13. 6.

c. Ἐπὶ τὸ δῶμα προσεύξασθαι 9 Up on the houſe to pray] That δῶμα ſignifies peculiarly not a houſe but the roof, or top, of the houſe, which being plain was fit for uſe, hath been ſaid, Mat. 24. Note h. Of this the Jews had a ſpeciall uſe, in places out of Judæa or Jeruſalem, that they might more freely look that way in performing their devotions. For the Temple of Jeruſalem being the ſolemn place of worſhip, they that were at diſtance from that place were to pray toward it. So 1 King. 8. 48. in the firſt inſtitution, they that were carried captive out of the land were to pray toward their land, and accordingly Dan. 6. 10. Daniel went into his houſe, and his windowes being open in his chamber toward Jeruſalem he kneeled on his knees three times a day, and prayed. So when it is ſaid of Hezekiah, 2 King. 20. 2. that he turned his face to the wall, and prayed, Jonathans Targum reades towards the wall of the Sanctuary, that is, toward that wall of the room which pointed toward the Sanctuary, as now adays the Jewes in the Weſt, in Italy, Germany, &c. are ſaid to have their walls inſcribed מזרח the Eaſt, becauſe Jeruſalem lies Eaſt from them. That S. Peter at this time obſerved this cuſtome, there is little doubt, when we remember, that as Daniel obſerved thoſe two circumſtances, of time and of poſture, ſo Peter reteining the one, (as appears here by the ſixth hour) may as reaſonably be deemed to have reteined the other, that of the poſture toward Jeruſalem in offering up his devotions, and to that end to have gone up to the houſe top to pray, where he might moſt freely look that way. When he was at Jeruſalem he went up ſolemnly to the Temple to pray at the hours of prayer, Peter and John at the ninth hour of prayer, Act. 3. 1, &c. and ſo all the Apoſtles were διαπαντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, continually (at the conſtant hours) in the Temple, Luk. 24. 53. (ſee Note on Act. 1. c.) and then there will be little doubt, but they reteined that other part of obſervance to that place, of praying toward the Temple; when they were farther from it; it being no part of Chriſts reformation to forbid all the religious ceremonies which had been of uſe among the Jewes, but rather to adapt and accommodate many of them to the Chriſtians uſe.

d. Ἔκστασις V. 10. A trance] The word ἔκστασις is the Greek of תרדמה, which ſignifies either 1. deep ſleep (and a trance of the nature of that) or 2dly, amazement, aſtoniſhment, and accordingly is by the Septuagint rendred ſometimes βάμβος, as Pſal. 68. 29. and δεινὸς φόβος 1 Sam. 26. 12. (ſee Note on Rom. 11. b.) and ſometimes ἔκστασις, as Gen. 2. 21. where it is (though we render it a deep ſleep) of the ſame kind with that here, a trance or extaſie, and therefore is rendred by the Targum שנא תקיפא a ſtrong ſleep, ſignifying or intimating it to be ſomething more then that ſleep which is ordinary among men. Proportionably to theſe acceptions of the Hebrew, the word ἔκστασις in the New Teſtament ſignifies ſometimes amazement and aſtoniſhment, from fear or wonder, Mar. 5. 42. and 16. 8. Luk. 5. 26. Act. 3. 10. and ſometimes a trance or extaſie, when the outward ſenſes being bound up as 'twere with ſleep, Gods will is inwardly revealed to the underſtanding, by way of intellectuall viſion. Thus is it in all the other places of the New Teſtament: c. 11. 5. εἶδον ἐν ἐκστάσει ὅραμα, in an extaſie, or trance, I ſaw a viſion, and c. 22. 17. γενέσθαι με ἐν ἐκστάσει, I was in a trance, and ſo here ſpeaking of the ſame matter. Where therefore it ſufficiently appears to denote not a naturall ſleep, ſuch as men diſ-ſpirited with faſting may be thought apt to fall into (which the mention of Peters faſting in the beginning of the verſe hath made ſome men apprehend of it) but a tranſportation or trance into which he was caſt by God, (or a binding up his outward ſenſes, which is anſwerable to a deep ſleep, ſuch as Adams was, Gen. 2. when the rib was taken out of him) to make him capable of the viſion, or revelations of Gods will, which here he was to receive. 'To which purpoſe 'twill be obſervable, that Gen. 17. 3. when the Hebrew text ſaith, Abraham fell on his face, and God talked with him, the Hieruſalem Talmud reads, Inclinavit ſe Abram ſuper faciem ejus, & obſtupuit, Abraham bowed himſelf upon his face, and was aſtoniſh'd; where the & obſtupuit and was aſtoniſh'd is clearly the ἔκστασις here (the Hebrew word ſignifying, as was ſaid, both aſtoniſhment and trance) wherein God talked with him, by way of viſion to his underſtanding, not to his ſenſes.

e. Ἔχρισεν μύρῳ μακτῷ V. 38. Anointed] That the uſe of oyle among the Jews was for feſtivals, hath been ſaid, Note on Mat. 26. c. and conſequently the cuſtome of anointing notes a ſolemn entertainment of any one: water to waſh the feet, and bread to eat, was allowed to every of the gueſts; but not ſo the fatted calf, but when they would Μόσχος σιτιστὸς expreſſe a great joy, and welcome, and making merry, as in the return of the prodigal. And ſo in like manner, the anointing, or powring oyle on the heads of the gueſts, is the higheſt expreſſion of acknowledging and teſtifying the greateſt joy (and ſo called the oyle of gladneſſe, Pſal 45. 8.) that is to be found among them. This anointing therefore from hence came to denote the preferring one before another (and the Targum generally renders it by a word which ſignifies preferring or advancing) and ſo became the ceremony of conſecrating to any ſpeciall office, and ſo was ordinarily uſed in the inſtalling men to offices of any eminence. From hence (as in many other things) doth the word come to be uſed Metaphorically, for any that is preferred before, or ſet over others. Abraham and the Patriarchs, that muſt not be touch'd in the Pſalmiſt, are called Gods

anointed, that is, persons by God preferred and advanced before others, taken into his speciall care, and so signally testified to be by Gods dealings towards them. And so the anointed of the Lord are those whom God hath set over other men. Agreeable to this is it that that eminent person propheſyed of by Moses, whom God should send, and whom they were to hear, is generally known by the name of משיח the anointed, the Messias or Christ, because he was thus preferred by God (Psal. 45. and Heb. 1. 9.) above his fellowes, men and Angels themselves. According to this notion it is, that when the Holy Ghost came down on Christ, and thereby (by a voice from heaven, Thou art my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased) mark'd him out as the person whom God had sent, (of whom John therefore said, that he was greater then he, and preferred before him) it is expres'd by the Prophet in these words, The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me to preach, &c. Isa. 61. 1. and Lu. 4. 18. that is, the Lord hath preferred me before others, and set me apart to this office, as he hath no other man: So again Act. 4. 27. Thy son Jesus whom thou hast anointed, that is, marked out to be that beloved sonne of thine, which was done at the Spirits coming down upon him, which therefore must be resolved to be the meaning of anointing him in that place. And so 'tis evidently in this place, How God hath anointed him with the holy Spirit, and with power, that is, whom God by those two meanes (the descent of the Spirit upon him, and the power of miracles, as by privileges and markes of prelation) preferred, and dignified beyond all others that ever were in the world, and demonstrated him to be that promised Messias. This use of the phrase being so remarkable of Christ, and so particularly applyed to this respect of the Holy Ghosts testifying of him and setting him apart for his office (for the very testifying that he was Gods beloved son, who was to be heard before all others, is the enstalling or consecrating him to his prophetick office, to teach the world) is farther enlarged to the Apostles of Christ (on whom the Holy Ghost afterward descended in like manner) and even to all other faithfull Christians also, 2 Cor. 1. 21. where, with that phrase of confirming them into Christ, that is, giving them assurance of the truth of Christs being the Messias, (as an oath is said to be εἰς βεβαίωσιν for confirmation) is joyned also Gods having anointed them, which signifies Gods having afforded them such speciall favour, and giving them such evidences and testimonies of the truth of that they were to believe, viz. the Holy Ghosts descending upon the Apostles (which was one assurance of Christs being the true Messias, and the Miracles which they wrought was another) which being not so peculiar to the twelve Apostles, but that, like the oyle on Aarons head, it descended to the beard, and to the skirts of his clothing, it is communicated by S Paul to himself, and the believing Corinthians also, (see Note on c. 2. d.) From this last place thus understood will appear also what is meant by the χεῖσμα or unction, 1 Joh. 2. 20. which the Christians or believers to whom he writes are by him said to have ἀπὸ τοῦ ἁγίου from the Holy, that is, I conceive, from the holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost by descending on the Apostles had taught them all things, that is, given them assurance that what Christ had preached was true, and consequently that he being the true Messias, all other contrary teachers were false-teachers, and to be avoided. This testimony from heaven afforded the Apostles, (and attendant on that, the power also of doing Miracles in Christs name allowed to many others in the Church of the first times,) was the foundation of beliefe to that and the whole succeeding Church, and therefore that privilege (as it was allowed them) being call'd χεῖσμα or unction, is said there to belong to these believers: They have it, that is, either the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit in the Church, or else the benefit of it, the evidence of those truths (which the coming of the Holy Ghost confirmed) belongs unto them; and therefore as that descent of the Holy Ghost was said to teach them all things, so here they which have this χεῖσμα, know all things, that is, have sufficient evidence thereby of the truth v. 21. that is, of the Gospel, or that Jesus is the Messias, v. 22. and that what they had received from the beginning, v. 24. that is, from the beginning of Christs appearing among them (at his Baptisme, when the Holy Ghost thus descended) was such a truth, as they were never to part with. And so v. 27. the unction again (that is, that which God had afforded them, to demonstrate that Jesus was the Messias) teacheth you of all things, that is, gives you assurance of the truth of the Gospel of Christ, and is truth, and not a lye, that is, infallibly true, and fit to be confronted unto, and to fortifie you against all those that come to deceive you, v. 26.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. XI.

1. Christians in Judæa heard that the people of other nations which were not Jews, had embraced the doctrine of Christ.

1. AND the Apostles and [brethren that were in Judæa heard that the Gentiles had also received the word of God.]

2,3. And at Peter's coming to Jerusalem, the Jewish Christians (who though they were converted to Christianity, yet still continued constant to the observation of the Mosaicall law of circumcision, of abstaining from unclean things, and the conversation with men of any other nation, &c.) accused him, that he converſed freely with those that were not circumcised, Cornelius &c. and eat with them, which the Jews count absolutely unlawfull.

2. And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him,

3. Saying, Thou wentest in unto men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.]

4. And Peter thus made his Apology, giving an exact account of all that had befalne in this matter.

4. But Peter * rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it by order unto them, saying,]

* began and expounded to them orderly ἐξετίθετο καθεξῆς

5. See note on c. 10. d.

5. I was in the city of Joppa praying, and in a [trance] I saw a vision, a certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from the heaven by four corners, and it came even to me.

6. beasts and fowls and creepers of all sorts, clean and unclean.

6. Upon the which when I had fastned mine eyes, I considered, and saw [four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the aire.]

7. make no distinction of clean and unclean, but eat freely

7. And I heard a voice, saying unto me, Arise, Peter, [slay and eat.]

of any which thou seest.

8. But

8. But I said, Not so, Lord: for [nothing common or unclean hath at any time entred into my mouth.]

8. I have always observed this distinction, commanded by the law of Moses, and must not now break that law, whatsoever thou seemest to command me.

† the second time, ἐκ δευτέρου

9. But the voyce answered me † again from heaven, [What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.]

9. 'Twas God that made that distinction by his law to the Jews, and there is no naturall turpitude in eating any kind of meat, save onely as it is prohibited by God; and therefore God that made that law, abrogating it again, and making all meates clean, or free to be eaten, thou art not to think any interdict lyes on any, but freely to eate of all.

10. And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven.

11. And behold] immediately there were three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Cæsarea unto me.

11. And as soon as I had seen this vision, there was a thing fell out, which made me discern to what end this vision was designed, not onely to reveal to me the lawfulnesse of eating all sorts of meats, but more principally of conversing with, and preaching the Gospell to the Gentiles; for

12. And the Spirit bad me go with them nothing doubting. Moreover these six brethren accompanied me, and we entred into the mans house.]

12. And the Spirit of God by a secret afflation, or incitation, (See note on c. 8. f.) commanded me to make no scruple (this was the interpreting of my vision to me) but freely to go along with them, though they were not Jews, or circumcised Proselytes. And these six men, converted or Christian Jews, went along with me: and we all went into the house of Cornelius, a Gentile, but Proselyte of the Jewes, though uncircumcised.

13. And he shewed us, how he had seen an Angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon whose surname is Peter,]

13. And he told how in a vision received from an Angel in this house of his (and might not we enter, where an Angel had been before us, sent by God immediately, as we also were?) he was commanded to send to Joppa for Simon Peter to come to him.

* speak words to thee, λαλήσει ῥήματα πρὸς σε

14. Who shall * tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.]

14. Who, said the Angel, shall teach thee that doctrine, by believing and embracing of which thou and all thy family, if they believe also, shall be made heires of everlasting salvation.

15. And as I began to speake, the holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning.]

15. And I had not long discourst with them, and preached the Gospel of Christ, but the holy Ghost came down (see c. 10. 44.) upon Cornelius and his company either in the same manner, or with the same effects as he did upon us Apostles, Act. 2. presently after the ascension of Christ, before we entred upon our office.

16. Then remembred I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the holy Ghost.]

16. And I could not but apply to these also what Christ said to us, viz. that John Baptist's manner and ceremony of receiving Proselytes should be much exceeded by another, which should befall us and some others, (see note on c. 1. a.) the descent of the Holy Ghost upon us.

* when we had believed, πιστεύσασιν † Who was I, able to withstand or hinder God? ἐγὼ τίς ἤμην δυνατὸς κωλῦσαι τὸν Θεόν;

17. Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us * who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, † what was I that I could withstand God?]

17. And therefore when God hath allowed these Gentiles the same privilege which he bestowed on us after our continuing stedfast to the faith of Christ so long, attending him as his constant disciples, when that which we look on as the solemnity of our mission or Apostleship, the descent of the Holy Ghost, hath been also allowed to them, it must have been a downright disobedience to God, if I had made a scruple to receive them into the Church, or indifferently to preach unto, or converse with them.

18. When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.]

18. With this account of Peters they were satisfied, and blessed God, for that communicativenesse of his goodnesse, that he had afforded the same mercy to the Gentiles, as to the Jewes, that if they will return, and amend, and receive Christ, they shall be saved, and that he had given them the grace to doe so.

* speaking, λαλοῦντες

19. Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen, travelled as farre as Phœnice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, * preaching the word unto none but unto the Jewes only.]

19. Then the disciples that were driven from Jerusalem ch. 8. 1. went about, publishing the Gospel (see note on ch. 8. b.) to the Jewes, but to none else.

† many copies printed and MS. read Ἑλληνιστὰς Hellenists

20. And some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the † Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.]

20. And some of these disciples were men that had been born in Cyprus and Cyrene, and they, when they came to Antioch, preached the faith of Christ to those Jewes which spake and used the Greek language and Bibles.

21. And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord.]

21. And God prospered their preaching of Christ, and brought in many converts to them daily.

22. Then tidings of these things came unto the eares of the Church which was at Jerusalem: and they sent forth Barnabas, that he should goe as farre as Antioch.]

22. And the Apostles that remained at Jerusalem hearing of it, sent Barnabas to confirm them from city to city as farre as Antioch.

23. Who when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad: and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.]

23. Who coming and seeing with what good successe the Gospel had been preached among them, (see note on Heb. 13. d. and Act. 18. e.) was glad, and advised them cordially and stedfastly to hold fast to Christ.

24. For he was a good man, and full of the holy Ghost, and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord.]

24. For Barnabas was a very pious person, a believer that had many excellent gifts and graces, and by his means also the Gospel was received by very many.

25. Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus for to seek Saul.

26. And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to passe that [a whole year they * assembled themselves with the Church, and taught much people: and the disciples were ª called Christians first in Antioch.]

26. Paul and Barnabas, for the space of a year, resorted to the place of publick assemblies, and instructed and confirmed all that came. And

* assembled in the Church, συναχθῆναι τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ ª.

the disciples, or those that received the faith of Christ, being formerly called Nazarites or Galilæans, in stead of those names, were styled Christians, and that first in Antioch of any place.

27. And

27. And ſome of the chief men, poſſibly biſhops of Judæa, that had alſo the gift of propheſie, came by appointment of the Church of Jeruſalem to Antioch.

27. And in theſe daies came prophets from Jeruſalem unto Antioch.]

28. And one of them, named Agabus, by revelation from the Spirit of God, foretold that there ſhould ſhortly be a great famine over all Judæa, (ſee note on Mat. 24. e. and Luk. 2. a.) which accordingly came to paſſe in the reigne of the Emperour Claudius, ſee 1 Cor. 16. 1.

21. And there ſtood up one of them, named Agabus, and ſignified by the Spirit, that there ſhould be great dearth thoroughout all the world: which came to paſſe in the daies of Claudius Cæſar.]

29. And all the Chriſtians in all places according to their abilities reſolved to ſend relief to the Chriſtians in Judæa in this time of dearth, (and among them Helen Queen of the Adiabeni, ſaith Euſebius l. 2. c. 18'.) bought a great deal of corn out of Ægypt, and ſent it to be diſtributed to them that were in want, ſee Joſ. Ant. l. 20. c. 2.

29. Then the diſciples every man according to his ability determined to ſend relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judæa.]

30. And this liberality from other parts of the Church, was by Paul and Barnabas brought, and put into the hands of the Biſhops of Judæa.

30. Which alſo they did, and ſent it to [b] the Elders, by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.]

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Χρηματίζω

On Jude.

V. 26. Called Chriſtians] The uſe of χρηματίζω in the Active for to be called in a paſſive ſenſe, is to be ſeen Rom. 7. 3. μοιχαλὶς χρηματίσει ſhe ſhall be called an adultereſſe. So in * Oecumenius, Ἀστέρες δὲ πλανῆται χρηματίζουσι καὶ αὐτοὶ, they alſo are called wandring ſtarres: but that in an eminent manner, as may be diſcerned by that acception of it in Epiphanius, Ἀστρονομία, ſaith he, παρ' Φαρισαίοις ἐχρημάτιζεν, Aſtronomy was much cried up, was in great reputation among the Phariſees. So here χρηματίζειν Χριστιανὸς, is to be famouſly known under that name of Chriſtians.

b. Πρεσβύτεροι

V. 30. The Elders] The word Πρεσβύτεροι Elders is here firſt met with in the Chriſtian Church, and therefore will deſerve to be explained. And firſt it will not be amiſſe to ſee the uſe of it among the Greeks and Hebrewes. Among the Greeks, it is the ſaying of a learned Grammarian, Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus l. 2. Πρεσβυτέρους καὶ τοὺς ἀρίστους καὶ τοὺς γέροντας ἐπίστασιν οἱ παλαιοὶ λέγουν, The ancients uſed the word Elders both for Rulers and old men, and accordingly it is now in uſe among all nations, Italians, French, Spaniards, Engliſh, to call their Rulers, Seniors, Maiors, Aldermen, &c. which are literally the rendring of πρεσβύτεροι. Among the Hebrews the ſame is acknowledged, that זקנים old men (which with them that want degrees of compariſon is all one with Elders, and generally rendred πρεσβύτεροι) denoteth dignity and Præfecture in the Old Teſtament. So the ſteward of Abrahams houſe, Eliezer, who was placed over all his ſervants and goods, Gen. 24. 2. is called πρεσβύτερος τῆς οἰκίας αὐτοῦ, the Elder of his houſe, and ἄρχων πάντων τῶν αὐτοῦ, Ruler of all he had; not ſo as זקן ſhould be joyned with עבדי and rendred his Elder ſervant, but with a comma, that ſervant, which was Elder of his houſe, שליש, ſaith the Targum of Jeruſalem, ruler, adminiſtrator, ſteward, and ſo he is called Gen. 15. 2. So the זקני or Elders of Pharaohs houſe, and of all Ægypt, Gen. 50. 7. are the Præfects and adminiſtrators of the Kings houſe, and of all Ægypt. So the Elders of the Moabites, Num. 22. 7. are שרי Princes of Moab, v. 8. So when all Dominion was founded in the privileges that belonged to the firſt-born, Gen. 4. 7. (and therefore is Reuben, as firſt-born, Gen. 49. 3. called the excellency of principality, and the excellency of power, that is the excellent Principality, or Supreme power, the Magiſtrate, ſo called Rom. 13. 1.) the Princes of the families, or kindreds, are called indifferently Πατριάρχαι, and Πρεσβύτεροι, Patriarchs, and Elders. Such were the Elders of Iſrael, Exod. 3. 16, 18. and 4. 29. the heads, or rulers of the families, or kindreds, ch. 6. 14. Rulers of the Congregation, ch. 16. 22. who are again called the Elders of Iſrael, ch. 17. 5, 6. and 18. 12. and Elders of the Tribes, Deut. 31. 28. And when Moſes appointed Judges for lighter cauſes, Exod. 18. 22. who ſhould have power over thouſands, and hundreds, and fifties, and tens, that is, firſt, over ſo many families, after, over greater or leſſer cities, (for ſo the thouſand ſignifies a city, Judg. 6. 15. Mic. 5. 2. and the Ruler thereof is ἡγεμὼν Mat. 2. 6.) theſe were by them called πρεσβύτεροι Elders, and Ἄρχοντες Rulers and Judges, and ἄρχοντες Συναγωγῶν, and ἀρχισυνάγωγοι, Rulers of the ſynagogues and the like. And thereupon in the Theodoſian Codex, where the ſecond law de Judæis uſes the word Presbyteros, Elders, another Law hath Synagogarum patres, fathers, or Rulers, of the Conſiſtories. And ſo when the ſeventy Elders were taken in to aſſiſt Moſes Num. 11. 16. (to whom the Great Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem ſucceeded) it is evident, that theſe were ſo called, becauſe they were Princes or Præfects, or Rulers of the people, before they were thus choſen by Moſes. (Gather unto me, ſaith God, ſeventy men of the Elders of Iſrael, whom thou knoweſt to be the Elders of the people, and officers over them, and bring them to the tabernacle of the Congregation, that they may ſtand there with thee.) And ſo the word Elder was not a denotation of one of the Sanhedrim, any otherwiſe, then as ſome of thoſe that were in the Sanhedrim had formerly been Elders, or Rulers, of the people; and accordingly of three ſorts of men, of which the Sanhedrim conſiſted, but one is called Elders, the other Scribes, and chief Prieſts, (ſee Mat. 16. 20. and Note on Mar. 5. c.) By all which it appears how fitly this word Πρεσβύτεροι, Elders, being made uſe of by the Apoſtles, and writers of the New Teſtament, is affix'd to the Governours of the Chriſtian Church, the ſeverall Biſhops of ſeverall cities, anſwerable to the ἡγεμόνες Rulers of thouſands, or Patriarchs, which being firſt uſed among the Jewes, are in the Chriſtian Church the ordinary title of Biſhops. And although this title of Πρεσβύτεροι Elders have been alſo extended to a ſecond order in the Church, and is now onely in uſe for them, under the name of Presbyters, yet in the Scripture-times it belonged principally, if not alone, to Biſhops, there being no evidence that any of that ſecond order were then inſtituted, though ſoon after, before the writing of Ignatius Epiſtles, there were ſuch inſtituted in all Churches. Of thoſe firſt Apoſtolicall times the teſtimony of Clemens Romanus in Epiſt. 1. ad Cor. is obſervable, Ἐξεπέμφθη ὁ Χριστὸς ἀπὸ Θεοῦ, καὶ οἱ Ἀπόστολοι ἀπὸ Χριστοῦ, οἱ οὖν ἐξῆλθον εὐαγγελιζόμενοι-- Κατὰ χώρας οὖν καὶ πόλεις κηρύσσοντες, κατέστανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, εἰς Ἐπισκόπους καὶ Διακόνους τῶν μελλόντων πιστεύειν, Chriſt was ſent from God, and the Apoſtles from Chriſt, and they went out preaching the Goſpel-- And then, They therefore preaching through Regions and Cities Conſtituted (or Ordained) their firſt-fruits, (firſt-converts) into Biſhops and Deacons of p. 3.

those that should afterward believe. Where it appears that when the Gospel was first preached by the Apostles and but few converted, they ordained in every City and Region no more but a Bishop, and one or more Deacons to attend him, there being at the present so small store out of which to take more, and so small need of ordaining more, that this Bishop is constituted more for the sake of those which should after believe, then of those which did already. Agreeable is that of Epiphanius ἐκ βαθυτάτων ἱστοριῶν, saith he, fetch'd out of the profoundest or antientest histories, l. 3. c. 1. Νῦν ὄντος τοῦ κηρύγματος, &c. At the beginning of the Apostles preaching, when there was none fit or worthy to be Bishop, the place remained void without any, but where need required, and there were those that were fit for it, Bishops were constituted; but while there was no multitude of Christians, there were found none among them to be constituted Presbyters (in our modern use of that word) and they contented themselves with a Bishop alone in every place: But without a Deacon 'twas impossible for a Bishop to be, and therefore the Apostle took care that the Bishop should have his Deacons to minister to him. And accordingly when S. Paul gives directions to Bishop Timothy for the ordaining of Officers in the Church, he names Bishops and Deacons, but no second order between them, 1 Tim. 3. 2, 8. and so to Titus, Tit. 1. 7. & c. 2. 1. (see Note on Phil. 1. c.) And so in the Church of Jerusalem it is clear by story, that James the brother of the Lord, being soon after Christs Ascension constituted their Bishop (see Note on Gal. 2. d.) the Deacons are the first that are added to him, Act. 6. and no mention as yet of any middle order. From whence it will be sufficiently cleared, who are the Πρεσβύτεροι Elders here, viz. the Bishops of the severall cities or of the brethren that dwelt in Judæa, v. 29. to whom this almes was designed; for the famine being in all Judæa, and not onely at Jerusalem, and there being brethren, that is, Christians, inhabiting through severall parts of Judæa, there can be no reason to imagin that Jerusalem only should have the benefit of this collection, or consequently that the Elders, to whom it was delivered, should belong only to that city. And thus it is known in the Primitive Church that almes and collections (called χάρις and λογία) whether in the same Church brought by the communicants in the offertory, or by officers sent from one Church to another, were solemnly intrusted to the Bishop, as the steward of the house of God, as the oblations were brought to the high Priest under the Law, and the liberality of the faithfull to the Apostles feet, Act. 4. 34. So in the 41th Canon Apostolical it is appointed, Præcipimus ut in potestate sua Episcopus Ecclesiæ res habeat: Si enim animæ hominum pretiosæ illi sunt concreditæ, multò magis oportet eum curam pecuniarum gerere, ita ut potestate ejus indigentibus omnia dispensentur per Presbyteros & Diaconos, We command that the Bishop shall have the goods of the Church in his own power: For if the soules of men so much more pretious are entrusted to him, he ought much more to have the care of the monies, so as by his power all be dispensed to them that want, by the Presbyters and Deacons. And so saith * Justin Martyr of the προεστὼς President, or Bishop, πᾶσιν ἐν χρείᾳ ὢσι κηδεμὼν γίνεται, he is the Guardian of all that are in want. From this explication of Πρεσβύτεροι here, must be taken the notion of it Act. 15. 2. where the Elders at Jerusalem with the Apostles, are not the Elders of Jerusalem, that one city, but the Bishops of all Judea, now met in Councell at Jerusalem, v. 4, 6, 22, 23. which joyned in making that decree ch. 16. 4. and so ch. 21. 18. when Paul again went up to Jerusalem, and addres'd himself to James the Bishop there, it is added, as in Councell, πάντες τε παρεγένοντο οἱ Πρεσβύτεροι, and all the Elders were there. An image or representation of which Councel we have Rev. 4. 4. & 11. 16. One sitting upon the throne: The Bishop of Jerusalem, as Metropolitan, sitting in the midst, and four and twenty Elders κυκλόθεν round about, in fashion of a crown or semicircle, sitting on thrones on each side of him, in white garments, and golden crownes or mitres, the characters of Episcopal Dignity, and seven lamps of fire, the Emblems of seven Deacons ver. 5. waiting on them. And as the Bishops of Judæa, being at Jerusalem, are thus fitly styled Πρεσβύτεροι Elders, (not of the Church of Jerusalem, but) either simply Elders or εἰς or ἐν, at, or in Jerusalem, noting only the place where they met in Councel, not of which they were Elders, or Governours: So Act. 14. 23. it is said of Paul and Barnabas passing through Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch, that having confirmed the Churches, they ordained them Πρεσβυτέρους κατ' ἐκκλησίαν Elders Church by Church, that is, a Bishop in every Church, one Governour in Lystra, another in Iconium, another in Antioch. And so c. 20. 17. the πρεσβύτεροι ἐκκλησίας Elders of the Church of Asia, are the same that are called ἐπίσκοποι ποιμνίου Bishops of the flock, v. 28. set over them by the holy Ghost, to wit, the Bishops of all Asia, who, saith Irenæus, were called together ab Epheso & reliquis proximis civitatibus, from Ephesus and the rest of the cities neer, l. 3. c. 14. To all which places in that book of the Acts belongs that saying of Oecumenius, Πρεσβυτέρους δὲ τοὺς ἐπισκόπους ἡ τῶν Πράξεων βίβλος οἶδε λεγομένους, the book of the Acts uses to call Bishops Elders. So Tit. 1. 5. when Titus is said to be left in Crete, to ordain πρεσβυτέρους κατὰ πόλιν Elders city by city, there is little doubt, but as Titus was Metropolitan of that Iland, (in which there were said to be an hundred cities, and Gortyna the Metropolis) so the Elders in those severall cities were a Bishop in each; and so they are distinctly called ver. 7. and the same directions given for the ordaining of them and the πρεσβύται, that to Timothy are given for the Bishops and Deacons, 1 Tim. 3. And the Greek Scholiasts say distinctly on that place, Πρεσβυτέρους τοὺς Ἐπισκόπους καλεῖ, he calls the Bishops Elders, and Ἀπόστολος Τίτον ἐπὶ τὸ καλῶς ἧσαι ἐπισκόπους κατέλιπεν, Ἐπίσκοπον πρότερον ποιήσας, the Apostle left Titus to constitute Bishops, having first made him Bishop: and * Theodoret, ἐπιτέτραπτο τοὺς ὑπ' αὐτὸν ἐπισκόπους χειροτονῆσαι, He had Commission to ordain Bishops under him: and Theophylact, τοσούτων ἐπισκόπων κρίσιν καὶ χειροτονίαν ἐπέβαλε, He was intrusted with the judging and ordaining of so many (that is, an hundred) Bishops. So 1 Tim. 4. 14. the πρεσβυτερίου or Elder ship that laid hands on Timothy, and made him Bishop, may well be resolved to be the Bishops or Apostolical men, οἱ τῆς Ἀποστολικῆς χάριτος ἠξιωμένοι, those that were vouchsafed the favour to be Apostles, saith Theodoret, who with S. Paul (2 Tim. 1. 6.) consecrated him. Thus St Peter calls himself, Πρεσβύτερος Πέτρος, Peter the Elder, 1 Pet. 5. 1. and St John πρεσβύτερος Ἰωάννης, the Elder John, 2 Joh. 1. and 3 Joh. 1. And accordingly saith * St Chrysostome on that place, ὃ περὶ πρεσβυτέρων φησὶν ἐνταῦθα, ἀλλὰ περὶ Ἐπισκόπων, ὃ γὰρ δὴ πρεσβύτεροι τὴν Ἐπίσκοπον ἐχειρολόνων, By Elder ship he means not (those that were in his daies called) Presbyters, but Bishops, for Presbyters did not ordain Bishops: and so Theophylact and Oecumenius πρεσβυτερίου, τουτέστιν Ἐπισκόπων, Presbytery, that is, Bishops; and so * Ignatius calls the Apostles πρεσβυτέριον Ἐκκλησίας the Presbytery of the Church. And Theodoret renders the reason of the appellation, for so, saith he, the holy scripture τὸν ἐντιμότατον τῷ Ἰσραὴλ προσηγόρευσε Γερουσίαν, call'd the chief men of Israel, the Senate or Elder ship. So 1 Pet. 5. 1. and 5. Πρεσβύτεροι οἱ ἐν ὑμῖν, the Elders among you, are no doubt the Bishops in all the dispersions of the Converted Jewes; of whom it is there said that they should ποιμαίνειν and ἐπισκοπεῖν v. 2. doe the part of the Pastor and Bishop.

Some

Some other places there are, where the word Πρεσβύτερος may poſſibly ſignifie a lower order, if any ſuch there were in thoſe times, but yet it is not certain that they doe ſo. Such is that 1 Tim. 5. 1. Πρεσβυτέρῳ μὴ ἐπιπλήξῃς, Rebuke not an Elder, and ver. 19. Κατὰ πρεσβυτέρου μὴ παραδέχου, Receive not an accuſation againſt an Elder; where 'tis the opinion of Epiphanius, that Biſhop Timothy's power over the Presbyters is ſpoken of. But when it is remembred that Timothy was not only a Biſhop, but of a Metropoliticall See, the chief of all Aſia, and ſo a Metropolitan, and he appointed by Paul to ordain Biſhops there (whoſe qualifications are therefore ſet down, and thoſe of Deacons, but no mention of a middle order) there is no doubt but thoſe Biſhops of inferior Sees ordained by him, were alſo accuſable and rebukable before him, in the ſame manner as Theophylact ſaid of Titus, that the κρίσις judgment, as well as χειροτονία Ordination of ſo many Biſhops was committed to him. And therefore though St Chryſoſtome explaining thoſe places interpret them περὶ πάντως γεγηρακότων of all old men, (and ſome circumſtances in the Context incline to that ſenſe) yet having made this queſtion, what ſhould be done in caſe the faults were confeſs'd but had no witneſſes, but only an evil ſuſpicion? he anſwers, and ſo alſo Theophylact, and Oecumenius in the ſame words, Εἶπον ἄνω, φησὶ, δεῖ τὸν ἀύλον καὶ μαρτυρίαν καλὴν ἔχειν ἀπὸ τῶν ἔξωθεν, the Apoſtle had anſwered above, He ought to have a good teſtimony from them that are without; which plainly referring to the qualifications of Biſhops 1 Tim. 3. 7. muſt ſuppoſe the Elders to denote Biſhops in that place alſo: and ſo again ſaith* Chryſoſtome on that other place, Δῆλον ὅτι ἐκκλησίας λοιπὸν ὢν ἐμπεπιστευμένος Τιμόθεος, ἢ καὶ ἔθνους ὁλόκληρον τὸ τῆς Ἀσίας, διὸ καὶ περὶ πρεσβυτέρων αὐτῷ διαλέγεται, It is manifeſt that he was intruſted with Churches, or indeed with a whole nation, that of Aſia, wherefore S. Paul diſcourſes to him of Elders. Where the mention of Churches in the plural, and of all Aſia, over which Timothy was placed, muſt interpret Elders of Biſhops there. A third place there is in that Epiſtle 1 Tim. 5. 17. Let the Elders that have ruled well be thought worthy of double honour; which may alſo very commodiouſly be interpreted of the Biſhops, the προεστῶτες or Prefects of Churches (ſo ſtyled by Juſtin Martyr and others,) and thoſe diſcharging their office duely, and (beſides the farther inſtructing, or teaching their Churches already conſtituted) labouring and travailing in the preaching the Goſpel to them that have not before heard it, to whom therefore the פִּי שְׁנַיִם, the double portion of alimony, the labourers reward v. 18. is aſſigned by the Apoſtle. A fourth place is that of S. James, Jam. 5. 14. Is any man ſick? let him call for the Elders of the Church, &c. Where, as the office of viſiting the ſick, of praying, anointing, abſolving, and reſtoring health to the ſick, may well agree to the Biſhop, ſo the ſetting it in the plural number is nothing to the contrary, for that only ſignifies the Elders, or Biſhops of the Chriſtian Church to be the men, whom all are to ſend in to this caſe: not that there are more Elders then one in one particular Church or city, any more then that more then one are to be ſent for by the ſame ſick perſon. To this purpoſe belongs that place of Polycarp the primitive Biſhop of Smyrna, and Martyr, Καὶ οἱ Πρεσβύτεροι εὔσπλαγχνοι εἰς πάντας —— ἐπισκεπτόμενοι πάντας ἀδενεῖς, Let the Elders be mercifull to all, —— viſiting all that are weak, or ſick; where many other particulars are mention'd, κρίσις judicature, ἀπειρία ſeverity, or exciſion, προσωποληψία accepting of perſons, τὸ ταχέως πιστεύειν κατ' ὀργὴν, believing haſtily againſt any, as alſo ἀποστρέφειν τὰ ἀποπεπλανημένα, reducing hereticks, which belong properly to the office of the Biſhop, and not to any ſecond order in the Church; and accordingly in all that Epiſtle there is no mention of any but of Elders and Deacons. As in Papias alſo his contemporary, and after him in Irenæus, and Juſtin Martyr, though πρεσβύτεροι ſometimes ſignifie that ſecond order, yet 'tis alſo uſed to ſignifie the Biſhop, and Polycarp himſelf ſtyled Ἀποστολικὸς πρεσβύτερος, an Apoſtolick Elder, or Biſhop, Iren. in Ep. ad Plotinum, and ſo Seniores in Tertullian.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. XII.

a. 1. About this time An. Ch. 43. Agrippa grandchild to Herod the great, having obtained a great part of his grandfathers dominions, and ſo calling himſelf by his name Herod, went about, that is, reſolved to perſecute the Chriſtians, eſpecially the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem, thereby to gratifie the Jewes.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Ἐπιβάλλειν χεῖρα

V. 1. Stretched forth his hand] Ἐπιβάλλειν χεῖρας to lay hand, taken abſolutely, or with an Infinitive mood after it, as here, ſignifies to attempt or reſolve to do any thing; ſo Gen. 3. 22. leſt he put forth his hand to take of the tree, &c.

b. ἐκτενῶς

V. 5. Without ceaſing] The word ἐκτενὴς applied to prayer ſignifies importunate, enforcing the ſame requeſt. Ἐκτένεια, Ζωσιμᾶς χῶς τὸ αὐτὸ, ſaith Heſychius, 'tis continually to doe the ſame thing: and again, Ἐκτενὲς, διατεταμένον, ſignifies that which is held out or extended to a length. Thus the Letany, or ſupplications of the Church, frequently, for ſome ſpace, to ſeverall matters applying the ſame words, We beſeech thee to hear us, and the like, is in the ancient Liturgies called ἐκτενὴς, the vehement, fervent, importunate form of ſupplication.

c. Ζωσιμᾶν

V. 12. Conſidered] The word Ζωσιμᾶν is ſo neer in likeneſſe (though far enough off in the nature and ſignification of it) to σπεύδων, that it is very poſſible one of theſe may here by the tranſcriber be put for the other. And indeed the ſignification of the latter σπεύδων making haſt ſeems that which is fitter for the turn in this place, where being left alone in the ſtreet by the Angel, he was in reaſon to make haſt to ſome place of ſafety and privacy, and ſuch was that which he here choſe. If this conjecture (which I mention only as ſuch, having no authority for it,) be not too remote, then may it alſo probably belong to another place, c. 14. 6. ζωσιδόντες καὶ ἔφυγον, perhaps for σπεύδοντες, they made haſt and fled, as out of a great danger.

d. Ὑπακοήν. V. 13. Hearken] Ὑπακοήν Cant. 5. 7. is proportionable to the καλεῖν precedent, anſwering a call. So Iſa. 50. 2. and 56. 11. So in Plutarch, he that goes to anſwer him that knocks at the dore, is ſaid ὑπακούειν, to hearken, and anſwer.

e. Ἀγγέλος αὐτοῦ. V. 15. His Angel] That the word Αγγελος, which by way of excellency is ſet to denote the immortal Spirits attendant on God and miniſtring to him, doth primarily, and originally, and in vulgar uſe ſignifie a meſſenger, and from thence onely comes to denote thoſe Spirits, becauſe they are meſſengers of God, employed by him, there is little doubt or queſtion: And conſequently 'tis as certain, that it may ſignifie here no more then a meſſenger from S. Peter; ſo doth Ἀγγέλος μου, Mat. 11. 10. Mar. 1. 2. Lu. 7. 27. my meſſenger, being ſpoken of John Baptiſt; ſo Lu. 7. 24. ἄγγελοι Ἰωάννου the meſſengers of John, and Lu. 9. 32. ἀπέστειλεν ἀγγέλους, he ſent meſſengers; and ſo ſure Ἀγγέλοι ἐκκλησιῶν the ἄγγελοι ἐκκλησιῶν, the Angels of the Churches were not thoſe immortal Spirits, Rev. 1. 19. but as the Apoſtles ſent meſſengers to ſeveral Churches, who were to doe according to their appointment, (ſee Note on Joh. 20. b.) and ſome in their ſtead to rule and govern there, ſo were theſe the rulers of the Churches, appointed by the Apoſtles. So the Hebrew מלאך ſignifies indifferently any who hath any command or meſſage from a maſter, and is rendred πᾶς 1 Sam. 25. 42. a ſervant, πρεσβὺς a meſſenger or Embaſſadour, Num. 21. 21. and מניר is rendred ἄγγελος 2 Sam. 15. 13. from נגיר nuntiavit, yea and עבד ſervus, miniſter, is rendred ἄγγελος Iſa. 37. 24. from an old Hebrew אלך or לאך reteined ſtill in the Arabick dialect for a meſſenger or legate. The only queſtion therefore will be, of theſe two poſſible notions of the word which is the fitter and more probable for this place: and for the rendring it meſſenger and not Angel, I ſhall only ſay, that the ſtory will thereby be very clear and intelligible, thus, That Peter knocked at the dore, and Rhode asking who was there, he anſwered, Peter; thereupon ſhe knew his voice, and aſſured them within that Peter was there: they having not heard the voice, but only hearing her affirm confidently that he was there, thought that ſome meſſenger had come from Peter, and made uſe of his name, and that ſhe had by miſtake believed it to be Peter himſelf; and ſo they thought they muſt reconcile the difficulty betwixt the conceived impoſſibility of Peters being there, on the one ſide, and the maids affirming confidently that he was there, on the other ſide, viz. by this medium betwixt both, that a meſſenger ſent from Peter was at the dore, who made uſe of his name to obtain admiſſion. Whatſoever can be ſaid for the other rendring, will, I conceive, have more difficulty in it. And it is not impoſſible or improbable, that the ἄγγελος Joh. 5. 4. that went at a certain ſeaſon to move the water of Bethesda, may be ſo rendred alſo, not for an Angel of God in a viſible ſhape, but for an officer, ſervant, meſſenger, that was wont to be ſent at certain ſeaſons of the year, probably at the feaſts, to move the water, upon which it became medicinable; ſee Note on Joh. 5. a.

13. And Paul and all that were in his company, except John, who returned to Jerusalem, went by sea from Paphos to Perga, a place famous for the Temple of Diana.

14. But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, and went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and sate down.

15. And after the reading of the Law and the Prophets, the ᵉ Rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on.]

And after the reading of the lessons, one out of the Law, the other out of the Prophets, it being the custome for the Jewish doctors to expound, and apply some part of Scripture to the instruction of the people, the chief persons of the assembly which were present sent to Paul and his associates, to know whether they were prepared to doe so. ᵉ

17. The God of Israel chose Abraham, &c. and promised to blesse and multiply his seed, and accordingly performed it, encreasing them to a very great number, even at the time when they were sojourners and slaves (and their children appointed to be killed, as soon as they were born) in Ægypt, and with many wonderfull miracles at last brought them out from thence.

26. Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this salvation sent.]

26. And now brethren, both Jewes and Proselytes, this Gospel, which Christ thus brought into the world, is sent to be proclaimed and made known to you.

* dwelt κατοικοῦντες † not knowing him condemned him, and fulfilled the savings of the prophets, τὰς φωνὰς τῶν προφητῶν ἀναγινωσκομένας, ἐπληρωσαν.

27. For the Sanhedrim, and people of Jerusalem, that then was, did not understand him to be the Messias, which they might have done, if they had considered the predictions of the Prophets conteined in those lessons and portions of Scripture (especially prophetick,) which every Sabbath day are read in their Synagogues, but adjudged him to death, and in so doing fulfilled those very prophecies which they understood not, yet pretended to understand and value so much, for they said it should be so. ᵍ

28. And though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate, that he should be slain.]

28. And though he were perfectly innocent, no capital accusation produced against him, yet by their importunity they forced Pilate to condemne him to be crucified.

29. And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.]

29. And when by this doing they had not more acted their own malice, then fulfilled the prophecies concerning the Messias (according to what he himself said, It is finish'd, and then gave up the ghost, then the Officers took him down from the crosse and put him into a tombe, sealed it up, and watched it, secured him by all wayes imaginable.

30. But God raised him from the dead.]

30. And yet after all this, God raised him from the dead.

promiſe God hath now fulfilled in raiſing Jeſus from the dead. Of which alſo that in the ſecond Pſalme was a prophecy, when to David after his great perſecutions it was ſaid, that God had now begotten him, thereupon calling him his ſon; that is, ſet him upon his throne, and given him that title of greateſt dignity, and which is in Scripture the title of Kings, as on whom is enſtated that power over men which belongs originally to none but God, and derivatively to none but thoſe on whom God beſtowes it, who conſequently are called both children of the moſt High, and Gods, Pſal. 82. 1. 6. (as thoſe that are made like unto another, are, to expreſſe that ſimilitude, called his ſons, and ſometimes have his name communicated to them.)

34. To the ſame purpoſe alſo, that God ſhould not only raiſe him from the dead,

34. And as concerning that he raiſed him up from the dead, now no more to returne to corruption, he ſaid on this wiſe, I will give you the i ſure mercies of David.]

but alſo ſecure him never to dye any more, (for Lazarus and others that were once raiſed, dyed again) are thoſe two other known prophecies, one Iſa. 55. 3. I will give you the ſure mercies &c. the expreſſion of an everlaſting Covenant, ſpoken literally to the people of Iſrael, that God would perpetuate to them the mercy promiſed to David, that of giving one of his ſeed to ſit on his throne, (which had been for ſome time interrupted, but ſhould now be perpetuated to them upon their obedience) but here accommodated to Chriſt, that though he were crucified, yet he ſhould riſe again, and after that never dye any more, that is, that Chriſt, under the title of the ſon of David, ſhould be given to the Jews not onely in a mortall condition, as David was, but in a firme immutable ſtate; which could not be true of him, if he had not been raiſed from the dead, and aſſumed to heaven, never to dye any more.

35. And to that moſt clearly belongs that other place, Pſal. 16. 11.

35. Wherefore he ſaith alſo in another Pſalme, [Thou ſhalt not ſuffer thine Holy one to ſee corruption.]

36. For if thoſe words ſhould be applyed to David perſonally, they could have no truth in them, for he having lived his term or ſpace of naturall life, and therein ruled the people over whom God was pleaſed to ſet him, dyed a naturall death, and never roſe again, but his body was putrified in the earth.

36. * For David after he had ſerved his own generation by the will of God, fell on ſleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and ſaw corruption.]

* For David indeed in his own generation having ſerved the counſell of God, δαβὶδ μὲν γὰρ ἰδίᾳ γενεᾷ ὑπηρετήσας τῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ βουλῇ

37. But he in whom that prophecy is completely fulfilled, that is Chriſt, being ſent by God into the world, and crucified, and by the power of God raiſed from the dead the third day (before the time came wherein bodies naturally putrifie, viz. 72. houres after death, wherein the revolution of humors is accompliſhed) never came to dye again, or putrifie at all.

37. But he whom God raiſed again ſaw no corruption.]

38. This therefore is the meſſage we bring, the Goſpell we preach unto you, that this

38. Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you forgiveneſſe of ſins.]

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Ἀνθύπατ☉.

V. 7. The Deputy] That Sergius Paulus ſhould here be called ἀνθύπατ☉ Proconſul in Cyprus, v. 4. hath ſome difficulty in it, it being reſolved by Strabo, l. 14. p. 470. that after the Romans taking this Iſland, it became a Prætorian Province, Ρωμαῖοι κατέχον τὴν νῆσον, καὶ γίγονε στρατηγικὴ ἐπαρχία καθ' αὑτήν. And again, p. 471. mentioning the ſubduing of it, and poſſeſſing it by Cato, ὃς ἐκείνε, ſaith he, ἐγένετο ἐπαρχία ἡ νῆσος, καθάπερ καὶ νῦν ἐστι, στρατηγική, from that time the Iſland became, as now it is, a Prætorian Province; which concludes it under a Prætor, not a Proconſul. And ſo Zonaras on the 8th. Canon of Epheſus, παρὰ τῆ Δυκὸς Ἀντιοχείας ἐστέλλετο ἐκεῖ στρατηγὸς, from the Duke of Antioch a Commander was ſent to Cyprus: on which pretence it was, that the Biſhop of Antioch did at the time of that Council pretend right of ordaining the Biſhops of Cyprus. This difficulty Baronius indeavours to remove, Anno Chr. 46. n. 11. by conceiving that the Proconſul of Cilicia had the adminiſtration of this Prætorian Province alſo, and conſequently that this Sergius Paulus was now this Proconſul of Cilicia. This he collects from Sigonius De Antiq. Jure Provinc. l. 1. c. 14. who affirmes it of P. Lentulus and ſome others, that being Proconſuls of Cilicia, they adminiſtred Cyprus alſo, which, ſaith Baronius, non illi tantùm ſed & ſucceſſoribus eſſe æquè conceſſum, par eſt credere, it is reaſonable to believe not of him onely, but of his ſucceſſors as well as of him. But the words in Sigonius do ſufficiently refute this concluſion; for he having indeed affirmed that this honor of holding Cyprus together with Cilicia was granted by the Senate not onely to P. Lentulus, but alſo to Ap. Claudius and M. Cicero, as ſpecial honors deſigned to thoſe three Proconſuls, addes, Poſt Ciceronis autem proconſulatum, ut à Ciliciæ Præſide tres Aſiaticæ Diœceſes, ſic etiam Cypri adminiſtratio ablata eſt, ac proprius, ut ex lege debuit, Prætor cum ſuo Quæſtore in eam miſſus eſt, After Cicero's Proconſulſhip, as the three Aſiatick Diœceſes were taken away from the Preſident of Cilicia, ſo was the adminiſtration of Cyprus alſo, and a peculiar Prætor with his Quæſtor ſent thither, according as by the Law it ought to be. And therefore ſo it muſt be ſuppoſed to be at this time of Claudius's reign, long after Cicero's time. It remains therefore that the moſt obvious way of removing this difficulty be reſolved on, as the moſt true, viz. that the στρατηγὸς or Commander of this Prætorian Province is here improperly called ἀνθύπατ☉ Proconſul, not in a ſtrict acception of that word, but as that is more looſely taken for any Governor ſent thither by the Romane power. Accordingly the Vulgar Latine calls him onely Præſidem Præſident or Governour; a title uſed in the place newly cited from Sigonius, for the Proconſul of Cilicia, which notes the promiſcuous acception of ſuch words. To which may be added, that the title of Proconſul, belonging duely to the Governours of Cyprus for ſome time, viz. whileſt Lentulus, Claudius, and Cicero, Proconſuls of Cilicia held Cyprus, it might now abuſively and vulgarly continue to the Prætor of Cyprus, though properly it did not; eſpecially conſidering the flattering nature of the Greeks, which would ſtill beſtow the moſt magnificent titles upon their Governours.

b. Ελύμας

V. 8. Elymas] The word עאלם alem, or עלים alim in Arabick ſignifies knowing or skilfull, and is applyed to thoſe that know things divine and humane, from עלם alam, ſcivit: and ſo μάγος, perhaps מנוש from ענש, which in Syriack and Arabick ſignifies ſcrutari or explorare, to ſearch, will ſignifie the ſame alſo. From this concurrence of the words ἐλύμας and μάγος in the ſame notion, 'tis clear that neither of them here was a proper name (that having before been ſet down to be Barjeſus v. 6.) but both, in ſeverall languages, the title of their wiſe men, skilled in the ſecret learning, whom we ordinarily call Magicians; and μάγος being in ſo common uſe among the Græcians, though perhaps of an Eaſtern origination too, is here ſet as an interpretation of the other.

c. Σαὺλ Παῦλ☉

V. 9. Alſo called Saul] Severall accounts are given of Sauls two names. S. Ambroſe Serm. 31. ſaith that he was at his Baptiſme named Paul by Ananias. S. Auſtin Tract. 72. in Pſal. will have it an effect of his Converſion, and ſo of his own impoſing, and that his humility would not own that name of a proud tall King of Iſrael, but preferred the contrary of Paulus a little one. Agreeable to which it is that he calls himſelf ἐλαχιστότερος πάντων ἁγίων

(a word made by himſelf on purpoſe) leſſe then the leaſt of Saints. S. Jerome on the Epiſt. to Philemon, will have it a token of this his firſt victory over the heatheniſme of Sergius Paulus here (in this Chap. where he is firſt called by this name) whoſe name he was therefore to bear by way of triumph, as Scipio of Africanus and the like. But Origen in Pref. on the Epiſt. to the Romans, ſaith that he being a Jew born in the City of Rome, had at his circumciſion two names, Saul a Jewiſh, and Paulus a Roman name. And this is moſt agreeable to the form of ſpeech here, Σαῦλος ὁ καὶ Παῦλος But Saul, who is alſo Paul, noting him to have had two names at once, not to have changed one for the other.

d. Ῥᾳδιουργία

V. 10. Miſchief Ῥᾳδιουργία] ſignifies forgery, cheating, falſeneſſe, deceit: ſo in Plutarch, making a falſe Will is ῥᾳδιούργημα· ſo Act. 18. 14. If it were ἀδίκημα ἢ ῥᾳδιούργημα πονηρὸν, any injury, (any piece of injuſtice) or any roguy forgery or cheat; ſo Phavorinus Ῥᾳδιουργεῖν, μὴ πανουργίας τι διαφέρειν, to doe any thing with cunning; and Ῥᾳδιουργία, πονηρία, πλαστοκαφία (it ſhould be πλαστογραφία, for ſo Heſychius, Ῥᾳδιουργὸς πλαστογράφος) δολιότης, knavery, forgery, deceit; and ſo likewiſe Heſychius, Ῥᾳδιουργῶ (it ſhould be Ῥᾳδιουργεῖ) κακοποιεῖ, δεινοποιῶ, doing wicked or cunning things, and Ῥᾳδιουργὸς (beſide πλαστογράφος a forger) πονηρὸς μηχανουργὸς πολυμήχανος, a wicked (I ſuppoſe without a comma) contriver, or cunning, ſubtile perſon.

e. Ἀρχισυνάγωγοι

V. 15. Rulers of the Synagogue] The Synagogues in the regions of Judæa, not alwaies ſignifying their Conſiſtories or Judicatures, but alſo their places for religious duties, hearing the Law and Prophets read, was anſwerable to the cœtus Eccleſiaſtici, the religious aſſemblies (ſaith Bertram de Rep. Jud. p. 154.) of the Levites and Prophets inſtituted at firſt by Joſhua and Samuel by preſcript of law. The Archiſynagogi therefore are parallel to, and ſupply the place of thoſe Levites and Prophets, thoſe that officiated there, of which conſequently there were more then one in the ſame Synagogue; and ſo c. 11. 8. and 17. Criſpus and Soſthenes are Archiſynagogi of the ſynagogue at Corinth. And the ancient Gr. & Lat. MS. ch. 14. 2. in ſtead of οἱ δὲ ἀπειθοῦντες Ἰουδαῖοι, reads οἱ δὲ ἀρχισυνάγωγοι τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες τῆς συναγωγῆς, making expreſs difference between the rulers, or chief, of the ſynagogue, that officiated there, and the Rulers of the Conſiſtory or judicature.

f. Ἐτροφοφόρησεν

V. 18. Suffered he their manners] That ἐτροφοφόρησεν carried as a nurſe, is the right reading, there is little doubt, this being the very word twice uſed by the Septuagint, Deut. 1. 31. ἐτροφοφόρησέ σε ὁ κύριος ὁ θεός σου, ὡς εἴ τις τροφοφορήσαι ἄνθρωπος τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ. So the Romane and Baſil editions have it, for that which is in the Hebrew, hath born thee, as a parent, or nurſe, doth a child, not only bearing in armes, but feeding and ſuſtaining, (As ſure God did thoſe Iſraelites, when he ſent them Quailes and Manna, ἄρτον ἕτοιμον ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ, bread ready dreſt, and ſent down, from heaven for them) and farther undertaking all the trouble of his education, and therefore the Syriack interpreter uſes here a word which ſignifies feeding or nouriſhing. And ſo Heſychius, Ἐτροφόρησεν, ἔτρεφεν, (it ſhould be ἔθρεψεν) bearing as a nurſe, that is, feeding; and ſo Phavorinus alſo. Thus in Macarius ſpeaking of a mother and her little child, ἀναλαμβάνει, ſaith he, καὶ παιδεύει, καὶ τροφοφορεῖ ἐν πολλῇ στοργῇ, ſhe takes up, ſtroakes, and nurſes with great affection. And 2. Mac. 7. 27. when the mother entreats the ſon to pity her, τροφοφορήσασαν that bare, and did for him as a nurſe doth, (anſwerable to the Hebrew נָשָׂא, αἴρω, βαστάζω, to take up, or carry.) This did God miraculouſly even to thoſe murmurers: But ſuffering his vengeances to fall upon them, and ſweeping them all away that came out of Ægypt, but Caleb and Joſhua, he cannot ſo fitly be ſaid to have born their manners, or to have born with them.

g. Κρίναντες, πληρώσαντες

V. 27. Fulfilled] That there is in this verſe a trajection, or σύγχυσις, there can be no queſtion; the κρίναντες in the latter part belongs to the τοῦτον in the former, and the ἐπλήρωσαν to the τὰς φωνὰς, they adjudged or ſentenced him, and they fulfilled or accompliſhed them. And ſuch trajections are ordinary among writers, and go for elegancies, where they are uſed. The onely difficulty will be, to what ſenſe the καὶ before τὰς ſhall be rendred. For either that may couple the ἀγνοήσαντες and κρίναντες, and then the conſtruction will lye thus, For they that dwelt at Jeruſalem, not knowing, and (conſequently) condemning him, fulfilled the ſayings, or voices, or words, of the Prophets; or it may poſſibly not be a Copulative, but (as oft it doth) Emphatically affect the words to which it is joyned, viz. τὰς φωνὰς τῶν προφητῶν τὰς κατὰ πᾶν σάββατον ἀναγινωσκομένας, and then the rendring will be, not knowing him, they fulfilled the words of the Prophets, even thoſe words that are every Sabbath read in their ears (and therefore ſhould in reaſon be taken notice of by them) in, or by, thus condemning him. But the former of theſe is the moſt probable.

h. Ἀναστήσας

V. 32. Raiſed up] The word ἀναστήσας raiſing up ſignifies to raiſe up from the dead, and ſo doth ἐγείρειν too; but not ſo onely, nor ſo primarily, nor neceſſarily ſo, but when either the addition of ἐκ νεκρῶν from the dead, or ſome other phraſe of that nature, or circumſtance of the Context requires that ſenſe. For beſides that notion, there is another very ordinary, and proper to it, as when God is ſaid to raiſe up a prophet, that is, to ſend him, and give him commiſſion to perform the office of a Prophet: this is an uſuall notion of the word. So Act. 3. 22. & 7. 37. Προφήτην ὑμῖν ἀναστήσει he ſhall raiſe you up a prophet; and ſo Act. 2. 30. ſpeaking of Gods promiſe to David, from the fruit of his loynes according to the fleſh, ἀναστήσειν Χριστὸν, that he would raiſe up Chriſt, bring the Meſſias into the world. And the mention of the Reſurrection in the next verſe will not be able to aſſigne any other ſenſe to that place, becauſe that may come in from the force of the ſitting on his throne, which is added to it, it being clear, that as that was promiſed of the Meſſias, ſo it was not performed till his Reſurrection. So when of Theudas Act. 5. 36. of Judas of Galilee v. 37. it is ſaid, ἀνέστη he roſe up, a falſe prophet ariſing of himſelf, or raiſing himſelf, not raiſed by God (according as among the Hebrews the word נִבָּא for propheſying doth in hithpael, the reciprocal conjugation, generally ſignifie a falſe prophecie, ſuch as one receives from himſelf, and not from God) ſo Heb. 7. 11. What need is there ἕτερον ἀνίστασθαι ἱερέα, that there ſhould ariſe, or be raiſed, another prieſt? and again v. 15. And thus ſome may conceive that it ſhould ſignifie in this place. But 1 the Context here, and 2. the importance of the ſecond Pſalme incline it the other way. For here the reſurrection of Chriſt v. 30. is the point inſiſted on; and though his Crucifixion be firſt mention'd in order to that, v. 27. yet there is no mention of his coming into the world, or either his eternal, or temporal generation. And ſo in the following words, v. 34. they again belong to Gods raiſing him from the dead. And for the parallel betwixt begetting and reſurrection, it might be made clear in many particulars. As for the ſecond Pſalme, that clearly belongs to the ſetting up David King after the death of Saul, and conqueſt over his enemies; and that is aptly expreſs'd by Gods begetting him, and his being Gods ſon: For as ſimilitude denominates children, the children of God are they that are like him, and reſemble him in any thing, and the children of Abraham are they that doe the works of Abraham; and as the making man after Gods image, ſignified signified his likeneſſe unto God in power, having dominion, &c. Gen. 1. 28. ſo being the ſons of God, and having the title of Gods, Pſal. 82. 6. belongs to Governours, and conſequently ſignifies ſo in that ſecond Pſalme, and is but another phraſe to ſignifie what is plainly ſaid v. 6. yet have I ſet my King upon my holy hill of Sion. And thus alſo in the application, Chriſt the ſon of David being raiſed from the dead, as David reſcued from the great dangers that encompaſs'd him, is now ſet upon his throne by his exaltation; and that is Gods begetting him his ſon here, and is the thing to which the Jewes referred when they called the Meſſias ſometime the King of Iſrael, ſometime, which is all one, the ſon of God. And ſo Heb. 1. 5. this ſaying of God to him, Thou art my ſon, &c. and, I will be to him a father, and he ſhall be to me a ſon, is brought as a proof of his being ſuperiour to the Angels ver. 4. which was done by his Reſurrection and exaltation, Epheſ. 1. 20, 21.

i. Ὅσια πιστὰ

V. 34. Sure mercies] The Hebrew in Iſa. 55. 3. from whence this is taken hath חסדי דוד הנאמנים, where the word חסדי in the plural, noting beneficia, or beneficentiam, mercies, or mercifulneſſe, is by the Greek rendred ὅσια (from the ſenſe of the Singular חסיד which ſignifies both beneficus and pius, charitable and godly) as if it were onely pia godly from the ſingular pius, whereas the Adjective plural is taken Subſtantively (as many Neutrals in Latine are) for acts of kindneſſe, mercies, &c. and ſo הנאמים Adjectively joyned with it, ſignifies the faithfull, durable, laſting mercies of David, that is, of Chriſt the ſon of David, and ſo this place out of the Prophet is brought as a proof of Chriſts reſurrection. For as the mercies promiſed the Jewes in having David for their King, had with the end of his life determin'd alſo, unleſſe his ſon Solomon, and after him others, had ſat upon the throne; and as, when they were carried into Captivity, the perpetuating theſe benefits of David to them, that is, being govern'd by their own Kings, ſignifies their return from their Captivity: ſo Chriſt, being called David, or meant in a ſecond myſtical ſenſe when David is named, and being (crucified and ſo) dead, as David was, unleſſe he had withall riſen again, that Covenant, thoſe mercies promiſed by and in him to the world, could not have been πιστὰ firm, ſure, faithfull, ratified for duration or continuance, but had ended with his life; whereas now by his Reſurrection and Aſcenſion to heaven they ſtill continue, and are made good unto us. Thus, ſaith Athanaſius of Chriſts ſacrifice, τετελείωκε τὸ πᾶν, καὶ πιστὰ γέγονε μένειν διὰ παντὸς, it perfected all, and became faithful: wherein? why, in that it remaineth for ever. And again ſaith he, Ἡ κατὰ νόμον ἱερωσύνη χθὲς καὶ σήμερον καὶ θανάτῳ παρήμειβε τοὺς προϊσταμένους, ὁ δὲ Κύριος ἀπαράβατον καὶ ἀδιάδεκτον ἔχων τὴν ἀρχιερωσύνην, πιστὸς γέγονεν ἀρχιερεὺς, διαμένων ἀεὶ, The legal prieſthood by time and death paſſeth from one to another, but Chriſt having an high prieſthood which paſſeth not from him to any ſucceſſour, did therein become a faithful high prieſt (Heb. 2. 17.) enduring, or, continuing, for ever: where the word πιστὸς in that Epiſtle to the Hebrews is interpreted by that Father to ſignifie durable, continuing for ever.

k. Ἴδετε οἱ καταφρονηταὶ

41. Behold ye deſpiſers] The words ἴδετε οἱ καταφρονηταὶ Behold ye deſpiſers, which from the Septuagints reading the Apoſtle here embraceth, are very different from what not onely the Vulgar Latine, and our Engliſh, but alſo the Chaldee, and the Interlineary retain in the place of Habakuk c. 1. 5. from whence it is clearly cited, the Hebrew בגוים being by them read as if it were ב and גוים, in gentibus among the heathen, which the Chaldee read בעממי Gentes. Hereupon learned men have made conjectures, that the Greek interpreters had ſome other reading: Beza, and Capellus, and from him Grotius's Poſthumous Annotations have mentioned בוגדים, and Capellus hath thought בוזים poſſible. But Mr. Pocock by his acquaintance with the Arabick writers, hath ſuperſeded theſe conjectures, and given aſſurance that בגוים was the word, which as the Greek rendred καταφρονηταὶ deſpiſers, ſo the Syriack in Habakuk expreſs by מרחא arrogantes, tranſgreſſors, and the Arabick by negligentes, taking the word for the plural of בגוא from בגא, which though it be not met with in the Bible, yet may be reſolved to have been anciently in uſe among the Hebrews, both by the notions which the Greek and Syriack and Arabick interpreters had of it, and by the freqnent uſe of the word in the Arabick, for injuſtus fuit, ſe ſuper aliquem extulit, à vero declinavit, receſſit, inſolenter ſe geſſit, mentitus eſt, faſtuosè inceſſit, being unrighteous, proud, tranſgreſſor, inſolent, lyer, faſtuous, as he there cites out of the Arabick Grammarians, ſhewing that the Syriack מרחא maroche, is by Bar Ali in his Syro-Arabick Lexicon expounded by the ſame word by which Aljauharius renders Albagyo. As for the latter words of this verſe, though ſome have been willing to make ſome alteration, yet there will be little need of it: for והתמהו clearly ſignifies καὶ θαυμάζητε, and wonder, and then תמהו that followes, will be as fitly ἀφανίσητε, not ſo, as that ſignifies a diſſolution or deſtruction, but as in the Arabick 'tis uſed for any change to the worſe, as when meat hath loſt its ſmell or taſt, and is applied to ſuch a change as is in one aſtoniſh'd or confounded. So R. Tanchum, the former word ſignifies admiration, the latter amazement or confuſion. Where though the literal notation of the words do not predict the ruine or deſtruction of the Jewes, yet the rational importance doth, to all that are not thus moved by admiration, and ſhame, to imbrace the Goſpell now preach'd unto them; for as thoſe that did ſo were the σωζόμενοι reſcued from the approaching deſtruction, ſo all that ſtill ſtood out ſhould certainly be deſtroyed.

l. Ἐχομένῳ

V. 44. Next Sabbath] In ſtead of ἐρχομένῳ Σαββάτῳ the coming, or approaching Sabbath, the Kings MS. and ſome others read ἐχομένῳ the next, or adjoyning, ſabbath, as πόλεις ἐχόμενα have been ſhewed to ſignifie the adjoyning cities, Note on Mar. 1. b.

m. Τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν

48. Ordained to eternal life] That this phraſe τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον is here a notation of the Proſelytes among the Jewes, which were allowed by them to have partem in ſeculo futuro, a portion in the age to come (whether that ſignifie Heaven, or the kingdome of the Meſſias) without ſubmitting to their whole Law, but only to the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah, hath been not unhappily conjectured by M. Mede, And the context is ſomewhat favourable to it: The company conſiſted of Jewes and Proſelytes, ver. 43. many of thoſe Proſelytes (as well as Jewes) followed Paul and Barnabas after the diſſolving the aſſembly; and their doing ſo, and the form of the Apoſtles exhortation to them, ἐπιμένειν to abide, or perſevere, ſignifies, that they were already believers. Then ver. 45. The Jewes contradicted, and ſpake againſt this doctrine, and therefore, ſay Paul and Barnabas, ſeeing ye judge your ſelves unworthy of everlaſting life, that is, ſeeing you behave your ſelves as thoſe that look not after, care not for, your eternal weale, Behold, we turn to the Gentiles, v. 46. which when the Gentiles heard, that is, the people of other nations that were there among the Jewes, they rejoiced, and glorified the word of God, v. 48. And upon that it is immediately added, that as many as were τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, diſpoſed, or in readineſſe for, or to, eternall life, believed. In this conjecture there is a faire appearance of truth for the whole of it. And for one part of it it is undoubted, that thoſe who are here ſaid to believe were moſt of them, if not all, ſuch Proſelytes of the Gentiles; and thoſe again not the Proſelytes of juſtice which had undertaken the whole Moſaical law (for they were as deeply engaged in oppoſing Chriſtianity, as the moſt refractary Jewes, and accordingly ver. 50. the Proſelyte women, which were zealous for the Law, were exaſperated by the Jewes; ſee Note on Mat. 23. d.) but eſpecially thoſe of the gates, which received the precepts of the ſons of Noah, but were not poſſeſs'd with the Jewiſh prejudices againſt Chriſtianity. But then 1. it no way appears that all the Proſelytes of this ſort did now receive the faith at this one time, and conſequently it cannot be affirmed, in the latitude of [ὅσοι, as many] which ſeems to include all of the ſort (whatever it is) that is noted by the phraſe. Or if that word may be ſo qualified, as not to extend to all, yet there is no propriety of the phraſe τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν, to confine it to that ſort of Proſelytes, any more then there is to confine the like phraſe εὐθετοι εἰς βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, fit for the kingdome of God, Lu. 2. 62. to this ſort of Proſelytes, which there appears not at all to belong to them. Of that phraſe ſee Note d. on Joh. 6. where it appears to ſignifie one that by Gods prevenient graces hath that qualification wrought in him, which is the peculiar temper wherein the Goſpel takes root, and proſpers, the honeſt heart, or ſincere deſire of reforming, and living piouſly. For theſe, when the Goſpel is preach'd to all, are peculiarly the men that lay hold on it, and bring forth the fruits of it: And theſe are very fitly deſcribed by this phraſe here, and accordingly it is ſaid that as many as were ſuch, believed, or turned Chriſtians. Now for the main difficulty, how this phraſe [τεταγμένοι, &c.] ſhould come to ſignifie theſe, I ſhall enlarge a while by viewing the nature of the word τάττειν, to order, or ordain, among writers, ſacred and profane. In Scripture it often ſignifies to appoint, as that is to command or conſtitute. So Act. 22. 10. ὦ Κύριε τί με δεῖ ποιεῖν, all things which are appointed thee to doe, is all one with τί σε δεῖ ποιεῖν, what thou oughteſt, what is thy duty, to doe, in the parallel place, ch. 9. 6. So Act. 15. 2. ἔταξαν they commanded, or gave order, or appointed, and Mat. 28. 16. the mountain ὃ ἐτάξατο αὐτοῖς Ἰησοῦς, which Jeſus had appointed, or commanded. But more frequently 'tis uſed in the military ſenſe, in the notion wherein the Books of diſpoſing or marſhalling armies are called Tactickes, and in which διατάγαι ἀγγέλων, diſpoſitions of Angels, Act. 7. 53. ſignifies troops, or hoſts, of Angels. So of the Centurion, Lu. 7. 8. ὑπὸ ἐξουσίαν τασσόμενος, he that hath ſuch a place in the army, as (though he be a commander) to be himſelf under others; in which ſenſe Rom. 13. 1. the powers that are, are τεταγμέναι ὑπὸ Θεοῦ, conſtituted by God, and placed under him. And by Analogie from hence 'tis applied to other things, as 1 Cor. 16. 15. ἔταξαν ἑαυτὸς εἰς διακονίαν τοῖς ἁγίοις, they diſpoſed, or devoted, themſelves to that function, that part, as it were, of the Eccleſiaſtical militia, which conſiſted in miniſtring to the Saints. In the Tranſlators of the Old Teſtament, and writers of the Apocrypha, 'tis generally in the military ſenſe anſwerable to the Hebrew ערך; ſo Ezech. 44. 14. τάξουσιν αὐτὸς φυλάττειν φύλακας, they ſhall appoint, or diſpoſe, or marſhall, them to keep watches, which is ſpoken of the Temple, but as that repreſents an hoſt, and is uſually ſo called, (and thence Lu. 1. 8. τάξις ἐφημερείας, the order of his daily courſe, is in that ſenſe alſo) ſo 2 Mac. 15. 20. τῆς ἵππου κατὰ κέρας τεταγμένης, the horſe being ſo diſpoſed, or placed (as in Heſychius the word πρωτοστάτης is explained by ὁ πρῶτος παρὰ τὸ κέρας (not κήρας as 'tis corruptly read) τῆς παρατάξεως τεταγμένος, he that is placed firſt neer the horn of the Battalia) and 1 Mac. 5. 27. εἰς ἄυριον τάσσονται παρεμβαλεῖν, they are diſpoſed, or marſhalled, ſo that to morrow they may encampe. So 2 Kin. 15. 19. ἐκτάσσειν τὸν λαὸν, is to muſter the people. Among profane writers 'tis ſometimes to diſpoſe, or put in order; ſo the ſhepheard doth τάττειν ἀγέλων, order his flocke, in Philoſtr. de vit. Apoll. l. 3. c. 3. And in * Apſyrtus, (in the ἱππατρ.) after Σβατινόμενος ἐν τάγμαῖς, having fought in ranks (in the military ſenſe) follows within a line ἀνατεταξάμενος ἓν ταῦτα, having diſpoſed theſe things in order, (that is of writing) προσφωνῶ σοι I addreſſe my ſelfe to thee, &c. In the military ſenſe nothing is more ordinary, ἐτάσσοντο ὡς εἰς μάχην, they were marſhalled as for a fight, in Thucyd. l. 3. (and ἀνταξάμενοι in Julian, and others, is ſimply for enemies) ſo Ἕλληνες τεταγμένοι προσῆσαν, the Grecians being marſhalled, &c. l. 2. as in Elian τεταγμένοι are ſouldiers in their ranks in ſervices (as ἄτακτοι on the contrary are thoſe that are disbanded) and τάγμα a band or troop of ſuch. And in this ſenſe they that are truly pious, ſincerely and honeſtly diſpoſed to do whatſoever God requires of them towards eternall life, (whether that ſignifie Chriſtianity, the preſent part of that life which ſhall end in eternity, or whether the life of glory in another world) may fitly be ſaid to be τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, enrolled in the number of thoſe that look after eternall life, marſhalled, ſtanding ready, in order, in rank, centuriati, to eternall life: and ſo as they that 1 Cor. 15. 16. ἑαυτὸς ἔταξαν εἰς διακονίαν, devoted themſelves to the miniſtration, might be expreſs'd by τεταγμένοι εἰς διακονίαν, devoted and ready for that; ſo here τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν, devoted and ready for life, will be all one with ὅσοι ἑαυτὸς ἔταξαν εἰς ζωὴν, they that devoted, addicted themſelves to eternal life, according to that ordinary cuſtom among ſacred writers, wherein the reciprocall Conjugation Hithpahel is expreſſed by the Greek paſſive, which is obſervable of compounds of this very word very frequently, as in ὑποτάσσεται to obey, Rom. 10. 3. and 13. 1, 5. Heb. 12. 9. James 4. 7. In all which the paſſive ſignifies either to ſubject himſelf, or Neutrally to obey, ſubmit, and ſo the contrary ἀντιτάσσομαι, Rom. 13. 2. Jam. 4. 6. and 5. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. to be diſobedient. The ſhort is, that they that having renounced the heathen Idols of their Countries embraced the worſhip of the one onely true God, and the hope of eternall life, and ſo were εὐθετοι εἰς βασιλείαν Θεοῦ, well placed, or diſpoſed, in a good poſture toward the kingdome of God, are here thus expreſs'd. This is that which is expreſs'd Heb. 11. 6. by προσερχόμενοι εἰς τὸν Θεὸν, they that come to God, which is the paraphraſe of the word προσήλυτοι Proſelytes, ſo called from coming to, or indeed the ſame word participially ſet, and of all ſuch it is required to believe, what is there ſaid, that there is a God, and that he is a rewarder of all that diligently ſeek him, that is, that Gentiles (other nations beſides Jews) if they ſeek God may come to eternall life, and conſequently as many as put forward to the exerciſe of piety, which is one part of eternall life in Scripture (this is life eternall to know thee, that is, live according to thy commandments) and to the expectation of a reward, which is the other part, are diſtinctly capable of this title here, and there of that. This was acknowleged by Chryſoſtome, when he explained this phraſe by ἀφωρισμένοι τῷ Θεῷ, ſeparated to God, thoſe that had betaken themſelves to his onely ſervice; or, as * Procopius expreſſes it ſpeaking of the Gentiles, οἱ δὲ ἀρετῆς καὶ εὐσεβείας καταλαμπόμενοι εἰς τέκνα Θεοῦ, they that by virtue and piety were in procinctu for ſonnes of God, ready to be ſuch. I ſhall adde but one place more, and that out of Philo, where ſpeaking of the προσκείμενοι Θεῷ, they that were added to God, godly men, that gave up their names to the worſhip of God, he addes, οἱ τῷ παρὰ τῷ ὄντι Θεῷ τεταγμένοι τάξιν, ἀθάνατον βίον ζῶσιν, they being marſhalled in the rank next to the true God, live an immortal life: where the τεταγμένοι, &c. is all one with the προσκείμενοι Θεῷ, they that were added to God, that is, with the προσερχόμενοι Θεῷ, they that come come to God, that give themselves up to his service. And Baptisme among us being the form of our initiation to Christ, the ancient form of those that were to be baptized was, ἀποτάσσομαί σοι, Σατανᾶ καὶ συντάσσομαί σοι, Χριστέ (in this military sense, from whence 'tis called a Sacrament) I renounce thy service, O Satan, and I put my self, list my self, with thee, O Christ. That this phrase cannot reasonably be interpreted to any sense of divine predestination, may appear, 1. by the no-reasons that are producible to encline it that way. Those must be produced, if they are any, either from the Context, or the propriety of the phrase. From the Context no reason is pretended; but on the other side, the comparison here lying betwixt the Jews on one side, and the Gentiles on the other, of the Jews it is said, that they contradicted, and blasphemed, and so judged not themselves worthy of everlasting life, v. 46. which sure referres not to any decree from eternity past against their persons, absolutely considered, but only as contumacious unbelievers, uncapable of that salvation which was preached to them. And then in reason, and by laws of opposition, they that did believe of the Gentiles, must be those that were otherwise qualified then those Jews were, and so that qualification of pliable temper, will be the interpretation of the τεταγμένοι, &c. Not that all the Gentiles received the Gospel (which yet if it were true de facto, would be no argument against what is now said) but that as many of them as were thus qualified, received it. As for the phrase, that hath no propriety to incline that way: for 1. there is no intimation, or mention of God in the phrase, which would be necessary to restrain it to that sense of Gods predestination; 2ly, for the word πίστειν, which is rendred ordaining, and seems somewhat favourable that way, and is the only part of the phrase that doth so, there is no example of this being any where used for Gods eternall decree, but δείξειν, or προορίζειν, to determine or predetermine; 3ly, there is no preposition answerable to præ, before, in any part of the phrase, nor any thing else to supply that place, as πρὸ χρόνων αἰωνίων, or πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, before the foundation of the world, Ephes. 1. 4. Secondly, this may be resolved on by the reasons which stand in force against it. For 1. the word ὅσοι as many being an inclusive universal particle, it is not imaginable yet that all of that assembly that were predestin'd, and so all that could ever believe, or come to life, did believe that day. The believers of a city do not all come in thus, every one at the same time, but καθ' ἡμέραν daily, some one day, some another, Acts 2. 47. and some that were now negligent, or refractary, might after repent, and become more pliable, and Gods decree certainly would not shut them out, when they did so. 2dly, It is as unreasonable to determine, that all that did then believe, and receive the Gospel, were predestined to eternall salvation: those that believed at other times were not all predestined; thus Judas, we know, was not, Hymenæus was not: and believing here noting no more then receiving the faith, without any consideration of their persevering, or not persevering, it is evident of the stony ground, and of a multitude of Christians denoted thereby, that in time of temptation they fall away, and so are not (unless they return, and recover) predestin'd to salvation. 3dly, It is not to be thought that Luke, which wrote this, knew of that whole assembly of Gentiles, how many were predestin'd to salvation, nor consequently could he affirm it of them in that sense, or that none should ever believe, which this day did not*; whereas on the other side, he might by the effect conclude, that all that were rightly qualified at that time, did at that time receive and believe the Gospel preach'd to them, and all that did then truly believe, were so qualified, the obstinate and contumacious Jews and Proselytes opposing and persecuting it. Mean while it must be remembred that these qualifications are not pretended to have been originally from themselves, but from the preventing graces of God, to which it is to be acknowledged due, that they ever are pliable or willing to follow Christ, though not to his absolute decree of destining them, whatsoever they do, unto salvation.

CHAP. XIV.

Paraphrase.

1. AND it came to passe in Iconium, that they went both together into the Synagogue of the Jews, and [so spake that a great multitude both of the Jews, and also of the Greeks believed.]

1. convinced them so powerfully, that great store both of the Jews and the Greeks, Proselytes of the Jews, received the Faith.

2. But the unbelieving Jews * stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evill affected against the brethren.]

2. But the refractary Jewes incensed the Gentiles against the Apostles, v. 4. and all others which received the faith of Christ from them.

* stirred up the minds of the Gentiles, and made them evil affected ἐπήγειραν καὶ ἐκάκωσαν τὰς ψυχὰς

3. Long time therefore abode they [speaking † boldly in the Lord, which gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signes and wonders to be done by their hands.]

3. preaching the Gospel in their publick assemblies (see note on Joh. 7. a.) and God added his testimony to their preaching (see note on Heb. 13. d.) by enabling them to work miracles.

† publickly through the Lord, which παῤῥησιαζόμενοι ἐπὶ τῷ κυρίῳ τῷ

4. But the multitude of the city was divided, and part held with the Jews, and part with the Apostles.

5. * And when there was an assault made both of the Gentiles and also of the Jews with the rulers, to use them despightfully and to stone them,

6. They were ware of it, and fled unto Lystra, and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lyeth round about.

7. And there they preached the Gospel.

8. And there sate a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a creeple from his mothers wombe, who never had walked.

9. The same heard Paul speak, [who stedfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed,]

9. and Paul looking earnestly upon him, and either by his words, or by the discerning spirit which Paul had, perceiving that he believed that they were able to heal him,

10. Said with a loud voice, Stand up right on thy feet. [And he leaped and walked.]

10 And by the bare speaking of the word he was made so strong, that he leaped and walked.

* And as the Gentiles & Jewes were beat, ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο ὁρμὴ τῶν ἐθνῶν τε καὶ τῶν Ἰουδ.

every city, by faſting, and prayer, and impoſition of hands, they then took their leave of them, referring them to the good providence of Chriſt, whoſe faith they had received, to defend them, and to encreaſe all good things in them.

24. And after they had paſſed throughout Piſidia, they came to Pamphylia.

25. And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia:

26. And they came back to Antioch, from whence it was that they were ſent forth (ch. 13. 3) on this voyage, and that with ſolemn prayer and faſting, for the preaching of the Goſpel (ſee v. 3. and note on Heb. 13. d.) to theſe ſo many cities, of which they had now made an end, and ſo returned.

26. And thence ſailed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God, for the work which they fulfilled.]

27. and that it had pleaſed God, that by their preaching to the Jewes in the Gentile cities, many of the Gentiles had received Chriſtianity.

27. And when they were come, and had gathered the Church together, they rehearſed all that God had done with them, [and how he had opened the dore of faith unto the Gentiles.]

28. And there they abode long time with the Diſciples.

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

a. Ver. 17. παρέδωκεν.

V. 17. Rain from heaven] The reaſon of S. Pauls naming of rain from heaven, as a peculiar teſtimony of Gods power and goodneſs, ſeems to be taken from that notion which the Jewes had of it, expreſs'd by this ancient ſaying in Sanhedr. and in Chelek Taani, c. 8. §. 2. in Ein Iſrael, that there be three keyes not given to any Legate or Proxy (kept peculiarly in God's own hand) של חיה ושל גשמים ושל תחיית המתים, of life, of rain, of the reſurrection of the dead; making rain as immediate and incommunicable a gift gift of God, as either giving, or restoring of life. Hence it is frequently styled by them, גבורת גשמים the power of rain, because, say they, it descends not, but by power, and 'tis one of the things in which the power of God shews its self. The difference of it from other the like acts of power, they say, is this, that it belongs to the just and unjust (whereas, say they, the Resurrection belongs to the just onely) and so saith our Saviour of it, Mat. 5. 45.

b. χειροτονῆν πρεσβυτέρους

V. 23. Ordained them Elders] The word πρεσβύτεροι here is not (as some think) the description or notation of the state of the men before they were ordained, or of the qualifications which made them fit to be installed Governours, viz. their being such who were counted Elders of the people for wisdome, and knowledge of Christianity; but χειροτονεῖν πρεσβυτέρους is to consecrate, or ordain, Governours by imposition of hands, to make them such that were not so before, to invest and endow them with authority in the Church. The word χειροτονεῖν literally signifies to stretch out the hand, or hold it up, and signified among the antient Greeks, choosing, or giving of sentence, or suffrages, which in popular elections, or judicatures, was done after this manner. But this being the original of the word, it is (as is ordinary with other words) somewhat enlarged, and changed in the ordinary usage of other writers, Jewish, and Christian, and signifies indifferently Constituting, or Ordaining, without any intimation of suffrages, or plurality of persons, or voices, by whom this Ordination is made. This may best appear by some testimonies of those writers which wrote neareſt the times and the style of the New Testament. Thus saith Philo Judæus of Joseph, Βασιλέως ὕπαρχον ἐχειροτονεῖτο, He was (not by any votes or suffrages of many, but by the act of Pharaoh the King) constituted Governour of all Ægypt under the King. So of Moses ἡγεμὼν ἐχειροτονεῖτο, he was (by God certainly, without any suffrages of others) constituted the Ruler of the Israelites. So of Aarons sonnes ἱερεῖς ἐχειροτόνει, God (without any concurrence or choise of others) chose them Priests. So Lucian of Alexanders kindness to Hepheſtion, Θεὸν χειροτονῆσαι καὶ τελευτικότα, he made him a God when he was dead; which sure was a single act of Alexanders, was not done by voices or suffrages. And so Maximus Tyrius of Darius's horse, which by neighing made his Master King of the Persians, saith, Δαρεῖον ἐκ πεζοῦ τοσοῦτον προσκυνῆσαι οἱ Πέρσαι πρὶν αὐτὸν ἐχειροτόνησεν ὅτι καὶ ἀρχὴν ὑβρεισὴς ἵππος, the Persians did not adore, or salute, Darius, till his wanton horse had created him King. In all these places the Ordination being an act of some one person, Pharaoh, God, Alexander, &c. the word is capable of no other notion. In like manner, when the word is used of the Roman affaires, as in Appian and Dio we know it is, it must needs be taken in this sense; because that ceremony of lifting up, or stretching out hands in elections, was not in use among them And thus it is used in this place, not of any multitude or number of men to whom suffrages might belong, but of Paul and Barnabas, who did it by joynt consent, and there is no other possible way for two to vote any thing. As for the suffrages of any others, if such could be imagined to have interposed here, it would not then be Paul and Barnabas, but those others who did χειροτονεῖν, stretch out their hands, or give the suffrages. And for Paul and Barnabas to doe it by the suffrages of others, this is farre from the original use of the word from whence it pretends to be concluded; for where χειροτονία in the primitive sense is used of choosing by suffrages, as in popular elections, &c.) it is certain that their own, not others suffrages are meant by it. And therefore χειροτονεῖν is by Hesychius rendred καθιστᾶν to constitute, (as well as ψηφίζειν to elect) and so it is here all one directly χειροτονεῖν πρεσβυτέρους to ordain Elders, as Tit. 1. 5. καταστῆσαι πρεσβυτέρους to constitute elders. And thus the word is clearly used Act. 10. 41. where προχειροτονεῖσθαι being spoken of the Apostles being whether fore-ordained, or fore-chosen of God, to be witnesses of Christs resurrection, must needs be without votes or suffrages; and accordingly Theophylact on 2 Tim. 1. 6. in stead of S. Pauls διὰ ἐπιθέσεως τῶν χειρῶν μου, by imposition of my hands, hath ὅτε σε ἐχειροτόνουν ἐπίσκοπον, when I ordained thee Bishop. And so S. Chrysostome on those words Act. 6. 6. having pray'd they laid hands on them, saith, ἐχειροτονήθησαν διὰ προσευχῆς, τοῦτο γάρ ἡ χειροτονία, they were ordained by prayer, for this is ordination, making χειροτονία and χειροθεσία, stretching out the hands and laying on the hands, to be all one. And though 2 Cor. 8. 19. it be used of the Churches constituting one to travail with S. Paul, yet is this no variation from the present notion of it, the word signifying to ordain, or elect, or constitute indifferently, whether it be done by God, or one or more men or by the whole Church. So * Chrysostome speaking of Christ, Αὐτὸς αὐτὸς εὐθέως χειροτονεῖ, he presently constitutes them. And * Socrates of Constantine, in the twentieth year of his reign, Κωνσάντιον κατέστησε Καίσαρα, but in the thirtieth, Κώνσαντα ἐχειροτόνησεν, where it is all one with κατέστησε, both noting the constituting or creating of Cæsar, a work of the Emperour onely. So Theodoret περὶ προνοί. in the person of Joseph, Ἁπάντων μου τοῦ κυρίου τὴν οἰκίαν κηδεμόνα ἐχειροτόνησεν ὁ δεσπότης, my Master hath constituted me over all his house. So * Zacharias Bishop of Mitylene, speaking of Gods creating of man, as a King, and guest, for whom a palace and a feast were before prepared, he expresseth it by ὃ δὴ γῆς χειροτονηθῆναι. καὶ πρεσβευθῆναι βασιλέα, καὶ δαιτυμόνα ἅμα ἀγαθῶν ὧν ὁ μέγας πρύτανις ἑστιάτωρ, he was chosen (sure not by the suffrages of many, but by God the one Creator) and set forth to be both the King, and the guest of the good things which the Great Master of the feast had set before him. Of this acception of the word χειροτονεῖν, a controversie there is between the two great Scholiasts on the Canons, Zonaras and Balsamon. Zonaras on the first Apostolical Canon, Ἐπίσκοπος χειροτονείσθω ὑπὸ ἐπισκόπων δύο ἢ τριῶν, Let a Bishop be ordained by two or three Bishops, makes this Scholion, Νῦν μὲν χειροτονία καλεῖται —— Now adaies the office of praiers, and invocation of the holy spirit at the consecration of any, is called χειροτονία, from the Bishops stretching out his hand, and blessing the person ordained; πάλαι δὲ αὐτὴ ἡ ψῆφος χειροτονία ὠνόμαζο, but anciently the election it self was so called: for when the multitudes of the cities had power to choose their Bishops, they assembled, and some chose one, some another, and that the greater part of suffrages might carry it, it is said that they that made the choice stretcht out their hands, and so the suffrages were numbred, and he that was chosen by most was advanced to the dignity, and thence the word χειροτονία was taken. And accordingly, saith he, the Fathers of the Councils are found to use the word, calling election χειροτονία. Thus the Council of Laodicea, Can. 5. saith that χειροτονία must not be in the presence of the Catechumeni, meaning elections by that word. How unfitly this Scholion is applied to the first Apostolical Canon will be easily judged, when it is remembred that χειροτονεῖσθαι used in that Canon (and sure that was πάλαι antiently, and long enough before Zonaras's writing) is certainly used for Ordination or Consecration, καθιέρωσις or χειροθεσία the initiation to the Episcopal office by imposition of hands, and not any popular or whatever kind of election. And therefore Balsamon coming to give account of this Canon, and seeing this Scholion of Zonaras before him, gives it (without naming him) the due refutation, thus, Ὁ ἀποστολικὸς κανὼν λέγει —— This Apostolical Canon speaks

χειροτονῆσαι Confirmare

* Hom. 32. in Matt. p. 218

* l. 1. c. 38.

ſpeaks of that Ordination which is done by the Biſhops in the Church —— ὃ περὶ ψήφου, καθὼς πρὸς ἔπος, not of the election, as ſome ſaid (following ſome unwritten reports) in reſpect of the ſtretching out the hands uſed in the elections of Biſhops by the multitude of the cities: for though in the 10. (it ſhould be the 5th) Canon of Laodicea, the Fathers command that χειροτονίαι ſhould not be in the preſence of the Catechumeni, and from thence ſome ſuppoſed that this Canon ſpeaks of election; yet I believe they ſay not well, becauſe the ordination which is performed in the Church διὰ μυστικῶν εὐχῶν, by the praiers belonging to initiation, is done, though there be never ſo many there, (which concludes that this Apoſtolick Canon belongs to Conſecration, though the Laodicean do not.) And again the 4th Canon of the firſt Nicene Council reſolving that the election of a Biſhop ſhall be performed by all the Biſhops of the Province, ἢ τοὺς τριῶν, at leaſt by three, the reſt ſignifying their conſents by writing, I cannot think how ſome could underſtand this Canon of the election of a Biſhop, which appoints that it ſhall be done by two or three (and ſo poſſibly by two, not neceſſarily by three) Biſhops. By this it is evident, that Zonaras, if as his premiſſes prepared for it, ſo he concluded according to them, that in the Apoſtolical Canon, χειροτονεῖν was to be underſtood of election, and not of ordination, was foully miſtaken. But the truth is, the concluſion of his Scholion ſeems to look another way, citing that Canon of Nice, which being of Elections, appoints them to be by three at leaſt, whereas this of χειροτονία contents it ſelf with two or three; and in his Scholion on that Nicene Canon 4. his concluſion is expreſs, that the Apoſtolical Canon, χειροτονίαν τὼ καθ-

* ſus Grc. Rom. p. 1. ἑξῆς εἴρηκεν ἡ χειροθεσίαν ὀνομάζει, calls conſecration and impoſition of hands by that title, and ſo not election. (So * Harmenopulus on his Epitome Can. The Apoſtolical Canon is of conſecration and impoſition of hands, the Nicene of election.) And ſo all his premiſſes of χειροτονία being taken for ψῆφος election are utterly aliene from the Canon which he had before him; and his obſervation as far from truth, that it was in latter times onely that χειροτονία came to ſignifie Ordination. His own words conclude rather the direct contrary, that at the time of the writing the firſt Apoſtolical Canon, (which by all is acknowledged genuine, and ſo written not long after the Apoſtles daies) χειροτονία was taken in the ſenſe of Ordination, and that long after that in the Council of Laodicea, 'twas uſed for election. And it may be worth obſerving, that he that had taken ſuch unſeaſonable pains, to prove it was taken for election, had no proof for it in all antiquity, but onely that one Canon of Laodicea, where indeed it is evidently uſed in that ſenſe: but whether of any other election, ſave by the Biſhops (to whom it evidently belongs in the 4th Nicene Canon) in the preſence of the people (excluding the audientes) from them to receive teſtimonie of the lives of thoſe who were to be choſen, appears not by that Canon. In the Nicene Canon 4. the difference is clear between καθίσαντες conſtituting by way of ψῆφος election, in the beginning of the Canon, and then, (after that regularly performed) χειροτονία ordination, in the end of it. And by that we may underſtand Theodorets meaning Eccl. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 23. when he ſaith the Canons forbid δίχα τριῶν ἐπισκόπων ἐπισκόπῳ χειροτονίαν γίνεσθαι, That a Biſhop have ordination without three Biſhops: not that there muſt needs be three Biſhops to impoſe hands, for that is contrary to the Apoſtolical Canon which is content with two (and yet is by Zonaras himſelf reconciled with the Nicene that requires three at leaſt) but that there muſt be three at leaſt perſonally pre- * Placuit ad hanc rem ordinationem ſent at his election, (and that * with the concurrence alſo of all the Province that are abſent) before he can be ordained lawfully, and when he is ſo elected, then he may be ordained by two. So when Syneſius, Ep. 67. ſaith of Siderius Biſhop of Palebiſca, that he was ordained ἐπιδήμως irregularly, εἰ μήτε ἐν Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ κατέστη μήτε παρὰ τριῶν ἐνταῦθα, if he was not conſtituted at Alexandria, or not by three Biſhops there; meaning the whole affaire, as it was made up of Election, and Ordination too, to the former of which the preſence of three Biſhops was neceſſary, (though not to the latter.) And ſo Theodoret again, l. 5. c. 9. affirming from the Nicene Canon, that the cuſtome was for the Biſhops in every Province, and the neighbouring Biſhops, if they pleaſed, πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον ποιεῖσθαι χειροτονίας, to make the ordinations to the beſt advantage, muſt be thus underſtood, not that all ſhould joyne in the Ordination or impoſition of hands, but (all of the whole Province, either perſonally, or by their letters joyning in the election) two or three ſhould impoſe hands on him. But this ex abundanti, more than was neceſſary for the notion of χειροτονία, when 'twas uſed of the Apoſtles. Now for the κατ' ἐκκλησίαν, it is beſt rendred Church by Church, that is, in every Church one Elder, or Biſhop, and ſo χειροτονεῖν πρεσβυτέρους κατ' ἐκκλησίαν, to ordaine Elders in every Church, is all one with καταστῆσαι πρεσβυτέρους κατὰ πόλιν, to conſtitute Elders in every city, Tit. 1. 5. every city having a Biſhop in it, and ſo called a Church, to which the believers in all the parts about it belonged, and that Biſhop having power to make as many inferiour officers in that Church as he thought good. Of the notion of πρεσβύτερος, ſee Note on ch. 11. b.

CHAP. XV.

1. And ſome converted or Chriſtian Jewes, which though they believed in Chriſt, yet thought themſelves ſtill bound to the obſervation of the whole Moſaicall Law, told thoſe of the Gentile Proſelytes v. 19. that were converted to the faith of Chriſt alſo, (of whom ſome, that is, the Proſelytes of the gates, were not wont to be circumciſed, but only ſubſcribed to the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah) that they muſt be complete Proſelytes of the Jewes, ſubmit to their whole Law, and ſo be circumciſed, &c. or elſe they could not be ſaved.

1. AND certain men which came down from Judæa taught the brethren, and ſaid, Except ye be circumciſed after the manner of Moſes, ye cannot be ſaved.]

2. And Paul and Barnabas oppoſed theſe, and the matter being turned into a queſtion, & that undecidable among themſelves, neither yielding to the other, it was neceſſary to appeal to Jeruſalem, under which, as the prime Metropolis, the Jewes of all Syria and ſo Antioch were: and accordingly the Church-Governours of Antioch determined to ſend up Paul and Barnabas, and ſome others with them, to the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and the Apoſtles that were there, and the other Biſhops of Judæa (ſee note on ch. 11. b.) belonging to that Metropolis, to adviſe whether the Gentiles that received the faith, and lived among the Jewiſh believers, ſhould be bound to be circumciſed, or no.

2. When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no ſmall diſſenſion and diſputation with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, ſhould goe up to Jeruſalem unto the Apoſtles and Elders about this queſtion.]

3. And the Church bore the charges of their journey, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 16. a.) and as they went through Phœnice and Samaria, they told them the great newes that occaſioned this their journey, the coming in of the Gentiles to the Faith: and all the Chriſtians were very much joyed at it.

3. And being * brought on their way by the Church, they paſſed through Phœnice and Samaria, declaring the converſion of the Gentiles: and they cauſed great joy unto all the brethren.] * ſet forth προπεμφθέντες

4, 5. And when they came to Jeruſalem, they were kindly received by the Chriſtians there, and particularly by James the brother of the Lord then Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and thence called an Apoſtle (ſee

6. And the Apoſtles and Elders came together for to conſider of this matter.]

6. Hereupon James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Peter, and John, the Apoſtles (ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. a. Rev. 4. g. Gal. 2. e.) and the Biſhops of Judæa met in councel, to deliberate, and debate about this difficulty.

7. And when there had been much diſputing, Peter roſe up and ſaid unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while agoe, God made choiſe among us, that [the Gentiles by my mouth ſhould hear the word of the Goſpel and believe.]

7. ſome uncircumciſed Proſelytes, Cornelius and his family, Act. 10. ſhould have the Goſpel preached to them, and accordingly had, and received the faith, and never were circumciſed.

8. And God which knoweth the hearts, bare them witneſſe, giving them the holy Ghoſt even as he did unto us;]

8. And God, that knew the ſincerity of their hearts, teſtified that they were believers, ſuch as were acceptable to him (though they were not circumciſed) and fit to be baptized, giving them that great witneſſe from heaven, ſending down the holy Ghoſt upon them in like manner as he was before ſent down upon the Apoſtles Act. 10. 44.

9. And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.]

9. And dealt with them juſt as with us, making no difference between us and them, but by the Chriſtian doctrine by them received and entertained, did the ſame thing on them (farre more effectually) for which all the Jewiſh rites (particularly circumciſion) were firſt ordained, that is, took them off from all their heathen ſinnes.

10. Now therefore, why tempt ye God, * to put a yoke upon the neck of the Diſciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?]

* in putting

10. This one evidence is ſufficient to conclude this whole debate; For is not the thing already determined by that one act of God's giving the holy Ghoſt to the Gentiles? That ſure makes it evident that there is no difference betwixt us Jewes and them. Why then doe ye preſſe that which is ſo contrary to the will of God? why doe ye refuſe to believe that which is ſo teſtified to be his will, and ſo in effect require more arguments of this, as of a matter ſtill uncertain, and thereby tempt God, (ſee note on Mat. 4. c.) and think to impoſe upon Chriſtians of the nations the performance of the whole Moſaicall Law, which belonged not to them, and which we Jewes were never able to perform, ſo as to be juſtified thereby?

11. But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt we ſhall be ſaved, even as they.]

11. 'Tis by the Goſpel (ſee ch. 11. 23.) that we expect juſtification and ſalvation, through faith and obedience to Chriſt, and not by Moſaical performances; and ſo they, if they believe, have the ſame way to ſalvation as we.

12. Then all the multitude kept ſilence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.]

12. After this, the next thing was, that Paul and Barnabas declared in like manner what miracles God had enabled them alſo to doe in the converting of the Gentiles, which was another argument and teſtimony from heaven, that no difference was to be put between Jewes and Gentiles.

13. And after they had held their peace, James anſwered, ſaying,] Men and brethren, hearken unto me.

13. And next after them James the Juſt, the brother of the Lord, the then Biſhop of Hieruſalem, began to ſpeak, ſaying,

21. Nor need we Jews to fear that this will bring a contempt upon Moſes or the Law of the Jewes; for the contrary appears by the Chriſtian practice, even where theſe proſelytes of the Gentiles are; there the books of Moſes, as hath been cuſtomary from of old, are ſtill continued among them, to be read aloud in the ſynagogue every Saturday, (to which the Councell of Laodicea did after adde the reading of a Chapter in the New Teſtament) to ſignifie their reſpect to the Moſaicall Law, and their not offering it contempt among the proſelytes, though they did not require them to be circumciſed.

The buſineſſe being thus decided bythe acquieſcing of all in this ſentence of the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, the next thing was, that James and Peter and John, and the Biſhops of Judæa, with the generall conſent and approbation of the whole Church of Jeruſalem, (ſee note on c. 6. b.) thought fit to chooſe ſome Biſhops of Judæa, that were preſent at the Councel, to go along with Paul and Barnabas to Antioch: and the perſons pitcht on were Judas and Silas, Biſhops of ſeverall Churches, (ſee note e.)

a. ἐπισκέψατο λαβεῖν

V. 14. Viſit the Gentiles] Ἐπισκέψατο in the Septuagint, joyned with an Infinitive Verbe, not an Accuſative Noune after it, ſignifies to be pleaſed, to delight, Jer. 32. 41. ἐπισκέψομαι ἀγαθῶσαι, where the Hebrew hath, וְשָׂשְׂתִי, and I will rejoyce, or delight. It is true the word ſignifies to viſit, Luke 1. 68. and that may be thought alſo to have at ſome diſtance an Infinitive, ποιῆσαι ἔλεος, to ſhew mercy, after it, v. 72. But ἐπισκέψατο λαβεῖν λαὸν here is another kind of phraſe, ἐπισκέψατο hath no Noune after it, but onely and immediately an Infinitive mood, and ſo is parallel onely to that before mentioned in the Septuagint, and ſo in reaſon muſt be interpreted.

d. Ἀπέχεσθαι εἰδωλοθύτων &c.

V. 29. That ye abſtain] To what hath been ſaid of the Proſelytes among the Jews in many places (all referred to Note on c. 10. a.) more muſt now be added for the explication of this Canon of the Councell at Jeruſalem. For the queſtion being, whether the Gentiles that turned Chriſtians ſhould be bound to all thoſe things which were required of the Proſelytes of juſtice, or onely thoſe things which were required of the Proſelytes of the gates, and the Apoſtles anſwer being in theſe words, that they ſhould be bound to no more but theſe neceſſary things, to abſtain, &c. the queſtion will be, what thoſe particulars that are there named belong to. To which the anſwer muſt be, by ſetting down what was required of each of thoſe ſorts of Proſelytes. Of the former ſort 'tis ſufficiently known that it was required, that they ſhould ſubmit to the whole Moſaicall Law, to be circumciſed, &c. as appears by the ground of this quarrel or diſpute here, at the beginning of the Chapter. And to this purpoſe 'tis obſervable that the Epiſtle which is extant, and affirmed to be written by this Barnabas here mentioned, doth principally inſiſt upon the no-neceſſity of circumciſion in Chriſtians, (ſee § 7.) and § 2. hath theſe words, In hoc providens eſt & miſericors Deus, quia in ſimplicitate crediturus erat populus, quem comparavit dilecto ſuo, atque oſtendit omnibus nobis, ut non incurramus tanquam Proſelyti ad illorum legem. 'Tis Gods mercy that the people which he purchaſed for his ſon ſhould believe in ſimplicity, and not as Proſelytes (of the Jews, of this firſt kind) run to their Law. Of the ſecond ſort of Proſelytes 'tis as much acknowledged, that there was no more required then the obſervation of ſix precepts given to the ſons of Adam, and the ſeventh ſuperadded to the ſons of Noah, all together ſtyled the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah, which were theſe; The firſt עַל עֲבוֹדָה זָרָה, of ſtrange worſhip, or of renouncing the Idolatry of the heathens the not worſhipping other Gods. The ſecond עַל בִּרְכַּת הַשֵּׁם, of the benediction (that is, the worſhip) of the name, that is, the true God. The third עַל הַדִּינִים of judgments, or adminiſtration of juſtice. The fourth עַל גִּלּוּי עֲרָיוֹת, of diſcloſing nakedneſſe, that is, of abſtaining from all uncleanneſſe, and interdicted marriages, within thoſe degrees which are ſet down Lev. 18. The fifth עַל שְׁפִיכוּת דָּמִים, of ſhedding bloud, or againſt homicide. The ſixth עַל הַגָּזֵל, of theft, or ravine, and doing as they would be done to by others. The ſeventh אֵבֶר מִן הַחַי, a member of any live creature, or that they ſhould not eate the fleſh of any creature with the bloud in it, a ceremony choſen by God as a means to keep them in deteſtation and abhorrence of the ſin of Homicide, occaſioned probably by the bloudineſſe that was among the men of the old world, and accordingly given to Noah after the flood, Gen. 9. 4. and conſequently to all the Proſelytes among the Jews, Lev. 17. 10. Now that the obſervation of the whole Law, particularly Circumciſion (the matter of the queſtion, and the character of the firſt kinde of Proſelytes) was not required here by the Apoſtles, 'tis clear. It followes therefore that it muſt be onely the ſecond ſort, the obſervation of the precepts of the ſons of Adam and Noah. Of which 'tis clear that ſome are here named, and it were ſufficient to ſay that thoſe ſome might be ſet down to ſignifie all the reſt, though they were not expreſly mentioned. As in Phocylides, 'tis not unreaſonable to ſay that that verſe of his, not to eate bloud, and to abſtain from the Idol-ſacrifices, denotes the whole number of theſe ſeven precepts. But it is poſſible we may goe farther in this matter, and finde all the whole number of the ſeven here ſet down; thus; The command to abſtain from things offered to Idols contains the two firſt precepts, that of rejecting Idols, and worſhipping the true God. The worſhipping the true God, is the Affirmative part of the precept, and muſt be ſuppoſed, cannot be left out when all the Idol-worſhips are prohibited, and therefore are they prohibited that the true God may not have a rival in his worſhip, which therefore muſt comprehend the precept of worſhipping him. And for the Negative part of the precept, the rejecting of Idols, or the not worſhipping them, that is contained in the abſtaining from things offered to them: for the feaſts being a part of the Gentile ſacrifices, or a table for the worſhippers being always furniſh'd with the remainders of the ſacrifices, the abſtaining from thoſe feaſts was the abſtaining from that worſhip; and therefore 1 Cor. 10. 14. when the Apoſtle ſaith, fly from Idolatry, it is clear by the conſequents, v. 19. 20. that this abſtinence from the Idol feaſts, together with the conſequents thereof, is the thing forbidden by him. Then the command to abſtain from bloud, is the fifth of Αἵματος thoſe precepts, the ſolemn prohibition of Murder or of the effuſion of mans bloud, Gen. 9. 6. given before to the ſons of Adam, and there renewed to Noah. So Saint Cyprian underſtood it * ad Quirin. Abſtinere à ſanguinis effuſione, to abſtain from effuſion of blood, which he cannot mean of the blood of beaſts, for that they were commanded (not forbidden) to powre out upon the ground, Lev. 17. 13. And ſo others whom S. Auſtin mentions * Cont. Fauſt. Manich. Intelligunt à ſanguine abſtinendum nequis homicidio ſe contaminet, they underſtood the precept of abſtaining from blood, that none ſhould pollute himſelf with homicide.

And for thoſe that underſtand it of the blood of beaſts, many of them leave out the mention of things ſtrangled, as being all one with this notion of it. So doth Irenæus l. 3. c. 12. Tertullian De pudicit. c. 12. and S. Auſtin in that place againſt Fauſtus, giving this interpretation of it, nè quicquam ederent carnis cujus ſanguis non eſſet effuſus, not to eat any fleſh, whoſe blood hath not been powred out; though ſome others (by miſtake, I ſuppoſe) underſtand it of the blood of beaſts, and yet retain the mention of things ſtrangled alſo.

τὸ πνικτὸν Thirdly, that of things ſtrangled is the ſeventh of thoſe, Gen. 9. 4. Fleſh with the life thereof, which is the bloud, ye ſhall not eate. A ceremony ſuperadded to that former precept of not ſhedding mans bloud, to hedge it in, and ſecure it now, having, as 'tis probable, been ſo fouly broken by the Giants before the flood, Gen. 6. 4. So again in ths Judaicall law, Thou ſhalt not eat the fleſh in the blood, but powre out the bloud of every beaſt upon the ground, Lev. 17. 13. Fourthly, that of fornication is the fourth of thoſe, containing the interdict of all unnaturall pollutions, eſpecially ſuch as the Gentiles were ſo generally immerſs'd in, All which are, πορνεία here and in many other places, meant by πορνεία fornication, according as Thomas Magiſter makes πόρνος a proper word to render κίναιδος by. As alſo the marriages within forbidden degrees, which are called the diſcloſing of nakedneſs, Lev. 18. and appear to have been interdicted before the Levitical Law, by the puniſhment that fell upon the nations for the breach of them, v. 27. and are expreſly ſtyled fornication, 1 Cor. 5. 1. To which if we adde thoſe words which ſome editions adde after theſe (the Complutenſis out of three or four very antient Manuſcripts, and particularly Beza's venerable Greek and Latine one, as we have noted) and which Irenæus l. 3. c. 12. and the Æthiopick and other interpreters retain, viz. καὶ ὅσα μὴ θέλουσιν ἑαυτοῖς γίνεσθαι ἑτέρῳ μὴ ποιεῖν, what you would not have done to your ſelves, do not ye to another, that will be verbatim that other precept of theft or rapin, for which other Jewiſh writers read, doing as they would be done to. And ſo we know that thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf, Mat. 19. 19. is ſet in ſtead of μὴ ἀποστερήσῃς, thou ſhalt not defraud or deprive, in the parallel Mar. 10. 19. As for that de judiciis, that might reaſonably be left out, now that the Jews were every where under the Roman power, and they that came from Gentiliſme to Chriſtianity were not to change their obedience to Magiſtrates. However all that could be their duty to do in this reſpect, was to live juſtly with one another (not to ſubject themſelves to the Judicial laws of the Jews, which they were never concerned in) and that was the ſumme of the former precept of doing as they would be done to, and therefore may very well be reduced to it. And ſo all the ſeven precepts will be here contained. By this it appears, what was the direct importance of this Jeruſalem-Canon, viz. that the Gentile Chriſtians ſhould not be obliged to the lawes of the firſt ſort of Proſelytiſme, to Circumciſion and the like Judaicall obſervances, concerning which was the only queſtion, v. 1. And this one thing they are pleaſed thus to expreſſe, that the obſervations that belonged to the ſecond ſort of Proſelytiſme, were all that were propoſed to the Gentile Chriſtians, and nothing beſides, the whole weight of the Canon (as of the Queſtion brought before the Councell) lying on theſe words in the beginning of it, Ἔδοξε μηδὲν πλέον ἐπιτίθεσθαι ὑμῖν βάρος, We have defined that no more weight be laid on you, that is, that Circumciſion, &c. be not impoſed. Now if it be demanded, whether by virtue of this Decree thus explained, all theſe particulars (the whole ſeven Precepts of the ſonnes of Adam and Noah) be not here given to all Chriſtians, and conſequently whether all ſuch are not here commanded ſtrictly to abſtain from things ſtrangled, to powre out the blood of beaſts upon the ground, and not to eat it in any manner of preparation; To this I anſwer, by remembring, 1. That εἰδωλόθυτα things offered to Idols are here joyned with theſe under the ſame interdict, and thoſe in S. James's firſt draught of the Canon called ἀλισγήματα τῶν εἰδώλων, pollutions, or abominations, of Idols, which yet Saint Paul expreſſely defines, after this time not to be unlawfull for Chriſtians to eat of, unleſs in one peculiar caſe. 2dly, Then it muſt be conſidered, that theſe Precepts of the ſonnes of Noah were not all of one kind in reſpect of the matter: ſome of them were branches of the Law of nature, written in mens hearts, before they were given to the ſonnes either of Adam, or Noah; ſome of them were not ſo, but onely of Gods poſitive Law given firſt to them, and after to the Jewes. Thoſe which were of the former ſort, did no doubt remain in force to all mankind, and ſo obliged the Gentiles, which then received the faith, and ſo all other Chriſtians, to the worlds end. As for thoſe of the ſecond ſort, they are again to be diſtinguiſhed, ſome of them being given to Adam in the firſt creation, of which Aſterius ſaith, Hom. de Repudio, p. 590. E. ταῦτα τῷ ἀκολάδῳ γένει φύσις ἐγένετο, they became the nature of the whole poſterity; others not to Adam, but to the ſonnes of Noah: ſome again confirmed and continued by Chriſt, others not. That of fornication, or diſcloſing of nakedneſs, as a branch of the matrimonial, and ſo poſitive law, given at the firſt creation of male and female, and containing under it the prohibition of inceſtuous marriages, or ſuch as are within the degrees limited, Lev. 18. is ſure obligatory to all, ſpecially being under the ſame interdict by Chriſt, as in the Goſpell is expreſſely ſet down by him in point of Divorce and Polygamie, (wherein he referres them to the Original Law, given to the ſonnes of Adam, but for the hardneſs of hearts diſpenſed with among the Jewes) and by the Apoſtle is taken for granted in that other branch of prohibited degrees, 1 Cor. 5. 1. and therefore of this there is as little doubt, but that it ſtill remains in force among Chriſtians. But for thoſe other two, of meats, of abſtaining from things offered to Idols, and blood, or things ſtrangled, as neither of them were of the Law of Nature, which leaves all meats indifferent, and free to all men in all times, but ſtand onely by poſitive Law, given to the ſonnes of Noah, the latter expreſſely as a ceremony to ſecure men from murther, by giving them a great awe and reverence to blood, and the former to keep them at the greateſt diſtance from Idolatry; ſo are they not confirmed or continued by Chriſt, who on the other ſide reſtores the naturall liberty in this kind, takes away all difference among meats, ſo that after this, nothing that goes into the mouth ſhould pollute the man, no ſort of meat ſhould be deemed common or unclean. In the Old Teſtament Deut. 14. 21. a mark we have to diſcerne, that all mankind was not then under this obligation, for the morticinum, which is of this nature, as having the blood in it, the Jewes might give or ſell to an alien, though they might not eat it themſelves; and for the whole New Teſtament there is not in that any the leaſt appearance, or colour, of interdict of any ſort of meats, ſave onely in this one Canon, but rather every where liberty proclaimed, and that expreſſely in one of thoſe that are here named, after the time of making this Canon 1 Cor. 10. 27. and more generally in all ſorts of meats, Rom. 14. 3. Col. 11. 16. onely with this exception, that it be not to the ſcandall or detriment of weak Chriſtians: who theſe weak Chriſtians were, is ſet down Rom. 14. 2. the Jewiſh ἀσθενῶν believers, who yet took themſelves to be obliged to obſerve the Moſaical Law, and upon that ſcore there λάχανα ἐσθίουσι, eat herbs, abſtain from many ſorts of meats, which others freely uſed.

And

And in meer compliance with these it was, that these words of the Canon were inserted. This I shall best set down in the words of * S. Augustine, Si hoc tunc Apostoli præceperunt, ut ab animalium sanguine abstinerent Christiani, nec præfocatis carnibus vescerentur, elegisse mihi videntur pro tempore rem facilem, & nequaquam observantibus onerosam, in qua cum Israelitis etiam Gentes aliquid communiter observarent, When the Apostles made the decree that Christians should abstain from the blood of living creatures, and not eat flesh that was strangled, they chose for the time an easy thing, no way burthenous to the observers, wherein the Gentiles might observe somewhat common with the Jewes. This then being the onely ground of the Decree and observance, viz. compliance with, and unwillingness to scandalize the Judaizing Christians, and except in that one case of scandal, all meats being pronounced free, and indifferent to all Christians, and so both things strangled (and blood) and the μερίδες or portions of sacrifices sold in the shambles, It followes regularly, that as soon as this one reason of the Decree ceased, that is, as soon as the Jewes and Gentiles were formed into one Communion, as soon as the fear of this scandal was removed, all force or obligation of this Decree ceased also. This is also distinctly S. Augustines sense, Transacto illo tempore, quo illi duo parietes, unus ex circumcisione, alter ex præputio venientes, quamvis in angulari lapide concordarent, tamen suis quibusdam proprietatibus distinctius eminebant, & ubi Ecclesia Gentium talis effecta est, ut in ea nullus Israelita carnalis appareat, quis jam hoc Christianus observat, ut turdos vel minutiores aviculas non attingat, nisi quarum sanguis effusus est; aut leporem non edat, si manu à cervice percussus nullo cruento vulnere occisus est? But when that time was past, wherein the circumcised and uncircumcised were differenced one from the other, and when the Church of the Gentiles was so framed, that no Israelite according to the flesh appeared in it, what Christian doth now observe this, not to touch any little bird whose blood hath not been powred out, not to eat of a Hare struck on the neck with the hand, and so killed without any effusion of blood? And this, it seems, so universally the sense of the Church in that Fathers time, that he concludes, Et qui fortè pauci adhuc tangere ista formidant, à cæteris irridentur, Those few which perhaps still make scruple of touching, that is, eating, those, are laugh'd at by the rest. Adding: Ita omnium animos in hac re tenuit illa sententia veritatis, Non quod intrat in os vestrum, &c. That sentence of Christs hath possessed all mens mindes in this matter, Not that which enters into the mouth (that is, nulla cibi natura, no sort of meat) defiles the man, is unlawfull under the Gospell. Thirdly, for this Canon it self, at that very time when it was given, it cannot fitly be deemed a Precept, there being then no need of such. For it must be remembred, that they who were concerned in this question, and to whom the Decree was sent, did already observe these seven precepts of the sonnes of Noah, and therefore needed not be commanded by the Councel to observe them. This appears in that the Apostle, when he preach'd in any city, did it as yet in the Synagogues of the Jews, whither the Gentiles could not come, unlesse they were Proselytes of the gates, and so had received these seven precepts; see c. 13. 5. 14. 16. 26. 42. 43. and c. 14. 1. And accordingly it is set in the words of the decree, v. 29. ἐξ ὧν διατηροῦντες ἑαυτὰς, εὖ πράξετε, from which keeping your selves, ye shall do well, noting them to keep them (in the present tense) already, as all such Proselytes did. Fourthly, as there was no need of making any command to them who did it already, so the words are not delivered in form of precept, but only so, as to pronounce them free from any further obligation; doing this, which you do already, ye shall do well, that is, no more shall be imposed upon you. Here, I suppose, it will be objected, that the abstaining from all these here named, and so from the πνικτὰ things strangled, which is one of them, is called these necessary things, and therefore that these are look'd on as necessary for Gentile Christians. To which I answer, that the word ἀναγκὰς necessary must here be interpreted by the Context, not necessary to all Christians, but necessary to all Proselytes of the Jews. And this will appear, by considering, that there were many more things necessary to Christians in the latitude than those which are here named, whereas the Text saith that onely these necessary things are by the Apostles and the Synod required; which makes it needfull to understand this necessity in reference onely to those Proselytes of the Jewes. And then the mention of that will signifie no more, but that the observing those seven precepts was necessary to the lowest sort of Jewish Proselytes, those of the gates: not that it was here required of the Christians, being, as was said, already performed by them, and the designe of the Canon being only to pronounce their liberty, or that circumcision was not required of them, and medling no farther, unlesse by way of counsell, (as the ἐπιστεῖλαι writing to them v. 20. may import) not of command, thus farre, at the present, to comply with the Jewes, for unity and amity sake, to doe what the lowest sort of their Proselytes did, that so they might not abhorre them as profane persons, and refuse to live among them. For this must be remembred again, who they were that were concern'd in this Canon, viz. the Gentiles at that time converted to Christ, who lived among the Jewish Christians at Jerusalem, and the Churches of Judæa, and paticularly at Antioch, and in that whole province of Syria and Cilicia, (which was immediately under the Metropolis of Antioch, but belonged also to Jerusalem) to whom this decree was sent v. 23. (& accordingly having been delivered at Antioch, was afterward communicated to the severall Cities or Churches in that province, ch. 16. 4.) Not all the Gentile Christians every where, (for to the Corinthians he gave very different directions, viz. that they might freely eat any kind of meat, even the μερίδες portions of the Idol-sacrifices, save onely in case of scandal) but those particularly about whom the question was asked, the Gentile Church at Antioch and the rest under the prime Metropolis, Jerusalem, which was farre from being all the Gentile Christians in the world; and these again in respect of the Pharisaicall Judaizing Christians at that time, that came from Judæa, who though they had received Christ, yet stood so farre for their Mosaicall rites, that they would not permit any Gentile, though Christian, to live among them, unlesse he observed those precepts: which compliance therefore was then necessary to the making up of a Church of Jewes and Gentiles, which otherwise would not have associated: which cause being ere long taken away (and the Jewish and Gentile Congregations at Antioch joyned under Ignatius) the prohibition of those things here mention'd, which are not in their own nature unlawfull (viz. that of things strangled and offered to idols) will now evidently not belong to the Gentile Christians of other places, all force of this Canon having by long disusage of the Westerne Church, and by the nature of Christian religion (which takes away all differences of meats) and by the coalescence of Jewish and Gentile Christians, been superseded even in those very Churches where it had been observed. Nay the Canon it self, and the intention of it, being rather the stating the question against those that required them to be circumcised, and so to doe more then the commanding that they should doe thus much; mean while it cannot be denied but that the practice of this abstinence from blood and things strangled, had a long continuance in a great part of the Church, especially among the Greeks. See Tertullian Apol. c. 9. and Minutius in Octav. Euseb. l. 5. c. 1. Clemens Alex. Pædag. l. 3. c. 3. Nicephorus l. 4. c. 17. in the story of Biblys. Leo Novel. 58. περὶ τοῦ μηδένα τὸ αἷμα βρῶμα ποιεῖσθαι, that no man should make blood food, and expressely against puddings of blood. And Lucian in Peregr. mentions it, Ὤφθη τι ἐδίον τῶν ἀποῤῥήτων αὐτοῖς, He was seen eating somewhat which was abominable among them. It hath crept in also among the Apostolical Canons; not among the first fifty, which have had always a venerable authority in the Church, but those other suppositicious additions of the Greeks, where Can. 63. are together forbidden, κρέα ἐν αἵματι ψυχῆς αὐτῶν, καὶ θηριάλωτα, καὶ θνησιμαῖα, flesh in the blood of its life, and that which is torn by beasts, or dyeth of it self. A touch of it there is in the Councell of Gangra, Can. 11. in the year of Christ, 324. Εἴ τις ἐδίοντα κρέα (χωρὶς αἵματος καὶ εἰδωλοθύτου καὶ πνικτοῦ) κατακρίνοι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω, If any condemn him that eats flesh, (except it be blood, or what hath been sacrificed to Idols, or strangled) let him be anathema. And in the 6th Councell in Trullo, the 67th Canon is agreeable, Ἡ θεία ἡμῖν γραφὴ ἐντέταλται, &c. The holy Scripture hath commanded us to abstain from blood and things strangled and fornication: Those therefore that for delicacy by any art dress the blood of any creature for food, and so eat it, we vehemently rebuke. If therefore any man shall from henceforth dare to eat the blood of a beast after any manner, if he be a Clerk, let him be deposed, if a Laick, excommunicated. Among the Latines we have the 20th Canon of the second Councell of Orleans, in the year 536. Qui cibis Idolorum cultibus immolatis gustu illicitæ præsumptionis utuntur ab Ecclesiæ cœtibus arceantur; similiter & hi qui bestiarum morsibus extincto vel quolibet morbo aut casu suffocato vescuntur, They that eat meat offered to Idols, shall be excommunicate, and so likewise they that eate any thing that is kill'd by beasts or suffocated by disease or casually, (which particularly belongs to morticina, which are generally accounted unwholesome for food, and comes not quite home to the πνικτὰ things strangled in the latitude:) and other like instances will be met with. But though most of the Greeks continue this kind of abstinence very strictly and scrupulously, yet of the Westen Church it is sure, that this abstinence is and long hath been disused by them. So saith Balsamon on the * Canon Apostol. Σημείωσαι ἐν τῷ κανόνα διὰ τὸς Λατίνους ἀδιαφόρως τὰ πνικτὰ ἐδίοντας, this Canon is to be noted for the Latines, who eate things strangled indifferently. And so again on the * Canon in Trullo, adding ἀλλὰ καὶ οἱ Ἀδριανουπολῖται, &c. I hear also that they of Hadrianople use beasts blood with some meats. And so certainly they may, though others use not that liberty, it being doubtless left free by Christ, all meats clean and lawful being taken with thanksgiving, and as rites and ceremonies, so such outward observances being variable in respect of time and place, and the Greek practice of no force to conclude other men. To this great controversie among the Jewish Christians concerning the necessity or non-necessity of Circumcision, 'twill not be amisse to adde a parallel story between two eminent Jewes, no Christians, in Josephus, Ant. l. 20. c. 2. concerning Izates king of the Adiabeni. This person, with his mother Helen, was converted to the Jewish religion, and thinking that he was not a perfect Jew, unlesse he were circumcised, told Ananias, who had instructed him in the Jewish religion, how willing he was to be circumcised. This Ananias perswaded him from so doing, because it might aliene the minds of his people from him, and threatned that he would leave him, unlesse he gave over that purpose; told him that he might piously worship God (that is, in the Scripture phrase, be an εὐλαβὴς and σεβόμενος, a worshipper or Proselyte of the Jewes) without being circumcised, that religion consisted more in this then in the circumcision of the flesh, that God would pardon the omission of that seale, when necessity so required, and consequently when such a danger as the defection of his subjects was consequent to it. And by this means he quieted his mind. But after this comes one Eleazar a Galilæan out of Judæa, one counted very skilfull in the Law, and he finding the King reading Moses's books, presently thus assaults him, Doe you know, Sir, what injury you doe to the Law, and so to God? 'tis not enough to know Gods commands, unlesse you practise them: How long will you remain uncircumcised? If you have never yet read the Law which commands circumcision, read it now, that you may know what an impiety 'tis to omit it. This presently perswaded the King, who went accordingly into a chamber, and caused a Chirurgion to circumcise him.

V. 32. Prophets] The word προφήτης a prophet in the Old Testament, signifies not only him that foretelleth future events, but all those who make known the will of God to those that knew it not. A peculiar importance, it seems, it hath in the Church of Christ under the New Testament, differing from Apostles on the one side, and Evangelists on the other, as may appear 1 Cor. 12. 28. and Eph. 4. 11. The Apostles were those peculiar persons, who were by Christ designed to that office, his missi, or messengers, with commission immediately from him; such were the Twelve, and (extraordinarily called) S. Paul also. The Evangelists were those which were sent by the Apostles whither they could not goe themselves, and the Diœceses that belonged to these was the whole world, or those speciall parts of it which the Apostles had allotted to one another. Beside these, the Prophets were those that in particular Churches ruled and taught as Bishops, διδάσκαλοι or ποιμένες, (see Note on 1 Cor. 12. d.) and over and above, had that speciall χάρισμα of, expounding Moses and the Prophets, and demonstrating out of them the truth of Christian religion. This was the exhorting and confirming that here is spoken of, and which is attributed to them as Prophets, (not excluding, but containing the gift of foretelling things to come also, as of Agabus we read c. 11. 28.) Agreeably these that are here called prophets, are also called ἡγούμενοι ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, ver. 22. governours of Churches (see Note on Heb. 13. b.) and are accordingly to be resolved persons intrusted with the power of Bishops in particular Churches of Judæa, and so members of the Councel at Jerusalem. And so when 'tis said, that there were at Jerusalem Apostles, and πρεσβύτεροι Elders, πρεσβύτεροι signifies not the Presbyters of Jerusalem, but Bishops of Judæa, and ἐξ αὐτῶν of them are these two which are here, Judas and Silas, and that Elder, or Bishop, of the Church of Jerusalem mentioned Rev. 7. 14. who is said to interpret the vision to John there.

3. Προσευχὴ

V. 13. Where prayer was] That προσευχὴ ſignifies a place ſet apart, or accuſtomed for the ſervice of God, there is little queſtion: ſo προσευχὰς καθιδρύσαντες building Oratories, in the 3. book of Maccab. and ſo perhaps προσευχῇ τῷ Θεῷ, ſignifies Lu. 6. 12. And from the ordinarineſſe of that uſe of the word for praying places, it is that Juvenal hath made uſe of it for a begging place, or a corner, or porch, where beggers meet, ——in qua te quaro proſeucha?

and Cleomedes l. 1. c. 1. ſpeaking of ſome ſtrange words and forms of ſpeech uſed by Epicurus, ſaith they are ſuch as are fetch'd ἀπὸ μέσης τῆς προσευχῆς καὶ τῶν ἐν αὐταῖς προσευτόντων, Ἰουδαϊκά τινα καὶ παρακεκαραγμένα, fetch'd from the middle of a proſeucha, from thoſe that uſe to begge there, certain Jewiſh obſolete words or phraſes, καὶ καταπολὺ τῶν ἑρπόντων ταπεινότερα, much more humble than thoſe that creep on the ground. As for that of Oratories, which is the Scripture acception of the word, we find mention of them in Joſephus, in his life, p. 645. εἰσάγονται πάντες εἰς προσευχὴν, they are all brought into an oratory, a great houſe, ſaith he, able to contain a great multitude; and ſo ſoon after again, and again. The cuſtome of building ſuch is ſaid to come from the fact of Iſaac, Gen. 24. 62, 63. where 'tis ſaid that he went out into the field, to a well to pray, ſaith the Chaldee paraphraſe, and therefore they built theſe proſeuchæ in fields for the moſt part, near fountains, or rivers, or brooks ſides, which the Idolaters imitated, Iſa. 57. 6. (and ſuch perhaps it was where they prayed ch. 21. 5. a little way without the city, and upon a ſhore) or on mountains, as that Lu. 6. which the Idolaters imitated alſo. Now that this here was ſuch an one, will appear not onely by that which is here ſaid of Paul, that he ſate down, and ſpake to the women, making it a place not to pray, but to preach, but alſo by the expreſſe words of Epiphanius, t. 2. l. 3. c. 80. There were, ſaith he, antiently ſome places of prayer without the city, both in Judæa, and among the Samaritans, and there is a place of prayer in Shechem, (which is now called Neapolis) without the city, &c. Which is neer this very place which is here ſpoken of, v. 1. Beſides, the Syriack is diſtinct and punctuall in rendring it בית צלותא a houſe of prayer. All the difficulty will be, what is the meaning of ἐνομίζετο εἶναι, which is here added. The

Ἐνομίζετο εἶναι

Syriack

Syriack reads becauſe there ſeemed to be an houſe of prayer: and ſo the ancient Greek and Latine MS. reads ἐδόκει, which may be interpreted either that there was an oratory there, (as δοκεῖν and videri are oft but expletives; ſee Note on Mat. 3. e.) or elſe that in their paſſage to Philippi, as they came from Neapolis, there ſeemed to them to be ſuch a place, or they ſaw it by the way. The Kings MS. that reads ἐνομίζομεν, we thought, agrees fully with this ſenſe, we thought being all one with it ſeemed to us. But if the ordinary reading be retained, then νομιζόμενος, ſaith Budeus, ſignifies in fama aut exiſtimatione eſſe, and then 'twill be beſt rendred, where an houſe of prayer was fam'd, or reputed, to be. There is alſo another notion of the word, for conſecrating, and ſo νομιζόμενοι ξύλοι τῶ ἱερῶ, are the conſecrated boughs of the Temple, 2 Mac. 14. 4. but that ſeems not ſo proper for this place.

b. Πύθωνα πνεῦμα

V. 6. Spirit of divination] Python was a name of the city Delphos, where Oracles were delivered by the Devil, and they that propheſied there were called by that name Πύθωνες Pythons. From thence the word was accommodated to other ſorts of diviners, eſpecially to the ἐγγαστρίμυθοι thoſe out of whoſe bellies (as the Oracles out of caves) the devil ſpake. Of theſe ſee Photii Epiſt. ρνα'. p. 206. Τὸ ἀμφολᾶ ον τῆ ἀνθρωπίνη γαστὶ πονηρὸν, καὶ ἄξιον τὸ κατοικεῖν οἰκεῖν, ἀκάθαρτον πνεῦμα, λίαν ἀμφοτέρως περισωματικασιν Ἐγγαστρίμυθον, The wicked and unclean ſpirit, that inhabits a mans belly as a ſerpent his hole in the earth, and being unclean, is fit to dwell in that place which is the receptacle of ordure, they appoſitely call Engaſtrimuthus. This, ſaith he, the Grecians commonly call Ἐνπερίμανλιν, the diviner from the guts, others Ἐγγαστρίμανλιν, the diviner in the belly. But Sophocles and Plato being aſhamed that their Damon ſhould have ſuch a dwelling, one of them, ἀντὶ γαστρὸς αὐτῶ τὰ στέρνα χαειτάμενος, Στερνόμανλιν μετωνόμαζεν, in ſtead of the belly allow'd him the breaſt, and called him the diviner out of the breaſt; and the other called every ſuch by the name of Eurycles, a perſon who had been famous for this, and ſo tranſmitted the appellation to all other the like. And of this kind of devil, ſaith he, which loves to dwell in the ordure both of men and women, Λαὸπλανον τοῦτο καὶ τῆς ἐσχάτης ἀπωλείας τοῖς περισέχειν αὐτῶ ἀναπεπισμένοις πρόξενον, It is a great deceiver of people, and author of deſtruction to all that give eare to it. That this is it which is here meant by Πύθωνος πνεῦμα, the ſpirit of Python, appears by Heſychius, being read, as that place ought to be, Ἐγγαστρίμυθος——(not as we now read without any ſenſe, τοῦτον ἡμεῖς πάντων ἰῶ καλεῦμεν, but) τοῦτον ἡμεῖς Πύθωνα νῦν καλεῦμεν, we now call this Python. Theſe the Hebrew calls אובים, from אוב the belly; and the reaſon is rendred by Galen, becauſe they ſpeak without opening their mouth, and ſo ſeem to ſpeak out of the belly. Theſe are they that have familiar ſpirits, Lev. 19. 31.

c. Ρηξάντες ἱμάτια

V. 22. Rent off their cloths] Among the rites of ſcourging, this of rending the garments aſunder is mention'd for one, in Miſchna, c. 3. Both hands are tied to the pillar on both ſides, then the officer of the ſynagogue, the ὑπηρέτης, the miniſter, that is, lictor, takes hold of his garments, not caring whether he tear, or rip them, till his breaſt be quite uncovered. And the Roman faſhion was agreeable.

CHAP. XVII.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOw when they had paſſed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to [Theſſalonica,] where was a ſynagogue of the Jewes.

1. Theſſalonica, another metropolis of Macedonia.

2. And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three ſabbath daies reaſoned with them out of the Scriptures,

3. * Opening and alledging, that [Chriſt] muſt needs have ſuffered, and riſen again from the dead; and that this Jeſus whom I preach unto you, is Chriſt.

3. The Meſſias promiſed to the Jewes

4. And ſome of them believed and conſorted with Paul and Silas; and of the † devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.]

4. And ſome of the Jewes received the faith, and aſſociated with Paul and Silas, and many alſo of the Grecians, which were Proſelytes, and many women of better quality.

5. But the Jewes which believed not, * moved with envie, took unto them certain † leud fellowes [of the baſer ſort, and gathered a company, and ſet all the citie on an uproar, and aſſaulted the houſe of Jaſon, and ſought to bring them out to the people.]

5. of thoſe which call the people together on occaſion, (ſee note on Mar. 7. b.) and raiſing the city, they ſet upon Jaſon's houſe, ſearching for Paul and Silas, meaning to bring them out to the people, as enemies of the publick peace.

6. And when they found them not, they drew Jaſon and certain [brethren unto the rulers of the city,] crying, Theſe that have * ª turned the world upſide down, are come hither alſo,

6. believers, Chriſtians unto the Officers of the city: See note on c. 19. f.

7. Whom Jaſon hath received: [and theſe all doe contrary to the decrees of Cæſar,] ſaying that there is another king, one Jeſus.

7. and their doctrine is quite contrary to Cæſars authority over us,

8. And [they troubled the people and the rulers of the city,] when they heard theſe things.

8. the people and magiſtrates were troubled: ſee note on Lu. 16. b.

9. And when they had taken ſecurity of Jaſon and of the other, they let them goe.

10. And the brethren immediately ſent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berœa; who coming thither went into the ſynagogue of the Jewes.

11. Theſe were [more † noble then thoſe in Theſſalonica, * in that they received the word with all readineſſe of mind, and ſearched the Scriptures daily, whether thoſe things were ſo.]

11. of a more ingenuous, mild, (ſee Chryſoſtome) pliable temper, more receptive of the Chriſtian doctrine then thoſe of Theſſalonica, and they readily embraced the Goſpel, and ſpent their time every day in ſearching the Scriptures, and obſerving whether what was thus taught by Paul were agreeable with that which the Scriptures ſay of the Meſſias.

12. Therefore many of them believed: alſo of honorable women, which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.]

12. Many therefore of thoſe Jewes received the faith, and ſo likewiſe of the Gentiles many of the better ſort, both women and men.

13. But

13. And when thoſe Jewes of Theſſalonica, which oppoſed Paul there,

13. But when the Jewes of Theſſalonica] had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berœa, they came thither alſo, and ſtirred up the people.

14. And ſuddenly the Chriſtians, to delude the perſecuters, ſent Paul toward the ſea ſide as if he meant to take ſhip, whereas he meant to goe a foot to Athens.

14. And immediately the brethren ſent away Paul, to goe as it were to the ſea;] but Silas and Timotheus abode there ſtill.

15. And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens: and receiving a commandement unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all ſpeed, they departed.

16. Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, his ſpirit was † ſtirred in him * when he ſaw the city [b] wholly given to idolatry.

† exaſperated with him παρῳξύνετο ἐν αὐτῷ *ſeeing their city to be full of Idols

b.

17. And thereupon he did not onely preach in the ſynagogue of the Jewes to the Jewes and Proſelytes, but in other places of concourſe he took occaſion to make known the Chriſtian doctrine to all the heathens that he met with there.

And though they were left through their ſinnes, as in the dark, in groſſe ignorance, yet was God ſo palpably to be diſcerned that by feeling, or groping, as blind men in that dark, they might, if they would but ſeek, find him, who is indeed very neer every one of us, even as the ſoule that animates every one.

30. And 'tis certainly long enough, that men have gone on in ſuch prodigious conceits as this: Be it therefore now known unto you, that there is place of repentance, if you will make haſt to accept it: For God not looking, or faſtning his eyes upon the continued idolatry of the heathens for many years, (which might provoke him to deſert them for ever) now ſends us to you their progeny, to call you to repentance, enters a new covenant with you, as well as others, a covenant of free pardon upon reformation.

Annotations

V. 6. Turned the world upside down] What ἀναστατώσαντες signifies, will best be discerned by the use of the word Gal. 5. 12. there we render it troubling, and so it appears to signifie by comparing it with v. 10. ὁ δὲ ταράσσων, but he that troubleth you shall bear his own judgement, as before he said, c. 1. 7. εἰ μή τινές εἰσιν οἱ ταράσσοντες, but that there are some that trouble you. So Act. 15. 24. the same is exprest'd, τινὲς ἐτάραξαν ὑμᾶς λόγοις, some troubled you with words. And thus we may resolve by the use of other Authors, Ἀναστατῶν, saith * Eustathius, is ἀναστάτους ποιεῖν, and that ἀβασιλεύτους ποιεῖν, to put in disorder, or confusion, such as in state of Anarchy: and * in the same place he interprets ἀνεστάτωσεν by ταράξας ἐξεγερεῖ, to stirre up by troubling, or disturbing. Contrary to this is καλάσασις, a quiet tranquillity, and so is used by the Stoicks and Epicureans for ἀταραξία untroubledness. Thus Cicero renders κατασάσεις sometimes constantias, sometimes sedationes, as the contrary perturbationes. And then ἀναταλῶν contrary to καταύσασις, must be to disturb, disquiet, stirre up. And so it will most properly be here rendred also, in the same sense that ἀκαταστασία is used, Jam. 3. 16. for disturbance, confusion, &c.

ἀκαταστασία

V. 16. Wholly given to idolatrie] Κατείδωλος πόλις is a city full of images, or idols, or altars erected to the Gods, and much given to the worship of them. That Athens was such, appears by Pausanias, the number of the Simulacra, or εἴδωλα there, being more then in all Greece besides: so saith Philostratus in Apollonius's travail thither, φιλοθύτας τὸς Ἀθηναίους εἶδεν, de vit. Apollon. l. 4. c. 6. he saw the Athenians were lovers of devotion, of sacrificing, &c. And therefore in his discourse with Timasion, he tells him, σωφρονέστερον δὲι πάντων θεῶν λέγειν εὖ, καὶ ταῦτα Ἀθήνησιν, It was the soberest way to speak well of all Gods, especially at Athens, where there were altars of unknown Gods. See Suidas in Τιμασίων. So saith Pausanias, that they did εὐσεβεῖν θεὸς ἄλλων πλέον expresse more piety to the Gods then any; and presently adds, as an evidence of their piety, that they had altars αἰδοῦς, φήμης, καὶ ὁρμῆς, of Bashfulnesse, of Fame, and of Desire, and again, Ἀθηναίοις θειοτέρειν τι ἢ τοῖς ἄλλοις εἰς τὰ θεῖα δοκεῖ σπουδῆς, they exceed all in their diligence about the Gods. So Strabo, Ἀθηναῖοι ᾧ ὥσπερ δὲι τὰ ἄλλα φιλοξενοῦντες διατελοῦσιν, ἅπω καὶ δὲι τοὺς θεοὺς, πολλὰ δὴ τῶν ξενικῶν ἱερῶν παρεδέξατο, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐκωμωδήθη, Their hospitality to strangers extends to the Gods too, being very ready to receive in any strange worships. So Himerius, in his Declamation against Epicurus, when, saith he, I named Athens, τὸ μίγιστον εἶπον εὐσεβείας κεφάλαιον, I named the greatest summe of piety. So Theophylact, setting down the full inscription of the Altar, v. 23. Θεοῖς Ἀσίας, καὶ Εὐρώπης, καὶ Λιβύης, Θεῷ ἀγνώστῳ καὶ ξένῳ, supposes them to have received all the strange Gods of the world, of Asia, Europe, Africk, and moreover one strange one, which they knew not, who or whence he was. Whereas Dionysius Halic. speaking of the Romans, saith, they did rather μισοξενῶν δὲι θεὺς, then φιλοξενῶν, were very unkind and unhospitable to strange Gods. And Maximus Tyrius διαλ. λβ'. ὁ Ἀθηναίων δῆμος ἔπεχε καινὰ δαιμόνια ἐπισωρεύων, The common people of Athens brought in other new Gods. And Josephus 2. cont. Appion. Ἀθηναίους τ' Ἑλλήνων εὐσεβεστάτους πάντες λέγουσιν, All men say that the Athenians are the most pious of all the Gracians: and Sophocles Oedip. Col. Οὐ' ἔνεκ' ἔπης γῆ θεὸς ἐπίσεται Τιμαῖς ζεβάζειν, ἥτε τῶδ' ὑπερφέρει, This city goes beyond all in worshipping and honouring the Gods. This here is the meaning of δεισιδαιμονεστέρους ὑμᾶς θεωρῶ, v. 23. I see you more addicted to the worship of the Gods then others; as it farther appears by their ζεβάσματα, which Paul in passage takes notice of, v. 23. (not their worships, or their altars, but their Idols, that is, their Deities themselves, for so the word is used Wisd. 14. 20. see 2 Thess. 2. Note f.) among which, saith he, was an altar to an unknown God.

b. κατείδωλος

V. 18. Babbler] The notion of the word σπερμολόγος (all one with σπερμονόμος) is clear by the concurrence of the Grammarians in their explication of the Attick word, as it is proverbially used among them, & by the Greek Fathers upon this place, both generally agreeing, that the word primarily signifies εἶδος ὀρνέου, a sort of bird, that was wont to be about the streets, λωβώμενον τὰ ζαίσματα picking up the seeds. So Oecumenius and Phavorinus; from whence, say they, the Attick writers applied the word proverbially to those that doe περὶ ἐμπόρια καὶ ἀγορὰς διατρίβειν, spend their time in the streets, at faires and markets, that is, very idly; and from hence, say they, it comes to signifie τὸς εὐτελεῖς καὶ ἀδένδς λόγου ἀξίους, mean, vile persons, that are worth nothing. And so Eustathius on Homer Ὀδυσ. β'. and Suidas also.

c. Σπερμολόγος

Ib. Jesus and the resurrection] That Jesus and ἀνάστασις, the resurrection, were by them taken to be (both of them) δαιμόνια ξένα, new, or strange, Gods, is not onely affirmed by some of the Fathers, but very reasonable to believe, when we remember out of Pausanias, that αἰδὼς, and φήμη, and ὁρμὴ, Modesty, and Fame, and Vehement desire, were Gods, and had Altars erected to them by these Athenians. See Note a.

d. Ἰησοῦς καὶ ἀνάστασις

V. 19. Areopagus] Their Areopagus was their Senate, or standing court of judicature, in Athens, by whose lawes and orders any new Gods were received among them; & therefore assoon as they conceived that Paul was καταγγελεὺς ξενῶν δαιμονίων, a promulger of new strange deities, they bring him to the Areopagus, to have him examined, what Gods they were that he thus preach'd. Two judicatures they had in Athens; one every year changed, made up of five hundred chosen men, of whom the Republick consisted; the other perpetual, which judged of Murthers, and the like capital offences, and this was in Areopago: of which and the customes thereof, see Budæus on the Pandects. This Juvenal calls curiam Martis, and * Pausanias tells us, that it was so called, because when Mars had killed Neptunes son Alirrothius, he was the first that was there judged. Ἄρειος πάγος καλεῖται, ὅτι πρῶτος Ἄρης ἐντάυθα ἐκρίθη. But this, saith * S. Austine, Varro would not yeeld to, but produces another original of it, de obscurarum notitia literarum out of the knowledge of dark learning. The word πάγος in the composition signifies a rock, or rise of an hill: so saith Suidas, it is called Ἄρειος πάγος, ὅτι ἐν τῷ πάγῳ ἐστὶ, καὶ ἐν ὕψει τὸ δικαστήριον, because the judicature is on a pagus, and on an ascent or high place; and Stephanus Byzantius out of Apollodorus, Ἄρειος πάγος ἀκρωτήριον Ἀθήνησιν, it is an eminent place, or hill, at Athens; and so * Isidore Pelus. πάγος ὁ ὑψηλὸς τόπος, it is an high place, ἐν δὲ ὄχθῳ τινὶ ὢν τὸ δικαστήριον ἐκεῖνο, for that judicature was on an ascent, or upper ground. Then for the other part in the composition [Ἄρειος] it denotes, as they both say, the sort of the causes which were there judged, viz. Murthers, &c. So Stephanus, ἐν ᾧ τὰς φονικὰς κρίσεις ἐδίκαζον, διὰ τὰς ὑπὸ σιδήρου γινομένας μαφονίας, in it they judged causes of murther, because such were done by the sword: and Suidas, Ἄρειος δὲ ἐπὶ τὰ φονικὰ δικάζει, it is so called, because it judgeth causes of murther, ὁ δὲ Ἄρης ἐπὶ τῷ φόνῳ, and Mars is used for murthers; yet having before said, τὰ ἄλλα πολιτικὰ διώκει σωφρόνως, it administers other affaires of the Commonwealth very wisely. By this it appears, how fit it is to retain in Latine and other languages the com-compound Greek, rather than to divide it, as the Engliſh have done into Mars's hill, as if it had its denomination from that heathen God of warre, which is not acknowledged, nor intimated in the word. Now the Judges which ſat in this Court, (and not the inhabitants that dwelt in that part of the city) were called Ἀρειοπαγῖται Areopagites, men famed for their gravity, and uprightneſs in judging, not admitting rhetorical pleas, but ſimple narrations, chooſing the dark, that they might not be moved to compaſſion by the ſight of the malefactor, and giving their judgement without a word ſpeaking. And this judicature was by all look'd on with ſuch reverence, that an Areopagite ſignified proverbially an excellent perſon; and when the Romans had conquered Greece, and ſent their Proconſuls of Aſia to rule there, they frequently committed difficult cauſes to the judgement of theſe Areopagites. So did Dolabella in Gellius, l. 12. c. 7. Rem Athenas ad Areopagitas, ut ad judices graviores exercitatioréſque, rejecit, ſaith he, He referred the cauſe to them, as to Judges more grave and exerciſed (and ſo skilled) than ordinary. And becauſe to theſe belonged the affaires of Religion, and accordingly Anaxagoras for teaching that the Sun, which they deemed a God, was a fire-ſtone, and Diagoras as a derider of their Gods, had been condemned to death by them, and ſo Protagoras, and Socrates alſo, and Plutarch ſaith of Euripides, l. 1. c. 7. De plac. Phil. that having ſome doubts of the Gods, he durſt not openly profeſs it, fearing the judicature of the Areopagites; therefore is Paul here brought before them, as an aſſertor and preacher of ſuch a Deity as they had not admitted among them. And one of theſe judges, Dionyſius v. 34. therefore called the Areopagite, was converted by his diſcourſe there.

Ἀρειοπαγῖται.

f. Δεισιδαιμονία

V. 22. Too ſuperſtitious] What is the notion of δεισιδαιμονία ſuperſtition, doth here deſerve to be conſidered. And by what hath been ſaid of κατείδωλον (Note a.) 'twill ſoon appear that in this place δεισιδαιμονέστερους more ſuperſtitious then ordinary, ſignifying the worſhip of more Gods then other cities worſhip'd, the Poſitive δεισιδαίμων and the Subſtantive δεισιδαιμονία muſt denote no more then the worſhip of God; and accordingly it followes v. 23. ὃν οὖν εὐσεβεῖτε, whom ye worſhip, ἀγνοοῦντες, not knowing who it was. Thus ch. 25. 19. Feſtus, or S. Luke in his ſtory, ſaith, that the Jewes had certain ζητήματα queſtions, or accuſations againſt Paul, περὶ τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας concerning his own religion, or ſuperſtition, or worſhip peculiar to him from them, and (as it follows to explain what he meant by the word) περί τινος Ἰησοῦ τεθνηκότος, of one Jeſus that was dead, putting him under the vulgar notion of a δαίμων or dead Heros, and ſo meaning the worſhip of him by δεισιδαιμονία. Thus in the Greek and Latine Lexicon at the end of Cyril, Δεισιδαιμονία, ſuperſtitio, religio, rendring it indifferently by thoſe two: So in Athenæus, δεισιδαιμονία ἀπέχεσθαι, is religione teneri, to be held by religion, and ſo rendred by Budæus, as δεισιδαιμονία is rendred Religio by Cicero, and in an antient Gloſſary, Δεισιδαίμων, Θεοσεβὴς, it ſignifies a worſhipper of the Gods. And the word being compounded of δαίμων, and δείδω to fear, it is rendred by Heſychius φοβοθεία, fearing God, or religion, by others φόβος θεῶν καὶ δαιμόνων, the fear of Gods and Dæmons; but this Fear ſometimes in an ill ſenſe, for cowardiſe; and ſo ſaith the Etymologiſt, Δεισιδαίμων, εὐλαβὴς καὶ δειλὸς περὶ θεούς, both pious and cowardly toward the Gods, and Clemens, ἡ γοῦν δεισιδαιμονία πάθος, Strom. p. 377. Superſtition is a paſſion, being a fear of the Dæmons; and Theophraſtus, Char. π. δεισιδ. δειλία πρὸς τὸ δαιμόνιόν ἐστι, 'tis a cowardly fear of, or toward, the dæmon: and accordingly Maximus Tyrius having compared a pious man to a friend, a ſuperſtitious to a flatterer, ὁ μὲν εὐσεβὴς φίλος θεῷ, ὁ δὲ δεισιδαίμων κόλαξ θεοῦ, he explains the meaning in the following words, the pious comes to God ἀνὰ δίκης without fear, the ſuperſtitious μετὰ πολλῆς δίκης with much fear, doubting μὴ δεδιὼς τοὺς θεοὺς ὥσπερ τοὺς τυράννους, dreading the Gods as ſo many tyrants. So ſaith Diodorus Siculus of Bomilcar l. 2. p. 779. δεισιδαίμονές εἰσιν οἱ μέλλοντες ἐγχειρεῖν τοῖς παρανόμοις καὶ μεγάλαις πράξεσι, they that are about to undertake any unlawfull and great actions are generally afraid of the Gods, or dæmons; whence is that of Plutarch in Alex. οὐκ οἴεται ὁ ἄθεος θεοὺς εἶναι, ὁ δὲ δεισιδαίμων ὑ βούλεται, the Atheiſt thinks there are no Gods, the ſuperſtitious wiſhes there were none. And accordingly the Epicureans, and the Cyrenaici that were ſo much againſt ſuperſtition, expreſſe themſelves to mean by it τὸν περὶ θανάτου φόβον the fear of any thing after death, of the puniſhments of God after this life. And ſo thoſe that did not believe this, and withall thought it a very painfull, inconvenient errour, for any man to believe it, generally ſpake of δεισιδαιμονία ſuperſtition, and ſo of Religion too, as of an ill thing. And ſo it goes in Plutarchs tract. π. δεισιδαιμ. as another extreme, contrary to Atheiſme, an aſtoniſhment of ſoul, looking on the Gods as ſo many δαίμονα ſpirits, or furies, cruel, bloody-minded, &c. which rather then he would believe, he profeſſes he would wiſh μηδὲ εἶναι Πλούταρχον that he had never been; and this he looks on with moſt abhorrence in the Jewes, δεισιδαιμονίᾳ ὡς ταινίᾳ ζωσθέντες, they are, ſaith he, tied and bound with their religion, or ſuperſtition, as with a net, that they could not move for it. This therefore being acknowledged, that among the Heathens the word hath ſometimes upon this ſcore been taken in an ill ſenſe, and Superſtition and Religion indifferently ſpoken againſt, as believing it an error that the Gods would puniſh men for what they did in this life; it remains that they of them that were not thus bent, doe generally ſpeak of δεισιδαιμονία ſuperſtition with a great reverence, generally in a good, not evil, ſenſe, the ſame that they allow to Religion it ſelf. Thus Polybius of the Romans l. 16. p. 497. giving his opinion of their government that it excell'd others extremely ἐν τῇ περὶ θεῶν διαλήψει, in the apprehenſion they had of the Gods, he expreſſes what it was he ſo commends, λέγω δὴ δεισιδαιμονίαν, I mean their ſuperſtition, which δὴ σφόδρα ἐπεξηγμένη καὶ πεφαντασμένα, was ſo cried up, and taken in to all their affairs, ὥστε μὴ καταλιπεῖν ὑπερβολήν, that it did not fall ſhort of ſuperlative; which though 'twere among other men made matter of reproach to them, παρὰ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀνθρώποις ὀνειδιζόμενον, yet he thinks fit extremely to extoll it as that which ſeem'd to him μεγίστην διαφορὰν ἔχειν πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον, to be very much for the better, καὶ ζωπυρεῖν τὰ Ῥωμαίων πράγματα, and to keep their affairs in good order. Thus Diod. Siculus l. 5. p. 305. ſpeaking of the antient Gaules, There lies, ſaith he, in their temples a great deal of gold conſecrated to their Gods, which yet none of the natives ἅπτονται touch, that is, ſteal away, διὰ δεισιδαιμονίαν, becauſe of their ſuperſtition, that is, reverence which they bear to their Gods, καίτοι ὄντων τῶν Κελτῶν φιλαργύρων καὶ πλεονεκτικωτάτων, though the men are extremely covetous. So the ſame author ſpeaking of Imilco l. 14. p. 295. After an act of ſacrilege, ſaith he, he condemned himſelf, and died, πολλὰ τοῖς πολίταις ἀπολιπὼν δεισιδαιμονίαν, leaving to his citizens much ſuperſtition, which the Interpreter rightly renders Dei reverentiam reverence of God. So in Heraclitus περὶ ἀπίστ. ſpeaking of Orpheus κεφ. κγ'. εἰς δεισιδαιμονίαν ἀγαγὼν, καὶ ὅτι τὸ εὐσεβεῖν παρεκελεύσατο, leading to ſuperſtition, or the worſhip of the Gods, and exhorting them to be pious, making ſuperſtition and piety all one exactly. So in an Edict of the Emperour Tiberius ſet down by Joſephus, l. 19. c. 4. where immunities are by him allow'd allow'd the Jews on condition that they miſuſe not the Emperours kindneſſe towards them, καὶ μὴ τὰς ἄλλων ἐθνῶν δεισιδαιμονίας ὑπερφρονεῖν, and that they do not ſet at nought the ſuperſtitions, that is, Religions (ſome of which he that wrote the Edict thought to be true, and therefore took that care of them) of other nations. And though being by the Heathens uſed for the worſhip not of the true God, but of their Dæmons, (dead men, and Angels deified by them) it be juſtly deteſted by us Chriſtians, yet ſtill this is not an argument that that word is uſed in an ill ſenſe, any otherwiſe then Religion it ſelf is alſo, becauſe falſe, heatheniſh religions are look'd on with the ſame averſation alſo by all that count them ſuch: to which agrees that of the Etymologiſt, ἰτέον ὅτι σεβάς μὲν τοῖς Ἕλλησι ὅσιὸν καλῶς λαμβάνεται, παρ' ἡμῖν τοῖς Χριστιανοῖς ἐπὶ τῆς ἀσεβείας λέγεται, the word among the heathens is taken for a good thing, but among us Chriſtians for impiety. Beſides theſe there is yet one farther acception of the word, for the uſe of magicall ſpells, ligatures, characters &c. execranda ſuperſtitio ligaturarum, quibus inaures, &c. non ad placendum hominibus, ſed ad ſerviendum dæmonibus adhibetur, Aug. Ep. 73. that execrable ſuperſtition of ligatures, among which are the ear-rings, &c. uſed not to pleaſe men, but to ſerve devils. Of theſe indeed there were ſtore among the worſhippers of falſe Gods, a catalogue of which Clemens Alex. Str. 3. p. 312. tells us was to be ſeen in Menanders comedy called Δεισιδαίμων, ſcoffing at thoſe which make every accident almoſt σημεῖόν τινος a ſign of ſomething, divine by the flight of birds (Δεξιὸς ὄρνις, Αἰετὸς ὑψιπέτης in Homer) the feeding of chickens, by the ῥαβδομαντεία, ſtriking a ſtaffe againſt the ground (to which the Prophet is thought to referre, Hoſ. 4. 12.) κληδομαντεία, and the reſt of the ἐναίσιμα σήματα auſpicious ſignes, (ἀστεροπὴν ὄπιθεν δεξιὴν' lightning on the right ſide, Hom. Il. 2.) which they that uſed are by Suidas ſaid δεισιδαιμονεῖν ἐπὶ τοῖς σημείοις, to be ſuperſtitious obſervers of ſignes. See Aug. de doctr. Chr. l. 2. The like may be ſaid of ominous and auſpicious days, the not obſerving of which Heſiod makes to be impiety, and deſignes his whole book of Ἡμέρας to that purpoſe,

——————Ὀλβίοις ὃς τάδε πάντα
Εἰδὼς ἐργάζηται, ἀναίτιος ἀθανάτοισιν,
Ὀρνίθας κείνων, καὶ ὑπερβασίας ἀλεείνων. Theſe being heatheniſh obſervations conſequent to their Religions, as they are juſtly branded by thoſe that diſlike their Religions, ſo among them that diſliked them not they were taken for branches of piety alſo, and ſo ſtill faſten no ill character upon this word abſolutely conſidered.

V. 23. To the unknown God] Concerning this Altar at Athens inſcribed to the unknown God, there is a famous ſtory in Laertius in Epimenid. that in time of peſtilence at Athens, Epimenides being accounted by them θεοφιλέστατον, one moſt beloved of God, was conſulted by them, who appointed this luſtration for the city. Taking many ſheep black and white he brought them into Areopagus, and permitted them to goe whither they would, appointing ſome to follow each, and whereever they lay down, there to kill and ſacrifice them προσηκόντι θεῷ, to a fit God, or to a God to whom ſacrifices were due, and ſo the plague ceaſed, ὅθεν ἔτι καὶ νῦν ὅτιν εὑρῶν κατὰ τοὺς δήμους τῶν Ἀθηναίων βωμὸς ἀνωνύμους, whence, ſaith he, is it that among the Athenians in publick places there are Altars that have no names on them. So Heſychius, Θεοὶ ξενικοὶ παρὰ Ἀθηναίοις τιμῶνται, ὡς καταλέγει Ἀπολλοφάνης ἐν Κρητίνῃ, Strange Gods are worſhipped among the Athenians, which Apollophanes reckons up in his Cretians. So in Philoſtratus l. 6. c. 7. of Apollonius mentioning Athens, ἃ καὶ ἀγνώστων δαιμόνων βωμοὶ ἱδρῦνται, ſaith he, where are built altars of unknown dæmons, or Spirits, or Gods. And ſo Lucian in his Philopater, Νὴ τὸν ἄγνωστον ἐν Ἀθήναις, By the unknown God at Athens. And Ἡμεῖς γε τὸν ἐν Ἀθήναις ἄγνωστον εὑρόντες καὶ προσκυνήσαντες, χεῖρας εἰς οὐρανὸν ἐκτείναντες τούτῳ εὐχαριστήσομεν, We having found and worſhipt the unknown God at Athens, will ſtretch out our hands to heaven, and give thanks to him. And ſo ſaith Pauſanias, that there were at Athens Altars of unknown Gods. And the ſame Author mentions among the Lydians or Perſians ſome Sacrifices, that by invocation of an unknown God, and a forme which he calls barbarous, becauſe not underſtood by the Græcians (the God of Abraham, &c.) brought fire down, and burnt the wood upon the Altar, Eliac. l. 1. which is a deſcription of the πυρφορία θεία mentioned by Strabo l. 15. which may well be thought an imitation of that fact of Elias in Ahabs time, who by invoking the name of God brought down fire upon the Altar. Of Saint Pauls making uſe of this inſcription at Athens againſt the Heathens, ſee Photii Epiſt. ξβ'. p. 114.

V. 28. In him we live] This ſeems to have reference to an old Iambick

Ζῶμεν δ' ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ κινούμεθα,

Καὶ ἐσμέν-In him we live theſe mortal lives, and move, and are. And ſo that which followes will be more literally true, ὡς τινες as ſome, urging two ſayings of the Pagans, this, and that of Aratus following.

CHAP. XVIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. After theſe things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth,

2. And found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with Priſcilla his wife, (becauſe that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome)] and came unto them.

2. (Claudius the Emperor of Rome having about this time, toward the latter end of his reign (ſee note on c. 26 a.) made an Edict to baniſh the Jews out of his dominions, eſpecially from Rome, and Italy, and thoſe parts.)

3. And becauſe he was of the ſame craft, he abode with them, and wrought; (for by their occupation they were tent-makers.)]

3. And Paul being by trade a tent-maker as they were, aſſociated and wrought in his trade with them, 1 Cor. 4. 12. and 9. 6, 12.

4. And he reaſoned in the ſynagogue every Sabbath, and perſwaded the Jews and the Greeks.]

4. And every Sabbath he preached the Goſpel in the Synagogues of the Jews, labouring to convince them all that were preſent, both Jews and Grecians, viz. thoſe that were Greeks by birth, but Proſelytes to the Jews Religion.

5. And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, [Paul * was a preſſed in ſpirit, and teſtified to the Jewes that Jeſus was † Chriſt.]

5. Paul being extraordinarily troubled or grieved at the obſtinacy of his countreymen the Jewes, did his utmoſt to convince them that Jeſus was the Meſſias, or elſe he was very earneſt in diſcourſe, ſpake very vehemently to them on this ſubject, reſolving to make it his laſt, and (upon their refuſing) to preſſe no more, to leave them and preach to the Gentiles.

6. And when they oppoſed themſelves and * blaſphemed, he ſhook his raiment, and ſaid unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads, I am clean, from henceforth I will goe unto the Gentiles.]

6. And when they not only withſtood him, but railed or uſed him contumeliouſly, he uſed that ordinary ceremony of ſhaking his ſhooes, or other his garments, noting thereby his opinion of their great unworthineſſe of having the Goſpel farther preacht to them, and withall aboding ſad conſequents to them: And he ſaid unto them, Having thus warned you, I am free from the guilt of your deſtruction, which will certainly come upon you; I will ſtay no longer among you Jewes, but without any ſcruple preach to the Gentiles of this and other cities.

7. And going out of the ſynagogue he went into a private houſe in Corinth, the houſe of one Juſtus, by birth a Gentile, but a Jewiſh Proſelyte.

7. And he departed thence, & entred into a certain mans houſe, named Juſtus, one that worſhipped God, whoſe houſe joyned hard to the ſynagogue.

8. And Criſpus the chief ruler of the ſynagogue believed on the Lord with all his houſe: and many of the Corinthians hearing, believed and were baptized.

9, 10. Fear nothing, for I will be preſent with thee, to ſecure thee from all harme; but on the contrary, preach confidently in this place, conſidering that though ſome oppoſe, yet there be many pious men in this heathen wicked city, that will receive the Goſpel.

9. Then ſpake the Lord to Paul by night in a viſion, [Be not afraid, but ſpeak and hold not thy peace,

10. For I am with thee, and no man ſhall ſet on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city.]

11. preaching the Goſpel to them of Corinth, and of all Achaia, and farther inſtructing and confirming them that received it.

11. And he continued there a year and ſix months, [teaching the word of God among them.]

12. But the Jewes throughout the whole region of Achaia, banded againſt him, and brought him before the tribunal of Gallio the Proconſul of that province,

12. † And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia, the Jewes * made inſurrection with one accord againſt Paul, and brought him to the judgment-ſeat,]

† And Gallio being Proconſul, Γαλλίωνος δὲ ἀνθυπατεύοντος

* ſe. themſelves unanimouſly κατεστησαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν

13. another way then what the Law of the Jewes v. 15. determines.

13. Saying, This fellow perſwadeth men to worſhip God [contrary to the Law.]

14. See note on chap. 13. d.

14. And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio ſaid unto the Jewes, If it were a matter of wrong or [wicked † lewdneſſe,] O ye Jewes, * reaſon would that I ſhould bear with you.

† forgery ῥᾳδιουργημα

* in all reaſon I ſhould κατὰ λόγον ἂν ἀνεσχόμην

15. But ſeeing the queſtion betwixt you is only a verball controverſie, as whether Jeſus be to be called and acknowledged the Meſſias, and of names, whether it were lawfull for Chriſtians by that name, or by that of Diſciples &c. to diſtinguiſh themſelves from incredulous Jewes, and concerning the law of you Jewes, whether it condemn all Gentiles that are not circumciſed, and make it utterly unlawfull to converſe with ſuch, all which are things of that nature, that I underſtand not, and of which conſequently I am no competent Judge, and ſeeing there is yet no law ſet out by the Emperours againſt Chriſtian religion, (for this was in the reign of Claudius, who ſet out an Edict againſt the Jewes v. 2. but none againſt Chriſtians, any otherwiſe then as they were comprehended under the name of Jewes) this matter belongs not to my cognizance, I will not meddle with it, ſee note on chap. 26. a.

15. But if it be a queſtion † of words, and names, and of your Law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of ſuch matters.]

† of a word περὶ λόγου

16. And he caſt their enditement out of the court.

16. And he drave them from the judgment-ſeat.]

17. And Soſthenes, one of the rulers of the Jewiſh Conſiſtory there, which appeared in this complaint againſt Paul, was by ſome of the natives of Corinth, upon Gallio's ſhewing a diſlike of their buſineſſe, v. 16. ſtrucken in the court, and the Proconſul took no notice of it.

17. Then all the Greeks took Soſthenes, the chief ruler of the ſynagogue, and beat him before the judgment-ſeat: and Gallio cared for none of theſe things.]

18. who had made a vow of a Nazarite, for a time not to ſhave his head, after which expired, it was the manner to cut it ſolemnly, and accordingly ſo he did at Cenchrea.

18. And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and ſailed thence into Syria, and with him Priſcilla and Aquila, [having ſhorne his head in Cenchrea; for he [b] had a vow.]

b.

19. And in his way to Syria, v. 18. he came to.

19. And he came to] Epheſus, and left them there: but he himſelf entred into the ſynagogue, and reaſoned with the Jewes.

20. When they deſired him to tarry longer time with them, he conſented not,

21. I will be at Jeruſalem before the Paſſeover, but after that I deſign with God's help to return to you.

21. But bade them farewell, ſaying, [I muſt by all means keep this feaſt that cometh in Jeruſalem; but I will return again unto you, if God will:] and he ſailed from Epheſus.

22. And in his journey to Jeruſalem, he landed (not at Joppa one haven to Jeruſalem, but a very dangerous one, but) at Cæſarea Stratonis, as his ſafer landing, and from thence went up to Jeruſalem, and viſited the congregation of Chriſtians there, and having done ſo and there kept the feaſt, he went thence to Antioch.

c.

22. And when he had landed at Cæſarea, and [c] gone up, and ſaluted the Church, he went down to Antioch.]

23. confirming and farther inſtructing all the new converted Chriſtians.

23. And after he had ſpent ſome time there, he departed, and went over all the countrey of Galatia and Phrygia in order, [ſtrengthning all the diſciples.]

24. one that had a great inſight and skill in the Scriptures of the old Teſtament, ſee v. 28.

24. And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and [mighty in the Scriptures,] came to Epheſus.

25. This Apollos had been inſtructed in the Goſpel, and being in reſpect of knowledge not ſo perfectly inſtructed in all things as yet, ſee v. 26. yet being very zealous in the way wherein he was entred, he began to preach the Goſpel among them out of the Prophets, inſtructing them in the Chriſtian doctrine very truly, and agreeably to the rule taught by the Apoſtles as farre as his inſtruction went, and this before he was baptized with the Chriſtian baptiſme, being only received by John to the believing in him that was to come, (ſo as the Epheſian diſciples c. 19. 2.)

25. This man was inſtructed in the way of the Lord, and * being fervent in the Spirit, he ſpake and taught † diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptiſme of John.]

26. And he entred into the ſynagogue of the Jewes, and there publickly & confidently (ſee note on Joh. 7. a.) preacht the Goſpel. And Aquila and Priſcilla hearing that what he preached was all true, but yet wanted ſomewhat of that knowledge which they had attained to, (he having never aſcended above John's baptiſme, but they higher,) they communicated it unto him.

26. And he began to ſpeak * boldly in the ſynagogue: whom when Aquila and Priſcilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.]

Annotations on Chap. XVIII.

2. Συνείχετο τῷ πνεύματι

V. 5. Pressed in spirit] That which is in the ordinary printed copies συνείχετο τῷ πνεύματι is συνέχετο τῷ λόγῳ in the two great MSS. that of the Kings Library, that was sent from Constantinople, and the Gr. and Lat. one at Cambridge, sent them by Theo. Beza. And which of these is the most probable reading is not easily defined. Συνέχομαι signifies to be press'd or held fast Mat. 4. 24. Lu. 4. 37. Act. 28. 8. So συνέχεσθαι φόβῳ to be press'd or held with fear, Job 3. 24. and Luc. 8. 37. συνέχεσθαι οἴνῳ in Jeremy, to be held fast by wine, to be overcome by it; συμπλέκεσθαι, saith Hesychius, and again κρατεῖσθαι, to be intangled, or held fast, which as it really notes being in the power of another, so it may be applied to sorrow, or any other passion, as well as to fear, and peculiarly to sorrow. So συνοχὴ Luc. 21. 25. is used for anxiety, and 2 Cor. 2. 4. συνοχὴ καρδίας anguish of heart: and so πῶς συνέχομαι; how am I streightned, or pained? Luc. 12. 50. And thus according to the nature of the word, it may be proper enough for the place, with which soever it be joyned. If with πνεύματι, then 'tis either his own spirit, or the Spirit of God. If his own, then it may signifie him to have had some such extraordinary sorrow or grief upon him, to think of his obdurate impenitent countreymen, to whom he was then preaching with very little success. And so of Apollos we read v. 25. ζέων τῷ πνεύματι, that he burned in spirit, as when David saith, his heart was hot within him, and at last he spake with his tongue. And so if the Spirit of God, then 'tis that he was stirr'd up, carried or incited by God by revelation. But 'tis most ordinary for the word ἅγιον, holy, to be prefix'd to the word Spirit, when 'tis taken in this sense, as c. 16. 6. and so this last is not so probably the meaning: so likewise if it be τῷ λόγῳ in speech, it will then signifie no more then that he spake very earnestly, and that is the importance of διαμαρτύρεσθαι following, he testified and earnestly insisted on it, and prov'd that Jesus was indeed the Messias, which the Jewes denied. That this may be the meaning, appears not improbably by another parallel expression, ver. 28. for there as Apollos was doing the same thing that Paul here, earnestly labouring to convince the Jewes, that Christ was the Messias, so the expression peculiarly belongs to λόγῳ speech, not πνεῦμα spirit, ἐυτόνως δὲ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις (or, as I suppose it should be, τὸν Ἰουδαίους) διακατηλέγχετο δημοσίᾳ, he did publickly with intention, or earnestness of speech, convince the Jewes, demonstrating by the Scriptures that Jesus is the Christ. Where the force and power of his speech, and arguments contained in it, was that which was meant by ἐυτόνως. To what hath been said may be added, that the antient Greek and Latine MS. after Ἰησοῦν in the end of the verse, hath annexed these words, πολλῶν δὲ λόγων γενομένων καὶ γραφῶν διερμηνευομένων, and having had much speech and interpreted the Scriptures; which as it makes it more fully parallel with that of v. 28. so it enclines to the reading of λόγῳ, not πνεύματι, speech, not spirit.

Ζέων τῷ πνεύματι

Διαμαρτύρετο

Εὐτόνως

b. Εἶχεν εὐχὴν

V. 18. Had a vow] The εὐχὴν εἶχε had a vow here, is not to be referr'd to Paul, but to Aquila, for with his name is conjoyned κειράμενος, &c. shaving his head, without so much as a comma between in some printed copies. And it is not improbable, that when it is said v. 19. that Paul went to Ephesus, and left them there, the αὐτοῦ there should not denote Ephesus, to which but Cenchrea, from which he came, (for why should his leaving them at Ephesus be immediately subjoyned to his coming thither?) and this on this occasion, to purifie himself, and to be shaved, to which some stay, at least seven daies, was necessary. This vow was without all question the vow of the Nazarites among the Jewes, Num. 6 5. which was not alwaies for life, but sometimes for a determinate time, wherein they did κόμην τρέφειν, and not suffer the razor to come upon them; but when that time was past, then one part of the vow was, to be shaved v. 18. and to offer up the haire (called the haire of his separation) to put it in the fire, which is under the sacrifice of the peace-offerings; and accordingly here is shaving himself, for he had a vow. But because this is here done by him at Cenchrea, and not at Jerusalem (where the accomplishment of the vow was to be performed, as before at the dore of the tabernacle, Num. 6. 13. and as we see it performed here, Act. 21. 23.) therefore it is most probable that this shaving here, was not on the accomplishing of his vow, but upon some intervening legal pollution, in which case he was bound to offer for a cleansing, and on the seventh day to shave his head, and so begin the daies again, Num. 6. 11, 12. This probably might be done in any city, where a man happened to be so polluted: But that at the completion of the vow, when the daies of his separation were fulfilled, was to be at Jerusalem. The practise of this custome among the heathens, and the offering the haire (when 'twas cut) Ἀπόλλωνι κειροτρόφῳ, to Apollo that nourisheth haire, may be seen at large in Eustathius on Homer, Ιλιαδ. β'. ἐν καιρῷ ἀκμῆς, saith he, ἐκείροντο, καὶ πλόκαμον ἀνετίθουν Ἀπόλλωνι κειροτρόφῳ, and accordingly the haire so consecrated is by Æschylus called θρεπτήριος, haire that had been nourished some time. See c. 21. 24.

Bas. Ed. p. 124.

V. 22. Gone up] That the Church here signifies not the Christians of Cæsarea, but the Church of Jerusalem, appears v. 21. where the reason of his departure from Ephesus is, that he may keep the feast at Jerusalem, which cannot be, if he went from Cæsarea to Antioch; for that was his way of return to Ephesus again, which he promised to doe, v. 21. but not till he had been at Jerusalem. And it seems some Syriack copies have read it gone up to Jerusalem, and saluted the Church; for Tremellius supposeth that, when he saith, some copies have not nomen Urishelem, the name Jerusalem. And so c. 21. 12. where Paul was again at this Cæsarea, the phrase is at large, ἀναβαλὼν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, to go up to Jerusalem: and so c. 25. 1. But without the addition of that (which, I suppose, the Syriack here added, not as a translation, but a paraphrase) the word ἀναβὰς going up following after his landing at Cæsarea, will enforce this sense. And so c. 24. 1. the κατὰβη descending of Ananias, &c. notes the going from Jerusalem to Cæsarea, without naming of either. See ch. 25. 6, 7. For Cæsarea was the haven, where they landed most commodiously in going from Ephesus to Jerusalem, and being landed there, what needed more to be said, but that he went up? for that will imply his going up to that place in passage, and in order to which he there landed. Joppe was indeed one haven to Jerusalem, but that a dangerous one, and thereupon it was that Herod was at so huge an expense to repair this old haven at Cæsarea, formerly called Στράτωνος πύργος Strato's tower. See Josephus l. 1. de Bell. Jud. c. 16. Herod, saith he, seeing one of the haven-towns decayed with age, and capable of his munificence, repaired it with white stone, &c. for betwixt Dora and Joppa the whole shore was so ill provided with havens, that all that sayl'd from Phœnicia to Ægypt were much endangered; but the King overcame nature by his liberality and expenſes, and built a ſtately haven at this Tower of Strato, and in it many ſafe harbours for ſhips to abide in; and though the nature of the place gave him many difficulties, yet he conquer'd them all and made it, moſt firm and ſumptuous, as it is at large deſcribed by Joſephus in that place. And this, ſaith he, to the honour of Cæſar he call'd Cæſarea, with it retaining the addition of Stratonis, which before belonged to it, and by which it is diſtinguiſh'd from Cæſarea Philippi, which is not farre from it; of which ſee Mat. 16. d. Παρεκάλουν — V. 27. Exhorting] For the uſe of παρακέλλω for putting forward, encouraging, ſee Wiſd. 14. 18.

e. Χάρις — Ib. Grace] What χάρις here ſignifies may beſt be collected from c. 11. 23. and 13. 43. In many other places it ſignifies the Goſpel of Chriſt (ſee Note on Heb. 13. d.) as when 'tis oppoſed to νόμος the Law, Joh. 1. 17. The Law was given by Moſes, but grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt. So the σωτήριος χάρις the ſalvifick grace of God, Tit. 2. 11. But in thoſe and many the like places, Grace ſignifies the matter, or ſubject of the Goſpel, not the preaching of it, for that is expreſs'd by the coming or appearing of that grace. But in that place of ch. 11. 23. where 'tis ſaid, that ſeeing the grace of Chriſt he rejoiced, (that is, ſeeing that the Goſpel had been preached with ſo good ſucceſs among them) it ſignifies the preaching or promulgating of the Goſpel, (juſt as εὐαγγέλιον Goſpel doth Rom. 1. 1. and 9. 16.) and ſo c. 13. 43. when they exhort them to continue in the grace of God, that was the work of confirmation, following that of preaching the Goſpel to them. And that notion of it ſeems to be the moſt adæquate, and proper for this place, ſo that πεπιστευκότες διὰ τῆς χάριτος ſhall ſignifie thoſe that had been formerly converted to the faith by the preaching of the Goſpel by S. Paul; according to that of Paul planteth and Apollos watereth: for that watering, being the inſtructing them farther who already had received the faith, the edifying, or ſuperſtructing on the foundation, is all one with πολὺ συνεβάλετο he conferred much, or contributed his aſſiſtance (or, as perhaps it ſhould be read, συνελάβετο aſſiſted) helped to improve them that before believed. As for that of applying διὰ τῆς χάριτος by grace to συνεβάλετο he conferred, that Apollos by grace, that is, his gift, and power in Scripture contributed much to the believers, there is no neceſſity of flying to that refuge, nor probability from the placing of thoſe words (which follow and goe not before πεπιστευκότες) to favour that rendring. In the ſame ſenſe we find ἐν χάριτι Χριστοῦ in, or to, or through, the grace, that is, the Goſpel, of Chriſt, Gal. 1. 6. to, or by, which Paul is ſaid to have call'd them, and is there ſet oppoſite to ἄλλο εὐαγγέλιον another Goſpel, a doctrine of ſome falſe teachers crept in among them.

CHAP. XIX.

1. Chriſtian profeſſors publiſhing the Goſpel there. See note on c. 8. b.

1. AND it came to paſſe that while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having paſſed through the upper coaſts came to Epheſus; and finding certain [diſciples,]

2. Hath the holy Ghoſt, ſince your receiving the faith, deſcended on you, and ſet you apart, given you authority or gifts for the work of the miniſtery? (ſee c. 10. 44.) And they ſaid, The doctrine which we received, had nothing in it of the holy Ghoſt.

2. He ſaid unto them, [Have ye received the holy Ghoſt ſince ye believed? And they ſaid unto him, We have not ſo much as heard whether there be any holy Ghoſt.]

3. And he ſaid, How can that be, when the Chriſtian baptiſme is in the name of the holy Ghoſt? To which they replied, that John's baptiſme was all that they had received.

3. And he ſaid unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they ſaid, Unto John's baptiſme.]

4. And Paul knowing that they by John his baptiſme had implicitely acknowledged Chriſt under the title of [he that comes after] and had promiſed to repent, and reform their lives, he explicitely taught them the whole doctrine of Chriſt, and of the holy Ghoſt alſo.

4. Then ſaid Paul John verily baptized with the baptiſme of repentance, ſaying unto the people that they ſhould believe on him which ſhould come after him, that is, on Chriſt Jeſus.]

5. And they preſently received and believed it, and were received in as Chriſtian Proſelytes in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the holy Ghoſt.

5. When they heard this they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jeſus.]

6. After this Paul by impoſition of hands and benediction gave them confirmation, by which means the holy Ghoſt came on them, and therewith gifts of tongues, and ſome other extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, the ſame which came as upon the Apoſtles at the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt, ch. 2. ſo on divers others after, ſee c. 10. 44.

6. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the holy Ghoſt came on them; and they ſpake with tongues, and propheſied.]

7. And all the men were about twelve.

8. And he went and preacht the Goſpel in the ſynagogues that were at Epheſus, to the Jewes, for the ſpace of three moneths, labouring to convince them.

8. And he went into the ſynagogue and ſpake boldly for the ſpace of three moneths, diſputing and perſwading the things concerning the kingdome of God.]

9. But when in ſtead of being convinced, he ſaw them, (in an obdurate refractary manner) not onely reject the Goſpel, but ſpeak of it contumeliouſly in publick before the people, he left them, and took thoſe that were converted by themſelves, and inſtructed them daily in a place which was uſed to entertain ſcholars privately.

10. And doing thus for the ſpace of two years, all the inhabitants of the Proconſular Aſia, both Jewes and Proſelytes, had in that ſpace the Goſpel preacht to them.

10. And this continued by the ſpace of two years, ſo that all they which dwelt in Aſia heard the word of the Lord Jeſus, both Jewes and Greeks.]

15. But the devil would not obey them, as not coming with any authority from Chriſt which had given it to Paul.

16. And the man in whom the evil ſpirit was leaped on them, and overcame them and prevailed againſt them, ſo that they fled out of that houſe naked and wounded.]

16. But made the man that was poſſeſs'd fall violently upon them, which accordingly he did, and was too hard for them all, and tore off their clothes, and wounded them, and made them run away.

17. And this was known to all the Jewes, and Greeks alſo dwelling at Epheſus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jeſus was magnified]

17. And this accident being made known to the Jewes, and natives of Epheſus, wrought very much upon them, and brought many to the faith of Chriſt.

18. And many that believed came, and confeſſed, and ſhewed their deeds.]

18. And they that were thus wrought on, came, many of them, to the Apoſtles, and told them the actions or courſes of their former lives, to know how agreeable they were to the faith, that ſo they might forſake or continue in them.

20. Of ſo great authority was the word of God, the Goſpel of Chriſt, as it was now preach't by Paul among the Epheſians, and thoſe of Aſia.

21. After theſe things were ended, Paul purpoſed in the Spirit, when he had paſſed] through Macedonia and Achaia, to goe to Jeruſalem, ſaying, After I have been there, I muſt alſo ſee Rome.

21. After this, Paul reſolved or determined with himſelf in his paſſage

29. And the whole city was filled with confuſion: [and having caught Gaius and Ariſtarchus, men of Macedonia, Pauls companions in travail, they rushed with one accord into the Theatre.]

30. And when Paul would have entred in unto the people, the diſciples ſuffered him not.]

34. But the heathens of Epheſus knowing that he was a Jew, and ſuppoſing that he was for Paul's way, and that derogatory to Diana (though the truth is he meant to clear himſelf,) and lay the blame on Paul, for which he is ſaid to have done him much injury, 1 Tim. 1. 19. and 2 Tim. 4. 14.) they would not permit him to be heard, but cried for two houres ſpace, Diana, the great Diana, the Goddeſſe of the Epheſians.

34. But when they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice about the ſpace of two houres cried out, Great is Diana of the Epheſians.]

a. Σχολὴ Τυράννου

V. 9. School of one Tyrannus] There were two kinds of ſchools among the Jewes, wherein the Law was taught, private or publick. 1. Private, wherein any Doctor entertained ſcholars, and ſuch was this of Tyrannus here, contained under the title, בתי המדרש houſes of learning, mentioned by Maimonides, as one kind of their holy places; their Schools, and not onely their Synagogues, being accounted ſo. Then 2dly, Publick, where Conſiſtories ſat to reſolve differences of the Law.

b. Σιμικίνθιον

V. 12. Aprons] Σιμικίνθιον is lightly changed from the Latine ſemicinctum, that which is called by the Chaldee בטן or cingulum coriaceum, or ſuccinctorium, which work men put before them, that they may not foule their cloathes, an apron, or napkin ſupplying the aprons place. The difference which Theophylact and Oecumenius make between σουδάρια and theſe is, that Sudaria are applyed to the head, as a cap, or kerchief; the latter to the hands, as an handkerchief. Τὰ σιμικίνθια, ſaith Oecumenius, ὁ τοῖς χερσὶ κατέχουσι πρὸς τὸ ἀπομάττεσθαι τὰς ὑγρότητας τοῦ προσώπου, οἷον ἱδρῶτας, πτυελὸν, δάκρυον, καὶ τὰ ὅμοια, they carry them in their hands, to wipe off moiſtures from the face, ſweat, ſpittle, tears and the like.

c. Περίεργα

V. 19. Curious arts] What is the meaning of the περίεργα, or curious things, here uſed among the Epheſians, will be beſt gueſt firſt by Heſychius's gloſſe, and then by a paſſage in Irenaeus, both miſread in the ordinary copies. In Heſychius we have Πειεργεία (that ſhould be Περίεργα) καθάρσια. The word denotes their heathen rites of purgations. Of their luſtrations, or purgations, the heathen books are full; ſee Porphyry περὶ ἀπ. Iamblichus, Hierocles, Marinus de vita Procli, Plotinus, &c. All which were nothing but magick and ſorcery, γοητεῖαι and θεουργεῖαι, and accordingly the Greek fathers on this place ſay they were their γοητικαὶ βίβλοι books of ſorcery, that here were burnt. Irenaeus l. 1. c. de Simonian. hath theſe words, Amatoria quoque & agogima—— & quacunque ſunt alia parerga (it ſhould certainly be perierga) apud eos ſtudioſè exercentur, Love-charms, and philtres, and all other ſuch curious, that is, Magical, tricks, are in great uſe among them. So in Ariſtanetus, τὶς δοκεῖ περίεργον ἰδόκει, he ſeemed to be a Magician, and ὑποκινάμενος τὸ περίεργον τὸ ἀνθρώπινον, acting the part of witches. So in S. Auguſtines Confeſſions, Curioſæ viſiones are Magical apparitions. Theſe are the φαρμακεῖαι φαρμακὶς medicaments, from which Sorcerers are generally called φαρμακῶται medicamentarii, as the Latines uſe venefica witches, from venena poyſons; not that they alwaies uſe medicaments, but many times only charms and words in ſtead of them. And accordingly Menander mentions them proverbially of Epheſus here, Ἐφέσια ἀλεξιφάρμακα, Epheſian charms, or ſpells, which ſuch an one τοῖς γαμοῦσι περιπατεῖ λέγων, walks, and ſpeaks to the bridegroom and his bride. Theſe are the Ἐφέσια γράμματα, Epheſian words, or writings, ſo often ſpoken of by writers, as charms, or ſpells. Of them Heſychius gives an account, Ἐφέσια γράμματα ὧν μὲν πάλαι, ὕστερον δὲ προσέθεσάν τινες ἀπαιτοῦντες καὶ ἄλλα. φασὶ δὲ τῶν πρώτων τὰ ὀνόματα τάδε, ἄσκιον, κατάσκιον, αἴξ, τέτραξ, δαμναμενεύς, αἴσιον. δηλοῖ δὲ ὁ μὲν ἄσκιον, σκότος· τὸ δὲ κατάσκιον, φῶς· τὸ δὲ αἴξ, αὐτός· δαμναμενεὺς δέ, ἥλιος· αἴσιον δέ, ἀλήθεια. Theſe words are much deformed, but by the help of a paſſage in Clemens Alex. Strom. l. 1. c. 18. may eaſily thus be mended, Ἐφέσια γράμματα ὧν μὲν πάλαι ς. ὕστερον δὲ προσέθεσάν τινες ἀπαιτοῦντες καὶ ἄλλα. φασὶ δὲ τῶν πρώτων τὰ ὀνόματα τάδε, ἄσκιον, κατάσκιον, λίξ, τετρὰς, δαμναμενεύς, αἴσιον. δηλοῖ δὲ τὸ μὲν ἄσκιον τὸ σκότος, κατάσκιον φῶς, τὸ δὲ λίξ γῆ, καὶ τετρὰς ὁ ἐνιαυτὸς δαμναμενεὺς δὲ ἥλιος, ἄσκιος δὲ ἀλήθεια. The Epheſian words were antiently ſix but afterwards deceivers added others alſo: the names of the former were, &c. and the ſignification of them, darkneſſe, light, the earth, the year, the ſun, and truth, (ſee Canter. Var. lect. l. 1. c. 18.) Of which he concludes, ταῦτα ἦν ἱερὰ ὅτι καὶ ἅγια, theſe are ſacred and holy, that is, part of the heathen Idolatry. See Plutarch. Sympoſiac. 7. Clemens Alex. Strom. l. 5. Euſtathius ad Homer. Odyſſ. 21. Suidas, and the books of the Greek Proverbs. And ſo the περίεργα πράξαντες are the ſorcerers, or Magicians among them, who brought the the books of their black art, which though they were of great value, and would have been sold for much, yet they neither kept, nor sold, but as a testimony of renouncing their former course, they burnt them publickly.

d. Ἀργύριον

Ib. Pieces of silver] The Hebrew כסף that is literally rendred ἀργύριον, silver, signifies peculiarly siclum argenteum, a silver shekel, among the Hebrews. See Note on Mat. 26. d.

e. Ναοὶ Ἀρτέμιδος

V. 24. Silver shrines for Diana] In the Idolatry of the Heathens, it is sufficiently known, that they were wont to carry the images of their false Gods about in pomp, that is, procession, from one city to another. This they did in a Chariot, that was solemnly consecrated for that imployment, and by the Romans styled Thensa, that is, the chariot of their Gods. But beside this greater, there was a lesser frame wherein it was placed, a box, or shrine, called Ferculum by them. Accordingly at the bestowing of divine honours on their great men alive, or dead, the Romans had their Circæan games, and in them, Thensam, and Ferculum, that Chariot, and that Shrine bestowed on them. As it is related of Julius Cæsar. This Ferculum among the Romans differs not much from the Græcians Ναὸς, a little Chappel, representing the form of a Temple, with an image in it, which being set upon the Altar or other solemn place, and the valve, the leaves or dores open'd, the image stood, or sat in state, and so was represented to the spectators. Accordingly an old anonymous Scholiast on Aristotles Rhetoricks, l. 1. c. 15. hath these words, Ναοποιοὶ οἱ τὰς ναὰς ποιοῦσι, ἤτοι εἰκονοστάσια τινα μικρὰ ξύλινα ἃ πωλοῦσι, noting the ναοὶ here to be εἰκονοστάσια Chaplets with Images in them of wood, or any other metall, (as here of silver v. 24.) which they make, and sell, as here ver. 25. they are supposed to doe, and so get wealth by that trade. Thus we have mention in Athenæus of καδίσκος, which, saith he, is ἀγγεῖον, ἐν ᾧ τὰς κτησίας Διὸς καθιδρύουσι, a vessel wherein they place their images of Jupiter. On which saith the learned * Casaubon, erant simulacra hæc armariis inclusa, quæ ad sacellorum modum fiebant, these images were put in cases, which were made like chappels. So S. Chrysostome, making them to be ὡς κιβώτια μικρὰ as little cases or shrines. Agreeable to this is it, that Ammianus Marcellinus saith of Asclepiades, that whithersoever he went he carried about with him Deæ cœlestis argenteum breve figmentum, a small silver image of Urania. And Dion of the Roman ensigne (which is known to be an Eagle) that it was νεὼς μικρὸς, ᾧ ἐν αὐτῷ ἀετὸς χρυσοῦς, a little temple, and in it a golden eagle; and again, Ἐν τῷ Ἀλβανῷ there was, saith he, νεὼς Ἥρας βραχὺς, a short, or little, chappel of Juno, ἐπὶ τραπέζης τινὸς ἱδρυμένῳ, set upon a table. This hath been shew'd (Note on ch. 7. f.) to be the meaning of the tabernacle of Moloch, Act. 7. 43. taken from Am. 5. 26. סכות מלככם there, the tabernacle of your King, but by the LXX σκηνὴ Μολὸχ, the tabernacle of Moloch, (that word in Hebrew signifying a King) where σκηνὴ, tabernacle, is the chaplet wherein was the figure of that false God, or starre so call'd. And that it is so, may be guest by that which followes there, the τύποι οὓς ἐποιήσατε the figures which you made to worship, which it seems were put in such tabernacles or chappels to that end. The like also was the סכות בנות the tabernacle of Benoth, or Venus, another of those false deities, whose image was enshrined in such a little Chappel; ναὸς or ναΐσκος, to be worshipped. What Ἀρτεμις or Diana is, there is little question, no other than the Moon; and therefore saith Cleomedes Meteor. l. 2. c. 5. p. 111. it was the fashion διδόναι δᾷδας τοῖς εἰς τὰ Ἀρτεμίσια εἰσιοῦσι to give torches to those that went into Diana's Temple, adding τοῦτο μὲν σύμβολόν ἐστι τῆς ἔξωθεν ἔχειν τὸν σελήνιον τὸ φῶς, for this is a sign set to expresse that the Moon receives her light from without, that is, from the Sunne.

V. 31. Chief of Asia] Among the Heathens there were agones & games instituted ad placanda bona numina, to appease the good deities, saith Labeo, as sacrifices and victims to appease the bad or angry. And therefore in the Anthology, the τέσσαρες ἀγῶνες ἀν' Ἑλλάδα the four games in Greece, Olympian, Nemæan, Isthmian, Pythian, are called τέσσαρες ἱεροὶ, all four sacred: And so in Julian μισοπων. there is mention of the ἱπποδρομία, the running of horses, ἐν ταῖς ἑορταῖς τῶν θεῶν in the feasts of the Gods; and in the Rescript of Honorius and Theodosius, sacra munera, sacra festa, sacros agones, sacred offices, sacred feasts and sacred games. The Original of them is set down by * Dionysius Halicarnasseus, as from the Grecians they were imitated by Servius Tullius, and put into one body. They built Temples, saith he, by common charge, some to Diana of Ephesus, some to Apollo; and assembling there at set times with their wives and children, they imployed themselves both in sacrifices and in merchandice. There were publick Agones, Race-horses, Wrestlers, Musicians, and rewards were proposed to the Victors, and presents were by the cities brought to the Gods. And when the Games, and Marts, and other festival and publick jollities were ended, if any city had a quarrel against another, the Judges were ready to compose it. Then they consulted of common affaires of warre against the barbarians, and peace among themselves. Thus farre Halicarnasseus. At Rome the Pontifices, or chief priests, were presidents of these. And therefore when the Heathen customes had gotten in among the Jewes, we find Jason 2 Mac. 4. 7. buying the Pontificate, and with it the power of instituting and moderating their games; and so in the severall provinces the severall chief Priests, who were called by the names of the Provinces which they administred; so Κυπριάρχης, the Governour of Cyprus, 2 Mac. 12. 2. so Συριάρχαι, saith * Cujacius, Sacerdotes istius Provinciæ, qui ludos in honorem Deorum celebrari solitos curarent, moderarentur, præsiderent, The officers of Syria, that is, the Priests of that province, which took care of their games, which were customarily celebrated to the honour of their Gods, ruled them, presided in them. So Bithyniarchæ, the officers of Bithynia, Cappadociarchæ of Cappadocia, and here Asiarchæ of Asia, that is, the officers of those so many Provinces; not Kings, or Proconsuls, or Procurators, the rulers and Governours of them, but popular officers or ministers, to whom the care of those things was intrusted, and the office was sacerdotal. Whence in the Epistle of the Church of Smyrna, concerning S. Polycarp's Martyrdome, Philip the Asiarcha, who presided there in their spectacula, their θηριομαχίαι, which are there called κυνηγέσια, as in the Fathers Venationes, is after styled φίλιππος Ἀρχιερεὺς Philip the Chief priest. So Ἀσιαρχία, Βιθυναρχία, Καππαδοκαρχία, are by * Modestinus recited among the ἔθνους ἱερωσύναι chief priesthoods of those nations. And so Phœniciarchia, and Syriarchia, among the species of priesthood by Constantine the Great, in his Rescript. So in the Basilica, Η ἱερωσύνη, τουτέστι τὸ ἐπιτελεῖν τὰ κυνηγέσια, the priesthood, that is, the office of managing their sports, or spectacles. Beside these which were National Officers, to whom belonged ἱερωσύνη κοινὴ τῆς Ἀσίας in Aristides, the common priesthood of Asia, the managery of their κοιναὶ ἀγῶνες common games, there were others in particular cities, πολιτάρχαι, c. 17. 6. the city magistrates, the ἀθλοθέται, ἀγωνοθέται, ἀλιτάρχαι, all commands or offices of some honour among them, as appeared by Jasons purchasing them together with the priesthood, but yet subject to the people, as being executioners and ministers of their will, and not sent them from Rome, but choſen by themſelves out of the chief men, or wealthieſt citizens among them. To theſe belonged alſo the execution of malefactors, condemned to the θηριομαχίαι, or fighting with beaſts on the Theatre, a cuſtomary ceremony or complement of their feſtivities (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 15. b.) and ſo ſome of them here being kind to S. Paul, warned him not to come out, knowing the purpoſe of the people to have him thus put to death, if they could light on him. And that appears by the Regiſters ſpeech ver. 37. ἠγάγετε τὲς ἄνδρας τέτες ὔτε ἱεροσύλες, &c. theſe men, Paul and his company, are neither robbers of Churches, nor blaſphemers of your Goddeſſe, yet you have dealt with them as if they were, bringing or dragging them to the Theatre; for ſo 'tis ſaid ver. 29. that they ran, or hurried, into the Theatre, συναρπάσαντες carrying or haling along with them thither Gaius and Ariſtarchus, Pauls fellow-travellers; and v. 33. ἐκ τῦ ὄχλε ſome of the multitude, προεβίβασ' Ἀλέξανδρον, brought forth Alexander, who, it ſeems, was a Chriſtian of Epheſus, though one that forſook Paul (probably upon the danger at this time) 1 Tim. 1. 20. and, having done ſo, did him much injury, 2 Tim. 4. 14. and here was about to excuſe himſelf to the people, (to eſcape the hazard approaching,) and lay all the blame on Paul. Of this Alexander ſaith Photius, Epiſt. ρνη', That μὲ διαβολῶν δεηθεὶς, ἢ μηδὲ ἐυρεῖν ἐλπίσας, ἀυτὸς καθ' ἑαυτὸ μέγιστα ἐυεργετησάντων, καὶ γλῶσσαι καὶ χεῖρες ἐήνεγκε, Neither wanting accuſations, nor hoping to find any, became he alone both tongues and hands, in the plurall, againſt his greateſt benefactors. Where as ἐκ τῦ ὄχλε being ſet for τινὲς ἐκ τῦ ὄχλε, ſome out of the multitude, ſignifie ſome of the popular officers, ſerjeants or apparitors, ſo προεβίβασ' their bringing him forth, is to be underſtood as an act of their office, to bring forth to examination, (as among the Greek lawyers, the ſerjeants ὑπηρέται, πρόκτορες in the Goſpels, are ſtyled ἐκβιβασταὶ, thoſe that ſerve men with writs and bring them before their courts.) And therefore it follows that the Jewes did προβάλλειν ἀυτὸν, queſtion him that was thus brought forth, examined him about S. Paul. g. V. 33. Putting him forward] Προβάλλειν hath a peculiar notion among the Grammarians, proper to forinſecall matters; it ſignifies to examine, to queſtion upon interrogatories, to call any man into the court to teſtifie his knowledge concerning any thing in queſtion. So ſaith Phavorinus, προβάλλειν and προβάλλεσθ, ἐρωτᾶν to queſtion, and προβάλλεσθ μάρτυρα to call a man as a witneſſe. So Domninus (cited by Jo. Malela l. 12.) ſpeaking of the Ἀμφιδαλὶς an officer in the agones, ἀυτὸν βελῇ καὶ ὁ δῆμ@ προεβάλλοντο, the Senate and people called him to teſtifie what was done in the agones. Accordingly muſt the Gloſſe of Heſychius be mended, not as the printed copie hath it, Προβάλλ, ἐρωτᾷ. Προβάλλειν ἄρνα, τὸ ἀπαγγεῖλαι, but Προβαλεῖ, ἐρωτήσει. Προβάλλειν μάρτυρα, τὸ ἐπαγγεῖλαι, noting this uſe of the word for interrogating a witneſſe, calling a man to teſtifie, ἐκκαλεῖν to appeal to for the truth of what is controverted. And ſo the meaning of this whole paſſage is, that Alexander, a Chriſtian of Epheſus, but a Jew by birth, was in this tumult about S. Paul ſeiſed upon by the ſerjeants, and brought forth, and the Jewes, that were malicious to S. Paul, thinking that Alexander might be brought to lay ſome blame upon him, queſtion'd and examined him, and then he was preſently deſirous to have made his Apologie to the people, that is, to avert the danger from himſelf, by laying it upon others. And although, by reaſon of the crie that follows, v. 34. he is not permitted to doe it to the people, yet by what S. Paul after ſaith of him, it appears that he forſook the Chriſtian profeſſion, 1 Tim. 1. 20. and renounced, or blaſphemed, that is, forſook Chriſt, and did S. Paul very great injury, 2 Tim. 4. 14.

V. 35. Town clerk] Γραμματεὺς is the name of an office in the ſacri agones, the Regiſter or Actuary, who regiſtred the Victors names in a book or table, called γράμματα τ ἱερονίκων, and the office where thoſe records were put was γραμματῶον, ſaith Petrus Faber Agoniſt. l. 3. c. 23, and 27. Of the ordinary γραμματεῖς, ſaith Phavorinus, ἀδενὲς ἦσ κύριοι ἦσι ἀλλ' ἢ τ γραφῆν καὶ ἀναγνῶναι, they had no authority, but onely to write, and read what they had written. So ſaith the Scholiaſt on Thucydides, γραμματεὺς ὁ εἰωθὼς ἐν τῷ δήμῳ τὰ τ δήμε γράμματα ἀναγινώσκειν, that uſed to read to the people the regiſters of their buſineſſe. But in theſe ſacred games, where every thing was ſacred alſo, (the Alytarcha bearing the perſon of Jupiter, the Amphithales of Mercury) the γραμματεὺς here, ſaith Domninus, cited by Johannes Antiochenus, was honoured and adored as Apollo, wearing a white robe, and a crown of pure gold; and being, ſaith he, choſen by the Senate and people, he was the better qualified to doe what is here affirmed of him, to appeaſe the people. For that this ſhould be applicable to Alexander the Jew ver. 33. and that it was he, of whom it was here ſaid, φησὶν, he ſaid, Ye men of Epheſus, &c. φησὶν is a ſtrange overſight of the learned Cardinal * Baronius cauſed by not adverting to the Greek, καταστείλας δὲ ὁ γραμματεὺς τ ὄχλον φησὶν. Ib. A worſhipper of Diana] That the Epheſians, when they were beſieged by Cræſus, devoted or conſecrated their city to Diana, ἐξάψαντες ἐκ τῦ νεῶ χοινίοισι τὸ τεῖχ@, tying with a rope the Temple and the wall of the city together, is affirmed by Herodotus l. 2. From hence it is, that that city had a peculiar relation to Diana ever after. But there being other cities that worſhipped that Goddeſſe alſo, this is not, alone, ſufficient to appropriate that title to Epheſus, to be her νεωκόρ@, or Sacriſt. That this was the title of a ſacred office, appears by Plato de Legib. Καταστάτεον ἱερᾶς καὶ ἱερείας νεωκόρες γίνεσθαι τοῖς θεοῖς, they muſt conſtitute prieſts of both ſexes, to be in this office of Sacriſt to their Gods. The word ſignifies ὁ τὸν ναὸν ἐπιμελόμενον, ſaith Phavorinus, he that takes care of the Temple; ὁ τ ναὸν κοσμῶν, he that adorns it, ſaith Heſychius; and ὁ ἐυτρεπίζων, he that makes clean, ſaith Suidas; from κορεῖν to ſweep, or καλλωπίζειν to beautifie, ſaith the Scholiaſt on Ariſtophanes in Νεφ. p. 61. This office at other times belonged to other cities, and accordingly in antient Inſcriptions we find Νικομηδέων τρὶς Νεωκόρων, the Nicomedians being the third time in that office; and particularly of Diana, Μαγνήτων Νεωκόρων Ἀρτέμιδ@, the Magneſians having that office, in Maximinus's time: and this in reſpect of the ἱεροὶ ἀγῶνες the holy Games, which in honour of the Gods, peculiarly of Diana, were in Greece, ſometimes in one city, ſometimes in another, according to the Gods which were celebrated by them. So that now thoſe feſtivities being celebrated to Diana, and this year, and at this time kept at Epheſus (which is alſo the reaſon of the concourſe of the people at this time) Epheſus had now the honour to take care of Diana's ſervice, and ſo to be her Νεωκόρ@, her Sacriſt, or æditua, or Church-warden, as the Syriack renders the word in this place; and that is the meaning of the νεωκόρ@ ὄντ being at this time, this year, Diana's Sacriſt.

kept; and ſo in Suidas and the Gloſſary ὅτε ἡ ἀγορὰ δίκη is expounded to be the time when men goe to Law; and the ſame is the meaning of ἀγόραιοι ἄρχοντες, a time not of vacation or lay-daies, but of judicatures, term-time, as we call it, when the Proconſuls, who are the judges, were preſent to decide any controverſie. The word ſignifies alſo judicature ſimply; ſo in Strabo Geog. l. 13. p. 629. διοικήσεις δὲ αἷς τὰς ἀγορὰς ποιοῦνται, καὶ δικαιοδοσίας, the provinces in which they exerciſe their judicatures, and give every man his right. And ſo in Heſychius, Ἀγορεία (perhaps it ſhould be ἀγόραιον) δικαιολογίαν diſtribution of juſtice; and Ἀγορεία, δίκαι, καὶ ἐκκλησιαστὴ, judgment, and calling of a court.

CHAP. XX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND after the uproar was ceaſed, Paul called unto him the diſciples, and embraced them, and departed for to goe into Macedonia.]

1. And this commotion being thus compoſed at Epheſus, Paul called all the Chriſtians together, and having conſtituted Timothy Biſhop of Epheſus, 1 Tim. 1. 3. he took his leave of them, and departed from Epheſus, and paſt the direct way from thence (by Troas 2 Corinth. 2. 12, 13.) to Macedonia.

2. And when he had gone over thoſe parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece,]

2. And there he ſpent ſome time, inſtructing and confirming them in the faith, and in all Chriſtian practice (ſee note on John 14. b.) and after that, departing thence, he wintred in Epirus Tit. 3. 12. and came into Greece,

3. And there abode three moneths: and when the Jewes laid wait for him, as he was about to ſaile into Syria, he * purpoſed to return into Macedonia.]

3. And there he ſtaid three moneths: And being now on his journey to Syria, to carry almes to Judæa, he was diverted by an advertiſement that the Jewes, which knew of his purpoſe, laid wait for him in the way thither to rob him, and to take away his life; thereupon he changed his determination, and reſolved to goe a little out of his way, and again to paſſe through Macedonia the third time.

† And Sopater of Berœa accompanied him as farre as Aſia Συνεπέτο δὲ αὐτῷ ἄχρι τῆς Ἀσίας Ἴσως. Βαρ.

And Sopater went along with him as farre as Aſia, never parting from him: but Ariſtarchus, and Secundus, and Gaius, and Timotheus, and Tychicus, and Trophimus, theſe ſix went not with him through Macedonia (Sopater onely doing ſo) but went before to Aſia, and expected Paul and his company at Troas, who accordingly came thither.

6. And after the Paſſeover we departed from Philippi in Macedonia, and came and met them at Troas, and ſtaied there with them ſeven daies.

7. And upon the firſt day of the week, when the diſciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow, and continued his ſpeech untill midnight.]

7. And on the Lord's day, or Sunday, the Chriſtians being met together to receive the Sacrament, (Act. 2. 46.) Paul ſpake to them at large, and meaning to be gone the morrow, continued his exhortation to them untill midnight.

10. And Paul went down and fell on him, and embracing him, ſaid, Trouble not your ſelves, for his life is in him.

11. When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, ſo he departed.]

11. And they ſpent the time together in receiving the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt, and Paul farther inſtructing them till the next morning, then he departed.

12. And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.]

12. And the youth that fell out of the window, and was dead v. 9. recovered, and they were joyfull at it.

30. And ſome of your own Churches ſhall vent pernicious falſe doctrines to make diviſions and factions, and get followers.

30. Alſo of your own ſelves ſhall men ariſe, ſpeaking perverſe things, to draw away diſciples after them.]

31. Be ye carefull therefore, remembring how much ſorrow and tears it hath coſt me to forewarn you of theſe things beforehand.

31. Therefore watch, and remember that by the ſpace of three years I ceaſed not to warn every one night and day with tears.]

32. And now I recommend you to God and the Goſpel (ſee note on Heb. 13. d.) which if adhered to, will be able to inſtruct and perfect you, and to bring you to the bliſſe of Saints.

32. And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are ſanctified.]

33. I have not endevoured to make any worldly advantage by my preaching.

33. I have coveted no mans ſilver, or gold, or apparell.]

34. But you can witneſſe for me that I have, by working at my trade of making tents, maintained my ſelf, and thoſe that are with me.

34. Yea, you your ſelves know that theſe hands have miniſtred unto my neceſſities, and to them that are with me.]

35. I have as by words, ſo by actions alſo, demonſtrated to you, how that ſuch as ye, that is, Biſhops and Governours of the Church, are to take care of the ſick and poor (ſee 1 Cor. 12.) and rather indevour by paines taking to enable your ſelves to relieve others, then to be chargeable or burthenſome to others, according to that ſaying of Chriſt (not recorded in the Goſpels) That 'tis a bleſſed and an heroicall thing to give to others out of a mans own earnings, and this infinitely more bleſſed, and better becoming a Chriſtian, then to be relieved by others.

35. I have ſhewed you all things, how that ſo labouring you ought to ſupport the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jeſus, how he ſaid, * It is more bleſſed to give then to receive.]

* it is a bleſſed thing to give, rather then receive Μακάριόν ἐστι διδόναι μᾶλλον ἢ λαμβ.

36. And when he had thus ſpoken he kneeled down and prayed with them all.

37. And they all wept ſore, and fell on Pauls neck and kiſſed him,

38. Sorrowing moſt of all for the words which he ſpake, that they ſhould ſee his face no more. And they accompanied him to the ſhip.

b. Δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι

V. 22. Bound in the Spirit] What bound in Spirit signifies may perhaps be judged by the like phrase poor in Spirit Mat. 5. 2. That signifies him, which though he be not actually poor, yet is prepared to bear poverty contentedly. And so Paul resolving to venture the hazard of imprisonment here, by going up to Jerusalem, whither if he goe, he knowes, and the Spirit of God tells him v. 23. it will befall him, may be said to be bound in Spirit. But it may also be interpreted onely of his presaging and foreseeing his bonds, which being revealed by the Spirit of God to others of him, and probably immediately to him also, he may be said to be δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι, bound in the Spirit in that respect. Nay, 'tis possible it may signifie no more than resolved, and so bound in Spirit, or full purpose of mind, as ch. 19. 21. Ἔθετο ἐν τῷ πνεύματι, he purposed in Spirit: but this more unmoveable than that. See ch. 21. 12, 13.

V. 21. Hath made you overseers What ἔθετο put, or set, or appointed, importeth here, is somewhat uncertain. It may signifie their Ordination to the Episcopal office, attributed to the holy Ghost, as to the Originall, by whose descent upon the Apostles, they were authorized to communicate this authority, to give Commissions to others, who were to succeed them in the dignity and office of Governing of Churches. But it may also signifie the act of designation, election, nomination to this dignity, which at that time was done by the special Revelat on of God, and so might properly be attributed to the holy Ghost. So of Matthias it appears that he was designed by lot, and chosen by God to succeed Judas in his office, Act. 1. 24. So c. 13. 2. the holy Ghost said, Separate me Saul and Barnabas for the work, &c. So Timothy the Bishop of Ephesus is said to be advanced to it διὰ προφητείας, by prophecy by particular Revelation; of which S. Chrysostome saith, that as the Priests antiently were made by Prophecy, so Timothy was τῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ ψήφῳ by the suffrage of God, chosen to his office. ἠρέθη εἰς τὴν ἐπισκοπήν. So saith Clemens Romanus Ep. ad Cor. that the Apostles constituted Bishops, δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, trying, or approving, them by the Spirit; and Clemens Alexandrinus* of S. John, and the Bishops of Asia here, that he did καθίστησι τοὺς τῷ θεῷ πνεύματι σημαινομένους, of those that were signified by the Spirit. And so this is the most probable notation of it in this place.

Paraphrase.

* plucked, snatched Κατασπασθέντας

1. AND it came to passe, that after we were * gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a straight course] unto Coos, and the day following unto Rhodes, and from thence unto Patara.

1. After this sad parting (c. 20. 37.) from the Bishops of Asia at Miletus (c. 20. 17.) we took ship, and sailed prosperously without any incommodation

2. And finding a ship sailing over into Phœnicia, we went aboard and set forth.

3. Now when we had discovered Cyprus, we left it on the left hand, and sailed into Syria, and landed at Tyre: for there the ship † was to unlade her burthen.

† See note on c. 15. c.

* spake to Paul not to go up ἔλεγον τῷ Παύλῳ μὴ ἀναβαίνειν

4. And finding disciples, we tarried there seven daies, who* said to Paul through the Spirit, that he should not goe up to Jerusalem.]

4. And meeting there with some that had received the Gospel, and were indued with gifts, particularly that of prophecy, (see ch. 20. 23, 24.) we staied with them a while at Tyre, and they by revelation told Paul, that he would incurre much hazard by going up to Jerusalem, and therefore advised him not to goe.

5. And when we had accomplished those daies, we departed and went away, and they all brought us on our way with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and we kneeled down on the shore, and prayed.]

5. But this moved not Paul (see c. 23. 24.) but we left that place, all of them, men, women, and children attending us out of the city, and there on the sea shore we kneeled down, and prayed at parting.

6. And when we had taken leave one of another, we took ship, and they returned home again.

† having sailed

7. And [a] † when we had finished our course from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8. And the next day [we that were of Pauls company departed, and came unto Cæsarea, and we entred into the house of Philip the Evangelist (which was one of the seven) and abode with him.]

8. Paul and the rest of us that accompanied him, (whereof Luke the writer of this book was one) went from Ptolemais to Cæsarea a haven town in Syria (see note on c. 18. c.), called Strato's tower, but rebuilt by Herod, and called Cæsarea (see note on Matth. 16. c.) and went into the house of Philip, he that, being one of the seven Deacons, was by the Apostles sent out to Samaria and other places to preach the Gospel, (see note on Joh. 20. 21.) and with him we made some stay.

9. And the same man had four daughters, virgins, which [did prophesie.]

9. had the gift of foretelling things to come.

10. And as we tarryed there many days there came down from Judæa a certain [Prophet] named Agabus.

10. See note on c. 15. e.

11. And when he was come unto us [he took Pauls girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, Thus saith the holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that oweth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.]

11. after the manner of Prophets of old, which often prophesied by symbols, or significant expressions, of what they foretold, he took Pauls girdle, and bound his hands and feet with it, and said, It hath been revealed to me by God, that after this manner that I have bound my self with Pauls girdle, so the Jews of Jerusalem shall bind Paul, and deliver him to the Procurator of the Romans to be put to death.

12. And

12. And when we heard theſe things, both we and they of that place beſought him, not to go up to Jeruſalem.

13. Why do you by your compaſſionate ſad diſwaſions trouble and grieve me, who have nothing elſe to afflict or diſturb me, but your importunity againſt my taking this journey? For of my ſelf I am moſt heartily willing to ſuffer any thing, bonds or death it ſelf, for the propagating of the Goſpel of Chriſt, or for the profeſſing my conſtancy in it, in deſpight of all perſecutions.

13. Then Paul anſwered, [What mean ye to weep, and to break mine heart? for I am ready, not to be bound onely, but alſo to dye at Jeruſalem, for the name of the Lord Jeſus.]

14. And when he would not be perſwaded, we † ceaſed, ſaying, The will of the Lord be done.

† were quiet ἡσυχάσαμεν

15. laded mules with the goods which we had with us, and took our journey from Cæſarea

15. And after thoſe daies we [took up our carriages, and went up] to Jeruſalem.

16. one who had formerly received the faith when Paul and Barnabas were at Cyprus, (c. 13. 4.) who would gladly entertain us at our journeys end.

16. There went up with us alſo certain of the diſciples of Cæſarea, † and brought with them one Mnaſon of Cyprus, [an old diſciple, with whom we ſhould lodge.]

† bringing us to one Mnaſon a Cyprite ἄγοντες Μνάσωνί τινι—

17. And when we were come to Jeruſalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18. and we went to James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. 3.) who with all the Biſhops of Judæa (ſee note on Phil. 1. b.) were aſſembled together, that they might in councel conſider of S. Paul's buſineſſe.

18. And the day following, Paul [went in with us unto James, and all the Elders were preſent.]

19. And when he had ſaluted them, he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his miniſterie.

20. they bleſſed God for his wonderfull works wrought upon the heathen Idolaters by his preaching; and after that began to tell him what at preſent would be prudent for him to doe, not ſo much in reſpect of the unbelieving, as the converted Jews, of whom there were many myriads, great multitudes in Judæa, who though they had received the Goſpel, yet ſtuck cloſe to the obſervances of the Moſaicall Law.

20. And when they heard it, [they glorified the Lord, and ſaid unto him, Thou ſeeſt, brother, how many * thouſands of Jewes there are which believe, and they are all zealous of the Law.]

* myriads, or ten thouſands, μυριάδες

21. Theſe, ſaid they, have heard it affirm'd of thee, that not only according to the decrees of our councel, thou permitteſt the Gentile-converts to remain uncircumciſed, but alſo that thoſe Jewes that are diſperſed in Aſia, and elſwhere, whom thou haſt converted to the faith, thou perſwadeſt them that they may leave off circumciſion, and the other ceremonies of Moſes Law.

21. And they are informed of thee, that thou teacheſt all the Jewes, which are among the Gentiles, to forſake Moſes, ſaying, That they ought not to circumciſe their children, neither to walk after the cuſtomes.]

22. This therefore, (ſay they) will be the event, in all probability, All theſe Jewiſh Chriſtians will hear of thy being come hither, and ſo will come in multitudes to ſee how thou behaveſt thy ſelf in this matter.

22. What is it therefore? The multitude muſt needs come together: for they will hear that thou are come.]

23. Therefore take our advice, There be four men here at this time, which have had a Nazarites vow upon them, which being accompliſht, (ſee Act. 18. 18.) they are now to perform the ceremonies preſcribed, Num. 6. 13.

23. Doe therefore this that we ſay to thee, We have four men, which have a vow on them:]

24. Theſe doe thou perform with them, and make proviſion of ſacrifices forthem, ſuch as the Law preſcribes, Num. 6. 14. that ſo they may ſhave their heads according to order, Num. 6. 18. (ſee note on c. 18. b.) and by this means they will be perſwaded that they have had falſe reports of thee, and that thou doſt ſtill obſerve the Moſaicall rites.

24. Them take, and purifie thy ſelf with them, and be at charges with them, that they may ſhave their heads; and all may know that † thoſe things whereof they are informed concerning thee are nothing, but that thou thy ſelf alſo *walkeſt orderly and keepeſt the Law.]

† there is nothing of thoſe things or nothing is true of thoſe things ὧν ἐστὶν οὐδὲν— * walkeſt keeping the Law, φυλάσσων τὸν νόμον καὶ αὐτὸς

25. As for the Gentiles that have received the Goſpel, c. 15. we have made a decree, thou knoweſt, (and ſent it to Antioch by thee and Barnabas,) by which they are not required to any ſuch obſervances, or to any more then onely to obſerve the precepts of the ſons of Adam and Noah.

25. As touching the Gentiles which believe, we have written and concluded that they obſerve no ſuch thing, ſave only that they keep themſelves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from ſtrangled, and from fornication.]

26. And Paul took their advice, thus farre to comply with the Judaizing Chriſtians, that he might not exaſperate them, and went into the Temple, and did all that belonged to the purifying of the Nazarites, and when that was done, gave ſolemn notice of it, upon which they were, according to the Law of Moſes, to proceed to offer an offering for each perſon.

26. Then Paul took the men, and † the next day purifying himſelf with them, entred into the Temple, to ſignifie the accompliſhment of the daies of purification, untill that an offering ſhould be offered for every one of them]

† ſee note on Mat. 1. b.

27. And when the ſeven daies, wherein thoſe ſacrifices were to be performed, were almoſt at an end, divers unbelieving Jewes that dwelt in Aſia, and had oppoſed him there, and were now come to Jeruſalem, aſſoon as they ſaw him in the Temple, brought in the multitude tumultuouſly upon him, and apprehended him,

27. And when the ſeven daies were almoſt ended, the Jewes which were from Aſia, when they ſaw him in the Temple, ſtirred up all the people, and laid hands on him,]

28. Crying out upon him, as the man that had taught all men, whereſoever he preacht, that the Jewes ſhould be deſtroyed, the Moſaicall Law be aboliſh't, and the Temple, where now he was purifying himſelf, laid waſt, and had brought heathen men into the Temple, which was utterly unlawfull to be done, and was the profaning of it.

28. Crying out, Men of Iſrael, help: this is the man that teacheth all men every where againſt the people, and the Law, and this place; and farther, brought Greeks alſo into the Temple, and hath polluted this holy place.]

29. (This laſt thing they ſpake confidently, but not truly, onely having ſeen Trophimus with him in the city of Jeruſalem, and knowing him to be a Gentile of Epheſus, they believed that he had carried him into the Temple, and from thence made this concluſion.)

29. (For they had ſeen before with him in the city, Trophimus an Epheſian, whom they ſuppoſed that Paul had brought into the Temple.)]

30. And

30. And all the city was moved, and the people ran together: and they took Paul, and drew him out of the Temple, and forthwith the dores were shut.]

30. And all the people were exasperated upon this, and having apprehended, haled him out of the Temple; and the dores of the Temple were presently shut after them.

31. And as they went about to kill him, tidings came to the chief captain of the band, that all Jerusalem was in an uproare:]

31. And they fell a beating Paul, and had like to have killed him, had not the commander or Colonel, that was appointed to guard the Temple, and to quell all tumults there, (see note on Luk. 22.g.) been told, that there was an uproare.

32. Who immediately took souldiers and centurions, and ran down unto them; and when they saw the chief captain and the souldiers, they left beating of Paul.]

32. But he taking with him some bands of souldiers, came hastily in upon them: and when they saw the Colonel and his troops of souldiers, they gave over their violence toward Paul.

33. Then the chief captain came neer, and took him, and commanded him to be [bound with two chains,] and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

33. guarded by two souldiers, and chained to each of them, (see note on ch. 28. e.)

34. And some cried one thing, some another, among the multitude: and when he could not know the certainty for the tumult, he commanded him to be carried into [the castle.]

34. the tower called Antonia, Luk. 22. g.

35. And when he came upon the stairs, so it was, that he was born of the souldiers * for the violence of the people.]

35. And as they were going up the stairs to the castle or tower, the violence of the multitude of Jewes was so great, that the souldiers were fain to carry Paul in their armes, to secure him from them.

36. For the multitude of the people followed after, crying, Away with him.]

36. Who came pursuing him, and crying out to have him put to death.

37. And † as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain, May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek?]

37. And when he was at the castle dore, he spake to the Colonel in Greek, and asked if he would be pleased to permit him to speak to him. And the Colonel wondred that he spake Greek.

38. Art not thou that [b] Ægyptian, which before these daies *madest an uproare, and leddest out into the wilderneſse four thousand † men that were murtherers?]

38. Thinking that he had been that Ægyptian false prophet, that had raised a sedition in Judæa not long before, and had gotten to him four thousand men into the wilderneſse. b.

39. But Paul said, I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, [a city in Cilicia, * a citizen of no mean city;] and I beseech thee, suffer me to speak unto the people.

39. a free man of that city in Cilicia, which hath the Roman privileges belonging to it.

40. And when he had given him licenſe, Paul stood on the [stairs, and beckned with his hand unto the people:] and when there was made a great silence, he spake unto them in the Hebrew tongue, saying,

40. staires neer the dore of the castle, and made a signe to the people to hold their peace, and give audience.

Annotations on Chap. XXI.

V. 7. When we had finiſhed our course] Of this word διανύσαντες it is generally supposed, that it is compounded of the old word ἀνύω, and that that is to be rendred perficio, to perfect, or finish. But how this notion should be competible to this place, where they are in the midst of their journey or navigation, it is not easie to determine. It were somewhat more reasonable to suspect, that διανύσαντες might by a scribe be mistaken for διαναύσαντες, (as we find in Hesychius, Διαναῦσαι, διαπλεῦσαι) and then † πλῶν διαναύσαντες, will be no more then sailing, or having sailed ἀπὸ Τύρου from Tyre; and then it fitly follows, whither κατηντήσαμεν, which is again used in this sense, c. 18. 13. or, as the Kings MS. reads κατέσημεν, (perhaps that should be κατήχθημεν, chap. 27. 3. contrary to ἐπιβάντες lanching out v. 4.) we advanced, or went forward, to Ptolemais. But if the ordinary reading be retained, then it must be observed, that as Ἀνύω is generally explicated by πληρῶ, and τελειῶ, and ἐκτελῶ in Hesychius; so each of these in these writers signifies many times no more then ποιῶν to doe, and receives the particular notion from the word that is joyned with it. So ἐκτελεῖν λατρείαν to perform the services, Heb. 9. 6. So τελεῖν δρόμον is to runn a race, and is not so properly finiſhing his course, as that signifies life, 2 Tim. 4. 7. for there it appears ver. 17, 18. that his life and his Apostolacy was not at an end, (see Note on the title of that Epiſtle.) So in the Old verse of Linus,

Ῥᾴδια πάντα θεῷ τελέσαι, καὶ ἀνύσιμον εἶναι,

All things are easie for God to doe, and nothing is impoſsible, 'tis evident that τελεῖν and ἀνύειν signifies to doe, and no more. And then διανύσαντες † πλῶν ἀπὸ Τύρου (for there is no reason to set a comma before ἀπὸ) will be no more then πεπλεύκοτες, having sailed, or made our navigation, or having taken (but not finiſh'd) our course; for it follows immediately, we advanced to Ptolemais.

V. 38. Ægyptian] Under the time of Felix's Procuratorship of Judæa there were, saith Josephus, many which deceived the people, particularly one that came out of Ægypt to Jerusalem, saying that he was a prophet, and perswading the people that they should follow him to mount Olivet, and there they should see the walls of the city fall at his command, so that they might enter the city. These, saith he Ant. l. 20. c. 6. Felix set upon, kill'd 400. and took 200. and put the Ægyptian to flight. Which story being compared with this in the Acts, gives Africanus occasion to say, that under Felix's government there was an Ægyptian false prophet with many with him, who μείζοσιν ἐπιχειρῶν πράγμασι τῇ Φήλικος κατελύθη στρατιᾷ, setting on great designes, was discomfited by Felix's army. See Euseb. Chron. lib. 1. pag. 67. But Eusebius Hist. l. 2. cap. 21. is more punctuall, Μείζονι πλάνῃ Ἰουδαίους ἐκάκωσεν ὁ Αἰγύπτιος ψευδοπροφήτης· παραγενόμενος γὰρ εἰς τὴν χώραν ἀνθρώπους γόης, καὶ θεοσεβείᾳ πίστιν ἐπιθεὶς ἑαυτῷ, ἐκ τετρισμυρίους μὲν ἀθροίζει τῶν ὑπαπλάνων. The Jews received a greater mischief by an Ægyptian false prophet: For he being a magician, and taking upon him to be a prophet, came into the region or country of Judæa, and gathered a company of deceivable people to him, to the number of thirty thousand. These, saith he, he brought out of the wilderneſse to the mount of Olives, meaning thence to force his passage into the city, and to seize upon the Roman guards, and so get the command of the people, and then keep it by the strength that Σικάριοι took it: But this was prevented by Felix. As for the σικάριοι or ſhort ſwordmen, that were with this Ægyptian, they were a ſort of men, of which Joſephus ſpeakes very much, (who on one ſide, as the Ζηλωταὶ or Zelots on the other, ſhed much bloud, and wrought much miſchief in Judæa) Ant. l. 20. c. 6. They came, ſaith he, under pretence of Religion up to Jeruſalem with Sicæ or daggers under their coates, and being once invited by Felix ſecretly to ſtrike into the train of Jonathan the high Prieſt, and ſo to kill him, for which they were not puniſhed, they after that ſolemnly came up at every feaſt, and either for revenge, or being hired, killed many even in the Temple it ſelf, ſaith Joſephus, and ſo polluted it in that manner, that made it neceſſary for God to ſend the Roman Armies thither to purifie it by way of luſtration. And theſe (ſaith he, c 7.) within a little while, grew into a very vaſt num'er, uſing ſwords like the Perſian acinaces, ſuch as the Romans call Sicæ, &c. That which S. Chryſoſtome ſaith of them is ſomewhat ſtrange, Οἱ μὲν Ἐσσηνοὶ —— οἱ αὐτοὶ καὶ Σικάριοι διὰ τὸ εἶναι ζηλωταὶ, The Eſſenes were alſo the Sicarii, becauſe they were Zelots; where he confounds theſe three, Eſſenes, Sicarii, and Zelots, whereas the Sicarii are certainly far diſtant from either of the other two. This the learned Annotator on Chryſoſtome juſtly ſuſpects to be a miſtake in him, p. 693. but the original of it he obſerves not. That is very happily ſhewed by Mr. Fuller in his Miſcellanies, to have been by turning οἱ κάδδιοι into σικάριοι, the former noting the Karæans or Scripturarians (as they are diſtinguiſhed from, and oppoſed to the Traditionals) thoſe that adhered ſtrictly to the letter of the Law, and ſo were ζηλωταὶ νόμου, zelous for the Law, and ſuch the Eſſenes were, it ſeems, affirmed to be by ſome from whom Chryſoſtome took this. The like error alſo is committed by Suidas in this name, Σικάριοι λέγονται οἱ φαρισαῖοι, ὡς ζηλωταὶ, the Phariſees are called Sicarii as being Zelots: he had ſure read οἱ κάδδιοι and took it for σικάριοι, which is the more ſtrange, becauſe he had immediately before rightly interpreted Σικάριοι λῃσῶν γένος —— they were a ſort of theeves, which in Claudius's time killed all they met with ἀγκαμπῆ ξίφη hook'd ſwords, which the Romanes call ſicæ, which, ſaith he, the Ægyptian led out into the wilderneſs, and Felix puniſhed. As for the number of men that were ſeduced by this deceiver, writers, it ſeems, do not agree upon them, neither is it neceſſary they ſhould, thoſe kinds of accounts of multitudes being of neceſſity uncertain: onely 'tis a little ſtrange that Euſebius in Chron. out of Africanus ſhould call them τρισχίλιοι three thouſand, and in his Hiſtory thirty thouſand; but perhaps the miſtake of numerall letters may cauſe that variation. And then the three thouſand there will be more agreeable with the chief officers account here, who makes them but four thouſand.

2. (And when they heard that he [a] ſpake in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more ſilence: and he ſaith,)] and ſo to him, as uſing the Greek language, when they heard him ſpeak Hebrew, were a little pacified, and ſo gave him the hearing. Thus therefore he began his Oration.

b. 3, 4. a ſcholar of Gamaliel's a Doctor of the Phariſees, and accordingly was imbued with the ſtricteſt Judaicall principles, and ſo became as zealous a propugner of the Law of Moſes, and religion of the Jews, as that is oppoſed to the reformation wrought by Chriſt, as any of you are at this time, being of that ſort of men among the Jews that are called zelots, and are very punctuall and ſtrict in the obſervances of the Law, and think themſelves obliged to put all men to death that teach any thing againſt it. And ſo did I to the Chriſtians.

3. I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarſus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city [at the [b] feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the manner of the Law of the fathers, * and was zealous towards God as ye all are this day.

4. And I perſecuted this way unto the death,] binding and delivering into priſon both men and women.

5. As all the Sanhedrim, eſpecially the high Prieſt knows, from whom I had writs or commiſſions to apprehend the Chriſtians, (ſee c. 9. 2. and 26. 10. and 12.)

5. As alſo the high Prieſt doth bear me witneſſe, and all the † eſtate of the elders: from whom alſo I received letters unto the brethren, and went to Damaſcus to bring them which were there, bound unto Jeruſalem for to be puniſhed.]

all that I found in Syria, and bring them bound to the Sanhedrim, by them to be ſcourged, or perhaps put to death by the Roman powers.

6. And when I had that commiſſion from the Sanhedrim, and went into Syria to execute it,

6. And it came to paſſe, that as I made my journey,] and was come nigh unto Damaſcus, about noon, ſuddenly there ſhone from heaven a great light round about me.

7. a thunder, and out of it theſe words articulately ſpoken (c. 9. 4.)

7. And I fell unto the ground, and heard [a voice, ſaying] unto me, Saul, Saul, Why perſecuteſt thou me?

8. And I anſwered, Who art thou, Lord? And he ſaid unto me, I am Jeſus of Nazareth, whom thou perſecuteſt.

9. And they of my company heard the thunder and ſaw the lightning round about me, though they heard not (ſee note on c. 9. b.)

9. And they that were with me ſaw indeed the light, and were afraid, but heard not the voice of him that ſpake to me.]

the ſpeech that out of the thunder was delivered to me.

10. I have provided and appointed one Ananias to come unto thee, and declare to thee what I have deſigned for

10. And I ſaid, What ſhall I do, Lord? And the Lord ſaid unto me, Ariſe, and go into Damaſcus, and there [it ſhall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to doe.]

thee to do and ſuffer for me.

11. And being blind, and not able to ſee, by reaſon of this ſhining appearance, v. 6.

11. And when I could not ſee for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came unto Damaſcus.

I was fain to be led by thoſe that were with me, and ſo I was conducted to Damaſcus.

12. And

12. And one Ananias, [a devout man according to the Law,] having a good report of all the Jews which dwelt there,

12. a Chriſtian Jew, that lived according to the Moſaical Law,

13. Came unto me, and ſtood, and ſaid unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy ſight. And the ſame hour I [looked up upon him.]

13. recovered my ſight.

14. And he ſaid, [The God of our Fathers hath choſen thee, that thou ſhouldſt know his will, and ſee that juſt one, and ſhouldſt hear * the voice of his mouth.]

14. The God of Abraham &c. hath choſen thee to have the Goſpell revealed to thee, and to ſee Chriſt, who appeared to thee in that bright cloud, and to hear him ſpeak to thee from heaven.

15. For thou ſhalt be his witneſſe unto all men of what thou haſt ſeen and heard.]

15. For of thee it is appointed that thou ſhalt preach and make known to all men the things which Chriſt hath made known unto thee.

16. And now, why tarrieſt thou? ariſe and be baptized, and waſh away thy ſins, calling upon the name of the Lord.]

16. To what purpoſe therefore ſhould any delay be made of baptizing thee, and admitting thee into the Church, by that ſeal of the covenant, whereby thou art engaged to forſake, and God to pardon all thy former ſins, (upon condition of a ſincere change on thy part) upon which thou maieſt joyn with the Church in performance of all Chriſtian duties of devotion to God?

17. And it came to paſſe that when I was come again to Jeruſalem, † even while I prayed in the Temple, I was in a trance,]

17. And at my firſt coming to Jeruſalem after this, c. 9. 26. as I was in the Temple a praying, I fell into an extaſie, or trance (ſee note on c. 10. d.)

18. And ſaw him, ſaying unto me, Make haſt, and get thee quickly out of Jeruſalem: for they will not receive thy teſtimony concerning me.]

18. And in a viſion me thought I ſaw Chriſt, and he commanded me to go ſpeedily out of this city, becauſe my former zeal againſt the Goſpell would hinder my preaching of it now, from being believed, or heeded by thoſe of Jeruſalem.

e confi- ιεν κατὰ πασῶν note on c.6.d.

19. And I ſaid, Lord, they know that I impriſoned and beat in * every Synagogue them that believed on thee.

20. And when the bloud of thy Martyr Stephen was ſhed, I alſo was ſtanding by, and conſenting unto his death, and kept the rayment of them thet ſlew him.]

19, 20. Againſt this, me thought, I argued, that my former zeal againſt Chriſtianity being ſo remarkable among all the Jews, as it muſt needs be by my impriſoning and ſcourging the profeſſors of it in the Conſiſtories of many cities, c. 9. 2. by my joyning and aſſiſting in the ſtoning of Steven, and keeping the accuſers garments, whilſt they threw ſtones at him, c. 7. 58. and 8. 1. this might be an argument to aſſure the Jews at Jeruſalem, that it is on right grounds that I now teach the contrary, and this may give them a greater willingneſſe to enquire into the grounds of my change, and ſo may render me a more competent atteſter of the doctrine of Chriſt now, by how much the more I oppoſed it formerly.

21. And he ſaid unto me, Depart, for I will ſend thee farre hence unto the Gentiles.]

21. But this, me thought, did not prevail with Chriſt for my ſtaying at Jeruſalem; but he in his infinite wiſdome ſeeing that this would not perſwade, but exaſperate the Jews (ſee Chryſoſtome Hom. on Gal. 11. 11. Tom. 5. p. 404. l. 25.) commanded me to depart from Jeruſalem, telling me that he would give me a commiſſion, as an Apoſtle, to goe and preach to the Gentiles, who had not that exception to me, and would more cheerfully receive me.

22. And they † gave him audience unto this word, and then lift up their voices, and ſaid, Away with ſuch a fellow from the earth: for it is not fit that he ſhould live.]

22. Thus farre the Jews had patience to ſuffer him to ſpeak: but then when he mentioned the Gentiles, and his appointment to go to them, they cryed out, he was a villain and unworthy to live.

23. And as they cryed out, and caſt off their clothes, and threw duſt into the aire,]

23. And while they were thus violent, making as if they would preſently ſtone him (ſee c. 7. 57, 58.) and giving other expreſſions of their fury,

24. The chief captain commanded him to be brought into the caſtle, and bad that he ſhould [c] × be examined by ſcourging; that he might know wherefore they cryed ſo againſt him.]

24. The Colonel, or chief commander of the guard, bid the ſouldiers carry him into the Tower, and commanded that he ſhould be ſorely ſcourged till he would confeſſe what it was that he had done, with which they were ſo enraged. See. v. 30.

25. And as * they [d] bound him with thongs, Paul ſaid unto the Centurion that ſtood by, Is it lawfull for you to ſcourge a man that is [e] a Roman and uncondemned?

25. And as the Captain which was appointed to ſcourge him, brought him to the block, and faſtned him to it, in order to the ſcourging of him, Paul ſpake to the Captain that had the execution of that command committed to him, ſaying, Will the Roman Laws permit you to deal thus with a free denizon of Rome, before any ſentence is legally paſt upon him?

26. When the Centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captain, ſaying, Take heed what thou doſt, for this man is a Roman.]

26. This a Captain of a troop told to the Colonel, and withall admoniſh'd him what danger he might incurre by doing thus to a free denizon of Rome.

27. Then the chief captain came, and ſaid unto him, Tell me, art thou a [Roman?] He ſaid, Yea.

26. a free denizon of Rome?

a great ebought is privi- of a ci- n, Ἐγὼ ὁ κεφα- ταῖον τοῦτο πολι- τείαν περι- ποιησάμην.

28. And the chief captain ſaid, [† With a great ſumme obtained I this [f] freedome. And Paul ſaid, But I was free-born.]

28. I am not ſo by birth, but purchaſed the privilege at a great charge. But Paul ſaid, The city where I was born, and my parents before me, though of a Jewiſh ſtock, had by living there, this privilege.

29. Then ſtraightway they departed from him which ſhould have examined him, and the chief captain alſo was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and becauſe he had bound him.

29. Then they ceaſed from their deſigne of ſcourging him, ver. 24. to make him confeſſe his crime; and the conſideration that he was a free man of Rome, made the Colonel fear he had already done more then he could well anſwer in binding, or putting chains upon him, c. 21. 33.

30. On the morrow, becauſe he would have known the certainty, wherefore he was accuſed of the Jewes, he looſed him from his bands, and commanded the chief prieſts and all their councel to appear, and brought Paul down, and ſet him before them.]

30. And therefore he ſoon looſed him from his bands, but yet being deſirous to know the bottome of the buſineſſe, he convented the Jewes Sanhedrim, and brought out Paul, to ſee what they would object againſt him.

a. Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ.

V. 2. Spake in the Hebrew tongue] What the reaſon was of Pauls ſpeaking Hebrew at this time, and the Jewes giving him audience thereupon, may here briefly be noted. Two ſorts of Jewes there were at this time, ſome called by * S. Chryſoſtome οἱ βαθεῖς Ἑβραῖοι profound Hebrews, ſuch as uſed no other language but the Hebrew, admitted not the Greek Bible into their aſſemblies, but onely the Hebrew, and the Jeruſalem Targum or Paraphraſe. Others that ſpake Greek, and uſed the Greek Tranſlation of the Bible, and theſe were called Helleniſts (ſee Note on c. 6. a.) Now theſe ſeveral uſes bred ſome unkindneſs betwixt the ſe two ſorts, as may in part be diſcerned, even after their receiving Chriſtianity, c. 6. 1. And of this latter ſort Paul ſure was one, and accordingly in his writings makes uſe conſtantly of the Greek Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, and in that reſpect (among others) was much diſliked by the other ſort. Thoſe of them that were converted had great prejudices to him, c. 21. 21. and that is ſaid to be the reaſon why he concealed his name in the Epiſtle written to the Hebrews. But for thoſe of them that were not converted they would not indure to hear him, or hear of him; which is the account S. Chryſoſtome gives of his diſcourſing and preaching to the Helleniſts onely c. 9. 28. becauſe the other would not indure or admit him. Hereupon to avert this great diſpleaſure conceived by them, he here ſpeaks to them in the Hebrew language, and they were in ſome degree pacified thereby, ſo far as to give him audience.

* To. 4. p. 731. 12.

b. Πόδας Γαμαλιήλ.

V. 3. Feet of Gamaliel] It was the manner of diſciples to ſit at the feet of their Maſters, which in Pirke Avoth is called to duſt themſelves in the duſt of their feet; for ſo ſaith Joſe there, Let thy houſe be the houſe of aſſembly for wiſe men, that is, be thou ever converſant in the ſchools of the Doctors, ורבוק בעפר והוי מתאבק רגליהם, and doe thou roll, or duſt, or tumble thy ſelfe in the duſt of their feet.

c. Ἀνετάζεσθαι.

V. 24. Be examined by ſcourging] The notion of ἀνετάζεσθαι among the ſacred writers will be diſcerned by two places in the Book of Wiſdome, c. 2. 19. Βασάνῳ ἐτάζωμεν αὐτὸν, let us torment him with the wrack, and c. 6. 6. δυνατῶς ἐτασθήσονται, the mighty ſhall be mightily tormented: in both which 'tis clearly uſed for tormenting or cruciating. And S. Chryſoſtome Hom. 26. in Mat. p. 186. citing the latter of theſe places, applies it to the words of Chriſt, that he that knowes his Maſters will and doth it not δαρήσεται πολλὰς ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes, ὥστε ἡ πλείων γνῶσις πλείονος κολάσεώς ἐστιν ὑπόθεσις, the greater knowledge is the cauſe of greater puniſhment, thus interpreting εἱλαθήσονται by beating, and puniſhment. So Gen. 12. 17. ἔπαισεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν Φαραὼ ἐπαισμοῖς μεγάλοις καὶ πονηροῖς, God ſcourged or cruciated Pharaoh with great and ſore plagues.

d. Ἱμᾶσιν

V. 25. Bound him with thongs] That ἱμάντες are here the ſame that μάστιγες ſcourges v. 24. there is no doubt to be made, Ἱμάντες, λῶροι, they ſignifie whips, or ſcourges, ſaith Heſychius; and Ἱμὰς, λῶρος, οἱ δὲ νέρθεν ὑποδήσιν ἱμάντι they whip him with a ſcourge, or cord, adding καὶ ὅτι τὸ χαμαϊνίς, (it ſhould ſure be σχοινίς) it is alſo uſed for a rope. And ſo Ἱμᾶσιν ἐμάστιξεν, Ἱμάδλας, μάστιγας, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἱμάσθαι, ὅ ἐστι πάσσειν τῷ ἱμάντι, and Ἱμάσαι, πατάξαι, πλῆξαι, μαστίξαι, it ſhould ſure be μάστιξι. All to the ſame purpoſe that the word ſignifies cords, or ſcourges, to beat with. This of ſcourges was a puniſhment much ſeverer then that of rods. Porcia lex (ſaith Cicero pro Rabirio) virgas ab omnium Romanorum civium corpore amovet, hic miſericors flagella retulit, The Porcian law freeth a Roman citizens body from rods, and he a mercifull man (ſpeaking Ironically) hath brought back ſcourging. And accordingly the μάστιγες or ἱμάντες ſcourges here are uſed, as elſewhere the greateſt torments are, to make him confeſſe what his crime was, v. 24. See 2 Mac. 7. 37. As for προτείνειν, that ſignifies literally to bend forward, it referres to the cuſtome in ſcourging, which was to faſten them to a block or piece of wood made faſt to the earth, of a cubit and an half high, for the perſon that was to be puniſhed to lean on, bending his body down to it. And ſo προέτεινεν here ſignifies the bending him forward to this block, or little pillar, that the upper part of his body ſhould lean on it, and ſo expoſing him to the Lictor, or executioner. This is here ſaid of the Centurion in the ſingular number, προέτεινεν, whoſe office, it ſeems, it was to doe this. Maſter Bois of Ely, a very learned man, hath here a conjecture, that the phraſe ſhould have an hypallage in it, for προέτειναν αὐτὸν τοὺς ἱμάντας, he extended the ſcourges to him, or, ſhewed them him extended, making it the deſcription of a Lictor holding his ſcourge in his hand, and ſhaking, and fitting it for execution, and ſtriking a terror into the priſoner alſo by that means. This conjecture being ingenious it was not unfit to have mentioned. Joſephus Scaliger alſo hath another, Epiſt. 146. that it refers to the manner of ſcourging, expreſs'd in the Comedie, Ego plectar pendens, I ſhall be ſcourged hanging, viz. that they were lifted up from the ground, their heads higher than their heeles, and tyed with ropes hands and feet, making thoſe ropes to be the ἱμάντες here, and that elevation of the body προσλέινεσθαι.

e. Ῥωμαῖος

Ib. A Romane] That Paul was free of Rome by being born in a city that had the Roman privileges, is ſufficiently known; ſo ſaith Philo of Agrippa, Φίλων εἰῶν πατρίδας ἴλας ὁ Ῥωμαϊκῆς ἠξίωσε πολιτείας, he gave the privileges of the Roman citizenſhip to whole countreys of ſome of his friends. So the Philippians call themſelves Romans, Act. 16. 21. Philippians ἐκ παρίδος by countrey, Romans ἐκ ψηφισμάτων by decrees, ſaith Photius Ep. ρβ'. p. 146. & Ep. σμζ'. And that Tarſus the Metropolis of Cilicia was ſuch, is intimated by Diodorus Siculus l. 47. where ſpeaking of the Emperours Julius and Auguſtus, he ſaith, ὅτω γὰρ προσφιλῶς πρὸς Καίσαρα τὸν πρότερον καὶ δι' ἐκεῖνον καὶ πρὸς τὸν δεύτερον οἱ Ταρσεῖς εἶχον, ὥστε καὶ Ἰουλιόπολιν σφᾶς ἀπ' αὐτοῦ μετονομάσαι, Thoſe of Tarſus were ſo kind to Julius, and after for his ſake to Auguſtus Caeſar, that from his own name he call'd them Juliopolis. That it was unlawfull for any ſuch perſon to be bound, or ſcourged, is apparent by Cicero Or. 5. in Verr. Facinus eſt vincire civem Romanum, ſcelus verberare, prope parricidium necare, quid dicam in crucem tollere? It is a foul fault for any Prætor, &c. to bind a citizen of Rome, a piacular offence to ſcourge him, a kind of parricide to kill him, what ſhall I call the crucifying of ſuch an one? And for that that follows of his being ſcourged before condemnation, (as, being by way of examination, or ἀνετασμὸς ver. 24. it is here ſuppoſed to be,) 'tis that which Cujacius hath obſerved out of Salvian to be diſtinctly againſt law; and all that is here ſaid in this verſe, is ſet down by S. Paul as diſtinctly according to the Roman form, as if the whole verſe were taken and tranſlated out of their Law. Yet was not this ſo farre true, that a Roman citizen might not be puniſhed; but as * Rawardus obſerves, the cuſtome was, that before he were ſo puniſhed, he ſhould, judicio duumvirûm, be adjudg'd to loſe his privilege, and be uncitizen'd, and pronounced an enemie of the commonwealth, and then he might be ſcourged or put to death, that being the form of diſfranchizing him, Lictor, colliga manus, or caput obnubito, infelici reſte ſuſpendito, verberato vel intra pomœrium vel extra pomœrium, Lictor, bind his hands, or cover his face, hang him, ſcourge him either within or without the ſuburbs, as Livy teſtifies, l. 1.

f. Πολίτης

V. 28. Freedome] Moſt of the Jewes, ſaith Philo in * leg.

leg. ad Caium, were Ῥωμαῖοι ἀπελευθερωθέντες Romans made free, ἀιχμαλωτοι γὰρ ἀχθέντες εἰς Ἰταλίαν ὑπὸ τῶν κληπωμένων ἠλευθερώθησαν, for being brought captive into Italy, they were set at liberty by their masters that possess'd them, but payed a price for that favour. So 2 Mac. 4. 9 Jason promiseth a great summe of money to Antiochus, among other things to have power to make some of Jerusalem citizens of Antioch, meaning to make his money soon up again by selling it to those that desired that privilege (see Note on Phil. 3. l.) So saith Photius Epist. ρβ'. p. 145. Τιμῆς γὰρ ἀπήλαυον κατ' ἐκεῖνο καιρὸ οὐχ ὅσοι μόνον ἰθαγενεῖς τῆς Ῥώμης ἐτύγχανον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅσοις αὐτῆς ἡ καλὴ νόμῳ χαρίσσον ἢ χρημάτων ἐπολιτεύετο, About that time that privilege was enjoyed not only by those which were natives of Rome, but by as many as either by favour or money were made partakers of that appellation. So also Epist. σμς'. p. 378. and σμζ'. p. 379. ἔθνος καὶ πατρίδ' ὄντες ἀλλόφυλοι, εἰς τὴν Ῥωμαίων ἐτελεσθ' πολιτογραφίαν, being aliens of another nation and countrey, they were received into the Roman album, made citizens of Rome. Such an one it seems was the chief Commander here, who had himself personally bought this freedome or privilege of a citizen of Rome. But Paul was born to this liberty, by being born in a city that had obtained of the Emperours that privilege for all the inhabitants thereof, (see note c.) Thus in Eusebius Eccl. Hist. l. 5. c. 1. in the examining of Christians by the persecutors, ὅσοι ἐδόκουν πολιτείαν Ῥωμαίων ἐσχηκέναι, they that proved to be municipes, free denizons, of Rome, τόπων ἀπέτεμνε τὰς κεφαλὰς, their heads were cut off. A privilege which belongs to such, in stead of more ignominious punishments. So Josephus the Historian, born at Jerusalem, of the sacerdotal family, ἐξ ἱερέων τε καὶ ἱερεὺς, of priests, and himself a priest, saith Photius, Ep. σμζ'. had the privilege of a Romane and was called by a Romane name, Flavius, the prænomen of the Emperour Vespasian.

CHAP. XXIII.

Paraphrase.

1. AND Paul, earnestly beholding the councell, said, Men and brethren, [I have ||lived in all good conscience before God untill this day.]

1. I have, all my life long, both when I was a propugner of the Mosaical Law against Christ's reformation, and since I have been a preacher of the Gospel, acted sincerely and uprightly according to my conscience, and consecrated my life to Gods service.

2. And the high priest Ananias] commanded them that stood by to smite him on the mouth.

2. And Ananias, the chief person among the Jewes, (see note on Lu. 3. c.)

3. Then said Paul unto him, [God * shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?]

3. God will punish thee by way of retaliation, deale with thee as thou hast done with me, thou hypocrite. Dost thou sit like a Magistrate or distributer of legall justice, and dost thou break the law thy self, and command me to be punish'd, before thou hast heard the cause? (see c. 22. 25.)

4. And they that stood by said, [Revilest thou Gods high priest?]

4. Dost thou speak such contumelious words to him who is the high priest of Gods appointment, a sacred person, and under God, the chief Magistrate among the Jewes?

5. Then said Paul, [I wist not, brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.]

5. I did not know that to be true which thou tellest me, that Ananias was an high priest of Gods appointment, (that he was not so, nor yet the high priest put in by the Roman Procurator at this time, see note on Lu. 3. c.) however knowing him to be a person in authority, placed in a judicature (as Paul confesseth v. 3.) I acknowledge I did amisse, and am sorry I did revile him, for that is unlawfull, by that place of Scripture, Exod. 22. 28.

6. But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the councel, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee, of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.]

6. And Paul discerning the Sanhedrim to consist partly of Pharisees, who believe another life after this, partly of Sadducees, that doe not, said aloud, I am (as my father was) of the sect of the Pharisees, and the main thing that I am question'd for, is my believing that there is another life after this, which is a pure Pharisaical doctrine, which all of that sect hold as well as I.

7. And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees, and the multitude was divided.

8. For the Sadducees say that there is [no resurrection, neither Angel, nor Spirit;] but the Pharisees confesse both.

8. no life after this, no immortal Spirit, nor soul of man subsisting without a body.

9. And there arose a great cry, and the [Scribes that were of the Pharisees part arose and strove saying, We find no evil in this man: but if † [a] a Spirit or an Angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.]

the Spirit

9. Doctors of the Law, which were generally of the Pharisees opinion, took his part, and profest to think he had done nothing amisse, and that 'twas possible that he had received some infusion or incitation from Gods Spirit, or else some voice from heaven, or vision by an Angel, and if he had, 'twould not become them to resist his doctrine, lest if that were truly revealed to him by God, they should fight against God himself.

11. Paul saw a vision again, and God appeared to stand by him, and encourage him, telling him, that he should now receive no farther harm there, but as he had defended and avowed the faith of Christ there at Jerusalem, so he should live to doe at Rome also.

12. And when it was day,] certain of the Jewes banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying, that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul.

18. So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and ſaid, Paul the priſoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath ſomething to ſay unto thee.

19. Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aſide privately, and asked him, What is it that thou haſt to tell me?

20. And he ſaid, The Jewes have agreed to deſire thee that thou wouldeſt bring down Paul to morrow into the Councel, as though they would enquire ſomewhat * of him more perfectly.

* concerning περι

21. But doe not thou yield unto them, for there lie in wait for him of them more then fourty men, which have bound themſelves with an oath, that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now they are ready, looking for a promiſe from thee.

22. So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man that thou haſt ſhewed theſe things to me.

b. 23. Captains of two bands, and bid them have their bands in readineſſe, and take to their aſſiſtance 70 horſe-men, and a guard of two hundred men to watch and ward, to go to Cæſarea Stratonis, an haven town, (ſee Note on c. 18. c.) preſently after nine of the clock that night.

23. And he called unto him two [Centurions, ſaying, Make ready two hundred ſouldiers to goe to Cæſarea, and horſe-men threeſcore and ten, b and ‖ ſpearmen two hundred, at the third houre of the night:]

24. a horſe or mule for Paul to ride on,

24. And provide [them beaſts that they may ſet Paul on,] and bring him ſafe unto Felix the Governour.

25. And he wrote a letter after this manner,

26. Claudius Lyſias unto the moſt excellent Governour Felix ſendeth greeting.

27. This man was taken of the Jewes, and ſhould have been killed of them: then came I with † an army and reſcued him, having underſtood that he was a Roman.

† a band of ſouldiers, σπειρηματι v. 10.

28. And when I would have known the cauſe wherefore they accuſed him, I brought him forth into their Councel.

29. no charge brought againſt him puniſhable either with death or bonds by the Roman law (which had not yet ſet out any decree againſt Chriſtians.)

29. Whom I perceived to be accuſed of queſtions of their Law, but to have [nothing laid to his charge worthy of death or of bands.]

30. alſo gave order to his accuſers to appear before thee, and implead him.

30 And * when it was told me how that the Jewes laid wait for the man, I ſent ſtraightway to thee, and [gave commandement to his accuſers alſo to ſay before thee what they had againſt him.] Farewell.

* when I was told of a conſpiracy that would be againſt him from the Jewes, preſently I ſent him. Μηνυθεισης μοι επιβουλης εις τον ανδρα εξαυτης επεμψα

31. Then the ſouldiers, as it was commanded them, took Paul, and brought him by night to Antipatris.

32. And on the morrow they left the horſe-men to goe with him, and returned to the caſtle.

33. Who when they came to Cæſarea, and delivered the Epiſtle to the Governour, preſented Paul alſo before him.

34. Felix the Procurator of Judæa under the Roman Emperour

34. And when [the Governour] had read the letter, he asked of what province he was. And when he underſtood that he was of Cilicia,

35. ſecured in the hall called Herod's hall.

35. I will hear thee, ſaid he, when thine accuſers are alſo come. And he commanded him to be [kept in Herods judgement hall.]

Annotations on Chap. XXIII.

a. V. 9. A Spirit or an Angel] Of the four ſeverall wayes of Revelations which were among the Jewes, theſe are confeſs'dly two, רוח הקדוש the holy Spirit, and בת קול the daughter of voice, or a voice from heaven, brought by an Angel, by which any thing was made known to them. The other two were אורים ותומים Urim and Thummim, under the firſt Temple, the twelve ſtones in the pectoral of the high Prieſt (which was called hoſchen judicii) the irradiation of which foretold many things to the Jews. This is by Joſephus called λογιον the oracle, which, ſaith he, ceaſed to ſhine 200 years before he wrote: Of which ſee Suidas in the word Ephod, and Note on Rom. 3. a. And the laſt was נבואה prophecy, which under the the ſecond Temple, after the death of Haggai, Zachary and Malachi, was taken away. This was of two ſorts, either in time of ſleep, by way of dream, or when they were waking, by caſting them into a trance or extaſie, where by way of viſion they ſaw ſome body ſaying this or that to them, or elſe ſeeing no ſhape, onely heard a voice. Both which ſorts of prophecie we have mention'd together Joel 2. 28. dreaming of dreams, and ſeeing of viſions, as that other of the holy Ghoſt in the phraſe pour out my Spirit. Many examples of the viſion or trance we have here in this book, of Ananias, Act. 9. 10. and of Saul, v. 12. of Cornelius, ch. 10. 3. and of Peter, ver. 10. and of the dream alſo, called a viſion by night which was ſeen by Paul, c. 16. 9. and again ch. 27. 23. where an Angel appeared to him in a dream, and the Lord, c. 23. 11. as to Joſeph Maryes husband, Mat. 1 As for that of the holy Ghoſt, which belongs to this place, it is thus defined by the Jewes, that a man being awake, and in his full ſenſes, ſpeaks and acts like another man, but the Spirit of God, or Spiritus excelſus, excites him, and ſuggeſts unto him words which he ſhall ſay; as in that of Chriſt to the Apoſtles, Mar. 13. 11. 'tis not you that ſpeak, but the holy Ghoſt, the interpretation of the dabitur in illa hora, it ſhall be given in that houre, which went before. Three of theſe four waies of Revelation the Jewes reſolved to be aboliſhed at this time, that of the Urim and Thummim, with the firſt Temple, that of Prophecie, with Malachi, and that of the holy Ghoſt, in the ſecond year of Darius, as it is in Joma c. 7. and therefore ſaith S. John c. 7. 39. οὔπω γὰρ ἦν πνεῦμα ἅγιον as yet there was not the holy Ghoſt, onely they did, according to the prophecie of Joel, expect that it ſhould return to them again in thoſe daies: and ſo here we have mention of it in the πνεῦμα ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ, the Spirit hath ſpoken to him; and ſo of the בת קול alſo, in the word Angel (as indeed it was, when he heard a voice from heaven delivered out of thunder, Saul, Saul, &c.) Though 'tis poſſible that this laſt of the Angel may belong to that of the appearance of an Angel in a dream or viſion to him.

V. 32. Speare-men] What δεξιολάβοι ſignifies may be beſt learn'd from Phavorinus, who interprets it φυλακὰς warders or guard, and ſo H. Stephanus, Satellites, Stipatores, to the ſame ſenſe; Thus called, ſaith Meurſius, quòd maleficis manum injicerent, eóſque apprehenderent, & carceri mancipatos ad ſupplicium producendos cuſtodirent, becauſe they apprehended or laid hands on Malefactors (which yet would rather be the importance of δεξιοβόλοι from βάλλειν δεξιὰς laying hands, and indeed ſo the Kings MS. reads here, not δεξιολάβους, but δεξιοβόλους) and putting them in cuſtody, kept them and brought them out to execution; adding that theſe are the ſame in the Camp, that the Lictors or Serjeants are in the City. From all which it appears to be moſt fitly rendred a guard, to which in the militia the priſoners are committed.

CHAP. XXIV.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND after five daies [Ananias the high prieſt deſcended with the Elders, and with a certain oratour named Tertullus, who informed the Governour againſt Paul.]

1. Annas the chief of the Jewes (ſee note on Lu. 3 c.) with ſome others of the Sanhedrim (ſee note on ch. 18. c.) to hedrim, and a lawyer or pleader, named Tertullus, went down all from Jeruſalem to Cæſarea, Felix, and brought in a bill of information, (ſee Theophylact) accuſation, or charge againſt Paul.

2. And when he was called forth, Tertullus began to accuſe him, ſaying, Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietneſſe, and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providence, ||

2, 3. And when Tertullus was admitted to ſpeak, he began his plea againſt Paul with a flattering oration to Felix, telling him how happy the Jews had alwaies in every of

|| alwaies and in all places, 3 We accept it—πάντῃ τε καὶ πανταχοῦ ἀποδεχόμεθα—

3. We accept it alwaies and in all places, moſt noble Felix, with all thankfulneſſe.]

their cities counted themſelves under his government and managery of affaires, and that they were very thankfull to him for it.

4. Notwithſtanding that I be not farther tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldſt hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5. For we have found this man a peſtilent fellow, and a mover of ſedition among all the Jewes throughout the world, and a ring-leader of the ſect of the Nazarens.]

5. This Paul we Jewes know to be a dangerous perſon, and every where where he comes, he diſquiets the peoples minds, and prepares them to commotions and ſeditions againſt the preſent government, that of the Romans, (ſee v. 18. and ch. 25. 8.) and he is a great promoter of the religion of thoſe that are ordinarily called Nazarens, from Jeſus that dwelt in Nazareth, (that is, of Chriſtians.)

6. Who alſo hath gone about to profane the Temple: whom we took, and would have judged according to our law.]

6. And he hath done ſuch things in the Temple of the Jewes among us at Jeruſalem, as are abſolutely contrary to the laws of our God (ſee c. 21. 21.) and we apprehended him, and would have had him puniſht, ſo as our law appoints thoſe to be puniſht that bring ſtrangers beyond that court of the Temple that was aſſigned them, and ſeparated from the other (ſee Eph. 2. 14.)

7. But the chief Captain Lyſias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8. Commanding his accuſers to come unto thee; by examining of whom thy ſelf mayſt take knowledge of all theſe things whereof we accuſe him.]

7, 8. But as we were proceeding againſt him, Lyſias, the Captain of the Temple, or commander of the guard of ſouldiers that guards the Temple, would not permit us to proceed againſt him in our Court, but carried him away with a guard of ſouldiers, c. 23. 10. and cited ſome of the Sanhedrim to come hither to thee, and accuſe him; whom therefore thou mayſt pleaſe to examine, and heare what they can ſay.

9. And the Jewes alſo aſſented, ſaying, That theſe things were ſo.]

9. And the Jewes of the Sanhedrim that came down, v. 1. confirmed the truth of all that Tertullus had pleaded.

10. Then Paul, after that the Governour had [beckned unto him] to ſpeak, anſwered, For as much as I know that thou haſt been of many years [a Judge unto this nation,] I doe the more cheerfully anſwer for my ſelf.

10. given him leave, permitted him a ruler, or Procurator of Judea,

11. Becauſe that thou mayſt underſtand, that there are but yet twelve daies ſince I went up to Jeruſalem for to worſhip.]

11. And firſt thou mayſt pleaſe to underſtand, that about twelve daies ſince I came up to Jeruſalem to keep the feaſt of Pentecoſt, a ſolemn feaſt of the Jewes there, when by law 'tis appointed to be kept.

12. And they neither found me in the Temple diſputing with any man, neither raiſing up the people, neither in the ſynagogues, nor in the city.

12, 13. And there I behaved my ſelf very quietly, made no diſturbance, raiſed no ſedition; and they that ſay I am this nature, but onely content themſelves with a generall charge of ſedition.

13. Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuſe me.] a ſeditious perſon, and raiſe diſturbances whereever I come, are not able to prove any thing of

14. But this I confeſſe unto thee, that after the way which they call * hereſie, ſo worſhip I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the Law and the Prophets;]

14. But as for the other part of the accuſation ver. 5. that I am a great promoter of the ſect of the Nazarens, I acknowledge this, that that way of worſhipping the God of Abraham which Chriſt hath taught, and the Chriſtians practiſe, which I ſuppoſe they mean by the word Sect, or peculiar way of profeſſion or religion (ſee Act. 26. 5.) is the way that I doe uſe, and in doing ſo, doe agreeably to all that is written in the Moſaicall Law, and the writings of authority among the Jewes, by which they think themſelves obliged.

* ſect, αἵρεσις, ſee v. 5. & c. 26. 5.

15. And have hope towards God, which they themſelves alſo allow, that there ſhall be a reſurrection from the dead both of the juſt and unjuſt.]

15. And the main part of this is, that there ſhall be a life after this, and that all that ever lived here, ſhall then be judged and rewarded, whether they be good or evil. And this is no more then theſe men themſelves, all but the Sadducees, profeſſe to believe, and depend on.

16. And herein doe I exerciſe my ſelf to have alwaies a conſcience void of offence toward God, and toward men.]

16. In this religion and practiſe, I am as carefull as I can to live blameleſſy, and to doe my duty in all things towards God and man.

17. Now after many years I came to bring almes to my nation, and offerings.]

17. As for that which they mention of my profaning the Temple, thus it was, Many years after my converſion to this way that they ſpeak of, I was ſent by the pious Jewes, &c. of other parts to Jeruſalem and Judæa, with their charity, and free-will oblations, brought in for the ſervice of God, c. 11. 30.

18. Whereupon certain Jewes from Aſia found me purified in the Temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult;]

18. And whilſt I was doing thus, ſome Jewes of Aſia ſaw me in the Temple, where I was farre from profaning of it, as was ſuggeſted ver. 6. and ch. 21. 23. but was there in ſuch a manner as the Law of the Jewes required of me, and they ſenſleſly miſtaking, affirmed that I carried Trophimus a Gentile of Epheſus into the Temple, and ſo affirmed me to haye profaned the Temple. But this was a down-right falſity, for which there was no other ground of affirming, but only this, that he was ſeen with me in the city (ſee ch. 21. 29.) And as I was in the Temple without any ſuch company there which might be ſaid to profane it, ſo it is certain that I was not attended with any number of men, that might bring me under ſuſpicion of raiſing any ſedition ver. 5.

19. Who ought to have been here before thee, and object if they had ought againſt me.]

19. Or if any man living would affirm I had, he ought to come now in open court, and teſtifie againſt me here.

20. Or elſe let theſe ſame here ſay, if they have found any evil-doing in me, while I ſtood before the councell.]

20. Nay for all theſe things I ſhall make mine appeal to theſe that are here preſent of their own Sanhedrim ver. 1. and deſire they will teſtifie, whether when I was brought before their Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem c 23. I was not diſmiſt with a good teſtimony from themſelves, ver. 9. viz. that there was nothing of moment charged and proved againſt me; and let them ſpeak, if it were not ſo.

21. Except it be for this one voice, that I cried ſtanding among them, Touching the reſurrection of the dead I am called in queſtion by you this day.]

21. There is I am ſure but one thing that can by any be teſtified againſt me from the proceedings there, and that none but Sadducees will lay to my charge, who are engaged in the maintenance of their own tenets, and that chargeable upon all the Phariſees as well as me, viz. my acknowledging another life after this, ch. 23. 8.

22. And when Felix heard theſe things, * having more perfect knowledge of that way, he deferred them, and ſaid, When Lyſias the chief captain ſhall come down, I will know the uttermoſt of your matter.]

22. When Felix had had this cognizance of the matter, and diſcern'd how things ſtood, he deferred paſſing any ſentence, ſaying, Concerning Chriſtian religion, whether it were derogatory to the Law of the Jewes, I will determine, when I have adviſed with learned men that know your pretentions, and that concerning the tumult ſaid to be raiſed by Paul, when Lyſias comes, whoſe teſtimony will decide it.

* he put them off, ſaying, When I know more exactly the things that belong to this way, and when Lyſias the Commander comes down, I will determine the buſineſſe between you, ἐβάλετο αὐτοὺς, εἰπὼν, ὅταν Λυσίας ὁ χιλίαρχος κατα βῇ, διαγνώσομαι τὰ καθ' ὑμᾶς.

23. And he commanded a Centurion † to keep Paul, and * to let him have liberty, and that he ſhould forbid none of his acquaintaince to miniſter or come unto him.]

23. And he commanded the Captain of the guard to keep Paul ſafe, but not as a cloſe priſoner, and that any that would bring him any relief, or diſcourſe with him, might freely doe it.

† that Paul ſhould be guarded, τηρεῖσθαι Παῦλον

* that he ſhould have ἔχειν

24. And after certain daies, when Felix came with his wife Druſilla, which was a Jew, he ſent for Paul, and heard him concerning the faith of Chriſt.]

24. And Felix's wife, being a Jew, when ſhe came, he thought fit to have her preſent, and ſent for Paul, and bid him ſay what he had to ſay concerning the doctrine or Goſpel of Chriſt.

25. And as he reaſoned of † righteouſneſſe, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and anſwer'd, Goe thy way for this time; * when I have a convenient ſeaſon, I will call for thee.]

† juſtice & continence δικαιοσύνης καὶ ἐγκρατείας

* But I will find a ſeaſon, and call for thee, σὺ δὲ μεταλήψομαι μετακαλέσομαί σε

25. And Paul, in a diſcourſe of that ſubject, inſiſted particularly on the great obligation that by the Law of Chriſt lay on all men to obſerve juſtice between man and man, and to live chaſtly, either in conjugal or ſingle life, (two virtues contrary to two ſpeciall vices that Felix was particularly guilty of) and withall of the ſevere judgment that all men one day ſhould be called to for their offences in theſe and the like kinds. And as he inſiſted on theſe three branches of the Chriſtian faith, wherein Felix was ſo much concern'd, he fell a trembling, and being in pain to hear ſuch doctrine, he broke him off abruptly, bidding him depart for that time, and he would find ſome other ſeaſon to hear him again.

a. 26. He hoped alſo] that money ſhould have been given him of Paul, that he might looſe him: wherefore he ſent for him the oftner, and communed with him.

26. And, being a taker of bribes, (note a.) he hoped

b. 27. But b after two years Portius Feſtus came into Felix's room; and Felix, willing to ſhew the Jewes a pleaſure, left Paul bound.]

27. And when Paul had remained in cuſtody under the time of Felix's Procuratorſhip for the ſpace of two years, Felix was by Nero removed out of his place, and Portius Feſtus ſucceeded him; and though Felix had nothing to condemn in Paul, yet meerly to gratifie the Jewes at parting, he left Paul in priſon.

Annotations

a. Κλαυδιος φηλιξ

V. 25. Felix trembled] The grounds of Felix's trembling at this diſcourſe of Paul's of juſtice and chaſtity, or continence, will be beſt fetch'd from a view of the character of this man both in Tacitus & Joſephus, Tacitus Hiſt. l. 5. mentions him an Eques Romanus, to whom Claudius the Emperour had intruſted that Province, where, ſaith he, per omnem ſævitiam & libidinem jus regium ſervili ingenio exercuit, he practiſed all cruelty and injuſtice in his government, Druſillâ Antonii & Cleopatræ nepte in matrimonium acceptâ, and that he took to wife Druſilla the neece of Antonie and Cleopatra. Of this marriage of his Joſephus enlargeth, and ſaith that Agrippa his brother had given her firſt to Azis the King of the Emiſſeni, and whilſt ſhe was his wife, Felix falls in love with her, and by the help of one Simon a Magician (not he of Samaria, but another of Cyprus) obtained her from her husbands bed. From theſe two parts of his character, an unjuſt Governour (of which his expecting bribes here ver. 26. is an evidence alſo) and one that lived with another mans wife, ariſeth the fitneſſe and properneſſe of S. Pauls diſcourſe before him, of juſtice and continence; and the guilt of his conſcience, hearing that there was a judgement to come for ſuch ſinnes as theſe, might very well ſet him a trembling.

Ενκρατειαν

b. Διετιας πληροθεισης

V. 27. After two years] That this two years is to be referred to Felix's Procuratorſhip is the opinion of Baronius, meaning thoſe two years which he ſpent in Nero's reigne. But the truth is, Claudius had, five year before, placed him in the Præfecture, and there is no reaſon to think that S. Luke ſhould define the time of his Procuratorſhip from Nero's reigne, who removed him, rather then from Claudius's, who put him in: And therefore the διετια, two years, muſt referre to Pauls impriſonment rather.

CHAP. XXV.

Paraphraſe.

* entred upon the government, ἐπέβη τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ

NOW when Feſtus was * come into the Province, after three daies he [aſcended from Cæſarea to Jeruſalem.]

1. See note on ch. 18. c.

2. Then the high prieſt and [the chief of the Jewes informed him againſt Paul, and beſought him,

2,3. other members of the Sanhedrim accuſed Paul before him, and beſought of him that favour, that he might be ſent for to Jeruſalem, (meaning to lay ſome villains by the way, to kill him as he came.)

3. And deſired favour againſt him, that he would ſend for him to Jeruſalem, laying wait in the way to kill him.]

* was kept τηρεῖσθαι

4. But Feſtus anſwered, [that Paul * ſhould be kept at Cæſarea, and that he himſelf would depart ſhortly thither.]

4. that he had left Paul in priſon at Cæſarea, c. 24. 27. whither he himſelf would ſhortly go, and hear the cauſe betwixt them and him.

† Let therefore, ſaith he, the men of power among you οἱ δυνατοὶ ἐν ὑμῖν, ουσι, * no more, ὀλίγας

5. †Let [them therefore, ſaid he, which among you are able,] goe down with me, and accuſe this man, if there be any wickedneſſe in him.

5. the chief prieſts, ſaid he, and the reſt in authority among you, ver. 2.

6. And when he had tarried among them * more then ten daies, he went down unto Cæſarea, and the next day ſitting in the judgment-ſeat, commanded Paul to be brought.

7. And when he was come, the Jewes which came down from Jeruſalem ſtood round about, and laid many and grievous complaints againſt Paul, which they could not prove.

8. While he anſwer'd for himſelf, Neither againſt the Law of the Jewes, neither againſt the Temple, nor yet againſt Cæſar have I offended any thing at all.]

8. And he cleared himſelf againſt all the accuſations, which were reducible to three heads, offences againſt the Moſaicall Law, profaning the Temple, raiſing ſedition againſt the government of the Romans (ſee ch. 24.5, 6.)

9. But Feſtus being willing to doe the Jewes a pleaſure, anſwered Paul, and ſaid, Wilt thou goe up to Jeruſalem, and there be judged of theſe things before me?

10. Then ſaid Paul, I ſtand at Cæſar's judgement-ſeat, where I ought to be judged: to the Jewes have I done no wrong, as thou very well knoweſt.]

10. I am a Roman, and I ought to be judged not by the Jewiſh Sanhedrim or laws, but by the Roman: (And though I were lyable to them, yet thou already diſcerneſt that they are not able to prove that I have any way treſpaſs'd againſt the Jewes, or their Law.)

11. For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I

† deſire not to eſcape death, οὐ παραιτοῦμαι τὸν θανατον

†refuſe not to die: but if there be none of theſe things whereof theſe accuſe me, no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal unto Cæſar.]

11. And if I have done any thing which by the Roman lawes is puniſhable capitally, I will be content moſt willingly to ſuffer death, I deſire no mercy, (this he did, knowing there was then no edict of the Emperours againſt Chriſtianity, ſee note on ch. 26. a.) But if all their accuſations are invalid, if I am, as thou knowſt I am, v. 10. free from that charge of having wronged them, and being a Roman ought to be judged by the Roman lawes, and none of them hath interdicted Chriſtianity, there is then no reaſon I ſhould be delivered up to my enemies to be my judges. 'Twere abſolutely unjuſt to doe ſo, and from that intention of thine, I make mine appeal to the Roman Emperour, and deſire that he may judge between us.

12. Then Feſtus, when he had conferred with the councel,] anſwered, Haſt thou appealed unto Cæſar? unto Cæſar ſhalt thou goe.

12. And Feſtus conferring with thoſe of the Jewiſh Sanhedrim, that were there, 13. And after certain daies [king Agrippa and Bernice] came unto Cæſarea, to ſalute Feſtus.

13. Agrippa, who, after Herod, was Tetrarch of Galilee, and his ſiſter Bernice

14. And when they had been there many daies, Feſtus declared Paul's cauſe unto the king, ſaying, There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix, 15. About whom, when I was at Jeruſalem, the chief Prieſts and the Elders of the Jewes [informed me,] deſiring to have judgment againſt him.

15. brought in an accuſation to me,

16. To whom I anſwered, It is not the manner of the Romans [to deliver any man to die] before that he which is accuſed [a] have the accuſers face to face, and have licenſe to anſwer for himſelf, concerning the crime laid againſt him.

17. Therefore when they were come hither, without any delay, on the morrow I ſate on the judgment-ſeat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.]

And when they came, I uſed all expedition, and the very next day I went to the bench to hear this cauſe of Paul.

18. And upon hearing I found him abſolutely free from all capitall crimes, all ſeditious practices, whereof they accuſed him, and wherein I ſuſpected him to be moſt guilty.

19. And all that ſtuck, was ſome diſputable matters about his particular way of ſerving or worſhipping God, and whether one Jeſus were ſtill dead, or whether he were riſen again, as Paul affirmed.

* his own way of worſhipping God, τὰς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας, ſee note on c. 17. e.

20, 21. And making ſome ſcruple, whether it were fit for me to give ſentence in this matter, or whether it were not better to referre him to the Jewes Sanhedrim, to be judged there, Paul appealed to Cæſar, claimed his privilege of a Roman, that he might not be delivered up to the Jewes; and thereupon I remanded him to priſon, till I could conveniently ſend him to Rome to Cæſar.

20. And † becauſe I doubted of ſuch manner of queſtions, I asked him, whether he would goe to Jeruſalem, and there be judged of theſe matters.

Paraphraſe.

1. THen Agrippa ſaid unto Paul, Thou art permitted to ſpeak for thy ſelf. Then Paul [ſtretched forth the hand, and anſwered for himſelf:]

1. beckning to the by-ſtanders to hold their peace, and give audience, made this Apologie for himſelf.

2. I think my ſelf happy, king Agrippa, becauſe I ſhall anſwer for my ſelf this day before thee, touching all the things whereof I am accuſed of the Jewes.

3. Eſpecially becauſe I know thee to be expert in all cuſtomes, and queſtions, which are among the Jewes: wherefore I beſeech thee to hear me patiently.

4. My manner of life from my youth, which was at the firſt among mine own nation at Jeruſalem, know all the Jewes,

5. Which knew me from the beginning (if they would teſtifie) that [after the moſt ſtraiteſt ſect of our religion I lived a Phariſee.]

5. I was of that ſect which is the ſtricteſt of all the reſt in the Jewiſh religion, viz. a Phariſee.

*ſtand queſtion'd, ἐστηκὼς κρινόμενος

6. And now I * ſtand and am judged for the hope of the promiſe made of God unto our fathers.]

6. And accordingly now I am accuſed for aſſerting the reſurrection of the dead, which as it is a doctrine acknowledged by the Phariſees, ſo is it the fundamental promiſe made of old.

7. Unto which promiſe our twelve tribes, inſtantly ſerving God day and night, hope to come: for which hopes ſake, king Agrippa, I am accuſed of the Jewes.]

7. And generally depended on by the Jewes, and in intuition thereof it is, that they ſpend their time in piety and obedience to God: And yet for the believing and expecting this I am accuſed by theſe Jewes.

8. Why ſhould it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God ſhould raiſe the dead?]

8. This being by me aſſerted to be founded in the reſurrection of Chriſt, that is the thing that is moſt disbelieved, God's having raiſed Chriſt from the dead. And why ſhould that be judged ſo incredible?

9. I verily thought with my ſelf that I ought to doe many things contrary to the name of Jeſus of Nazareth:]

9. I confeſſe I was once of opinion that I was obliged to perſecute this profeſſion, and doctrine of Chriſt:

10. Which thing I alſo did in Jeruſalem: and many of the ſaints did I ſhut up in priſon, having received authority from the chief prieſts, and when they were put to death, I [gave my voice againſt them.]

11. And in other cities beſide Jeruſalem, I brought them into their courts, and uſed all rigid means to make them deny Chriſt, and was ſo fierce againſt them, that I forced them to flie to heathen cities, and then purſued them thither.

12. Whereupon as I went to Damaſcus with authority and commiſſion from the [chief prieſts,]

18. To ſhew them their duty, to turn them from all their idolatrous ſinfull, to all gracious godly courſes, from being the ſlaves of the devil, to be the ſervants of God, thereby to have their ſins forgiven, and by believing in me, to have an inheritance, a future eternall bliſsfull portion among the ſaints of God.

19. Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not diſobedient unto the heavenly viſion:]

19. Upon this viſion ſo glorious, and theſe words of Chriſt from heaven, I could not but yield:

20. But ſhewed firſt unto them of Damaſcus and Hieruſalem, and throughout all the coaſts of Judæa, and then to the Gentiles, that they ſhould repent and turn to God, and doe † works meet for repentance.]

20. But preached at Damaſcus firſt, then at Jeruſalem, then through all Judæa, and even among the Gentiles, the doctrine of repentance, and amendment, and neceſſity of bringing forth all fruits of new life in an eminent manner, which indeed is the ſumme of the Goſpel of Chriſt.

25. what I ſay is perfectly true, and hath nothing of exceſſe or tranſportation in it.

25. But he ſaid, I am not mad, moſt noble Feſtus, but [ſpeak forth the words of truth and ſoberneſs.]

for theſe things, the life, death, and reſurrection of Chriſt, were things of very publick cognizance, and cannot be unknown to him that was a Jew born.

32. Then ſaid Agrippa unto Feſtus, This man might have been ſet at liberty if he had not appealed unto Cæſar.

Annotations on Chap. XXVI.

2. οὐδὲν ἄξιον θανάτου ἢ δεσμῶν

V. 31. Nothing worthy of death or——]The truth of this ſpeech of King Agrippa and his company, that Paul had done nothing worthy of death or bands, depends on the conſideration of the time wherein it was ſpoken. For the Roman Magiſtrates judging by the Roman Lawes, that which was not againſt any Law of the Emperors, was not cognoſcible, or puniſhable (eſpecially by death or impriſonment, deprivation of life or liberty) by them. Thus when Paul is accuſed by the Jewes, and brought before the Proconſul of Achaia, Gallio, c. 18. he tels them plainly, that he will not be a Judge of ſuch matters, which the Roman Law then in Claudius's reigne, had ſaid nothing of. For though c. 18. 2. an Edict had been by Claudius, toward the end of his reigne, ſet out againſt the Jewes, to baniſh them out of Italy, &c. and by that, the Chriſtian Jewes, as Jewes, not as Chriſtians, fell under that inderdict, and ſo did Priſcilla and Aquila there, (and John the Apoſtle, baniſhed into Patmus, in Claudius's reigne, ſaith Epiphanius, hær. ἀλόγ.) yet as to the difference betwixt Jewes and Chriſtians, there referr'd to by Gallio, (in proportion to the accuſation brought againſt him by the Jewes, περὶ λόγου of a word, as whether Jeſus were the Meſſias, or no, περὶ ὀνομάτων of names, as whether the name Chriſtian, or diſciple, &c. were unlawfull, as thoſe diſcriminated them from incredulous Jewes, περὶ νόμου τοῦ καθ' ὑμᾶς, concerning the law in force among the Jewes, about converſing with the uncircumciſed, &c.) there was then no Law ſet out by the Emperors at Rome, and therefore no rule for the Proconſul to go by, in taking cognizance of them. And thus it continued till Nero's rage againſt the Chriſtians began: for that he firſt dedicated perſecution, is Tertullian's expreſſion, and Primum Neronem in hanc ſectam gladio ferociiſſe, Nero was the firſt that made any capitall Law againſt them. Now this appearance of Paul before Agrippa was in the ſecond of Nero's reigne, Anno Ch. 57. long before this rage of his brake out; and accordingly Paul had made his appeal to Cæſars tribunal, knowing that this diſference betwixt him and the Jewes was a thing of that nature, that no Law of the Romans could take hold of, all his danger being from the tumultuary proceedings of the Jewes, inraging and importuning the Magiſtrates againſt him, and the beſt way of ſecuring himſelf, being a triall by the Roman Lawes, to which prudently he appeales, c. 25. 11. making it his plea, that he had done nothing againſt Cæſar, v. 8. and as a Romane, claiming the privilege of being judged by the Imperiall Lawes, and not to be delivered up to the Jewes, v. 10. Which plea of his could have ſtood him in no ſtead, if Chriſtianity had then been under any Imperiall Interdict, and by being accepted for him, demonſtrates that at that time it was not.

4. And when we had lanched from thence, we sailed under Cyprus, because the winds were contrary.

5. And when we had sailed over the Sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a city of Lycia:

6 And there the Centurion found a ship of Alexandria, sailing into Italy, and he put us therein.

7. And when we had sailed slowly many daies, and scarce were come over against Cnidus, the wind not suffering us, we sailed under Crete, over against [Salmone.]

11. Nevertheless the Centurion believed the Master and the owner of the ship, more then those things which were spoken by Paul.]

11. But the Governour of the ship being also the owner of it, and so concern'd to consider the danger, was of another minde, and the Captain of the guard preferred his judgement before Paul's.

26. But one passage more I received in the vision, viz. that after shipwrack

27. But when the fourteenth night was come, as we were driven up and down in Adria, about midnight the ſhipmen deemed that they drew neer to ſome countrey.

28. And by letting down their plummet and ſounding they found it was firſt twenty fathomes, then fifteen, which was an argument to aſſure them they were neer a ſhore.

28. And they ſounded, and found it twenty fathomes; and when they had gone a little farther they ſounded again, and found it fifteen fathomes.]

29. And therefore it being night, and apprehending the danger of falling upon ſome ſhelves for want of light to guide them, they durſt go no farther, but

31. Paul ſaid to the Centurion and to the ſouldiers, [Except theſe abide in the ſhip, ye cannot be ſaved.]

32. Hereupon the ſouldiers, to prevent the mariners deſigne, ran and cut the ropes of the skiffe, and let it fall off into the ſea.

32. Then the ſouldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.]

And in the ſpace betweene that and day-break, Paul exhorted them to refreſh themſelves with eating, telling them that they had ſo ſollicitouſly attended the fate of this fourteenth day, as the ſpeciall criticall day, (had ſo much feared caſting away upon that day) that they had had no leiſure or thought of eating, and ſo had faſted till that time of night, eaten no bit all that day.

V. 9. The Faſt was now already paſs'd] There is no queſtion but the faſt, which is here ſaid to be newly paſs'd, was the great anniverſary faſt, the day of Expiation; the deſcription of which we have Iſa. 58. under the name of a ſabbath v. 13. which may ſeem to have occaſion'd that error in the Heathen writers, which thought that the Jewes had faſted on the ſeventh day or ſabbath. So * Suetonius, Nè Judæus tam libenter ſabbatis jejunium ſervat, &c. a Jew doth not faſt on his ſabbath ſo willingly; and Juſtin l. 36. Septimum diem, more Gentis Sabbatum appellatum, in omne ævum jejunium ſacravit, the ſeventh day, being by their cuſtome called their Sabbath, was appointed a faſt for ever. Which error aroſe by not obſerving the difference betwixt the weekly and the anniverſary ſabbath. Now the preciſe time of this ſabbatick faſt is Levit. 16. 29. on the tenth day of the ſeventh month called Tizri, which falls on the ſame time almoſt with our September, the firſt day of Tizri on the ſeventh of that, and ſo the tenth of Tizri on the ſixteenth of September, that is, thirteen daies before our Michaelmas, or, as * Scaliger ſets it, on the twentieth of that month. This being thus obſerv'd, the reaſon of the Apoſtles obſervation, that ſailing was now become dangerous, becauſe the faſt was paſſed, will be eaſily cleared, it being all one, as if he had ſaid, becauſe it was paſt the twentieth of September; It being obſerved by all ſailers, that for ſome weeks before and after Michaelmas, there are on the ſea ſuddain and frequent ſtorms, which we now call Michaelmas-flawes, which muſt needs make ſailing dangerous: and ſo the experiment proved it, v. 14. whereas the ſouth wind blew ſoftly, preſently comes a boiſterous wind called Euroclydon (or, as perhaps that word may be otherwiſe read with a light change, Εὐραχύλων the North-eaſt wind, for which the Kings and other ancient MSS. read Εὐραχύλων) which ſo hurried the ſhip that it could not ἀντοφθαλμῶν hold up the eyes againſt it, and ſo ver. 20. there was no appearance of ſun or ſtarres for many daies together. Thus in * Heſiod, At the going down of the Pleiades, ſaith he, παντίλιν δυσπέμφελος, navigation is dangerous,

Δὴ τότε παντοίων ἀνέμων θύσσιν ἀΐσσῃ, huge tempeſts of all kind of winds; where the fall of the Pleiades is ſaid to be μεταπωιὴ, viz. when after harveſt they begin to plough again (ἀρότοιο δ' ἐνάρχεσθαι l. 2. lin. 2.) which is clearly the time juſt now mentioned: ſo again lin. 292. ſpeaking of proſperous ſailing, he deſignes the time fifty daies after the ſummer ſolſtice or tropick, that is, about the end of July, & then deſigning ſome ſpace for navigation, he admoniſhes

Σπεύδειν ὅτι τάχιστα πάλιν, οἶκόν δε νέεσθαι, Μηδὲ μένειν οἴνόν τε νέον, καὶ ὀπωρινὸν ὄμβρον, to make haſt and be at home before new wine, and the harveſt ſhowres, for after that preſently comes μεταπωιὴν, and —νόσφι ἀμαρτήσας Διὸς ὄμβρῳ that very thing that we here obſerved, making the ſea, or navigation, dangerous. Thus in * Philoſtratus καὶ δὲ μετοπωρινὸν ἦν τὸν ἐτύγχανεν, καὶ ἡ θάλασσα ἦττον βεβαία, the ſea was at this time more unſetled, for it was now the time immediately after ripe fruits: for ſo μετόπωρον ſignifies (beginning about the midſt of Auguſt, and laſting neer our Chriſtmas) at which time, ſaith Ariſtotle Meteor. l. 1. χάλαζαι μάλιστα γίνονται, ſtorms are ſpecially wont to ariſe. So ſaith Philo leg. ad Caium, ἔτι πλοΐμων ὄντων, ἀρχὴ γὰρ ἦν μετοπώρου, The ſea was yet fit for navigation, for 'twas the beginning of that ſeaſon after ripe fruit, about the middle of Auguſt, which argues, that ſhortly it would not be fit, this being, as he ſaith, τελευταῖος πλοῦς τοῖς θαλαττεύουσιν, the time of giving over the ſea. What this time was, will be yet clearer by what we find in him * adverſus Flac. that this Faſt was κατὰ τὴν μετοπωρινὴν ἰσημερίαν about the winter æquinoctial.

b. V. 13. Thence] Ἄσσον, πλησίον, ſaith Heſychius, i ſignifies nigh. But firſt it is among the Poets only that it is thus uſed: and 2dly being here joyned with παρελέγοντο, which is the paſſing juſt under, there ſeems to be very little uſe of the word, or propriety, that here it ſhould be put. Perhaps there may here be place for a conjecture, reading θᾶσσον preſently in ſtead of ἄσσον, and then joyning that, not with παρελέγοντο, but ἄραντες, precedent, preſently looſing thence. Thus in Syneſius, we find Ep. 4. ἄρασα εὐθὺς, looſing immediately, which is all one with, θᾶσσον, τάχιον, ταχύτερον, ſaith Heſychius. And this I now ſee to have been the conjecture of the very learned and Judicious Critick Mr John Bois of Ely.

c. V. 21. Gained] What κερδῆσαι ſignifies here, being joyned with ζημίαν harm and loſſe, may appear by Himerius in his Declamation againſt Epicurus, ὃ διὰ τὰς λόγους κερδαινεῖς τοῦ δίκου, ἀλλὰ κολασθήσῃ πλέον, εἰς ὃν τὸ ἀδίκων τοῖς λόγοις ἐκφεύγειν, thou ſhalt not by thy orations gain, that is, avoid or eſcape, puniſhment, but ſhalt be puniſhed the more —— So in Philemon,

Πᾶς γὰρ πένης ὢν μεγάλα κερδαίνει κακά, every poor man gains, that is, eſcapes, great evils. So of the Latine lucrifacio ſaith Donatus on Terent. Andr. Act. 3. ſcen. 4. ut corporis impulſionem lucrifaciam, that is, vitem, that I may gain, that is, avoid, or eſcape. As for the notion of ὕβρεις, which we render harme, the Context reſtrains it from that general, to this particular ſort of ill, wherein at preſent they were, viz. that of the Tempeſt, as in Pollux we find ὑβριστὴς ἄνεμος, a tempeſtuous wind. ὕβρις

d. 33. Faſting] Ἄσιτος is he that eateth nothing all day long (as μονόσιτος, he that eateth but one meale a day) and ſo 'tis here explained by μηδὲν προσλαβόμενοι, having taken nothing at all. The meaning therefore of this place (without any miracle of ſubſiſting without any nouriſhment fourteen daies together) is to be gathered from the former part of the period, τεσσαρεσκαιδεκάτην σήμερον ἡμέραν προσδοκῶντες, expecting this day the fourteenth day, that is, waiting to ſee the ſucceſſe of this day, which, it ſeems, in the opinion of the mariners, was the criticall day to them, their danger was then at the higheſt, and they were not likely to outlive it, and ſo there was no uſe of eating, and if they eſcaped this day, they might then poſſibly hope; and upon theſe conſiderations, they eat nothing all that day, they had no leiſure to conſider hunger, when their greater danger, and more inſtant feare was of drowning, and that is a clear meaning of the place. But if it ſhould be applyed to all the precedent fourteen days, then it muſt be taken in that latitude wherein Zetzes on Heſiod expounds the phraſe, they eat not meat, διὰ τὸ μηδὲ ἐν τοῖς καιροῖς τῆ τροφῆς ἀυτὲς ἠρεμεῖν, ἀλλ' ἐνόπλως καὶ πεφυρμένους ἐδίειν ἐν αἵμασιν, εἶπεν ἀυτὲς μηδὲ σῖτον ἐδίειν, becauſe they were not at leaſure, or quiet, even at meal-times, but eat in their armes, and with their hands foul'd with blood, therefore he ſaid, neither did they eat meat; Τροφὴς γὰρ καὶ σίτου καιρὸς ἐιρηνικῶς ἔχει καὶ περίδυμος, for the meal-time is a time of leiſure, and rejoycing.

—— ἠδέ τε σῖτον

e. V. 44 Boards] The word Σανὶς ſignifies any plain thing, a dore, or table, or board, or plank, and is rendred by Heſychius firſt θύρα a dore, then λάκωμα a white table, ἐν ᾧ αἱ γραφαὶ Ἀθήνησιν ἐγράφοντο πρὸς τὰς κακούργους, on which among the Athenians accuſations were written againſt malefactors, τίθεται δὲ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ σανροῦ (not, as 'tis corruptly read, ταύρου) and this was wont to be ſet upon the Croſſe, (as the inſcription of Chriſt.) The former of theſe, or any thing like that, any plain tabulatum, is here meant by it, as that which would be moſt uſefull to eſcape by in this ſhip-wrack. Σανὶς Annotations on Chap. XXVIII.

a. Μέλιτα

V. 1. Melita] Two Islands there are of that name Melita. The one in the Libyan, saith Strabo l. 6. the other in the Adriatick Sea. Of the former Ortelius speaks in Thesaur. Geograph. Melita una ex Pelagiis apud Ptolemæum. Hæc insula B. Pauli naufragio celebris est, & hodie Rhodiensibus militibus habitatur, It was by Ptolemie said to be one of the Pelagiæ. It is famous for Saint Paul's shipwrack, and is now inhabited by the Knights of Rhodes. And that this was it here spoken of, appears by the consequents of this story, which brings Paul from Melita to Syracuse and from thence to Rhegium, within the straits of the Sicilian, or Libyan, Sea.

b. Δίκη

V. 4. Vengeance] That there is a Δίκη or vengeance, which will not let murtherers go unpunish'd in this world, hath been the observation of all sorts of men. In the Gemara tract. Sanhedr. there is the like story of Simeon sonne of Schutach, who found a man-slayer, but had no witnesse to testifie it legally, and therefore prayed thus, He that knoweth the thoughts of men, punish thee as a murtherer. And presently, saith he, a Serpent bit him, and slew him. In like manner as Orestes, that had killed his mother, dyed with the bite of a viper, in a place of Arcadia called Orestion, saith Stephanus Byzant. περὶ Πόλε. in the word Ὀρέσται. In that place of the Gemara there is also mention of a tradition of Hezechias, that after the destruction of the Sanctuary and the Sanhedrim, there yet still continued among the Jewes four kindes of Capitall punishment, in stead of the four established by the Law of Moses. For he that deserved to be stoned, either fell from an house, or was torn with wild beasts. He that deserved to be burnt, either fell into the fire, or was struck with a Serpent; (which was therefore called fiery by Moses, because they that were bitten with it felt such a flame in their veines.) They that were to be killed with the sword, fell either into the hand of the King, or of theeves. They that deserved suffocation or hanging, either were drowned, or dyed of a melancholy or suffocation, (such as is affirmed of Judas; see Note on Mat. 27. a.) Two of these are here mentioned by the Barbarians, drowning, and the bite of the Serpent or viper, as a revenge due to a murtherer in their conceit; and when they saw he escaped, they looked on it as a stupendious thing.

c. Παράσημον

V. 11. Whose signe] Παράσημον is the πρῶτομὴ, some Image, or Picture of some creature in the fore-part of the ship, from whence the ship was named. So saith Agatharchides, when 'tis said, that a Bull carryed away Europa, the meaning is, that a ship called the Bull, as having that παράσημον upon it, carryed her: and so the Eagle that carryed Ganymede was a ship with an Eagle upon it, and so called the Eagle, saith Epiphanius. So Bellerophon's riding on Pegasus, was his sailing in a ship, that had a flying horse for its signe and name. So Virgil Æn. 10.

——erat â Princeps secat æquora Tigri.

Where the signe of the ship, being set upon the rostrum of it (which was made of brasse) was a Tigre, and so the ship was called. So Diodorus Siculus l. 4. of Phryxus, that is said to swim upon a Ramme through the Euxine Sea, saith, διαπλεῦσαι αὐτὸν φασιν ὅτι νεὼς πρῳρεὺς ὅτι τὸ πρόσωπον ἐχούσης κριοῦ, that he sailed in a ship which had the picture of a Ramme on the fore-part of it. So Palæphatus of Pelops, that was said to have winged horses, 'twas to be understood, saith he, in the same manner as of Pegasus, that he had a ship, ἐγγεγραπτο ὅτι ἐπὶ τῇ πλοίῳ ἵπποι πτερωτοί, and there were painted on it winged horses. And of Pegasus he had before said, Ὄνομα ἦν τῷ πλοίῳ Πήγασος, ὡς καὶ νῦν ἕκαστον τῶν πλοίων ὄνομα ἔχει, 'twas the name of a ship, as now every ship hath a name. So that the mention of the παράσημον or signe here is also the intimation of the name of the ship, Castor and Pollux or Dioscuri.

Διόσκουροι

d. Ἀππίου φόρου

V. 15. Appii forum] Mention of these two places we have in Cicero ad Atticum, l. 2. Epist. 10. & 13. Ab Appii foro horâ quartâ, dederam aliam paulò antè à Tribus Tabernis, This Epistle was dated from Appii Forum, at four of the clock, I had written another a little before, from the Three Taverns. The latter of which was three and thirty miles from Rome, the former fifty one, saith Antoninus in his Itinerary.

e. Τρεῖς ταβέρναι.

Ib. The Three Tavernes] Tres Tabernæ is a proper name of a Town or City, and so not to be rendred with Isidore πανδοχεῖα and καπηλεῖα, Innes and victualing houses (as he will also have Appii forum to be a place which had εἰκόνα πρὸ Ἀππίου, an image of Appius) but (as all other proper names) is in reason to continue the same, without translation, or considerable alteration of sound, in all languages. Thus the example of Areopagus, Act. 17. 19. and Appii forum in this very verse demonstrates; and so here S. Lukes Greek Τρεῖς Ταβέρναι, which is the retaining, not translating, nor interpreting the Latine. And this the rather, if we consider what the antient signification of Taberna was. This * Scaliger tells us on occasion of those verses of Ausonius, l. 1. Ep. 337.

So Zosimus l. 2. Hist. of τρία καπηλεῖα προσηγόρευε.

* Auson. Lect. l. 1. c. 11.

Prætereo arentem sitientibus undique terris
Damnissum, riguásque perenni fonte Tabernas.

Tabernæ, saith he, was the name of the frontier townes, which were built against the inrodes and insolencies of the Barbarians. That there were such every where erected by Diocletian in the borders of the Romanes, we are assured by Zosimus, Hist. l. 2. p. 65. Τῆς γὰρ Ῥωμαίων ὑπηκοΐας ἁπανταχῇ τὴν ἐχαπῶν——πόλεσι καὶ φρουρίοις καὶ πύργοις διειλημμένης, καὶ παντὸς τοῦ στρατιωτικοῦ κατὰ ταῦτα τὰ οἰκήσιν ἐχοντος, ἄπορος τοῖς βαρβάροις ἦν ἡ διάβασις, The Romane Empire being on every side of the borders divided and fortified with Cities and Garisons and Castles, and all the military forces dwelling there about, there was no accesse for the Barbarians. And so no doubt it was in these former times. And in all reason, as this was the notion of the Tabernæ Montanæ prope Weissenbrugum, and Tabernæ Rhenenses, which Scaliger mentions, so also of the Tres Taberne here, which, which, ſaith he, Auſonius himſelf ſeems to ſignifie, when he ſaith that the Sauromatæ had their habitations aſſigned them there, agreeable to what we cited out of Zoſimus. That this place was an Epiſcopal See, and ſo an eminent city, in Conſtantine's time, appears by Optatus l. 1. where amongſt the nineteen Biſhops delegated by Conſtantine to decide the Controverſie betwixt Donatus and Cæcilianus is reckoned, Felix à Tribus Tabernis, Felix Biſhop of that City called Tres Tabernæ.

Ed Cantab. p. 28.

f. Φυλάσσων στρατιώτης

V. 16. Souldier that kept him] The manner of the ſouldiers guarding the priſoner among the Romans is thus deſcribed by Lipſius on Tacitus Ann. l. 3. p. 60. that the Priſoner ſhould have a chain on his right hand, and the other end of it on the ſouldiers left hand, ſo that they might conveniently go together, the chain being of ſome length. Of this many examples he there gives out of authors: One eſpecially from * Athenæus of Quintus Oppius (for which Aldus's Edition hath ὁ Ιππος corruptly) παραδοθὶς δεσμῶ, a priſoner delivered to cuſtody, and of Baſtarnes, whom Manlius Aquilius, one that had been Conſul, and came now in triumph from Sicilie, σύνδετον (not συνδέτην as Aldus reads it) ἔχων ἁλύσει μακρᾷ, πεζὸς ὑπὸ ἱππέως ἕλκεται, having him bound to him in a long chain, went himſelf a-foot with his priſoner on horſe-back. Thus here ver. 20. S. Paul mentions his chain, τὴν ἅλυσιν ταύτην περίκειμαι, I am bound with this chain. And accordingly Peter being between two ſouldiers, ch. 12. 6. is ſaid to be bound with two chains, with one of them made faſt to one ſouldier, by the other to the other. So Paul is bound with two chains, that is, thus guarded with two ſouldiers, ch. 21. 33.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANS.

OF the Epiſtles of S. Paul and other the Apoſtles, it is firſt ſufficiently known, that being written to whole Churches (or ſingle perſons) of Chriſtians, they doe preſuppoſe the Chriſtian faith planted among thoſe to whom they write, and were not deſigned to plant it any where, and conſequently that it is not to be expected of them, that they ſhould ſet down all the neceſſary doctrines or the foundations of Chriſtianity, any otherwiſe then by way of intimation ſometimes, as appeared neceſſary for the confuting ſome falſe doctrines, which Hæreticks had ſuperinduced and ſcattered in the Churches. Secondly, then the true reaſon of the writing all the Epiſtles to the ſeveral Churches, (and of thoſe to ſingle perſons, to Timothy and Titus, they were the ſame alſo) being to confirm the Churches, to fence them againſt the invaſions of Hæreticks, to reprove the falſe doctrines, or vicious practiſes that were crept in, and to ſupply all their wants, it is conſequently to be reſolved, that the beſt way to interpret the difficult parts of all theſe Epiſtles, is to learn and conſider by the ſtories of thoſe times, what was the ſtate of thoſe Churches, what the oppoſitions which they then met with, what the dangers that were moſt cautiouſly to be prevented: And of theſe ſorts two eminent parts of ſtory are moſt known, and moſt uſefull to be taken notice of, in order to this end.

a. Επιστολή, Απόστολος

First, The great ſcandal taken againſt the Apoſtles, eſpecially S. Paul, by the Jewes, which alſo diffuſed it ſelf to the Chriſtians that were of that nation, and continued zealous for the Law of Moſes, viz. the Apoſtles converſing with, and preaching to the Gentiles, and (either by their practiſe or their doctrine) aſſerting the abolition of Circumciſion, and other parts of the Moſaical Law, this brought upon the Chriſtians very heavy perſecutions in every place where the faith was received. And as it was neceſſary for the Apoſtles to defend and vindicate their practice herein, and to anſwer all the objections that were brought againſt any part of it; ſo it was very ſeaſonable to fortifie the poor perſecuted Chriſtians in their conſtancy, and to encourage them to the bearing of perſecutions, and that not only by propoſal of that eternal reward in another world, and of the advantages that were reaped in this exerciſe of their Chriſtian virtues (of both which none that were Chriſtians could be ignorant) but, as an antidote to the preſent pungency of their diſtreſſes, by remembring or advertizing them particularly of the promiſe of Chriſt, to own and protect and ſecure thoſe who ſhould cleave faſt to him, and to that end to come in an eminent and notable manner, and that ſpeedily, to the deſtruction of the obdurate Jewes, and, at the ſame time, and by that means, to the deliverance of all his faithfull ſervants the perſecuted Chriſtians. From hence is it, that there is ſo often mention (under divers phraſes) of the approach of this coming, as that which would ſupport their patience, and help them cheerfully to perſevere, as expecting an iſſue ere long out of all their troubles. And although the future eternal reward in the Reſurrection were an excellent motive to this end, yet that being ſuppoſed and preſumed to be believed and acknowledged by all Chriſtians, as it was not neceſſary that this foundation ſhould again be laid, ſo it was not unſeaſonable to ſuperadde to this (and ſo often to inculcate) that other conſideration of temporall deſtruction upon theſe perſecuters, and deliverance to the faithfull, even in this life, the contrary to which being more probable to the eye of the world, and more believed by carnal Goſpellers, was then the great engine uſed to ſhake the Chriſtians conſtancy. And upon this obſervation are founded many interpretations of ſeveral paſſages, as in the proceſſe will appear. And this was a theme fit to be inſiſted on, and inculcated to the Chriſtians not onely in Judæa, but in all other parts where the Faith was planted, in Aſia, and at Rome it ſelf, becauſe of the diſperſion of the Jewes in all thoſe parts, and ſo of the perſecutions cauſed by them on the Chriſtians. To which it was conſequent in the divine juſtice, and by the rules of ſympathie, which are ordinarily diſcernible in the ſuffering of members of the ſame body, that not onely in Judæa and Palæſtine, but in all other parts, in Syria, and Aſia, &c. theſe deſtructions ſhould follow them: And ſo it fell out according to Chriſts words, that whereever the carcaſſe was, thither the Eagles ſhould be gathered together; whereever the Jewes were, the Roman armies or interdicts found them out and deſtroyed them. And conſequently as this deſtruction of the Jewes was, among other ends of juſt vengeance, deſigned alſo to reſcue and free the Chriſtians in all parts from their preſſures, ſo it was reaſonable for the Apoſtles in their Epiſtles to them in all parts, whereſoever the Goſpel was received, to comfort them with this aſſurance, that it ſhould ſhortly come to paſſe. To this purpoſe (as we now diſcern in their writings, ſo) Lactantius teſtifies of their preaching, l. 4. c. 21. Petrus & Paulus Romæ prædicaverunt, & ea prædicatio in memoriam ſcripta remanſit. In qua cùm multa alia mira, tum etiam hoc futurum eſſe dixerunt, ut poſt breve tempus immitteret Deus Regem, qui expugnaret Judæos, & civitates eorum ſolo adæquaret, ipſos autem famæ ſitique confectos obſideret, tum fore ut corporibus ſuorum veſcerentur, &c. Peter and Paul preached at Rome, and that which they preached remained written for a memorial. In which as they foretold many wonderful things, ſo this among others, that after a ſhort time God would ſend a King, who ſhould deſtroy the Jewes, and make their cities level with the ground, beſieging them ſtraightly, when they were brought low with a famine, ſo that they ſhould feed on one anothers bodies, &c. And ſo, ſaith Lactantius, it fell out, ſoon after their death, Veſpaſian extinguiſhed the name and nation of the Jewes, &c.

The ſecond thing which is known in ſtory, and uſefull to be here premiſed, is, the riſe and growth of the Hæreſie of the Gnoſticks, the followers of Simon Magus, which in a ſhort time, while the Apoſtles lived and preached, over-ran all their plantations, and in a greater or leſſe degree infeſted all the Churches of thoſe times, and by the two baits which they uſed, liberty of all abominable luſts, and promiſes of immunity from perſecutions, attracted many unto them; and, whereſoever they came, began with oppoſing the Apoſtles and Governors of the Churches. And accordingly theſe Epiſtles being adapted to the preſent urgencies and wants of thoſe Churches, it cannot be ſtrange, that there ſhould be frequent admonitions intermix'd in all of them, to abſtain moſt diligently and flie from theſe. And from the ſeveral parts of that character which belonged to theſe Hæreticks, many paſſages of ſome difficulty will be explained alſo.

Beſide theſe, many other particular matters there were, either wherein the Apoſtles were themſelves concerned to vindicate their authority or practices, or which had been propoſed by the Churches to obtain ſatisfaction in them, which occaſioned ſeveral diſcourſes on thoſe ſubjects, as will be diſcernible alſo, when the particulars are ſurveyed. And then, though, by Analogie and parity of reaſon, theſe may be extended very profitably to the general behoof and advantages of other Churches of God, and particular Chriſtians of all ages; yet for the right underſtanding of the literal and primarie ſenſe of them, it will be moſt neceſſary to obſerve theſe, or the like particular occaſions of them, and accordingly to accommodate the interpretations. And this was all which I thought neceſſary to præmiſe in general by way of entrance on the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles.

Of this Epiſtle of S. Paul to the Romans theſe few things will be fit to be præmiſed.

Firſt, What is the reaſon of the place which it hath in the Canon, before all the reſt of his Epiſtles. And this well be defined 1. Negatively, then Poſitively. 1. Negatively, that it is not to be taken from the order of time wherein it was written; for moſt of the other Epiſtles are antiently affirmed, and by ſome characters doe ſeem to have been written before it. And although the defining the time and the place of writing them be but conjectural, and fallible, no way deducible from Scripture-ſtory (there being ſo great a part of Paul's time whereof the book of the Acts, which ends at his firſt being at Rome, ſaith nothing) yet becauſe, as Euſebius ſaith, the ſtory of thoſe years after the Acts is not written by any, and conſequently whatever different account be pitched on, that will be meerly conjectural alſo, I ſhall therefore by keeping (in this matter of time and place) to the ordinary road, rather chooſe to adventure erring thus (in matters of no greater importance) then to attempt any new way, which will be equally, if not more, uncertain. b. πρὸς Ρωμ. ἐπιστ.

Thus then it is commonly acknowledged, that the firſt to the Theſſalonians was written at his firſt being at Corinth, An. Chr. 50. The ſecond to the Theſſalonians probably while he ſtaid there the next year after. The firſt to the Corinthians in the third year of his being at Epheſus, An. Chr. 54. wherein accordingly he mentions his deſigne to tarry at Epheſus till Pentecoſt, ch. 16. 8. The firſt to Timothy from Macedonia in the ſame year. That to Titus from Greece, An. Chr. 55. The ſecond to the Corinthians from Philippi, aſſoon as he had received newes by Titus, what ſucceſſe his firſt Epiſtle had found among them; which appears by 2 Cor. 2. 12. and by the freſh mention of his danger at Epheſus c. 1. 8. to be ſoon after the firſt. And perhaps about the ſame time the Epiſtle to the Galatians alſo. After which coming again to Corinth he wrote this to the Romans, a little before the Emperour Claudius's death, which is placed by Chronologers in the 55. yeare of Chriſt. That he wrote it at this time may appear by his own words, c. 15. 19, 23, 25. For there v. 19. he ſaith he had preached the Goſpel through Greece round about to Illyricum, (agreeable to what we find Act. 20. 3. where after his departure from Epheſus, &c. he came, and ſtai'd three months in Greece, meaning thereby the region from Achaia to Illyricum) and v. 23. that he had no more to doe in thoſe parts, but was at the preſent at the writing hereof v. 25. a going to Syria and Jeruſalem, to carry the almes to the Chriſtians there. This journey we find him ready to undertake Act. 20. 3. though becauſe of the Jewes laying wait for him, (not onely to kill him, but to ſeiſe upon the money which he carried with him) he diverted through Macedonia. By which it is manifeſt, that this was the point of time wherein this Epiſtle was written, after his coming to Illyricum, and before his going up to Jeruſalem with the Collection, and ſo about the death of Claudius, and after the writing thoſe other Epiſtles. The reaſon then of this præcedence is to be taken (poſitively) from the dignity of the city to which the Epiſtle was addreſſed, viz. Rome, the Imperial ſeat, which, as afterward it gave præcedence to the Biſhop of that city, and ſeat of majeſty, before all other cities, though earlier planted with the Faith, ſo in the forming of the Canon of Scripture, it brought the præcedence to this Epiſtle, before thoſe which were more antiently written.

Secondly, That this Epiſtle was written to the Romans, before this Apoſtles having been among them: This appears very probable from ſeveral paſſages in the firſt chapter v. 10, 11, 13. but eſpecially v. 15. So as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the Goſpel to you that are in Rome alſo, joyning them with the Greeks and Barbarians, to whom he was a debter, v. 14. that is, had not yet paid that charity of preaching the Goſpel to them. If this be rightly concluded, it will then follow, that a Church being before this time planted there, and that in an eminent manner, ſo as to be taken notice of in all the Provinces, c. 1. 8. ſome other Apoſtle, and particularly S. Peter, muſt before this time be ſuppoſed to have preached there; by force of that known affirmation of the antients, that the Church of Rome was θεμελιωθεῖσα καὶ οἰκοδομηθεῖσα founded and edified by thoſe two Apoſtles, Peter and Paul. So ſaith Irenæus of the Apoſtles indefinitely, and Epiphanius of theſe two by name. And ſo Gaius (in Euſeb. l. 2. c. κ'.) ſpeaking of their monuments, calls them τροπαῖα τῶν τοιούτων ἱδρυσαμένων ἐκκλησίας, the trophees of them which built that Church: and ſo Dionyſius Biſhop of Corinth (in the ſame place of Euſebius) affirms the Churches both of Rome and Corinth ἀπὸ Πέτρου καὶ Παύλου φυτείαν γενηθῆναι, to have been the plantation of both theſe, the one laying the foundation, or firſt preaching the Faith there, the other confirming them, v. 11. eſpecially the Gentile part of them.

Thirdly, That S. Peter, being the Apoſtle of the Circumciſion or Jewes (as S. Paul of the uncircumciſion or Gentiles) the Church which was now at Rome conſiſted much of the Jewes that were diſperſed from their own countrey, and dwelt there, but withall of ſome Gentile-Chriſtians alſo, to whom eſpecially this Epiſtle is addreſſed, as appears c. 1. 13, 14. where the ὑμῖν you, to whom he writes, are joyned with the other heathen nations, and the Ἕλλησι καὶ βαρβάροις, Greeks and Barbarians, v. 14.

Fourthly, That the Jewiſh Chriſtians here, as in other places, Act. 15. 1. and 21. 20. though they had received the faith of Chriſt were yet very zealous for the upholding the Jewiſh Law, the Moſaical rites, and conſequently oppoſed the preaching of the Goſpel to the Gentiles, unleſſe they firſt became Proſelytes of the Jewiſh Covenant of Circumciſion, and ſo ſubmitted to their whole Law. And this they did eſpecially upon two arguments: 1. That the Gentiles being Idolaters, and ſo great ſinners, and by them ſtyled and counted ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners by way of eminence, were utterly uncapable of the favour or mercy of God, and conſequently of the benefits of the Goſpel. 2dly, That Circumciſion being the ſeale of Gods covenant of mercy, none were Ἀκροβυστοὶ capable of mercy from God, that were not circumciſed. This doctrine of theſe Jewiſh converts was directly contrary to that which was every where practiſed and taught by S. Paul; For as he freely preached the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and in every city, where the Jewes reſiſted, forſook them, and profeſs'dly betook himſelf to the Gentiles, Act. 13. 46. ſo he taught the no-neceſſity of Circumciſion and other Moſaical obſervances, (as of an abrogated, aboliſhed law, ſee Rom. 7. 1.) even to Jew-Chriſtians, Act. 21. 21. much more to thoſe that from the Gentiles ſhould convert to Chriſt, whoſe paſt ſinnes, how great ſoever they were, yet if they ſhould now upon the preaching of Chriſt forſake them, and accept the faith and obedience of Chriſt, they ſhould freely be forgiven them, whereas on the other ſide, without the receiving the faith, the Law of Moſes (Circumciſion and Sacrifices, &c.) would not be able to juſtifie any (whether Jew, or Gentile-Proſelyte) from any wilfull ſinnes againſt that Law. This was the ſumme of S. Paul's doctrine at Antioch, Act. 13. 38, 39. that through Chriſt is preach'd unto them remiſſion of ſins, and by him all that believe are juſtified from thoſe things from which they could not be juſtified by the Law of Moſes, that is, from the guilt and puniſhment of known, deliberate ſinnes of the greateſt ſize, even Idolatry it ſelf (for which the Law afforded no mercy, no place of repentance, but inflicted preſent death) in caſe of ſincere reformation. As when Heb. 9. 15. Chriſt is ſaid to be mediator of a new Covenant, to redeem us by his death from the tranſgreſſions that were under the Law, that is, from thoſe ſinnes for which the Law afforded no pardon, upon repentance and reformation. And the ſame is the theme and ſubject of a conſiderable part of this Epiſtle. And becauſe the objections of the Judaizers both in the groſſe, and in every branch of them, being familiarly known to the writer, are not ſo diſtinctly and formally ſet down by him to receive their ſeverall anſwers, but proceeded to covertly, and ſo as might leaſt interrupt the thread of the diſcourſe, this is one chief cauſe of the difficulty of the Epiſtle, which may be leſſen'd by this Præmonition.

Fifthly, That before the time of writing this Epiſtle, Simon Magus and the Gnoſticks (the darnel which in thoſe firſt times the devil conſtantly ſowed, whereever the Chriſtian faith had entred) were come, as to other places, ſo to Rome alſo. For in Claudius's time it was that a ſtatue was erected at Rome, To Simon the Holy God, and to that this Apoſtle referres 2 Theſſ. 2. 4. which Epiſtle, as hath been ſaid, was written four years before this. From whence, as it will be eaſie to believe that many paſſages in this Epiſtle referre to, and are purpoſely oppoſed againſt that hæreſie of the Gnoſticks, ſo when we remember the character of theſe men, that they were great aſſerters of the Moſaical rites, oppoſed and condemned all that neglected them, and yet lived in all the foule villanies of the Gentiles, we ſhall the leſſe wonder that a great part of this Epiſtle, being addreſs'd to Chriſtians at Rome, is yet ſet diſtinctly to reprehend thoſe Gentile practices c. 1, and 2. and to anſwer the Jewiſh objections againſt the Chriſtians, there being ſo many unclean Judaizing Gnoſticks, which had crept in among the Chriſtians, and every where brought diſturbances among them, that the Apoſtle that deſired to defend the faith, and confirm the weak ſeducible profeſſors of it, could doe nothing more worthy of his Apoſtleſhip; meaning, as he ſaith, when he came among them, to withſtand theſe oppoſers of both ſorts with all boldneſſe, c. 1. 16, 17, 18. and particularly to juſtifie and vindicate his practice of preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles (who neither by their former ſinnes, nor their want of Circumciſion, were præjudged or excluded from receiving benefit by it) at which the Judaizers were ſo much offended. That this was the occaſion of this Epiſtle, and that this was the theme accordingly ſet upon, c. 1. 16. I am not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt, for it is the power of God unto ſalvation, to the Jew firſt, and alſo to the Greek, and purſued from thence to the concluſion, at the end of c. 15. will appear in the explication of it; wherein as we ſhall find much of difficulty in many places, as particularly in that of c. 11. (the paſſage which S. Peter ſeemed to have pointed at 2 Pet. 3. 16.) ſo our having this grand ſcope of the Apoſtle in our eye (the vindication of this act of Gods providence, as in calling the Gentiles, ſo in leaving the obdurate incredulous Jewes) will be very uſefull to extricate the reader out of thoſe difficulties, which the abſtruſeneſſe of the writing, and the (unobſerved) conciſe paſſing from one Jewiſh objection to another (rather glancing, by the way, at their known objections, then ſolemnly propoſing and anſwering them) have firſt cauſed, and then ſome inconvenient præjudices and præpoſſeſſions have improved and enhanſed, and at length made appear ſo inſuperable. In order to which it is that I have in this Epiſtle taken liberty to enlarge the Paraphraſe to a great length in many places, by inculcating, and, by way of parentheſis, interſerting thoſe heads of diſcourſe, which I conceive are chiefly referred to, and from the obſerving of which the explication doth principally proceed, conceiving this length, and circumlocution, the ſhorteſt way to my deſigned end, the clear underſtanding of this Epiſtle, and that which hath ſuperſeded the neceſſity of multiplying the Annotations on all the dark paſſages, which would much more have lengthned the work, and have been leſſe intelligible by the vulgar reader. The prime things that muſt here be taken care of are, firſt, that the occaſions of the ſeverall parts of the Apoſtles diſcourſe be adverted to, viz. ſome objections of the Judaizers againſt his doctrine and practice, which are ſecretly inſinuated, and require great and diligent care to diſcern them. And then ſecondly, that the rationall importance of every part of this Epiſtle, the relation it hath to the concluſion, which it is deſigned to inferre, and the connexion of one part with another, be weighed and permitted to have its due influence on the interpretation, and then the bare ſound of ſome few incidentall paſſages will not be of force to miſguide any.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAul a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, [* called to be an Apoſtle, ſeparated unto the Goſpell of God,

2. (Which he had promiſed afore by his Prophets in the holy Scriptures)]

* a called, or ſpeciall Apoſtle, κλητὸς ἀπόστολος, See note on Mat. 20. c.

1, 2. one that hath received this ſpeciall ſingular mercy from him to be an Apoſtle, authorized and ſet apart (Act. 13. 2.) to that office of preaching the Goſpell (which God had promiſed by the Prophets that it ſhould now be revealed, to the Gentiles as well as Jewes, to all the world by the miniſtery of the Apoſtles)

3. Concerning his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, who was † made of the ſeed of David according to the fleſh, † born γενομένου.

3, 4. Concerning the Meſſias, the Son of God, by him ſent into the world (who according to the fleſh was born a Jew, of the ſtock of David, but according to the ſpirit of holineſſe, or in reſpect of that other nature in him, called his eternal ſpirit, Heb. 9. 14. (far above all that is fleſh and blood) that, I ſay, which ſhone in him moſt perfectly, after, and through, and by his reſurrection from the dead, 2 Cor. 13. 4. was ſet at God's right hand, the Sonne of God in power, to whom accordingly, as to a Sonne, all power was given by the Father) even Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

4. And * declared to be the Sonne of God with power, according to the ſpirit of holineſſe, by the [a] reſurrection from the dead;]

* demonſtrated, or defined the Son of God in power, * ὁρισθέντος υἱοῦ θεοῦ μετὰ

5. By whom we have received grace and Apoſtleſhip †for obedience to the faith among all Nations, for his name,]

† for the obeying of the faith, εἰς ὑπακοὴν πίστεως.

5. Who hath afforded me the favour or honour to be ſent as Apoſtle of the Gentiles, to all the Nations of the world, to reveal to them, and work in them obedience to the doctrine of the Goſpell (called the faith, Act. 6. 7.) in his name, and to his glory,

6. Among whom are ye alſo, the called of Jeſus Chriſt:]

6. In which number ye alſo are, as many as have received the faith of Jeſus Chriſt (ſee note on Mat. 20. c. 7.)

7. To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, * called to be Saints; Grace be to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

* the called Saints, ſee v. 1.

7. To all the Chriſtians that are in Rome, Jewes and Gentiles both, beloved of God, and which have received that ſpeciall mercy from him, to be from a ſtate of all unworthineſſe brought in, and received by him to be Chriſtians and Saints, I ſend greeting, and thereby my heartieſt wiſhes and prayers, that all the divine mercies and goodneſſe and all manner of proſperity, from God our Father and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, be multiplyed upon you.

8. Firſt, I thank my God through Jeſus Chriſt for you all, that your faith is ſpoken of throughout the whole world.]

8. And the beginning of my greeting to you muſt be, my acknowledgement of the great goodneſſe of God unto you all (which is an infinite mercy alſo to me, who do exceedingly deſire the advancement of the Goſpell amongſt you) that the report of your ſubmiſſion to the Goſpell of Chriſt is ſpread far and neer over all the world.

9. For God is my witneſſe, whom I ſerve with my ſpirit in the Goſpell of his Sonne, †that without ceaſing I make mention of you *alwayes in my prayers,

† how unceſſantly, ἀκαταλείπτως, * Requeſting always in my prayers, πάντοτε ἐπὶ τῶν προσευχῶν μου δεόμενος

10. Making requeſt (if by any means now at length I might have a proſperous journey by the will of God) †to come unto you.]

† that I may come unto you, ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς,

9, 10. For God knowes, and will bear me witneſſe (whom I inwardly and ſincerely ſerve in the preaching of the Goſpell of Chriſt) how daily conſtant I am in mentioning all your wants to God, and, whenſoever I pray, making this one ſolemne requeſt, that what I have ſo long deſigned and deſired, may happily, if it ſeem good in Gods eyes, be accompliſhed at laſt, viz. that I may come perſonally unto you.

11. For I long to ſee you, that I may impart unto you ſome ſpirituall gift, to the end you may be eſtabliſhed:]

11. For I earneſtly and paſſionately deſire to ſee you, that what ever part of my Apoſtolical office, or of the gifts which God hath endued me with, may contribute any thing toward the confirming of you in the faith (who are Chriſtians already) may be by me freely communicated unto you:

12. That is, that I may be comforted together * with you, by the mutuall faith both of you and me.]

* in in

12. That by my affording you ſome ſpirituall aide, you may receive comfort and advantage, and I alſo by your being thus confirmed by my means; and ſo we may be mutuall comforts to one another, by the communicating of my knowledge, and the encreaſe of yours.

13. Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oft times I purpoſed to come unto you (but was let hitherto) that I might have ſome fruit among you alſo, even as among other Gentiles.]

13. And truly, brethren, I deſire you ſhould know that it hath been no fault or omiſſion of mine, that I have not come all this while; many reſolutions I have had (but from time to time ſome obſtacle hath interpoſed) that I might have the comfort of ſeeing you and imparting ſomewhat to you, which may tend to your advantage and proficiency, as I have in the reſt of the Nations, that have been either converted by me, or whom I have ſince viſited and confirmed, as I deſire to do you at this time, v. 10.

14. I am a debter both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians, both to the wiſe and to the unwiſe.]

14. I count my ſelf obliged to do whatſoever I can (either in the preaching of the Goſpell, or confirming them which have received it,) to all ſorts of men in the world, both thoſe of the Churches in Aſia, Epheſus, &c. which are in Greece, and others which are moſt diſtant from them, and by the Greeks called Barbarians; and ſo I count my ſelfe to owe to you Romans the taking a journey to you at this time, from which I have hitherto been hindred, v. 13.

15. So as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the Goſpell to you that are at Rome alſo.]

15. And ſo 'tis not my fault, who for my part, and as much as my will is concerned in it, am moſt cheerfully ready to take this journey to Rome alſo, to preach the Goſpell among you.

16. For I am not aſhamed of the Goſpell of Chriſt: for it is the power of God unto ſalvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew firſt and alſo to the Greek.]

16. For I am ſo far from concealing, that I am very forward and earneſt to make known the Goſpell of Chriſt, whatſoever oppoſition, or perſecution, or pains it coſt me, knowing it to be a moſt effectuall means, the onely one now deſigned by God, to bring all men that embrace it, to repentance, and reformation of life, (ſee note on c. 10. a) and that which is by God appointed to be made known not onely to the Jewes, who had the privilege of having it firſt revealed to them, (ſee Act. 3. 26.) but to all others of all the Nations of the world.

17. For therein † is the [b] righteouſneſs of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The juſt ſhall live by faith.]

17. For that œconomy of Gods, that gracious method of accepting and rewarding all thoſe that ſhall receive the faith and obedience of Chriſt, whether Jewes or Gentiles, is in, or by the Goſpell revealed and promulgated, to this end, that men ſhould believe on him, and obey him ſincerely, and ſo be partakers of it, and being juſtified by faith, ſhould continue to live by faith; that, according to that which is ſaid by the Prophet Habakkuk, c. 2. 4. The juſt ſhall by God's mercy accepting and rewarding his faith (his adherence and fidelity to him) return from captivity, and live happily, ſo now in like manner all that fear God ſhould return from the captivity of ſin, and continue to live a pure Chriſtian life here, according to the rules of the Goſpell.

18. For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven againſt all ungodlineſſe and unrighteouſneſs of men, who [c] * hold the truth in unrighteouſneſſe.]

18. For on the other ſide, the diſpleaſure and vengeance of God is moſt ſeverely denounced againſt thoſe that joyn impious and unrighteous lives with the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, that obey not the Goſpell which they receive, c. 2. 8. (and ſuch are the Gnoſtick hæreticks among you) or that by indulgence in vicious courſes obſtruct the Goſpel, ſuffer it not to have force on themſelves, or others, ſee c. 2. 24.

19. Becauſe that which may be known of God is manifeſt † in them; for God hath ſhewed it unto them.]

19. It being certain (and by their profeſſion acknowledged) that God, as farre as is neceſſary, is made known among them; for indeed God himſelf hath revealed and made himſelf known, (beyond all excuſe of ignorance) by the various methods that he hath made uſe of.

20. For the inviſible things of him [d] from the creation of the world are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are * made, even his eternall power and Godhead; † ſo that they are without excuſe:]

20. For thoſe things that are not of themſelves viſible, the infinite power and Divinity of God, which from time to time, ever ſince the creation of the world, have been in themſelves inviſible, yet being beheld and ſeen (as in reflection) by his various dealings in the world, are now become viſibly diſcernible, ſo far as to render them which do not diſcern, or which knowing do not ſerve and worſhip him as God, that is, do not live according to the rule of the Goſpell, utterly uncapable of the excuſe of faultleſſe ignorance. See note on Mat. 1. k.

21. Becauſe that when they [e] knew God they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their fooliſh heart was darkned.]

21. Becauſe that knowledge which they have, and boaſt of (and from thence ſtyle themſelves Gnoſticks, the deepeſt knowing men) is not by them made uſe of to the worſhipping or acknowledging of him, but they have fallen to the worſhipping of Images (which are in Hebrew called vanities, falſities, v. 25, and nothings, ſee note on c. 8. d.) and by ſo doing, put out that light which was vouchſafed them by God. (How this was true of the Gnoſticks, ſee note e. and f.)

22. Profeſſing themſelves to be wiſe, they became fools,]

22. Aſſuming the title of Gnoſticks, of knowing more, of being wiſer then other men, they have proved more ſottiſh then any,

23. And changed the [f] glory of the uncorruptible God into * an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beaſts, and creeping things.]

23. And in ſtead of the inviſible majeſty and glorious appearances of God in bright clouds, &c. wherein God on Mount Sinai man ifeſted himſelf to Moſes, but was not ſeen by him, they have expreſſed him, and worſhipp'd him in the images of Simon Magus and Helena, (ſee note e.) and have fallen into all the heathen Idolatry, of worſhipping of birds, and beaſts, and ſerpents, that is, the vileſt and meaneſt things, by partaking in their Idol-feaſts, &c.

24. Wherefore God alſo gave them up * to uncleanneſſe, through the luſts of their own hearts, to diſhonour their own bodies between themſelves.]

24. Upon which provocation of theirs, God hath withdrawn his grace from them, hath not reſtrained, but left them to themſelves, to the purſuit of all their filthy deſires, & permitted them to break out into all uncleanneſſes of the moſt odious unnaturall kinds, one with another to commit all reproachfull and unnaturall villanies.

25. † Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worſhipped and ſerved the creature * [g] more then the Creatour, who is bleſſed for ever, Amen.]

25. A juſt puniſhment on them that had changed the Goſpel into a fable (ſee note f.) or the true inviſible God into an Idol (a falſity, an empty vain nothing v. 21.) worſhipping meer creatures, even above and in oppoſition to the Creator (ſee 2 Theſſ. 2. 4.) that one eternall majeſty, whom all are obliged to worſhip.

26. For this cauſe God gave them up unto vile affections:] for even their women did change the naturall uſe into that which is againſt nature;

26. This, I ſay, hath provoked God to leave them to their own luſts, without reſtraint, to permit them to fall into reproachfull ſins, and meer violences, and contumelies of nature,

27. And likewiſe alſo the men leaving the naturall uſe of the woman, burned in their luſt one towards another, men with men working † that which is unſeemly, [and receiving in themſelves that recompenſe of their errour which is meet.]

27. their Idolatry bringing theſe unnatural luſts upon them, the puniſhment of that former ſinne (ſee note on Jude f.)

28. And even as they * did not like † to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a [h] reprobate mind, to doe thoſe things which were not * convenient,]

28. And this by way of retaliation, as they have not thought fit to acknowledge God in their practices (but only to boaſt of their deep knowledge) ſo God hath left them to themſelves, and given them up to a villanous deteſtable abominable ſtate of mind, to commit unnaturall things, ſuch as no body will think tolerably fit, or approve of,

29. Being filled with all unrighteouſneſſe, fornication, † wickedneſſe, [i] covetouſneſſe, maliciouſneſſe; full of envy, murther, debate, deceit, * malignity, whiſperers,

29, 30. Whether ſins of uncleanneſſe of all ſorts, of which they are full, or whether malice, bloodineſſe, contention, (which alſo theſe Gnoſticks every where profeſs'd, againſt the Chriſtians) falſneſſe, baſeneſſe of diſpoſition, infuſing hatred and variance ſecretly into all, deteſtable abominable people, moſt inſolent in their reproaching of others, and boaſting of themſelves, inventors of all ſorts of ſtrange villanies, eſpecially thoſe of uncleanneſſe, contemners of all that are placed over them, eſpecially the rulers of the Church, the Apoſtles, &c. 31. *[l] Without underſtanding, [m]covenant-breakers, without naturall affection, implacable, unmercifull:] *unconſcionable

32. Who having received the faith of Chriſt, the Chriſtian profeſſion, (taking upon them to be moſt skilfull in myſteries, to know more then any others) of which it is one acknowledged part, that of ſuch ſinnes as theſe eternall damnation is the juſt reward, doe yet not onely favour themſelves in the commiſſion of them (to which they may have ſome temptations from the fleſh) but as if their very underſtandings were debauched and corrupted, doe approve and patroniſe (ſee Theophylact) them in others, and think the committing ſuch things ſo farre from crimes in them, that they make them parts of their religion, ſpecial myſteries, and depths of their theologie, very pious, and commendable in any of their followers.

32. Who knowing the judgment of God, (that they which commit ſuch things are worthy of death,) not onely commit the ſame, but have pleaſure in them that doe them.]

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν

V. 4. Reſurrection from the dead] Ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν is the generall word which contains under it the riſing again of every dead body, and is appliable to every ſuch particular that riſeth, and ſo here denotes the Reſurrection of Chriſt, being by the Context particularly determined to that, as in other places it may denote the Reſurrection of any one or more men, as the Context ſhall enforce.

b. Δικαιοσύνη

V. 17. Righteouſneſſe] For the explaining of this verſe, the firſt thing to be examined is the notion of Δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, and with the addition of Θεοῦ the righteouſneſſe of God. Δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe ſignifies not alwaies the virtue of juſt dealing, but ſometimes, by a Metonymie, the matter about which that is converſant, the things which by Law are required of any, and in performance of which his righteouſneſſe conſequently conſiſts. Thus when Mat. 3. 15. Chriſt ſaith to John, Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteouſneſſe, by righteouſneſs are meant all thoſe things that under that more imperfect miniſtery of John were preſcribed men, and required of them to doe, to their being approved by God. Thus thoſe things which are required of Jewes to perform under the Moſaical Law, are called Δικαιοσύνη ἡ ἐν νόμῳ, the righteouſneſſe which is in the Law, Phil. 3. 6. And, there being two ſorts of Proſelytes of the Jewes, one of thoſe which undertook the whole Law of the Jewes, were circumciſed, &c. the other of thoſe which onely received the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Adam, and Noah, the former of theſe were called indifferently גרי ברית Proſelytes of the covenant, and גרי צדקה Proſelytes of righteouſneſſe. Where righteouſneſſe ſignifies all thoſe commands and ordinances, which in that Moſaical Covenant were required of the Jewes, and without ſubmiſſion to which no ſtranger was permitted to come into their inner court of the Temple, and joyne with them in the worſhip of God. To this purpoſe it is obſervable, what was the prime occaſion of this Epiſtle, the great charge which by the Jewes was laid on Paul for preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and thereby promiſing them acceptance and mercy from God for all their paſt ſinnes on condition of their embracing the Goſpel, and living for the future according to that rule, without any performance of the ritual Lawes of Moſes, Circumciſion, &c. This the Jewes violently oppoſed, as that which was an apoſtatizing from the Law of Moſes, and the ſetting up a new righteouſneſſe, a new ſummary of performances, a new Law, to the prejudice of the Moſaical. What Paul had thus done, he here aſſerts and ſtands to, as that which was now the declared will of God, under the Goſpel, though diſtant from that which had before been required of Jewes under the Law. And as now he ſets up the faith of Chriſt, νόμον πίστεως the Law of faith, the ſummary of thoſe things which Chriſt from God requires of all men, againſt the Ordinances of external obedience in the Moſaical Law, ſo he thinks fit to ſtyle one the righteouſneſſe of God, as the other was the Jewes righteouſneſſe, and this righteouſneſſe of God ἐκ πίστεως, of, or by, faith, that is, that which Chriſt hath now revealed or declared to be our righteouſneſſe, that which is required of us now under the Goſpel, to our being juſtified in Gods ſight, in oppoſition to the δικαιοσύνη ἐν νόμῳ, that ſort of legal performances, Circumciſion, &c. by obſervation of which the Jew and the Judaizer pretended to be acceptable, and juſtified before God, and without which they contended that there was no juſtification to be had, and conſequently that the uncircumciſed Gentiles could not be juſtified, or acceptable in the ſight of God; the contrary to which is by S. Paul here undertaken to be proved, and is after enlarged on, c. 3, & 4. &c. Thus much for the occaſion of this phraſe, and the general importance of it, to note that way of œconomy of ſaving and juſtifying men under the Goſpel. As for the more particular nature of this way of Gods dealing in Chriſt, that is alſo contained in the ἐκ πίστεως, by faith, as faith ſignifies the embracing, and obeying of Chriſt, after a former life of ſinne and ignorance, ſuch as the heathens had lived in. For whatſoever their former lives had been, againſt which the Jewes objected, that they were Idolatrous and vile, and neither capable of Gods favour, nor fit to be converſ'd with by any pious perſon, yet Chriſt that came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance, came particularly, though not primarily, to call, and offer place of repentance to them, and upon reformation, to allow them pardon: which though it were not δικαιοσύνη ἐξ ἔργων a righteouſneſs by, or from, works, a way of œconomy, whereby onely juſt or worthy perſons are called and received, yet it is a righteouſneſs by, or from, faith, whereby through Gods mercy, and pardon of ſinne in Christ, thoſe that come in to him, and give up themſelves to ſincere obedience for the future, are accepted, and juſtified by God, as Abraham was, which is ſtyled Gods juſtifying the ungodly, becauſe thoſe that have been moſt impious, have yet place of repentance given, and are accepted by God upon repentance. In this ſenſe we ſhall oft find this word δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſs in the enſuing chapters. So c. 9. 30. ἔθνη κατέλαβε δικαιοσύνην the Gentiles laid hold on righteouſneſſe, that is, on this Evangelical way, and c. 10. 3. ἀγνοοῦντες Θεοῦ δικαιοσύνην, the Jewes not knowing this courſe of juſtifying ſinners, ſet down in the Goſpel, ſought to eſtabliſh their own (Judaical) righteouſneſs, and were not ſubject to Gods righteouſneſs. So again v. 6. ἡ ἐκ πίστεως δικαιοσύνη (the ſame phraſe, as here, in this placing and conſtruction of the words) the righteouſneſs from, or by, faith, that is, this Evangelical way, which is by the faith, or the Goſpel, and is oppoſed to the διακονία θανάτου, the promulgation of the Law, which brought nothing but death to every act of wilfull ſinne. So the Apoſtles are called διάκονοι δικαιοσύνης 2 Cor. 11. 15. miniſters of righteouſneſſe, viz. of this way of juſtifying men in Chriſt, which elſewhere are called miniſters of the new covenant, noting righteouſneſs in this notion, to ſignifie this New covenant (as righteouſneſs and covenant, and צדקה, and ברית, were ſaid to be all one) or this Evangelical way under it, explained v. 24. by δικαιούμενοι δωρεὰν τῇ αὐτοῦ χάριτι, our being juſtified freely by his grace, or mercy, without any ſuch precedent obedience of ours, that may any way challenge it. All that remains is, to enquire, firſt, why ἐκ πίστεως, from or by faith, ſhould in the conſtruction be joyned with δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſs; then why εἰς πίστιν to faith ſhould ſignifie that we may believe. For the firſt, it is but an ordinary ὑστέρβαλον both in theſe and other authors, thus to tranſpoſe words, on the like occaſion; and that it is ſo here, is evident by the enſuing citation out of the Prophet, as it is written, (which notes theſe two to be parallel) the juſt by faith ſhall live, and by the like phraſe, c. 3. 22. & c. 10. 6. And for the ſecond, εἰς πίστιν, that we may believe, that will be very agreeable alſo to many other places in this book; for ſo εἰς σωτηρίαν to ſalvation v. 16. is, that they may be ſaved; ſo εἰς καῦσιν to burning Heb. 6. 8. that it may be burnt; and ſo Wiſd. 11. 23. Παρορᾷς ἁμαρτήματα ἀνθρώπων εἰς μετάνοιαν, Thou paſſeſt over the faults of men to repentance, that is, that they may repent; and ſo here c. 6. 16. εἰς ὑπακοὴν to obedience, is, that ye may obey, & v. 19. εἰς τὴν ἀνομίαν, to iniquity, is, that you may commit all villany, as in the concluſion of that verſe, εἰς ἁγιασμὸν to purification, or ſanctification, is, that ye may live pure and ſanctified lives.

c. κατέχω

V. 18. Hold] The word κατέχω ſignifies two things, (very diſtant) to retain and hold faſt, and to obſtruct or hinder. Κατέχειν, κρατεῖν, κωλύειν, ζωώχειν, ſaith Heſychius, it ſignifies to hold faſt, to hinder, to compreſſe. In the notion of hindring 'tis taken 2 Theſſ. 2. 6, 7. and in the other in divers places. By this meanes 'tis become uncertain, what it ſhould ſignifie here, eſpecially when either way the ſenſe is very commodious: for even they that retain the truth in unrighteouſneſs, that under the acknowledgment and profeſſion of the truth, veile and joyn all manner of impious living, doe thereby hinder and obſtruct the truth, viz. the force of it on themſelves and the propagation of it to others by that impious living of theirs. But the former is the more likely ſenſe of it, and moſt agreeable to the conſequents, of their knowing the truth, and becoming unexcuſable thereby.

d. ἀπὸ κτίσεως κόσμου

V. 20. From the Creation] The phraſe ἀπὸ κτίσεως κόσμου is here joyned with ἀόρατα αὐτοῦ the inviſible things, or attributes of God, his power and Godhead, from the foundation, or creation, of the world, that is, ever ſince the creation; ſo doth ἀπ' ἀρχῆς κτίσεως from the beginning of the creation ſignifie Mar. 10. 6. and 13. 19. and 2 Pet. 3. 4. ſo κεκρυμμένα ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου Mat. 13. 35. the things hidden from the foundation of the world, and c. 25. 34. Luk. 11. 50. Heb. 4. 3. where it clearly ſignifies from, that is, ever ſince, the creation, & ſo c. 9. 26. ſo Rev. 13. 8. & 17. 8. names written and not written in the book of the lamb from, that is, ever ſince, the foundation of the world. By which it appears that there is no neceſſity of underſtanding God's ποιήματα doings or actions here, of the works of the creation, but of all things that from that time to this incluſively have been done in the world by him; and ſo it will be extended to all the doctrines, and miracles, and actions of Chriſt, the whole buſineſſe of the Goſpel.

Ποιήματα

e. γνόντες τὸν Θεὸν

V. 21. Knew God] The phraſe γνόντες τὸν Θεὸν knowing God here ſeems to referre the whole preſent diſcourſe to the Gnoſticks, who were ſo called from their aſſuming to themſelves ſo much of the knowledge of God, and the myſteries of religion. And theſe being a ſort of hereticks in that firſt age under the Apoſtles, who affirmed Simon to be God the Father that appeared in Mount Sinai, as alſo God the Sonne that appeared in the fleſh, and the holy Ghoſt, who was promiſed to come, were the darnell ſown by the envious perſon, whereſoever the Goſpel was planted; and this as in other places, ſo in Rome, where Simon Magus the founder of them (contended after this time with S. Peter, but) before the writing of this, in Claudius's daies, had a ſtatue erected to him, as to the ſupreme God. Theſe Gnoſticks pretended to be great zelots for the Law of Moſes, particularly for Circumciſion, thereby to avoid the perſecutions which the Jewes raiſed againſt the Chriſtians, Gal. 6. 12. and on the other ſide thought it lawfull to offer ſacrifice to Idols, 1 Cor. 8. (to comply with the heathens) becauſe, as they ſaid, an idol was nothing, and yet farther, worſhipped the images and pictures of Simon and Helena; and ſo, as Euſebius ſaith, τὸ σῴφρονα καὶ διὰ καθαρότητα βίου βεβομένῳ παρὰ πᾶσι χειστιανῶν φιλοσοφίαν ὑποκεινόμενοι, ἧς μὴ ἔδοξαν ἀπαλλάττεσθαι πρὶν τὰ εἴδωλα δεισιδαιμονίας, ὑδρίστριαν αὖθις ὑπολαμβάνοντες, pretending to have turned Chriſtians, and ſo to have changed the idolatry and ſuperſtition that before they lived in, for the pure and ſober rules of life taught by Chriſt, they fell nevertheleſſe back again to all that which they ſeemed to have forſaken, κατασπάζονται δὴ γεγραὸς καὶ εἰκόνας αὐτῷ τε τῷ Σίμωνι, καὶ τῇ ζὺν αὐτῷ ἑλαιωνίσης Ἑλένης, θυμιάμασί τε καὶ θυσίαις καὶ σπονδαῖς τύτας θεραπεύειν ἐπιχειρῦντες, falling down to the pictures and images of Simon and Helen, worſhipping them with incenſe, and meat and drink-offerings. Τάδε τύτων ἀπόῤῥητότερα — but for their more ſecret and hidden actions they were ſuch as would aſtoniſh any to heare them; δι' ὑπερβολὴν τῆς αἰσχρεργίας καὶ ἀῤῥησιοποιίας, for the ſuperlative impurity and abomination that was in them. This, I ſuppoſe, will be a key of entrance into the deſigne and meaning of this Epiſtle, wherein the Apoſtle willing to fortifie the Roman converts againſt the danger of theſe ſuperſeminations, confutes theſe doctrines of the Gnoſticks, eſpecially that of complying with the Jewes concerning the neceſſity of obſerving the Judaical Law, and here firſt gives a character of them, as they agree with the heathens in Idolatry, and all kind of wickedneſſe, & unnaturall uncleanneſs, v. 29. &c. and by their living ſo contrary to the Law, ſhew what little reaſon they have to pretend to the obſerving of it, when indeed 'tis the inward purity of the heart and actions, and not the outward Circumciſion of the fleſh, which the Law principally aimed at. That theſe Gnoſticks are the men here referr'd to may farther appear by comparing this place, eſpecially v. 27. with the diſcourſe of the Gnoſticks in S. Jude directly parallel to this (ſee Note on Jude d.) and ſo by their character here v. 29. the πορνεία and πλεονεξία (fornication and inordinate deſires) compared with many other places of the Epiſtles, Gal. 5. 19. Eph. 5. 3. Col. 3. 5. and the pride, &c. v. 30. with 1 Tim. 6. 4. and the like in the other particulars.

f. δόξα

V. 23. Glory] The word δόξα glory here ſeems to referre to the notion or uſe of it, Exod. 24. 16. where it is ſaid of Gods preſence and appearance there in the Mount Sinai, וישכן כבוד יהוה על הר the glory of the Lord abode upon the mount. From whence it is that the word ſchechinah, abiding, is ordinarily uſed to ſignifie this or the like glorious appearance, or preſence of God, and is directly parallel to δόξα glory here. Now of God's appearance on Mount Sinai it is to be obſerved, 1. that God did not there exhibite himſelf in any bodily ſhape; onely glorious appearances there were, ver. 16. as it were a paved work of Sapphire ſtone, &c. and the ſight of the glory of the Lord was like devouring fire ver. 17. but ſaith Moſes, Deut. 4. 15.

Ye ſaw no manner of ſimilitude in the day that the Lord ſpake to you in Horeb. And this is there preſs'd by Moſes to enforce Gods commandement, that they ſhould not corrupt themſelves, and make them a graven image, the ſimilitude of any figure, the likeneſs of male or female, the likeneſs of any beaſt, of any winged fowle of any thing that creepeth on the ground, of any fiſh, &c. Now of theſe followers and worſhippers of Simon (the Gnoſticks) it is ſufficiently known, firſt that they affirmed Simon to be the ſupreme God, diſtinctly he that appeared in Sinai; ſo ſaith Cyrill of Jeruſalem, Cat. 6'. ſpeaking of Simon at Rome, πρῶτος ἐτόλμησεν εἰπεῖν ἑαυτὸν μὲ ὄντα καὶ ὀφθέντα Σινᾶ ὡς πατέρα φανέντα, he preſumed to ſay of himſelf that he was he that appeared on Mount Sinai as the Father. Secondly, that he had a ſtatue erected to him at Rome inſcribed, To Simon the holy God, and ſo alſo his whore Helena, ſaith Euſebius (ſee Note e.) and both of them worſhipp'd by them. Nay moreover 3dly, that the Gnoſticks complied with the other heathen Idolaters, partaking of their ſacrifices and feaſts, and ſo were guilty of all kind of Idolatry. Of theſe therefore the Apoſtle may be believed to ſpeak here particularly, and to lay to their charge 1ſt. That they changed the glory of God, that is, the glorious appearance of his in Mount Sinai, wherein yet there was no ſimilitude ſeen, into an image, or ſimilitude, of a man, viz. of Simon Magus, a bodily ſhape of a meer mortal man; whereas the immortal God, that appeared in Sinai, was never ſeen in any ſuch ſhape. 2dly, That in doing this they are guilty of that great ſinne of Idolatry (there forbidden, upon this ground of their ſeeing no ſimilitude in Sinai,) viz. of worſhipping the image of a man, and of flying, and four-footed, and creeping things, which are here repeated, as the very things that had been there interdicted. And though it be true of the Gnoſticks, that by their joyning with the heathen Idolaters, they were literal y guilty of worſhipping every one of theſe here named, yet their worſhipping of Simon and Helen alone is ſufficient to own all the charge that is here laid on them. The worſhipping of one ſort of the things forbidden, the likeneſſe of the male and female, being as direct a breach of the Commandment, which forbad that and others alſo, as the worſhipping of all and each of them would be. This is after ſet down more ſuccinctly ver. 25. They turned the truth of God into a lie, that is, either the true ſtory Exod. 24. where no ſimilitude was ſeen, into this falſe ſtory of Simon there appearing, or elſe tranſformed that infinite inviſible Deity into an image or idol, and, παρὰ τὸ κτίσαντα, above and beſide the Creator of heaven and earth, worſhipp'd alſo τὴ κτίσιν this creature, vile ſinfull creatures of his, Simon and his whore. This phraſe of turning, or transforming, the glory, &c. ſeems to be borrowed from Pſal. 106. 20. They made a calf in Horeb, and worſhipped a graven image: thus they turned their glory into the ſimilitude of a calf that eateth hay, &c. As they there that ſaw no ſimilitude in the mount yet made one preſently, viz. the ſimilitude of a calf; ſo theſe Gnoſticks here making Simon to have appeared in Sinai, as the Father, make him an image and ſtatue to worſhip him in it. Of the word δόξα glory ſomewhat hath been ſaid before, Note on Mat. 3. k. and more will be added, Rom. 9. b.

Ἀλλάττειν δόξαν

g. V. 25. More then the Creator] Of the uſe of παρὰ for above one inſtance will ſuffice in the * Epiſtle of Eleazar the High-prieſt to Ptolemey, telling him by way of great acknowledgement and gratitude. Πάντα ὅσα σοὶ συμφέρει, κὰν εἰ παρὰ φύσιν ᾖσιν, ὑπομενόμεθα, All things that are profitable to you, though they be above nature, we will obediently performe. Thus Luc. 13. 2, and 4. ἁμαρτωλοὶ παρὰ πάντας, ſinners above all others, though Luc. 3. 13. it be more fully expreſs'd by πλέον παρὰ, more beſides, or above. As for the other notion of παρὰ for contrary to (which here may have place alſo, for he that worſhips any thing above, or beſide the one true God, doth it in oppoſition to him, and to the wronging and robbing him) we have an expreſs teſtimony for it, Act. 18. 13. παρὰ τὸν νόμον, contrary to the Law.

Παρὰ * Ariſteas hiſt. 70. interpret. p. 861. A.

h. V. 28. Reprobate] The word ἀδόκιμος hath two notions eſpecially, one among the Metalliſts, the other belonging to the agones. Any metall that will not bear the δοκιμὴ or triall, or which, being tried, betraies it ſelf to be adulterate, is ἀδόκιμος reprobate. But the notion that ſeems moſt peculiarly to belong to it in the New Teſtament, is the other, taken from the agones, where, as he that ſtrives as he ought, and conquers, is δόκιμος approved, 2 Tim. 2. 15. and Jam. 1. 12. δόκιμος γὰρ λημψόμενος στέφανον, approved, and ſuch as ſhall receive the crown, and in other authors, εὐδόκιμος well approved, (and of other creatures ἵππος δόκιμος an approved horſe in the Ἱππιατρικὰ) ſo he that loſes the game and prize, that doth not run or ſtrive, νομίμως according to the laws of the game, and ſo overcome, is ſaid to be ἀδόκιμος, to miſcarry in the race, and ſo to loſe the reward of it. Thus in Democrates, Δόκιμος ἀνὴρ γὰ ἀδόκιμος οὐκ ἐξ ὧν πράσσει μόνον, ἀλλ' ἐξ ὧν βούλεται, A man is approved or rejected not onely by what he doth, but by what he wills. So in the Sibylline Oracles,

Ἀγνὸς γὰρ κριτὴς τύπτει τὰ δίκαια βεβαύσας, Καὶ δοκίμους στέφει —— Chriſt will crown the approved. Thus 1 Cor. 9. 27. 'tis at the concluſion of an agoniſtical diſcourſe of running and cuffing, &c. the cloſe of which is that the Apoſtle uſes all his moſt earneſt endeavours, leſt, (being a κήρυξ preacher, crier, κῆρυξ officer in the agones, to propoſe the lawes and rewards of the agones to others, which is ἀνακηρύττειν and ἀποκηρύττειν, to proclaim ſuch a man conquerour, ſuch a man to have loſt) he himſelf ſhould ἀποκηρυχθῶμαι be rejected, found uncapable of the reward by all aſpired to, that is, faile of that crown of eternal life. So 2 Tim. 3. 8. ἀδόκιμοι περὶ τὴν πίστιν, in the matter of faith, ſuch as were found unworthy of reward by God, propoſed to Chriſtians. So Tit. 1. 16. ἀδόκιμοι to every good work, that doe nothing fit to be approved by God or man: where yet, as in all the former places, the figure λιτότης is to be obſerv'd, the word being uſed not for him onely that deſerves no reward, or that miſſes it, but for him that is moſt contrary, the moſt vile and wicked, that deſerves the contrary puniſhment (as ἀσεβὴς, and ἄνομος, and ἀχρεῖος, and ἀχημοσύνη, ungodly, without Law, unprofitable, uncomelineſs, ſignifie the moſt wicked, the moſt unfaithfull ſervant, moſt violent oppoſer of the Law, the greateſt impurities, and many other the like) and therefore is interpreted by βδελυκτοὶ ὄντες καὶ ἀπειθεῖς that went before, being abominable, and diſobedient, or contumacious. So Heb. 6. 8. of the ground that brings forth nothing but briars and thorns, that 'tis ἀδόκιμος, and κατάρας ἐγγὺς, reprobate, and nigh to a curſe. And ſo ſaith Heſychius, and Phavorinus, Ἀδόκιμος, πονηρὸς, it ſignifies a wicked man. And ſo it is here taken in this ſenſe of extremely ill, as appears by the effects that follow, the μὴ καθήκοντα, all the abominable ſinnes that were in faſhion among the Gentile-idolaters, and Gnoſtick Chriſtians. And the ſame may be ſaid of that place 2 Cor. 13. 5, 6, 7. which we will explain when we come to it. There is one thing more here obſervable, the anſwering of ἀδόκιμος here to οὐκ ἐδοκίμασε in the beginning of the verſe, They approved not, thought not good to have God in their acknowledgment, and anſwerably God gave them up to a mind, ſuch as neither God nor any elſe will approve of: which manner of ſpeaking is very frequent in the Scripture, eſpecially in μὴ καθήκοντα

in ſetting down Gods puniſhments on ſinners, in which the ſacred writers delight to obſerve ſome correſpondence. As Pſal. 18. With the froward thou wilt ſhew thy ſelf froward; and Becauſe you have walked contrary to me, I will walk contrary to you; and Mat. 5. 19. Whoſoever ſhall break one of the leaſt of theſe commandements, the ſame ſhall be the leaſt in the kingdome of heaven. And many the like, which have formerly been obſerv'd.

i. πλεονεξία

V. 29. Covetouſneſſe] The word πλεονεξία in this and many other places of the New Teſtament, which we generally render covetouſneſſe, ſignifies exceſſive, or unnatural, luſts, (not deſire of money onely) and is ordinarily ſet down among the baſeneſſes of the Gnoſtick hæreſie, as I here ſuppoſe it is. So Eph. 4. 19. οἵτινες ἀπηλγηκότες, who giving over all labour (as idleneſs was the mother-ſinne of the Sodomites) gave themſelves up to laſciviouſneſs, to work all uncleanneſs ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ in inordinate unnatural deſires. Thus in Photius Epiſt. 168. ἡ βάρβαρος πλεονεξία ſignifies ſuch luſt as was among Barbarians or Heathens, (and had been before exemplified in Joſeph's Ægyptian miſtreſs) τὸν ὀχληρὸν ἐρῶντα κτησαμένη, which poſſeſs'd the diſturbed lover, as there it follows. So in * S. Chryſoſtome, ſpeaking of theſe unnatural luſts, ὁρᾷς, ſaith he, ὅτι ἀπὸ πλεονεξίας τὸ πᾶν, you ſee that it comes all from this inordinate deſire, ὀπτὴ δυμίας ἂν ἀναχωρούσης ἴσως τῶν οἰκείων ὅρων μένειν, luſt not enduring to ſtay or be contained within its own bounds. So in Antiochus λογ. ξα'. ὀπτὴ δυμία γυναικῶν καὶ πλεονεξιῶν, deſire of women and ſuch like inordinations. For as to the nature of the word, it is known to come from πλέον ἔξω, and to ſignifie any immoderate deſire of any thing above ones portion. So in Ariſtotle 'tis oppoſed ἰσότητι to equality. So in Heſychius, Πλεονεξία, τὸ πλέον τοῦ δέοντος ἐπί τινος λαμβάνειν, to take more then is due or meet of any thing. So in Lucian de Cal. the calumniator is deſcribed to be one, that will have and incloſe all his auditors to himſelf, will let no man elſe be heard, and for this he cals him πλεονέκτην, one that aſſumes more then belongeth to him: and ſo Democrates in his γνωμ. defines πλεονεξία to be ſpeaking all, and not enduring to hear any body elſe. And in Themiſtius Paraphraſe of the firſt Book de Anima, πλεονεκτεῖν is taken for any kinde of exceeding, πᾶσαν γοῦν τιμὰν εἶναι, πλεονεκτεῖν δὲ ἑτέραν ἑτέρας, one exceeds, or excels, the other; and in * Iſocrates ſpeaking of Monarchies, τὰς ἐν πολέμῳ πλεονεξίας πάσας πεπειλῆφαι, they comprehend, ſaith he, all the advantages that are in war. And ſo in * Ecphantes, Βασιλεὺς ἐν τῇ κοινῇ φύσει πλεονεκτῶν κρέαννοι, a King hath a great eminence, or excellence, over the common nature of men: and in Alex. Aphrod. π. ἐιμαρμ. σωματικὰ πλεονεκτήματα are the faculties of the body wherein beaſts exceed men; and ſo φυσικὴ (perhaps it ſhould be read ψυχικὴ) πλεονεξία the excellence of the minde of men above beaſts. And the notion of which now I ſpeak, though it differ in the object, and matter about which it is converſant, is the ſame in effect with theſe, a deſiring and uſurping that which is not agreeable to his condition, ſex, nature, &c. τὰ μὴ καθήκοντα, thoſe things that are not meet, which Alex. Aphrodiſ. more diſtinctly expreſſeth in his Schol. on Ariſt. de An. Ὁ ἄδικος αὐτὸς πλέον τῶν ἡδέων νέμει, The wicked man allows himſelfe too large a proportion of ſweet things, or pleaſures. So Aſterius Hom. Cont. Avarit. Πλεονεξία ἐστὶν ἡ μόνον πρὸς ἀργυρίῳ σὺν τοῖς ἄλλοις κτήμασιν ὀπτιμάινεσθαι—ἀλλὰ γενικώτερόν ἐστιν, τὸ ὅλως παντὸς φράγματος πλέον ἔχειν βάλεσθαι τὸ ὀφειλόμενον καὶ ὑπερβάλλον. It is not uſed only for the mad love of money and other poſſeſſions, but in a more general acception, to deſire to have more of any thing then is due & convenient. So Hierax in his book of juſtice (of which we have a large fragment in * Stobæus) makes ἀδικία and πλεονεξία all one, and then exemplifies it in Milo and Lais: and as 'tis one branch of it in Milo, διαρπάζειν ἀθετουμένων χρήματα, to ſnatch away the eſtates of thoſe that are weaker then he, ſo 'tis another καὶ τὰς τῶν γυναῖκας to force their wives from them. And ſo in Lais, as it is one act of it, πλεῖσον διαπραττεῖν παρὰ τῶν ἐραστῶν to require and gain immoderately by her lovers; ſo it is another, ἐνίων γυναικῶν καὶ γάμους διαλύειν to diſſolve the marriages of ſome women, to get away their husbands from them. And of this we have a Grammaticall ground in the Hebrew word, בָּצַע, which ſignifies both covetouſneſs and luſt, and being by the Septuagint often rendred πλεονεξία covetouſneſſe, is once rendred μιασμὸς pollution, Ezec. 33. 31. and to that notion of the word the place agrees, if we compare it with v. 29. Where the cauſe of their deſolation is the abominations committed by them, and thoſe joyned with defiling the neighbours wife v. 26. Thus in an antient Prayer of Ephraim Syrus appointed for confeſſion, and the ſin chiefely inſiſted on being that of uncleanneſſe (as appears by ἐμὲ τὸν αἰσχρὸν, τὸν φλυαρὸν, τὸν μιαίνοντα τὸν αὐτὸν εἶδος ἀπὸ τῶν αἰσχρῶν καὶ ἀτόπων ἔργων μου, τὸν μιαίνοντα τὸν ναὸν τοῦ σώματός μου, &c. ἀτίμωσις καὶ πόρνης φιληδονίαις μου πᾶν μέλος μου ἐμίανε ἔρθειρε, &c.) he prayes, σπλαγχνίσθητι ὅπ ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις μου, ταῖς ἀδικίαις, ταῖς πλεονεξίαις, ταῖς μοιχείαις, ταῖς πορνείαις, ταῖς καταλαλιαῖς, ταῖς αἰσχρολογίαις, &c. have mercy on my ſinnes, my iniquities, my unnaturall luſts, adulteries, fornications, idle and filthy ſpeakings; where if we may judge by the attendants, the word is uſed in this ſenſe. Thus I conceive Plato uſed the word de Rep. l. 9. where ſpeaking of ſenſuall men, he compares them to the beaſts, χορταζόμενοι καὶ ὀχευόντες, full fed and laſcivious, and farther addes, ἕνεκα τῆς τούτων πλεονεξίας κνείζοντες καὶ λακτίζοντες, &c. where the πλεονεξία τούτων muſt refer to the fulneſſe of luſt and fleſh together. To theſe may be added the Gloſſe of Phavorinus, Πλεονεξία ἡ ὑπὲρ τῆς ὀπτὴ δυμίας τὸ πλείονος βλαβή (for which he cites the Apoſtle) the hurt of immoderate luſting. And ſo the word τρυφὴ which ſignifies this very thing and which he expreſſeth by λιχνεία φιλήδονος, voluptuouſneſs, he expreſſeth alſo by πλεονασμὸς περίεργος περὶ ἡδυπάθειαν ἀεὶ μὲν ὤν, an exceſſe which is always very curious, buſie, importunate to fetch in pleaſures, πλεονεξία and πλεονασμὸς being but little different from one another. Thus 'tis uſed in the Epiſtle of Barnabas, p. 231 where giving the reaſon why hares were forbidden under the Law, to intimate that we ſhould not be παιδοφθόροι like them, he addes, ὅτι ὁ λαγὼς κατ' ἐτιαυτὸν πλεονεκτεῖ τὴν ἀφόδυσιν. And in the fragments of Polycarpus's Epiſtle ſpeaking of Valens an Elder of Philippi, and his having committed ſomewhat utterly unworthy of that calling, by his example he admoniſheth others to abſtein ab avaritia (that ſure was in Greek ἀπὸ πλεονεξίας) from inordinate deſires, & ſint caſti, and that they be chaſte, adding that whoſoever did not thus abſtein ὁ μὴ ἀπεχόμενος πλεονεξίας, ab idololatria coinquinabitur, & tanquam inter Gentes judicabitur, will be contaminated with Idolatry, and judged as among the Gentiles. And ſo there is little reaſon to doubt, but that, when Bede on Mat. 5. 32. ſpeaking of Divorce ſaith, non hîc intelligitur tantùm fornicatio in ſtupro, quod in alienis viris aut feminis committitur, ſed omnis concupiſcentia, vel avaritia, vel idololatria, &c. 'tis not onely adultery that is here underſtood, which is committed on other mens wives, but every concupiſcence, or covetouſneſſe, or Idolatry, he meanes by avaritia coveting, unnaturall luſt, having, no queſtion, tranſlated that note out of ſome Greek commentator who had uſed πλεονεξία in this ſenſe. And ſo when * Holkot out of Papias obſerves that the Scriptures call by the name of Fornication, omnem illicitam corruptionem, all unlawfull, or interdicted, corruption, (ſicut eſt Idololatria & avaritia, ſuch are Idolatry and coveting,) it is evident, that corruptio illicita is the ἀθέμιτος φθορὰ abominable villany, as φθορὰ ſignifies. (ſee Note on c. 8. 1.)

and idolatry and covetouſneſſe, the unnaturall ſinnes uſed by the heathen worſhippers, the πλεονεξία, which is Idolatry. And ſo when Theophylact on 1 Cor. 3. 12. in the higheſt rank of combuſtible matter (that is, of ſinnes) reckons ἀνομοθεσίαν, εἰδωλολατρείαν, πλεονεξίαν, in all reaſon it is to be underſtood of unnatural luſts, ſo as to agree with uncleanneſs and Idolatry. Thus in all reaſon the word is to be taken here, where theſe four, [πορνεία fornication, πονηρία villany, κακία naughtineſſe, and πλεονεξία inordinate deſire] are put together, πονηρία and κακία in the ſame notion that Gen. 19. 7, and 9. πονηρεύεσθε and κακῶσαι are taken, that is, to ſignifie the ſinne of Sodom there deſcribed, and in all probability πορνεία and πλεονεξία in the ſame ſenſe alſo. So Col. 3. 5. in relation to the Gnoſticks he bids them mortifie fornication, uncleanneſſe, πάθος (that is, as the Syriack render it,) paſſivity, evil concupiſcence, and πλεονεξία inordinate deſire, which is Idolatry. So Eph. 5. 3. Let neither fornication, nor uncleanneſſe, nor πλεονεξία, inordinate deſire be named among you, putting them in the number of the nefanda, ſinnes not to be named; and ſo v. 5. Every fornicator, or unclean perſon, or πλεονέκτης (not covetous, but inordinate luſter) who is an Idolater: as when Maimonides Mor. Neb. l. 3. c. 38. ſpeaking of the unnatural ſinnes uſed by the Gentiles, and having named one abominable cuſtome of theirs, propter hoc, ſaith he, prohibita eſt inciſio arboris in aliam ſpeciem, ut elongemur à cauſis Idololatriæ & fornicationum. To the ſame ſenſe is πλεονεκτεῖν ἐν τῷ πράγματι τὸν ἀδελφὸν 1 Theſſ. 4. 6. as ſhall there (Note a.) be explained. So 1 Cor. 5. 11. ἢ πόρνος ἢ πλεονέκτης ἢ εἰδωλολάτρης, either fornicator, or inordinate luſter, or Idolater, ſpeaking of the Gnoſtick Chriſtians again; as in Barnabas's Epiſtle p. 252. in the bedroll of deſtroying ſinnes there is εἰδωλολατρεία, φαρμακεία, μαγεία, πλεονεξία, ἀφοβία Θεοῦ, Idolatry, ſorcery, magick (in reference to the Gnoſticks witchcrafts) inordinate luſts, fearleſneſſe of God. So the καρδία γεγυμνασμένη πλεονεξίαις 2 Pet. 2. 14. by the matter of that whole chapter is confined to this ſenſe, a heart exerciſed with inordinate luſts, which renders them κατάρας τέκνα, children of a curſe, ſure to be deſtroyed; and all this makes it reaſonable to pitch upon this notion of this word πλεονεξία in this place. So when Saint Paul 2 Cor. 7. after an exhortation of coming out from among them, (as out of Sodom) and of not touching the unclean thing, c. 6. 7. and of cleanſing themſelves from all filthineſs, c. 7. 1. ſubjoynes v. 2. Receive us οὐδένα ἠδικήσαμεν, we have injured no man, οὐδένα ἐφθείραμεν, we have corrupted no man, and addes οὐδένα ἐπλεονεκτήσαμεν, it may very fitly be rendred in this ſenſe, of foul unnaturall luſts, referring all the three words to their Gnoſtick falſe teachers, that debauched thoſe who entertained them, brought them to all ἀδικία wickedneſs, injuſtice (which is uſed for that ſinne Gen. 6. 5. and here Rom. 1. 18.) φθορὰ corruption, (uſed for that ſinne, Gen. 6. 11, 12. and 2 Pet. 2. 12. See note on 2 Pet. 1. b.) and πλεονεξία inordinate luſts, in the ſame ſenſe: not that Saint Paul had any reaſon to vindicate himſelfe from theſe ſins (no more had he, whatſoever other notion they could be interpreted in) but to intimate the vaſt difference betwixt him and the Gnoſtick teachers, or ſeducers, which had theſe deſignes upon them; which the rather appears by his next words, v. 3. I ſpeak not to condemne you, which implies that what he laſt ſaid, was by way of reproach to their new leaders, though not to the condemning of them to whom he wrote. In the ſame ſenſe it is that he tels the Theſſalonians 1 Theſſ. 2. 5. that he was not with them ἐν προφάσει πλεονεξίας. See Note on that place.

ἠδίκησαμεν ἐπλεονεκτήσαμεν

Ἀδικία φθορά

V. 30. Deſpightfull] The word ὑβρισταί may here moſt probably denote thoſe unnaturall luſts alſo. And ſo is it manifeſtly affirmed and defined by * Plato, Ἐπιθυμίας δὲ ἀλόγως ἐλκύσης ὅταν ἡδονὰς, καὶ ἀρξάσης ἐν ἡμῖν τῇ ἀρχῇ ὕβεις ἐπωνομάσθη, when deſire drawes us irrationally to pleaſures, and gets dominion over us, this is named ὕβεις contumely. So * Dio in Oeconomico, κλαίων ἐδεῖς προὔτρέψατο ὑβριστὴν, by weeping none ever incited the Contumelious, that is, the unlawfull lover. So in * Phintys's book of the womans ſobriety, the adulterous wife is ſaid ἡδονᾶς ἕνεκεν ἁμαρτάνειν καὶ ὕβεισιν, to be for pleaſures ſake guilty of ſinne and contumely. And ſo in * Nicoſtratus παῖδες ἐξ ἀκολασίας καὶ ὕβρεως γεγονότες, are adulterous brats. So in Philoſtratus de vita Apoll. l. 1. c. 11. ὑβριστὴς ἀνθρωπος is preſently ſaid to be κακὸς τὰ ἐρωτικὰ, wicked in his loves, or luſts, and of him it followes, that he fell in love with Apollonius for his beauty. So in * Charondas his Proem to his Lawes, ſpeaking of maritall chaſtity, and preſcribing the care of procreation, not of pleaſure, he addes, μηδὲ τὸ φύσει καὶ νόμῳ τίμιον, ἀνόμως ἀναλισκέτω καὶ ὑβριζέτω, uſing ὕβεις for any inordinate or unlawfull act of impurity. And this agrees moſt aptly with many former paſſages of this chapter, and the character of the Gnoſticks here ſet down, who diſliked mariage, and uſed all unlawfull liberties and pollutions.

This, it ſeemes, was the judgement of that learned Grammarian of this place, to which, no doubt, he referres by the word Ἀπόστολος. Heſychius renders it onely ἄφρων fooliſh, but ſo as fooliſh ſignifies unreaſonable actions, and as ἄνοια Luk. 6. 11. ſignifies deſigning malice and miſchief againſt Chriſt, and as Tit. 3. 3. Ἀνόητοι ſignifies thoſe that were guilty of unreaſonable practices. Paraphraſe.

CHAP. II.

a. 1. By this it appears how little can be ſaid in excuſe of thoſe ſeducers among you, who judge and condemn the orthodox Chriſtians, as breakers of the Law, onely becauſe they are not circumciſed, &c. when they who thus condemn them obſerve not the Law, no not in that very particular, which circumciſion peculiarly noted, the abſtaining from abominable uncleanneſſes, but live and go on in thoſe ſins, c. 1. 29. and ſo condemn themſelves in judging others.

1. THerefore thou art inexcuſable, O man, * a whoſoever thou art that judgeſt: for wherein thou judgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelf, for thou that judgeſt doſt the ſame things.]

* every one, that judgeſt

2. But

† we know, οἴδαμεν

2. But † we are ſure that the judgement of God is according to [b] truth againſt them which commit ſuch things.]

2. Whereas it is moſt infallibly certain, and acknowledged by all, that God paſſes judgement rightly, not ſparing a Jew for his outward ceremonies, when he puniſhes a Gentile that lives as well as he, but puniſhing ſinne, rewarding diſobedience (if it be not reformed and forſaken) whereſoever he findes it, without any acceptation of perſons, or conſideration of externall performances, or privileges, or advantages in any. b3

3. And thinkeſt thou this, O man, that judgeſt them which do ſuch things, and doſt the ſame, that thou ſhalt eſcape the judgement of God?]

3. And then how is it poſſible, that thou ſhouldeſt judge the pure Chriſtian to be a breaker of the Law, and thereupon in a damnable eſtate, onely for not being circumciſed, and yet deem thy ſelf ſafe, when thou art guilty of thoſe filthineſſes which were moſt eminently prohibited by the Law of circumciſion?

4. Or deſpiſeſt thou the riches of his goodneſs and forbearance and long-ſuffering, not knowing that the goodneſs of God leadeth thee to repentance?]

4. Or ſhall God's great patience and longanimity in deferring his vengeance on unbelievers, and his forbearing ſo long to puniſh thy ſinfull courſe, be caſt away upon thee, be deſpiſed, and not made uſe of by thee? Doſt thou not conſider that all this long-ſuffering of God to thee is purpoſely deſigned to bring thee to reformation, and if it work not that effect, will tend to thy heavier ruine?

* according to, κατὰ † or, retribution of, for the King's MS reads ἀπα-τάσεως

5. But *after thy hardneſs and impenitent heart, treaſureſt up unto thy ſelf wrath againſt the day of wrath, and † revelation of the righteous judgement of God?]

5. Wilt thou thus go on in obdurate reſiſting of all God's methods, and be never the better by his deferring theſe judgements ſo long, but onely to adde more weight to thy ruine when it comes?

6. Who will render to every man according to his deeds.]

6. Who ſhall not conſider circumciſion or uncircumciſion, but puniſh or reward every man according to his actions.

* patience of the good work. ὑπο-μονὴν ἔργου ἀγαθοῦ

7. To them who by *patient continuance in well doing ſeek for glory, and honour, and immortality, eternall life:]

7. To them that by conſtancy of pure Chriſtian performances, and by patient bearing of the perſecutions that fall upon them for that profeſſion, go on in purſuit of that reward which Chriſt hath promiſed to ſuch, he ſhall beſtow another life upon the loſſe of this, eternall bliſſe in the world to come:

† thoſe that are of, or from contention, οἱ ἐξ ἐρι-θείας

* worketh, κατεργα-ζομένου

† Even of Greek

* Greek

8. But unto † them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteouſneſs, indignation and wrath:

9. Tribulation and anguiſh upon every ſoul that * doth evill, of the Jew firſt, and alſo of the † Gentile.

10. But glory, and honour, and peace to every man that worketh good, to the Jew firſt, and alſo to the * Gentile.]

8, 9, 10. But to ſchiſmaticall factious men, which are as it were born, and compoſed, and made up of contention (as the Gnoſticks are) that reſiſt the right way, deny the Chriſtians the liberty of not being circumciſed, and themſelves live in all unnaturall ſins, thoſe that do thus renounce the Goſpell, and live contrary to the Law, to ſuch all judgements muſt be expected, deſolations and deſtructions here in a moſt eminent manner, and eternall miſery attending them. And as the Jew ſhall have had the privilege to be firſt rewarded for his good performances (as appears by Chriſt's being firſt revealed to him, in whom conſequently and proportionably he ſhall have all ſpirituall grace and crown, if he embrace Chriſt, and live exactly and conſtantly according to his directions) ſo muſt he alſo expect to have his puniſhment and deſtruction firſt, and that a ſad one at this preſent by the Roman armies, upon their finall rejecting and refuſing Chriſt. The greater his privileges are, the greater alſo his provocations and his guilt will be. And then the Gnoſtick alſo that takes part with the Jew, ſhall bear him company in the vengeance. As for the Gentiles, as they are put after the Jewes onely (and not left out) in the mercies of God, particularly in the revealing of Chriſt, ſo ſhall their puniſhments upon their provocations onely come after the puniſhment of the Jewes, not be wholly ſuperſeded (and accordingly 'tis to be ſeen in the predictions of both their ruines, in the Revelation, the Jewiſh unbelievers and Gnoſticks are puniſh'd firſt, and then the Gentiles and carnall Chriſtians with them alſo.)

11. For there is no reſpect of perſons with God.]

11. For God's rewards and puniſhments are not conferr'd by any uncertain rule of arbitrary favour or diſpleaſure, neither depend they upon any outward privileges or performances, as either having or not having received the Law, being or not being circumciſed, but are exactly proportion'd according to mens inward qualifications or demeanours.

12. For as many as have ſinned without Law, ſhall alſo periſh without Law: and as many as have ſinned in the Law, ſhall be judged by the Law.]

12. For all thoſe of the Gentile world, who having not received the Moſaicall Law of circumciſion, have ſinned againſt that knowledge of God which hath otherwiſe been afforded them, ſhall be adjudged to perdition, though not by the Law of Moſes, (it ſhall never be laid to their charge that they have not been circumciſed) or, though they be puniſhed, yet ſhall not they have that aggravation of their ſin and puniſhment, which belongs to thoſe which have received the Law of Moſes, they ſhall onely be judged for their not obſerving the Law of nature (ſee Theophylact) the Law of Moſes being not able to accuſe them. And thoſe who having received the Law of Moſes, and in it the ſign of the covenant, circumciſion, doe not yet live according to it, (ſuch are theſe unbelieving Jewes, and Judaizing Gnoſticks) all the benefit that they ſhall reap by their having received the Law and circumciſion, ſhall be to have that their accuſer, by which they may be condemn'd the deeper, in ſtead of their advocate to plead for them.

13. For not the hearers of the Law are juſt before God, but the doers of the Law ſhall be juſtified.]

13. For, to ſpeak to the latter firſt (ſee note on Mat. 7. b.) 'tis a dangerous unchriſtian error, to think that the hearing or knowing their duty, the having the Law delivered to them (yea and the ſeal of the covenant, circumciſion in their fleſh) without conſcientious practice of the duties thereof, ſhall ſtand them in any ſtead: No, 'tis onely the living orderly, according to rule and Law, that will render any man acceptable in Gods ſight.

14. For when the Gentiles, which have not the Law, do by nature the things contained in the Law, theſe having not the Law, are a Law unto themſelves.]

14. And for the former, 'tis clear, for when the other people of the world, which have not had that revelation of God's will and Law which the Jewes had, do without that revelation, by the dictate of their reaſon, and thoſe natural notions of good and evil implanted in them, (and by thoſe precepts of the Sons of Adam by parents tranſmitted to children, and ſo, without any further revelation from heaven, come down unto them) perform the ſubſtantiall things required in the Law of Moſes, and denoted by circumciſion and other ceremonies; this is an argument and evidence, that theſe men do to themſelves ſupply the place of Moſes's Law.

* among themſelves, either accuſing, or pleading for them, μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων λογι-ζομένων, ἢ καὶ ἀπολο-γουμένων

15. Which ſhew the work of the Law written in their hearts, their conſcience alſo bearing witneſs, and their thoughts * the mean while accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another.]

15. And that obligation to puniſhment, which is ordinarily cauſed by the Law, theſe men demonſtrate themſelves to have, without help of the Moſaicall Law; From whence alſo it is, that as conſcience (which, according to the nature of the word, is a man's knowing that he hath done, or not done, what is by Law commanded) is conſtantly witneſſe either for, or againſt them, that they have done, or not done their duty, ſo the generall notions and inſtincts of good and evill that are in them, without any light from the Moſaicall Law, do either accuſe them as tranſgreſſors of the Law of God, or elſe plead for them, that they have not culpably done any thing againſt it. From whence it appears to be moſt juſt even by their own confeſſion, that they that have ſinned without Law, tranſgreſs'd the Law of nature, ſhould alſo be puniſh'd, though they never heard of this Moſaical Law, (which was the thing affirmed v. 12. from whence to v. 16. all that hath been ſaid is but a parentheſis.)

16. And when I ſpeak of periſhing, and judging, v. 12. d. 16. In the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of men by Jeſus Chriſt according to d my Goſpell.]

I ſpeak of that doom which ſhall involve all both Jewes and Gentiles at that great day, when Chriſt Jeſus, being by his Father ſeated in his regal power, ſhall at the end of all come forth again to judge the world, not according to outward priviledges or performances, but inward qualifications & demeanures, being, as he is, a ſearcher of hearts: For then ſhall the Jewes be dealt with either in judgement or mercy, as they have lived or not lived according to the rules of the Moſaicall Law, and ſo the Gentiles alſo according as they have obey'd or not obey'd the Law of Nature. (And this is the very doctrine that hath been taught us by Chriſt, and by me and others preached to the world.)

17. And thus ſhall the proceſs be to the Judaizing Gnoſticks, in this or the like form; e. 17. Behold thou art e called a Jew, and reſteſt in the Law, and makeſt thy boaſt of God,]

Thou that calleſt thy ſelfe, or ſaiſt thou art a Jew, though indeed thou art not, Thou that dependeſt on the outward performances of the Law, circumciſion, &c. as if juſtification were to be had by that, and could not be had without it, Thou that boaſteſt that God is thy father, or favourer in a peculiar manner, becauſe thou adhereſt ſo faithfully to his Law, even in oppoſition to Chriſts reformations, (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.)

18. Thou that undertakeſt to know all the myſteries of God's will (and thence art by thy ſelfe called a Gnoſtick or knowing perſon) and upon examination, to approve, and practiſe the higheſt perfections, by the skill which thou haſt in the Law of Moſes, f. 18. And knoweſt his will, and f approveſt the things that are more excellent, being inſtructed out of the Law,]

19. And ſo by that advantage takeſt thy ſelfe to be a moſt knowing perſon, fit to lead all others, and deſpiſing the orthodox Chriſtians for blinde and ignorant, (ſee note on Jam. 3 a.) 19. And art confident, that thou thy ſelfe art a guide to the blinde, a light of them which are in darkneſs,]

20. Aſſumeſt great matters to thy ſelf, as having a ſcheme or abſtract of all knowledge and true religion (ſee note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) by the knowledge and underſtanding which thou haſt, and by the gloſſes which thou giveſt of the Law; g. 20. An inſtructer of the fooliſh, a teacher of babes, which haſt the g form of knowledge and of the truth in the Law;]

21, 22. Thou therefore, I ſay, that pretendeſt ſuch zeal to, and skill in the Law, that art ſo ſtrict for legall performances, doſt thou commit the ſame ſinne thy ſelfe (ſuppoſing it ſtealth, &c.) which thou condemneſt in others? doſt thou that condemneſt a Chriſtian for not being circumciſed, commit the great ſinne forbidden in the Law of circumciſion? This is, as if he that pretended ſuch a pious reſpect to the place of God's worſhip, as not to endure with any patience a falſe God or idol to be ſet up in it, ſhould yet ſo much deſpiſe the ſame place, as to rob it of thoſe things that are conſecrated to it: which ſure is as abſolute a profaning of any holy place, as to ſet up the moſt heathen idol in it. 21. Thou therefore which teacheſt another, teacheſt thou not thy ſelfe? thou that * preacheſt, a man ſhould not ſteal, doſt thou ſteal?
22. Thou that ſayeſt, A man ſhould not commit adultery, doſt thou commit adultery? thou that abhorreſt Idols, doſt thou commit ſacrilege?]
* proclaim. κηρύσσω

23. Thou that gloryeſt in thy zeal to the Law, doſt thou commit the moſt unlawfull practices, and by ſo doing bring a reproach on all Chriſtian religion? 23. Thou that makeſt thy boaſt in the Law, through breaking the Law diſhoneureſt thou God?]

24. For the unbelieving Gentiles ſeeing and judging by your evill lives, are aliened from Chriſtianity, have an evil opinion of the profeſſion, and of Chriſt, whom you worſhip, and ſo thoſe Scriptures which mention the diſhonour of God's name among the Gentiles, Iſa. 52. 5. Ezec. 36. 20, 23. may fitly be accommodated to you. 24. For the name of God is blaſphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written.]

25. For men that thus live 'tis madneſs to think that circumciſion will ſtand them in any ſtead: For circumciſion is a Sacrament to ſeal benefits to them who are circumciſed, if the condition required of them (that is, the ſanctity and purity ſignified thereby) be performed alſo; but if not, there is no ſpeciall advantage comes to them by being circumciſed, that is, by thus complying with the Moſaicall Law. 25. For circumciſion verily profiteth, if thou keep the Law; but if thou be a breaker of the Law, thy circumciſion is made uncircumciſion.]

26. And by the ſame reaſon, if thoſe who are not obſervant of the Law, or circumciſed, viz. the Chriſtians of the Gentiles, live thoſe lives of purity and ſanctity, which that Sacrament was ſet to engage men to, they ſhall be accepted by God as well as if they had been circumciſed. 26. Therefore if the uncircumciſion keep the † righteouſneſs of the Law, ſhall not his uncircumciſion be counted for circumciſion?
† ordinances, δικαιώματα, See note on c. 8. b.

27. And thoſe that having not been circumciſed, nor received the Law of Moſes (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) but onely thoſe naturall dictates, and directions, which are common to all men, if they yet do the things commanded in the Law of the Jewes, that is, the morall ſubſtantiall part of it, they ſhall condemn thee, who being in that legal ſtate, and obſerving not the ſenſe and meaning, but onely the letter of the Law, art outwardly circumciſed, but doſt not perform that purity which that ceremony was ſet to ſignifie, and to engage all, that are circumciſed, to obſerve it. h. 27. And ſhall not * uncircumciſion which is by nature, if it fulfill the Law, judge thee, † who h by the letter and circumciſion doſt tranſgreſs the Law?]
* the uncircumcision which is of nature, ἡ ἐκ φύσεως ἀκροβυστία.
† which are by, or with, or in the letter, &c. a tranſgreſſor of the Law? τὸν διὰ γράμματος καὶ περιτομῆς παραβάτην

28. For he is not the childe of Abraham, ſuch as to whom the promiſes pertain, who is born of his race or ſeed, and no more; nor is that the availeable circumciſion, which is externall, that mark imprinted on the fleſh. 28. For he is not a Jew, that is one * outwardly; neither is that circumciſion, which is † outward in the fleſh.]

29. But he is the Jew indeed, the true childe of Abraham (who ſhall be accepted by God) though he be not ſo by birth, who in the purity of the heart performs thoſe ſubſtantiall Lawes required by God of the Jewes, & revealed to them more diſtinctly then to other Nations, and the availeable circumciſion is that of him, who cuts off all ſuperfluities and pollutions which are ſpiritually, though not literally, meant by the Law of circumciſion, and ſo becomes pure in heart (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) who hath that Law, of which circumciſion was the ſign and ſeal, (the law of purity, or abſtinence from thoſe unnaturall ſins, &c.) printed in his ſpirit, or inner man, his ſoul, (that is, that practiſes it:) not he who hath literally obeyed it, and been circumciſed outwardly in the fleſh, even he whoſe praiſe is not of men (who ſee the outſide onely, and among whom 'tis counted a great dignity to be a circumciſed Jew) but he who ſo behaves himſelfe (whether he be a Jew or Gentile) that God may accept of him, as a ſincere performer of his commands, an obedient ſervant of his. 29. But he is a Jew, which is one * inwardly; and circumciſion is that of the heart, in the ſpirit, and not in the letter, whoſe praiſe is not † of men, but of God.]

a. ὁ κρίνων

V. 1. Whoſoever thou art that judgeſt] Ὁ κρίνων thou that judgeſt here, and in the end of the verſe, and v. 3. is clearly the Gnoſtick Judaizer, who teaches the obſervation of the Moſaical Law, and accuſes the Orthodox Chriſtians, who are not circumciſed, for breakers of the Law; and yet himſelf runs riotouſly into thoſe ſinnes, for the abſtaining from which, Circumciſion was deſigned and inſtituted by God. This judging and condemning of the Gentile-Chriſtians was by them taken up from the Jewes, who having themſelves guilt enough of ſinnes, as well as the Gentiles, would yet diſcriminate themſelves from all others by this or the like character of legal obſervances, as by that which ſhould juſtifie them, or free them from judgment, under which the Gentiles, which knew not the Moſaical Law, and were not circumciſed, were to lie, and be accurſed. This was the thing that John Baptiſt warns them of, to bring forth meet fruits of repentance, and not to ſay within themſelves, We have Abraham to our father, which they were apt to believe ſhould ſtand them in ſtead in the abſence of all thoſe fruits. This was the great error of that people, conſequent to their opinion of their abſolute election, whereby they reſolved, that 'twas not their juſt, or pious performances, that were looked on by God, or required to their Juſtification, but their being Abraham's ſeed, within the Covenant, and having the ſigne of the Covenant in their fleſh, which they looked on as engagements (if not allurements and motives) of the favour of God to them, howſoever they lived; by this means making God a προσωπολήπτης, one that choſe, or accepted, or favoured πρόσωπα, perſons, that is, men barely conſidered, with ſome outward advantages to ſet them off, without any intuition of their qualifications or demeanours. Which was the thing that is diſtinctly diſclaimed here, ver. 11. and which S. Peter diſcerned to be ſo falſe, by the revealing of the Goſpel to the Gentiles, Act. 10. 34. Thus is the word ὁ κρίνων uſed c. 14. 4. of the Jewiſh Chriſtian, that abſtained from ſome ſorts of meats v. 2. and though he doth that either out of weakneſs, as that ſignifies diſeaſe, erroneous ſeduction, or at leaſt out of infirmity and ignorance, as thinking himſelf bound to it by the Moſaical Law (which he believes ſtill to oblige) and ſo ought not to be deſpiſed, or ſet at naught by him that underſtands Chriſtian liberty better, yet doth very ill in judging all others that do not abſtain as he doth. For this is the very ſame error that is here reprehended in the Jews and Gnoſticks, of judging all others as men out of Gods favour, becauſe they doe not what they doe, or pretend to doe, that is, obſerve not the ritual parts of Moſes's Law. And this being an error which the Jewes and Gnoſticks were ſo guilty of, (and conſequently of this ſinne attending it, of judging and condemning all but themſelves) is particularly mark'd in the Jewes Mat. 7. 1. and beaten down by Chriſt (as here in the Judaizers by the Apoſtle) as an irrational ſinne, the grounds of which were quite contrary to the prime attribute of God, his juſtice, and rewarding all that diligently ſeek him, Heb. 11. 6. and every man according to his works here, ver. 6. and juſtifying the doers, not hearers of the word, v. 13.

Προσωπολήπτης

b. ἀλήθεια

V. 2. Truth] The Hebrew אמונת ſignifies both truth and juſtice, and is rendred by ἀλήθεια and δικαιοσύνη, and here one of them is put for the other, ἀλήθεια truth, for δικαιοσύνη juſtice, ſo as on the other ſide, ἄδικον μαμωνᾶ the unjuſt mammon is oppoſed to the true riches. See Note on Mat. 23. f.

c. λογισμοὶ μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων

V. 15. Their thoughts the mean——] The λογισμοὶ μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων here are the practical κοιναὶ ἔννοιαι common notions of good and evil, which are among the generality of men, even heathens, without any light from the Moſaical Law, and are called λογισμοὶ reaſonings, becauſe reaſon, when it comes to a maturity, if it be not precorrupted with falſe doctrines and prejudices, will be able to conclude that this ought to be done, and not that, and ſo give us the principles of all Moralactions.

d. Εὐαγγέλιόν μου

V. 16. My Goſpell] Paul's preaching every where, whither he came, is literally to be ſtyled his εὐαγγέλιον or Goſpel, & ſo it ſeems to ſignifie here. So in the Epiſtle of Clemens Romanus (contemporary to that Apoſtle) ad Corinth. after the mention of Bleſſed Paul's Epiſtles, he bids them mark τί πρῶτον ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ἔγραψε, what he hath firſt written to you (Corinthians) in the beginning of the Goſpel, that is, at the time when the Goſpel was by him firſt preached among them.

e. Ἐπονομάζῃ

V. 17. Called a Jew] Ἐπονομάζῃ is ſomewhat more then ὀνομάζῃ, it ſignifies an addition to ones proper name, and ſo it was here. The Gnoſticks aſſumed to themſelves the name of Jewes, profeſſing to be of that religion, great friends to Moſes's Law; λέγουσιν ἑαυτοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἶναι, Rev. 2. 9. they ſay that they are Jewes, when indeed many of them were not ſuch, either by birth, or obſervation of the Judaical cuſtomes, being not themſelves circumciſed (ſee Gal. 6. 13. and Note on Rev. 2. e.) and thoſe that were, living (not according, but) quite contrary to the Moſaical Law.

f. δοκιμάζεις

V. 18. Approveſt] That δοκιμάζειν to prove, or trie, ſignifies ſo to examine and prove as to approve, appears by ſome other places, where the word is uſed. So 1 Cor. 11. 28. Let a man prove, or examine, himſelf, and ſo let him eat of that, &c. where 'tis certain that, if upon examination he find himſelf unworthy, he muſt not ſo eat; for if he doe, he eats damnation to himſelf, v. 29. and therefore it muſt ſignifie the approving himſelf to God and his own conſcience. So Rom. 14. 22. Happy is he who doth not judge, or condemn, himſelf, ἐν ᾧ δοκιμάζει (not, in what he examines himſelf, but) in what, upon deliberation, he ſo likes, approves, as to think fit to act accordingly; that is, Happy is he that, when he is reſolved of the matter of the action, that it is lawfull, doth it with ſuch care that he hurt not others, that he hath nothing to blame in himſelf when he hath done it. So Gal. 6. 4. Let every man δοκιμάζειν prove his own work, that is, ſo prove, examine his own actions, as to approve them to himſelf, his own conſcience, and to God, and then he ſhall have glorying, or rejoicing, (that is, he ſhall be able to comfort himſelf) εἰς ἑαυτὸν μόνον toward himſelf alone, that is, by looking on himſelf abſolutely, and not only in conjunction or compariſon with other men, which is meant by καὶ οὐκ εἰς τὸν ἕτερον, and not towards another, to which belongs the reaſon rendred in the next verſe, For every one ſhall bear his own burthen. So Eph. 5. 10. walk as children of light, δοκιμάζοντες τί ἐστιν εὐάρεστον τῷ Κυρίῳ, examining, proving, what is acceptable to the Lord; but this ſo, that they alſo approve themſelves to ſtudy and purſue it, or elſe they doe not walk like children of light, like Chriſtians. The truth is, this is not ſo familiar a phraſe, the proving what is acceptable to God, as the former is, of proving and approving himſelf, or, his own works: yet becauſe the examining, and the approving of Gods will, is a direct undertaking, and obligation to practiſe it, and becauſe it is a ridiculous thing, and that which will never ſtand in any ſtead, to examine what is well pleaſing to God, and, when he hath done ſo, to act or practiſe the contrary, therefore the Apoſtle, that exhorts to this, as to a duty which will ſtand them in ſome ſtead, and as an evidence of their walking as children of light (not as the partial condition, or a means to perform God's will, but as the knowing God's will in the Scripture, when 'tis look'd on as a good thing, is the practiſing of it) muſt be ſuppoſed to contain in this phraſe, of proving, the approving alſo, and not onely ſo, but alſo the performing (at leaſt in endeavour and ſtudy) what is acceptable to the Lord, and ſhall to them appear to be ſo, and not onely the examining what is thus acceptable. And then one other place Rom. 12. 2. will by the ſame reaſon be clearly intelligible alſo in this ſenſe, where they are exhorted by all the exceeding mercies and compaſſions of God to preſent themſelves to God a living and well-pleaſing ſacrifice, and in ſtead of conformity with the world, to be transfigured, that is, eminently and viſibly changed, by, or in the renovation of their mind, εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν (which notes this to be an effect, if not the end, of this renovation of mind) that they may prove what is the will of God, the good, the acceptable, the perfect, which is directly the ſcheme or form of ſpeaking uſed to the Epheſians (onely with the addition of ſome more words, not to alter, but enhanſe this notion of it) ſo to ſearch into the will of God, what is good and acceptable to him in the higheſt degree, as to practiſe & purſue it and approve themſelves to God and their own ſouls to have done ſo. And by this means the meaning of δοκιμάζειν τὰ διαφέροντα both here and Phil. 1. 10. will be more intelligible alſo, then otherwiſe, if it were not compared with theſe two laſt places, it would be. In that to the Philippians, thus, I pray that your love may abound, &c. your great forwardneſſe to the advancing and propagating the Goſpel v. 4. εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν ὑμᾶς (as an effect again of their abundance of Chriſtian charity, or zeal to the Goſpel) that you may examine firſt, and then approve, or like, and then ſet your ſelves to the purſuit of τὰ διαφέροντα the things that excell, that are eminently good, (proportionably to the abounding of their charity going before) that is, doe as much good as you can poſſibly; or as Theophylact interprets διαφέροντα, by τὰ καθήκοντα ἑκάστῳ, the things that belong to every man, and τὰ συμφέροντα, profitable, thoſe things which are proper and expedient for you to do. And then this will without queſtion belong alſo to the ſame phraſe in this place, where of the Gnoſtick-Judaizers he ſaith, γινώσκεις τὸ θέλημα καὶ δοκιμάζεις τὰ διαφέροντα, Thou knoweſt (that is, pretendeſt to know above all others, and therefore art called Gnoſtick, knowing) the will (that is, the will of God) and proveſt, that is, examineſt with all acuteneſſe and diligence, and having by examination found out what is moſt excellent, moſt acceptable in the ſight of God, thou likeſt, chooſeſt, approveſt it (that is, pretendeſt and aſſumeſt to thy ſelf to doe ſo) and practiſeſt accordingly, κατηχούμενος ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, being firſt, for thy foundation, inſtructed in the Law of Moſes, as all pious men ought to be, to lay their foundation there; and thus aſſuming to thy ſelf this high perfection above all others, (the Orthodox Chriſtians) πέποιθας, &c. v. 19. thou haſt confidence to thy ſelf that thou art a guide to the blind, &c. that none are ſo fit to be ὁδηγοὶ (ſee Note on Jam. 3. a.) inſtructers, and to be heeded, as you. Thus in Ignatius Epiſtle to the Smyrnæans, ſpeaking of the reverence due to the Biſhops judgment, ὃ ἂν ἐκεῖνος δοκιμάσῃ, τοῦτο καὶ τῷ Θεῷ εὐάρεστον, what he ſhall, upon examination, approve of, this is alſo well-pleaſing to God.

V. 20. Forme] Μόρφωσις, χαραγισμὸς, εἰκὼν, ſaith Phavorinus (out of Heſychius) a ſcheme or image of a whole matter; but this, ſaith he, ὑποπλασμένον ὂν δὲ, that which is feigned, or believed, or pretended to be ſo, but is not; and for this he cites this place of the Apoſtle, and ſo indeed very pertinently, the Gnoſtick here thinking that he hath a ſcheme, or compleat form of all knowledge, and truth, and myſteries of religion, when he hath it not, but is farre from it. Theophylact hath another notion of it for ζωγράφησις, painting to the life, and interprets the place of the Jewiſh Doctor, who ζωγραφῶν καὶ μορφοῖ τὴν γνῶσιν τὴν καλὴν καὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἐν ταῖς τῶν μαθητῶν ψυχαῖς, formes and drawes to the life the knowledge of good and the truth in the hearts of diſciples. g. V. 27. By the letter] The notion of διὰ is here to be obſerved, and is beſt expreſs'd by in. So in Pauſanias διὰ φόβων γίνεσθαι, in metu verſari, to be in a condition of fears, or dangers. So here ch. 4. 11. τοῖς πιστεύουσι δι' ἀκροβυστίας, thoſe that being in uncircumciſion, that is, in the Gentile ſtate, do yet beleeve; and ſo here ὁ διὰ γράμματος καὶ περιτομῆς παραβάτης νόμου, thee, who being in the Law and circumciſion, that is, in that external condition of Moſaical œconomy, art yet a tranſgreſſor of the Law. Of this, or the like uſe of διὰ, ſee Note on 2 Pet. 3. d. h. διὰ

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. The former two chapters having been chiefly ſpent on the Gnoſticks (thoſe hæreticks, that, leading villanous, heathen lives, pretended zeal to the legal Moſaical obſervances) in perſwading and fortifying others againſt their pretenſes, not to be ſeduced by them to depart from the Church, or to condemn the uncircumciſed Gentile-Chriſtians, for not having the carnal circumciſion, the Apoſtle now proceeds to the defence of his doctrine, (and withall, of that great Apoſtolical practiſe (ſo heavily objected againſt him by the Jews and Judaizers,) of preaching to the Gentiles, departing from the unbelieving obſtinate Jewes, and of that great diſpoſition of Gods providence in Chriſt, the receiving the Gentiles, and rejecting the Jewes,) and that he may vindicate it, he firſt propoſes ſome vulgar objections againſt it: As firſt, If this which was ſaid c. 2. 28, 29. be true, (if God reward the cleanneſs of the heart, and inward purity, without any diſcrimination of birth, or regard of circumciſion, that is, if the Gentiles remaining uncircumciſed may be received into the Church) then it may ſeem that a Jew hath no advantage, or privilege, or prerogative above the Gentiles, no benefit of the promiſes made to Abraham, when he was appointed to be circumciſed, he and all his ſeed. But all this is thus anſwered:

1. WHat advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumciſion?]

3. 2. That, this notwithſtanding, the advantages of the Jewes have been in many reſpects very great; For firſt this is one advantage that they have had above the Gentiles, that they were intruſted with the oracles of God, that is, received all the revelations of his will, the Law (which ch. 2. the Jew ſo much boaſted in) and alſo the Prophecies, as the people with whom God thought fit to depoſite all theſe, for the benefit of the whole world.

2. Much every way; * [a] chiefly, becauſe that † unto them were committed the oracles of God.

* As firſt † they were intruſted with, ἐπιστεύθησαν

3, 4. Which certainly, though many Jewes dealt unfaithfully in that truſt of theirs, heeded them not ſo farre themſelves, as to perform obedience to them, or to render themſelves capable of the benefit of them, were nevertheleſſe real exhibitions of Gods mercy, evidences of his favour, and ſo performances of Gods promiſes, (ſee 2 Tim. 2. 13.) ſealed to Abraham at his circumciſion, as alſo truſts of God (ſo Theophylact

3. For what if ſome * did not believe? ſhall their unbelief † make the faith of God without effect?]

4. God forbid: yea, let God be true, and every man a lier, as it is written, That thou mightſt be juſtified in thy ſayings, and mightſt overcome when thou art [b] judged.]

phylact renders it) God's committing or intruſting his Oracles to them v. 2. and ſpecial favours to that people of the Jewes, above what was afforded others; there being no appearance of reaſon that any default of ours, upon which the promiſes, (being conditional) ceaſe to belong to us, ſhould be charged on God, as if his promiſes had not been made good unto us. For whatſoever falſnesſe or unfaithfulneſſe there may be in man, 'twere ſure blaſphemy to think there ſhould be any in God; he is moſt faithfull in performing what he hath promiſed, although every man ſhould be unfaithfull, and faile to perform his duty in making uſe of it; nay the greater and more provoking the ſinnes of men are, the more illuſtrious is his fidelity in making good his part toward thoſe that are ſo unworthy, according to that Scripture, Pſal. 51. 4. to this ſenſe ſpoken of God by David, That thou mayſt be juſtified &c. that is, that thou mayeſt appear juſt and faithfull in performing all thou ſayeſt, and overcome whenſoever thou art impleaded or queſtion'd by any.

† what ſay we? τι ερουμεν;
* Is not God unjuſt? μη αδικος ὁ Θεος;
† according to man) κατα ανθρωπον)

5. But if our unrighteouſneſſe commend the righteouſneſſe of God, † what ſhall we ſay? * Is God unrighteous, who taketh vengeance? (I ſpeak † as a man.)] 5. But here it will be objected, If Gods way in Gracious œconomy under the Goſpel (ſee ch. 1. note b.) may be thus ſet out, and more illuſtriouſly ſeen by the ſinnes of men, why ſhould God then thus puniſh the Jewes (as the Apoſtles ſay he will, every where foretelling their approaching deſtruction) for theſe ſinnes of theirs, which thus tend to his glory? (I recite the objection of ſome men) or if he doe, is it not injuſtice in him to doe ſo?

6. God forbid: for then how ſhall God judge the world?] 6. God forbid that we ſhould ſay any thing, on which this may be infert'd, for that were to deny him to be God, who, as ſuch, is Judge of all the world. (This ſeems to be here inſerted by way of parentheſis, as a note or expreſſion of averſation and deteſtation of any ſuch blaſphemous inference, after which he again proceeds in the propoſed objection, v. 7. repeating it again in other words, which therefore muſt connect with v. 5. and cannot be the reaſon of what is ſaid here in this verſe.)

* am I any longer impleaded, ἐτι κἀγω κρινομαι † And why ſhould we not &c.

7. For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my [c] lie unto his glory; why * yet am I alſo judged as a ſinner?
8. † [d] And not rather as we be ſlanderouſly reported, and as ſome affirm that we ſay, let us doe evil, that good may come: whoſe damnation is juſt.] 7, 8. For, ſay they, If the faithfulneſſe and mercifulneſſe of God in performing his promiſes to Abraham, that is, of giving the Meſſias, hath appeared more abundantly, and hath tended more to his glory, by, or through occaſion of the Jewes ſinnes or infidelities, there will then be no reaſon, why they that are guilty of ſuch ſinnes, ſo much tending to God's honour, ſhould ſtill be impleaded, or complained of, or proceeded with in judgment, arraign'd and puniſh'd as ſinners, that is, that God ſhould ſo complain, and avenge that in the Jewes, which tends to his honour, but, on the other ſide, men might doe well to commit ſuch ſinnes, from which ſo much good (or glory to God) might come. This indeed by ſome is thought to be an objection of great force againſt me, who am falſely accuſed to have delivered this very ſaying, in the caſe of the heathens having the Goſpel preached to them, viz. that the greatneſſe of the heathens ſinnes makes Gods mercy appear the more illuſtriouſly great, in vouchſafing to call them by the preaching of the Goſpel, and that therefore it is lawfull to live heatheniſh ſinfull lives, by that means the more to illuſtrate and ſet out Gods mercy to us in pardoning ſuch great ſinnes. But as I ſhall ſpeak more to that anon, ch. 6. 1. ſo now, in a word, it is a calumny, a conſequence by miſtakers falſly laid to my charge, and all that is needfull to reply to it at this time, is, to expreſſe deteſtation of it, and my opinion, that 'tis a damnable doctrine in any that ſhould teach it, and ſuch as will render the deſtruction of thoſe Jewes moſt juſt, who thus object. In oppoſition to which I diſtinctly affirm that no one ſinne is to be committed, though it be in order to, and in contemplation of the greateſt good, even the illuſtrating the glory of God.

* What therefore? doe we excell them? Τι οὐν; προεχομεθα;
† accuſed, or charged προῃτιασαμεθα

9. * What then? are we better then they? No, in no wiſe: for we have before † proved, both Jewes and Gentiles, that they are all under ſinne,] 9. Some farther objection there would be againſt what we have ſaid, if indeed the Jewes were much better by having received the Law, leſſe ſinfull, more innocent then the Gentiles. For then it might be ſaid, that when the Gentiles are taken in, who were the greater ſinners, and the Jewes, who were better then they, caſt off, there were ſome unequall dealing indeed. But the truth is, we Jewes were not better or more innocent then they; but as we have before charged the Jewes (as they doe the Gentiles) with wilfull damnable ſinning, ſo it is moſt true of them, they were in a very foule courſe of vices when Chriſt came, and long before, the farre greateſt part of them (where the ſinfulneſſe of the Gentiles being ſuppoſed by them to whom he writes, and not needing to be proved, but only that of the Jewes, he inſiſts on the proof of that onely, ſee v. 19.)

10. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one.] 10. This may be confirmed by the ſeverall teſtimonies of Scripture, ſpoken of the Jewes in ſeverall texts of the old Teſtament, all which were too truly appliable to the Jewes at the time of Chriſt's coming. They are univerſally depraved to all iniquity, Pſal. 14. 1. and 53. 1.

11. There is none that underſtandeth, there is none that ſeeketh after God.] 11. They live almoſt Atheiſtically, Pſal. 14. 2.

12. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no not one.] 12. They are apoſtatized from all piety, ſo farre from having done God any faithfull ſervice, that they doe the quite contrary, Pſal. 14. 3. (ſee note on ch. 1. h. and Luk. 17. a.) men of putrid noyſome converſations, and this ſo generally, that there is not any conſiderable number of pious men diſcernible among them.

13. [c] Their throat is an open ſepulchre, with their tongues they have uſed deceit, the poyſon of aſpes is under their lips: 13. Their talk or diſcourſe (of which throat, tongue, lips are the principal inſtruments) is moſt murtherous and malicious, Pſal. 5. 9. like the poyſon of aſpes, inſurably mortal, Pſal. 140. 4.

14. Whoſe mouth is full of curſing and [f] bitterneſſe.] 14. They curſe and deceive Pſal. 10. 7. ſpeak contumelioufly and falſly againſt their brethren.

15. Their feet are ſwift to ſhed blood.] 15. They are moſt bloodily diſpoſed, delight, and are ready to doe any injury, Iſa. 59. 7. to wrong any innocent perſon.

* Bruiſing συντριμμα

16. * Deſtruction and miſery are in their waies:] 16. Their actions are very oppreſſive and grievous to others, grinding the face of the poor, and afflicting them ſadly.

17. And the way of peace have they not known.] 17. But for ought that tends to the good of any, to charity, or peaceable-mindedneſſe, they know not what belongs to it, Iſa. 59. 8.

18. There is no fear of God before their eyes.] 18. They have utterly caſt off all care, or thought of piety, Pſal. 36. 1.

* in it

19. Now we know that what things ſoever the law ſaith, it ſaith to them who are * under the law: that every mouth may be ſtopped, and all the world may become guilty before God.] 19. Now this we know, that what the books of the old Teſtament, the Pſalmes and the Prophets, thus ſay, they ſay to, and of the Jewes, and ſo by complaining ſo much of their univerſal defection, and their all manner of wickedneſſe, they conclude them (and not only the Gentiles) to be obnoxious to God's vengeance, and moſt juſtly puniſhable by him, without any thing to ſay for themſelves, as they are conſidered barely under the Law, having ſo viſibly ſinned againſt that, and incurr'd deſtruction by the rules of it.

† acknowledgment ἐπιγνωσις

20. Therefore by the deeds of the Law there ſhall no fleſh be juſtified in his ſight: for by the Law is the † knowledge of ſinne.] 20. To conclude then, There is no juſtification (ſee note b.) to be had for any Jew, (that hath been guilty of any ſinne) by the legal obſervances, by circumciſion, and the reſt of the Mosaical rites, without remission of sinnes, through the grace of God in the new Covenant. Not indeed can it be imagined that justification and salvation can be hoped from thence, from whence comes the acknowledgment of our sinne and guilt; and such indeed is the Law, and such is circumcision particularly, whose nature it is onely to oblige us to purity, and to tell us, what we should doe, and, when we offend, to give us knowledge, and to reproach us of that, and to denounce judgment against us and appoint sacrifices (which are only the commemorating of our sinnes before God, Heb. 10. 3. not the expiating of them) but not to help us to justification, without the mercies of God in the new Covenant, see note on Mat. 5. g.

21, 22. Whereas, on the other side, there is now a sure, clear, new way to blisse, see note on ch. 1. b. (to wit, that which was in the world before, and so doth not depend at all upon the Mosaical Law, see Mat. 5. p.) manifested to men by Christ, but mentioned also, and obscurely set down in the Old Testament, namely, that way of justifying men by faith in Christ, or by that course which is now prescribed us by Christ, which way shall belong and extend to all, both Jewes and Gentiles, (circumcised or uncircumcised, without any discrimination) who shall believe there is mercy to be had for all true penitents through Christ, and so set themselves to a new life, whatsoever their sinnes have formerly been.

21. But now the righteousnesse of God without the Law is manifested, being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets.

22. Even the righteousnesse of God, which is by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all, and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference.]

g. 23. For Jewes as well as Gentiles are found also to be sinners, and so farre from meriting Gods praise or acceptance, and so, by any way but by the Gospel, there is neither justification nor salvation to be had for them,

23. For all have sinned, and come short of g the glory of God,]

24. And therefore whensoever they are justified, (either one or other) it is freely by his undeserved favour, (see note b.) through that great work which Jesus Christ hath wrought for the redemption of man, that is, for the obtaining pardon for their past sinnes, and working in them reformation for the future, (see note h.)

24. Being justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jesus Christ,]

h. i. 25. Which Christ, the Messias of the world, God from the beginning purposed to set forth unto men, as the means to exhibit and reveal to us his covenant of mercy, on condition of our faith, and constant new obedience to him who hath died for us, to make expiation for our sinnes, and to work reformation in us, hereby demonstrating the great mercifulnesse of God now under the Gospel, in that he forbears to inflict vengeance on sinners, but gives them space to repent, and promises them pardon upon repentance.

25. Whom God hath * set forth to be a † h propitiation, through faith in his blood, * to i declare his righteousnes † for the remission of sinnes that are past, through the forbearance of God;]

k. 26. To reveal, I say, and make known unto us at this time this way of justifying sinners in the Gospel (by grace, or mercy, and pardon of sinne) whereby God appears to all to be a most gracious and mercifull God, and accordingly to accept and reward all those which (though they have formerly sinn'd, doe yet) upon this mercifull promise, and tender, and call of Christ's, give themselves up to be ruled by him, to live as he hath commanded in the Gospel.

26. To declare, I say, at this time his righteousnesse, that he might be k * just, and the justifier of him † which believeth in Jesus.]

27. By this means then all proud reflections on our selves are perfectly excluded (a thing which the Mosaical Law was made use of to foster in the Jewes, they thought themselves thereby discriminated from, and dignified above all other men in the world, and that, by being Abraham's seed, and circumcised, and such like externall performances, they were secured of the favour of God, whatsoever they did) but by this Evangelical way of Gods dealing in Christ, accepting and acquitting all, Gentiles as well as Jewes, through grace and mercy, by which their sinnes are forgiven, and they received into Gods favour, (without any respect of personal privileges, of being Abraham's seed, or of bare outward performances &c.) only upon their return and change of life, upon performance of new faithfull obedience unto Christ to which they are called, and to which they are by him enabled; wherein there being so little, so nothing imputable unto us, all boasting is utterly excluded.

27. Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay, but by the Law of faith.]

l. 28. The summe or result therefore of this discourse is, that by this Evangelical way, the favour of God is to be had for those that never had to doe with the Judaical Law, (see note on Mat. 5. g.) circumcision &c. see v. 21. and note b.

28. Therefore we l conclude, that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the Law.]

29. For otherwise it would follow that God had care or consideration of no other part of the world, but onely of the Jewes, which certainly is not true, for he is the God of the Gentiles also, hath a peculiar care and consideration of them that come not from Abrahams loynes, as long as they imitate Abrahams faith, or on condition they doe so.

29. Is he* the God of the Jewes onely? is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also.]

30. And after the same manner receives all into his favour, the believing Jewes, and the believing, though uncircumcised, Gentiles, by this one Evangelical way of pardon and free remission of sinne to all that shall perform new obedience and fidelity to Christ, see note b.

30. Seeing it is one God, which shall justifie the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.]

31. Which Evangelical way of receiving men into the favour of God is so farre from evacuating the Law, or making it useless, that it is rather a perfecting of it, a requiring that purity of the heart, which was the inward notation of the legal ordinance of circumcision (and so in all other things a bringing in the substance, where the Law had only the shadow, the sufferings of Christ, and his intercession, in stead of the sacrifices and propitiatory (v. 25.) under the Law.)

31. Doe we then make void the Law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the Law.]

Annotations on Chap. III.

2. Πρῶτον

V. 2. Chiefly] Πρῶτον here clearly denoteth a form of enumeration, answerable to our imprimis, and signifies that the Apostle was about to reckon up all the advantages of the Jew, in this place, and accordingly began with one, resolving to have proceeded, had not an objection here diverted his purpose for many chapters together, not permitting him to return from that digression till c. 9. where again he falls to the same matter, and enumerates the remainder of those privileges, particularly v. 4. &c. The onely privilege which here he begins with is, ὅτι ἐπιστεύθησαν τὰ λόγια τοῦ Θεοῦ, their being intrusted with the oracles of God. What is meant by that phrase 'twill not be amiss to explain in both parts of it, and first the λόγια, oracles. Besides the four garments used by the Priest when he officiated, there were four more proper to the High priest. The first of them was called חשן, pectorall, because it was fastned about the neck, and came down hanging upon the breast, תכשיט כנגד הלב, saith Sol. Jarchi on Exod. 28, 4. it hangs before, or neer, the heart heart. In the Scripture 'tis called the חשן המשפט the pectoral of judgement, because by it the High-priest received the responses of God in all matters of difficulty, as when they should make war, or peace, &c. This is called by Josephus Ἐσθὴς, Antiq. l. 3. c. 8. the very Hebrew word, the ח being not pronounced; and of it he saith, that in the Greek language it signifieth λόγιον, (not rationale, I suppose, but) orationale rather, because the word or oracle of God was revealed thereby. And from this use of the word λόγιον for that pectorall, by which all the responses and oracles of God were received, it comes that the word λόγια in the Plurall is used to signifie those oracles and responses, all the revelations of Gods will by this means vouchsafed unto men. (Of the other wayes of Revelations among the Jewes see Note on Act. 23. a.) If it be demanded how these responses or oracles were given and received, the most probable way (though there be some incertainty among the Jewish writers in this matter) and that which is most agreed on, is this, The Hebrew names of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the twelve tribes, with this addition כל אלה שבטי ישראל all these are the tribes of Israel, were written on the Pectorall, and in these words every letter of the Alphabet is to be found, out of which all other words may be composed. Then when any response was to be received, the High-priest set his face toward the שכינה the ark, the testimony of Gods presence, and he that was concern'd in the response, set his face toward the High-priest; and the letters which were prominent, or which shined in the Pectorall, being put together made the response. And whereas some difficulty is conceived to have been in understanding the order, wherein the shining or prominent letters were to be taken (whereupon some of the Rabbins have been fain to say that the High-priest heard a voice to direct him in that matter) I suppose that difficulty will be removed by conceiving that the letters of which the response consisted, did not shine or stick out all together, or at once (for some of the letters of the Alphabet being but once to be found in all those words, which are supposed to be written on the Pectorall, 'tis possible the response might have in it some of those letters more then once, and consequently in that case it could not fully be expres'd by the Pectorall, if the manner were for all the letters that made up the whole response, to shine or stick out at once) but that first one, then another letter shone or stuck out, and so on, till the response were distinctly and compleatly delivered: and this shining or thrusting out of these letters of which the response consisted, is that which is called Urim and Thummim, שהן מתומין לפניהם את הדרך, because they perfected the way before them, that is, shewed them the right way wherein they should walk, which therefore is rendred ἀλήθεια truth; and both together, because by this means they were instructed in all doubtfull things concerning either knowledge or practice, especially whether such a thing should come to pass or no. As when David askes whether the men of Keilah would deliver him up or no, and the Oracle answers that they will, if he intrust himself to them. And of these responses 'tis the observation of Gemara Babyl. that 'tis not in the power of repentance to alter what is thus delivered: נורת נביא תחזרת the decree of a prophet returns, that is, is rescinded, and not performed sometimes, but נורת אורים ותומים אינה תחזרת the decree of Urim and Thummim never returnes, because it is called the judgement of Urim. This being the notion of the word λόγια oracles here, it will easily appear what is meant by λόγια ζῶντα, living oracles, Act. 7. 38. which Moses is said to have received from God, viz. the ten commandements from mount Sinai, which being significations and revelations of God's will are, by Analogie with the responses from Aaron's Pectorall, fitly called λόγια oracles; and then ζῶντα living, either because, being written in tables, they were more to the life and more lasting and durable then those other which were produced by the temporary shining or prominence of the letters in the Pectorall; or again, because they were delivered immediately by the voice of God, as we call that a living testimony which is received from the mouth of the party, in opposition to Records, which are dead witnesses. So when Heb. 5. 12. we finde στοιχεῖα τῆς ἀρχῆς τῶν λογίων τοῦ θεοῦ the elements of the beginning of the oracles of God, τὰ λόγια τοῦ θεοῦ the oracles of God, signifie Gods will, revealed to us, the Christian doctrine. Ἀρχὴ τῶν λογίων the beginning of the oracles is the first part of that Christian doctrine, the things which Christ first revealed and preached to them, c. 6. 1. viz. repentance and faith; and the στοιχεῖα elements may referre to the letters in the Pectorall, of which responses there consisted. Then for the ἐπιστεύθησαν they were intrusted with, that is certainly the due rendring of it, as will appear not only by the plurall number, which is here used, which would not regularly belong to it, if it agreed with the Neutrall λόγια oracles, (and therefore it must in the construction be joyned with the Masculine Ἰουδαῖοι Jewes, implyed and understood, though not named, here, from the word περιτομὴ the circumcision v. 1.) but also by the clear use of the word in this manner Gal. 2. 7. πεπίστευμαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, I have been intrusted with the Gospel. One thing more may be yet observable of this word, from the nature of it, which denotes being intrusted for the use and good of some others, and not onely for theirs who are so intrusted. Thus it is ordinarily known of feoffees in trust, that they are to imploy that which is deposited with them, for the use of those to whose advantage their trust was designed and specified. So in that place, Gal. 2. 7. where Saint Paul is said to be intrusted with the εὐαγγέλιον τῆς ἀκροβυστίας, Gospell of the uncircumcision, and Saint Peter with the εὐαγγέλιον τῆς περιτομῆς, Gospel of the circumcision, the meaning is evident, that they were intrusted with that jewell for the use of others, Saint Paul to preach it to the Gentiles, and Saint Peter to the Jewes. And so here, the oracles of God were deposited with the Jewes, not to keep them to themselves, but to publish them to all the world besides. And indeed therefore may this place seem to be pitch'd on by God, as the heart of the Earth, the middle of the World, that it might be fitter for that turn of dispersing and communicating it to others. Hence is it, that the Temple of Jerusalem is said to be the house of Prayer to all people, and when it was to be reedified Hag. 2. 7. it is expres'd by the desire of all nations shall come: and so we know many Proselytes were attracted by the splendor of Gods actions for and among this people, to come in, and receive their religion. But because this did not doe the work sufficiently of converting and reforming the Gentile world, it is Christ's appointment to his Apostles, that they should disperse themselves unto all Nations, and so bring them to the knowledge of his will. To this sense of the word ἐπιστεύθησαν the words of Athanasius are observable, de incarn. verbi, ὁ διὰ Ἰουδαίους μόνους ὁ νόμος ἦν, οὐδὲ δι' αὐτοὺς μόνους οἱ προφῆται ἐπέμποντο, the Law was not for the Jewes onely, nor were the Prophets sent for them alone (the two things meant by the Oracles here) Ἰουδαῖοι δὲ τῆς οἰκουμένης ἦσαν διδασκαλεῖον ἱερὸν τῆς περὶ θεοῦ γνώσεως καὶ κατὰ ψυχὴν πολιτείας, but this nation was the sacred school of the whole world, from whence they were to fetch the knowledge of God, and the way of spirituall living. Wherein yet there was an eminent difference betwixt this and the Evangelicall œconomy. Under the Law they that would learn God's will, will, muſt come up to Palæſtine to fetch it, but under the Goſpell the Law of Chriſt it ſelf goes out, and takes the journey to all nations, and comes home unto them; which is farre the greater advantage, and makes them more unexcuſable which doe not receive and imbrace it.

Λόγια τοῦ Θεοῦ

b. Κρίνομαι

V. 4. Judged] Κείνομαι, δικάζομαι, it ſignifies to have a ſuit in Law, ſaith Heſychius; and again, Κεκρίμεθα, μαχόμεθα, any civill controverſie, or contention. The Hebrew in Pſal. 51. 4. whence 'tis cited, hath בשפטך in judicando te, when thou judgeſt, literally, but then that word שפט though it ſignifie judicare, to judge, ſignifies often litigare, to contend, alſo to plead, or manage a cauſe, for one againſt another. So Ezech. 50. 4. wilt thou judge them? that is, wilt thou plead for them? ſo v. 7. and oft in theſe Epiſtles, 1 Cor. 6. 1. πολμᾷ κρίνεσθαι dares any * Ap. Stob. p. 228. wage a ſuit at Law, implead another? So in * Demaratus Arcadicor. 2. φόνου κριθεὶς ἀπελύθη τῆς ἐγκλήματος, being impleaded of murther, he was freed from the accuſation: where κριθεὶς muſt ſignifie not judged, or condemned, for 'tis added he was abſolved, but accuſed, or impleaded; and again it was by his mother that he was κριθεὶς, not by the Judge, another evidence that it ſignifies accuſed, proſecuted, not condemned. And agreeable to this will be that notion of κρῖμα Rom. 5. 16. for charging of ſin upon us, indiſement, impleading, after which followes the κατάκριμα or condemnation. From this notion of κρίνεσθαι to contend in the forinſecal ſenſe, for pleading, or managing the ſuit in Law, will appear alſo what is the originall notion of the word δικαιοῦσθαι to be juſtified, which is ſo often uſed in theſe Epiſtles. For the phraſe ὅπως δικαιωθῇς ἐν τοῖς λόγοις σου, that thou mighteſt be juſtified in thy ſayings, in the former part of this verſe, is viſibly of the ſame importance with νικήσῃς ἐν τῷ κρίνεσθαί σε, that thou mighteſt overcome when thou pleadeſt, in the latter; and then, as λόγοι muſt ſignifie pleadings, ſo muſt δικαιοῦσθαι the good ſucceſs, or victory, of the pleader, being acquitted by the Judge, as in that known place of Solomon, Prov. 17. 15. juſtifying is ſet oppoſite to condemning. From hence it is juſtly reſolved by Divines, that though Rev. 22. 11. (and perhaps in ſome other places of the Greek of the Old Teſtament, as Eccluſ. 31. 5. and 18. 22.) δικαιοῦς is oppoſite to ἀδικῶν, and ſo ſignifieth to live, or do, righteouſly; yet there is this other notion which belongs to the word, and muſt conſtantly be affixed to it in almoſt all the places of the New Teſtament. For the due underſtanding of which theſe three things will be neceſſary to be remembred. Firſt, that the word being Juridicall, muſt alwayes, when it is uſed in this ſenſe, imply a legall proceeding, and therein a Judge, a Client, and a Law, or ſomewhat proportionable to each of theſe. Thus when a man is ſaid to be juſtified by the deeds of the Law, or by the faith of Chriſt, in the ſight of God, as the man is the Client (ſuppoſable to be impleaded by Satan the διάβολος or adverſary ἐν δίκῃ in judicature) and God the Judge, and the Law of Moſes on one ſide, or the Chriſtian law, the law of faith, on the other, the Rule, or Law, by which the judgment is made; ſo he that is ſaid to be juſtified, muſt be ſuppoſed to be acquitted by the rules of that law by which he is tried and judged, whether it be that given by Moſes, or this by Chriſt. Thus in that eminent place Act. 13. 38, 39. (the ſummary of the whole Goſpel, and from which the notion of this word in the Epiſtles may moſt fitly be taken,) Be it known unto you, that by this perſon (Chriſt) remiſſion of ſins is declared, or preached, unto you, and through him every one that believeth is juſtified (δικαιοῦται) from all thoſe things from which you could not be juſtified in, or by, the Law of Moſes. Where, as it is evident that the law of Chriſt allowes pardon and remiſſion for thoſe ſinnes, for which the Law of Moſes allowed no mercy, viz. in caſe of repentance, and ſincere returning to the obedience of Chriſt, after one or more acts of preſumptuous ſinnes, (for which the Law of Moſes admitted no ſacrifice, no expiation, but inflicted death without mercy on the offender, were he never ſo penitent, Heb. 10. 26, 28. and though there were hope of pardon for ſuch in another world, yet this was not by the purport of Moſes, but of Chriſt's covenant) ſo the Juſtification which is now declared from Chriſt, and conſiſts in God's pardoning ſuch ſinnes, acquitting the penitent believer, that now comes in to the obedience of Chriſt, whatſoever his paſt ſinnes have been, is a judicial act of God's, proceeding according to this rule now in force, this Law of Chriſt, this Covenant under the Goſpel; which becauſe it is an act of meer mercy in God through Chriſt, the purchaſe of which coſt Chriſt his blood, but coſt us nothing, (by his ſtripes we were thus healed) and becauſe the condition of new life required of us, to make us capable of this remiſſion, hath nothing of virtue, or merit, of natural or moral efficiency in it, towards the purchaſing remiſſion, therefore it is here affirmed, that we are δικαιούμενοι δωρεὰν, &c. v. 24. juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption which is by Jeſus Chriſt.

The ſecond thing to be obſerved in this matter is, that the Goſpel, or the faith of Chriſt, being now that rule by which God either acquits or condemns, juſtifies or not juſtifies any, whenſoever Juſtification is mentioned, it muſt be underſtood with this reference to that rule, which is ſometimes mention'd explicitly, (as when we read of his juſtifying him that is of the faith of Jeſus, ver. 26. juſtifying by faith, and through faith, v. 30. that is, according to that Evangelical rule, the Law of faith, which gives place for repentance and remiſſion upon ſincerity of new life,) and is to be ſuppoſed, and implied, whenſoeveer it is not mention'd. The promiſes of mercy and pardon in the Goſpel, though general, being yet conditional, & no ground allow'd for any to hope for his part of it, but upon performance of that condition, which again muſt not be confined to any one notion of any one Chriſtian virtue, Faith, or the like, but to ſincere obedience to the whole Law of Chriſt, and that comprehends all the particulars required by him, in the retail, or as it is in the groſs ſet down by the moſt comprehenſive words, either of Repentance or Converſion, without which we ſhall all likewiſe periſh, and we ſhall in no wiſe enter into the kingdome of God, or of Holineſſe, without which no man ſhall ſee God. The not obſerving of which is the αἴτιον ψευδὲς, the procreative miſtake of the many great and dangerous errors in this matter.

The third thing is, that the Hebrew צדקה righteouſneſs ſignifies two things, either a lower or a more eminent degree of righteouſneſs, theſe two differing one from the other, as Juſtice and Charity appear to differ, one ſuperadded to, and ſuperſtructed on the other: and as it is the part of a Judge to conſider theſe ſeverally, and as well to reward the higher degree of the one, as to acquit the innocence, and reward the lower degree of the other, ſo there is a double notion of juſtifying in Scripture: the one for acquitting and pardoning, accepting, and rewarding in a lower degree, which upon repentance and forſaking of ſinne and converting ſincerely to God, is afforded every one, through the ſatisfaction and blood-ſhedding of Chriſt, under the Goſpel; another for an higher degree of approving and commending, and adjudging to reward, and that proportion'd to ſome eminent act of faith, or obedience, in caſe of extraordinary triall, πίστις triall; ſuch was Abraham's believing in hope, and above hope, and his obedience to the higheſt commands, leaving his countrey, and ſacrificing his only ſon, and ſuch were the ſeverall acts of faith mention'd Heb. 11. and the ἔργα works, Jam. 2. And thus there ſeems to be a difference betwixt God's imputing no ſin, and his imputing to righteouſneſſe; the latter being his adjudging to a high reward, the former only the forgiving iniquity, and accepting in a lower degree; the one upon ſome eminent act of faith, or obedience, the other upon undertaking new life, anſwerable to theſe two ſorts of Juſtification. And accordingly c. 4. that which is expreſs'd ver. 4. by, it was accounted for righteouſneſſe, is v. 5. the reward was reckoned, noting an eminent reward of ſome eminent act to be comprehended in that phraſe. And ſo ſometimes it is in the word Juſtified, and when it is ſo to be interpreted the Context will generally determine.

V. 7. Ly] As ἀλήθεια truth ſignifies alſo fidelity or faithfulneſſe, ſo ψεῦσμα on the contrary ſignifying a lie, imports alſo infidelity or unfaithfulneſſe, and is here ſet to ſignifie that ſinne of not making good uſe of the oracles of God intruſted to the Jewes, called their ἀπιστία unbelief, v. 3. and ἀδικία unrighteouſneſſe, v. 5. So v. 4. Let God be true, and every man a liar: that is, the unfaithfulneſſe of men, in neglecting to doe their part, doth no way prejudice, but rather commend the fidelity of God, in allowing them thoſe mercies which they make ſo ill uſe of.

c. ψεῦσμα

V. 8. And not rather] The placing of the words in this verſe hath ſome harſhneſs, and conſequent obſcurity in it. The learned Hugo Grotius is inclinable to believe a tranſpoſition of μὴ ὅτι, for ὅτι μὴ, and then renders ὅτι cur, why, thus, And why not (the reſt being read in a parentheſis) or, why ſhould we not doe evil, that good may come? But, I ſuppoſe, the more obvious and ſimple way ought here to be preferr'd, and the τί why from the former verſe to be repeated; or elſe the ſenſe ſo to hang, as that the τί why there ſhall have an influence here upon the μὴ not, and be thus rendred, καὶ μὴ and why not, as we are calumniated, &c. or, And why ſhould we not ſay, as we are calumniated, and as ſome ſay that we ſay. If this latter be it, then λέξομεν ſay is to be underſtood from the λέγειν following. But if the former, then the whole oration, placed ordinarily in a parentheſis (καθὼς βλασφημούμεθα, καὶ καθάς φασί τινες ἡμᾶς λέγειν, as we are calumniated, and as ſome ſay that we ſay) is, as it were, the Verb to the τί μὴ why not, thus, And why ſhould not we ſay, what Paul is affirmed to ſay (but that is calumny, ſaith Paul:) and in either way the ὅτι that follows will be taken in the ſenſe that hath been noted of it, Mat. 7. d. for ſcilicet, or videlicet, to wit, only as a form to introduce the ſpeech following, thus, Why ſhould we not ſay, as we are calumniated——to ſay, to wit, Let us doe evil, that good may come——And ſo this will be a perſpicuous rendring of the verſe.

d. Ἰουδ. ὅτι

V. 13. Their throat is an open——] Theſe three verſes that here follow, are evidently taken out of ſeveral places of the Pſalms and other Scriptures, and by the Apoſtle accommodated to his preſent purpoſe. And by occaſion of their being annexed to three verſes taken out of the 14th Pſalme, it hath come to paſſe, that ſome ancient Latine copies of that Pſalme have taken them in from hence, & added them to that Pſalme, and accordingly the tranſlation which is uſed in the Liturgie hath three verſes more to that Pſalme, then the tranſlation in our Bibles doth acknowledge.

f. Ἰουδ.

V. 14. Bitterneſſe] The Hebrew word מרמות ſignifying deceits, was by the Septuagint miſtaken for מרורות, and ſo rendred πικρίας bitterneſs, and continued here from thence in this citation: As indeed in moſt citations of Paul, the Apoſtle of the Gentiles (who generally uſed the Septuagint) and of Luke alſo, his companion, (ſee Act. 8. Note e.) the Hebrew text is not made uſe of, but the Greek tranſlation retained, even when it differs from the original Hebrew.

V. 23. The glory of God] The word δόξα glory or praiſe, being here joyned with θεοῦ of God, ſignifies not that glory which accrues to God, the glorifying or praiſing of his name, but that which accrues to man from God, and that may be either in this world, or in the next; the approbation and acceptance of any work here, or the reward of it hereafter. God's acceptance or approbation here, is called δόξα θεοῦ the praiſe, or glory, of God, Joh. 12. 44. they loved δόξαν ἀνθρώπων the glory, or praiſe, of men, more then of God; and ſo God's teſtimony is δόξα παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ, praiſe from God, Joh. 5. 44. And ſo it ſeems to denote here that reward which belongs to unſinning obedience, in which boaſting is founded, v. 27. and to which Grace, as it ſignifies pardon of ſinnes, is oppoſed, v. 24. and therefore of this all men are ſaid to come ſhort, who are found to be ſinners in the beginning of the verſe. Thus is glorying towards God ſet down as a conſequent of juſtification by works, c. 4. v. 2.

Δόξα παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ

Καύχημα πρὸς Θεὸν

V. 25. Propitiation] Some difficulty there is in this verſe, which muſt be explained by ſurveying the ſeverall parts of it. The Hebrew כפר ſignifying two things, to cover and to expiate (ſee Note on Heb. 9. d.) the Noun כפרת, which is uſed for the covering of the arke, is indifferently rendred in the Old Teſtament ἱλαστήριον propitiatory, and καλαπέτασμα covering: And indeed very fitly and properly both, becauſe as that place, where the Cherubim or Angels of God's preſence were placed, was the covering of the Arke, ſo Exod. 25. 22. God promiſed that in that place he would talk with Moſes, and give reſponſes, and ſhew himſelf propitious to the people. Thus (beſide the many places in the Old Teſtament) it is uſed in the New, Heb. 9. 5. where the Cherubim of glory, that is, the pictures of the Angels in the manner wherein they were wont to appear, that is, in the reſemblance of a bright cloud or glory, are ſaid to overſhadow the ἱλαστήριον, that is, the covering of the Arke, or propitiatory. And in proportion to this, muſt the word here be rendred not propitiation (that is ἱλασμὸς 1 Joh. 2. 2.) but propitiatory, Chriſt being now the antitype (prefigured by that covering of the Arke, either as Theophylact conceives, in that our humane nature in Chriſt πῶμα ἦν τῆς θεότητος was the covering, or veile, of his Divinity, or becauſe God exhibited and revealed himſelf in Chriſt, as the Propitiatory was the place where God was wont to exhibite himſelf peculiarly) he by whom God ſpake to us, Heb. 1. 1. in whom the fulneſſe of the Godhead dwelt bodily, and on whom the Angels deſcended with that voice, This is my beloved ſon, &c. and by whom God gave his reſponſes to the world, ſhewing himſelf propitious to them (which is the meaning of ἔνδειξις δικαιοσύνης demonſtrating of his righteouſneſs or mercy that here followes) or ſhewing a way by which he will be propitiated, viz. through faith in his blood (not by any legal performances) the condition required on our part to be performed. This condition is here introduced by the word διὰ (with a Genitive caſe) through, which is the note of a condition (as with an Accuſative it is of a cauſe) and it is πίστις ἐν τῷ αἵματι αὐτοῦ, faith in his blood, where the blood being the object of the faith, it muſt ſignifie in concreto Jeſus Chriſt, who thus ſhed his blood (ſhed it to propitiate and ſatisfie for our ſinnes, and ſhed it to redeem us from all iniquity) in, or on whom we are to believe, and that is ſtyled ver. 22. (in that ſimpler phraſe, yet to the ſame ſenſe) πίστις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ the faith of Jeſus Chriſt. Beſide this the blood is alſo the foundation or motive of the Chriſtian faith, that which perſwades us to believe and obey Chriſt, becauſe what he hath taught us, as the will of God, he hath thus confirmed to be ſo, by ſigning it with his blood; and ſo the blood of Chriſt is ſaid by S. John to be one of thoſe, which teſtifie or bear witneſſe on earth, and to induce our faith of the Goſpel, thus teſtified by the effuſion of his blood. And in both theſe notions, this faith is the condition on our part, parallel to Chriſts being propoſed a propitiatory on Gods part: for as God exhibits himſelf to us in Chriſt, demonſtrates his righteouſneſſe, or mercifulneſſe, and reveals himſelf propitious to us, in putting us in a way of finding mercy, entring a new covenant with us; ſo muſt we believe on him thus exhibiting and revealing his Fathers will to us, and obſerve thoſe rules, of Repentance and new life, upon which he promiſeth to be thus mercifull to us. And accordingly this condition is here immediately ſubjoyned to Gods propoſing Chriſt as a propitiatory, as the condition on our part, on which he ſo propoſeth him.

Αἷμα

Ib. Declare his righteouſneſſe] Ἔνδειξις δικαιοσύνης will here beſt be rendred, demonſtration of his righteouſneſs; and accordingly as the method of demonſtrating is wont to be by the cauſe, ſo here followes διὰ, which, with an Accuſative caſe, is a note of a cauſe, διὰ τὴν πάρεσιν becauſe of the paſſing by (not taking notice) of paſt ſinnes, the ſinnes, whether by Jewes or Gentiles, formerly committed, that is, before the revealing and manifeſting of God's will unto them by Chriſt: According to that of Act. 17. 30. that God ὑπεριδὼν looking over, not taking notice of, that time of ignorance, doth now command all men every where to repent; and Wiſd. 11. 23. παρορᾷς ἁμαρτήματα ἀνθρώπων εἰς μετάνοιαν, thou lookeſt another way, and beholdeſt not the ſinnes of men, that they may repent. The ὑπιδὼν and παρορῶν there is the direct interpretation of God's πάρεσις here, differing from ἄφεσις pardon, as preterition doth from remiſſion, as paſſing by, not yet laying to their charge for puniſhment, doth from abſolving, acquitting of them. For though in order to their repentance and change, God doth at the preſent ſo paſſe by their forepaſt ſinnes, as not to forſake them, or ſhut up all waies of mercy againſt them, but reveals Chriſt to them, with promiſe of pardon for what is paſt, if they will now obey him (this is the meaning of πάρεσις) yet unleſſe that change be wrought, and for the future approved to him, there is no ἄφεσις remiſſion or pardon to be expected from him. This πάρεσις then conſiſts ἐν τῇ ἀνοχῇ Θεοῦ, in God's forbearance, or long-ſuffering, (ſo the word ſignifies c. 2. 4.) in his not proceeding ſo ſwiftly and ſeverely with ſinners, as to cut them off, or forſake, and leave them helpleſſe and hopeleſſe in their ſinnes, but treating them gently, giving them ſpace to repent and amend, and uſing all effectuall means to win them to it: all one with God's μακροθυμία, ſlowneſſe to puniſh, mentioned oft in the caſe of Pharaoh, and elſewhere. And this being now God's dealing in Chriſt, is here mention'd as the medium to demonſtrate God's righteouſneſs, that is, that Evangelical way revealed by Chriſt, wherein it conſiſts, not in the purchaſe of pardon and forgiveneſs abſolutely, or for any but thoſe that doe ſincerely returne from their wicked lives, and embrace the faith and obedience of Chriſt, but to give ſpace, and to admoniſh and call to repentance, and uſe means on God's part effectual, if they be not obſtinately reſiſted or contemned by us, to bring us to new life. And that is the meaning alſo of the Ἀπολύτρωσις redemption which is in Chriſt, v. 24. his freeing men from that neceſſity of periſhing in their ſinnes, calling them to Repentance, uſing all probable means to redeem and purifie them from all iniquity, which is expreſs'd by λυτροῦσθαι redeeming Tit. 2. 14. and ποιῶν λύτρωσιν to work redemption Lu. 1 68. And ſo ſometimes alſo forgiving ſignifies, as when Chriſt ſaith, Πάτερ ἄφες, Father forgive them, Lu. 23. 24. for there he praies not for final or actual, preſent, abſolute forgiveneſs to them, but for the giving them ſpace to repent, and means to convince them of their ſin, by the coming of the holy Ghoſt, and the Apoſtles preaching to them the reſurrection of Chriſt from that death which they had inflicted on him. And ſo muſt we underſtand the remiſſion of ſinnes, which in the Creed is propoſed to all to believe.

Ἀπολύτρωσις

Λυτροῦσθαι Ποιεῖν λύτρωσιν Ἄφες πάτερ

V. 26. Juſt] That the word δίκαιος juſt, or righteous, ſignifies a mercifull, or charitable, perſon, hath been ſhew'd from the Hebrew notation of צדקה righteouſneſs, for ἐλεημοσύνη mercy, Note on Mat. 1. g. And accordingly it may be obſerved, that the word ſeldome in theſe books, if ever, belongs, or is applied to the act of vindicative or punitive juſtice, but (as there in the caſe of Joſeph, who would not offer his wife to legall puniſhment, and therefore is call'd δίκαιος righteous) for the abating of the rigour of exact law, and bringing in ἐπιείκεια moderation, or equity, or mercy in ſtead of it. Accordingly it is here to be reſolved, that this phraſe being uſed of God εἰς τὸ εἶναι αὐτὸν δίκαιον, that God may be righteous, muſt be underſtood to denote his mercy and goodneſſe and clemency, in pardoning and forgiving of ſinnes, that being the thing look'd on in the many foregoing expreſſions, our being juſtified freely by his grace v. 24. the propitiatory v. 25. Gods means of exhibiting or revealing his covenant of mercy, Gods righteouſneſs, that is, his mercifull dealing with men under this ſecond Covenant, v. 25, and 26. and the remiſſion of ſinnes, and forbearance, v. 25. 'Tis true indeed, that the ſatisfaction made, and the price paid for our ſinnes by Chriſt, being the meritorious cauſe of this remiſſion, and juſtification, may fitly denominate God δίκαιον juſt in that other reſpect; and it is moſt certain that God, to give a great example to his hatred to ſin, and his wrath againſt ſinners, was pleaſed to lay on his own ſon the iniquities of us all, rather then let ſinne go utterly unpuniſhed. But the word δίκαιος righteous being ſo commonly taken in that notion of mercifulneſs, and ſo ſeldome in this of vindicative juſtice, there is no reaſon to interpret it thus in this place.

V. 28. Concludes] Λόγος ſignifies ratio or ratiocinium, not onely in the notion of the Logician, but alſo of the Arithmetician, not only reaſon or arguing, but alſo reckoning or counting, and ſo you ſhall find it ch. 9. 28. whoſe art is called thereupon λογικὴ, counting or reckoning; whence Phavorinus, λογίζομαι, ψηφίζω τῇ χειρὶ caſting account with ψῆφοι, which we therefore call counters, or thoſe by which we caſt account. Hence λογίζομαι is to perfect and make up an account, and to conclude, or ſumme up; and ſo 'tis here uſed to conclude, not in the Logicians but Arithmeticians notion of concluding. Of this word λογίζομαι ſee Note on 1 Cor. 13. f.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphraſe.

1. WHat ſhall we ſay then, that Abraham our father, † as pertaining to the *a flesh, hath found ?]

1. What then doe we ſay ? Can it be ſaid, or thought, that Abraham, who is ſaid in Scripture to be righteous, or accepted by God as righteous, obtained that teſtimony by the merit of his own innocence or performances ? (This affirmative interrogation is in effect a negation, and ſo the meaning is,) This cannot with any reaſon be affirmed by any.

*a What therefore doe we ſay ? τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν † found according to the fleſh ? κατὰ σάρκα εὑρηκέναι * boaſting, καύχημα † toward God πρὸς θεόν

2. For if Abraham were juſtified by works, he hath * whereof to glory, but not † before God.]

2. For if he were ſo juſtified by any thing in himſelf, any innocence or performance of his, he might then be ſaid to have ſomewhat to glory of, his juſtification being an effect of his performances, and not of the free grace of God, (ſee note a, & ch. 3. 27.) But ſure there is no ſuch matter ; Or, if toward men, who had nothing to blame in him, he might have any place of boaſting, yet ſure toward God he hath none, he cannot be able to ſay to God by way of boaſt, as of any ſpeciall merit or excellency (which alone is matter of boaſting) that he had done any thing, by virtue of which he was juſtified before God. And therefore certainly, whatſoever privilege or prerogative was, or could be conceived to belong to him, or his poſterity, it was from the free mercy of God, a fruit of undeſerved promiſe, and that excludes all boaſting, for what haſt thou (in this caſe) which thou haſt not received ? and why then boaſteſt thou, as if thou hadſt not ?(that is, as if it were not a meer act of mercy, and bounty to thee ?)

3. For what ſaith the Scripture ? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteouſneſſe.]

3. And this appears by that way of God's dealing with him, which is in the Scripture clearly enough ſet down ; and that the very ſame by which we teach and profeſſe that all men are now dealt with by God, that is, a way that belongs to the Gentiles though ſinners, (if they will forſake their heathen waies, and now receive and obey Chriſt) as well as to the Jewes, viz. that Abraham believed God, followed his call, and believed his promiſe, and thereupon though he had formerly been guilty of many ſinnes, and though his obedience being due to God's commands, could not challenge any ſuch reward from God, yet did God freely juſtifie him, that is, upon his forſaking his countrey and the idolatries thereof, and after, upon his depending upon God's promiſes made to him (and ſo walking cheerfully in his duty towards God) pardon his paſt ſinnes, receive him into ſpeciall favour, ſtrike a covenant of rich mercies with him.

4. Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace but of debt]

4. By this 'tis clear that 'twas not his innocence, or blameleſneſſe, by which he is ſaid to be juſt in the ſight of God, or any meritorious act, that was thus rewarded in him, (ſee note on c. 3. b.) For if it were, then would it not be ſaid, that God did account or reckon his faith unto him for righteouſneſſe, that is, freely out of meer mercy juſtifie him (as v. 3. it was, and v. 5. is again ſaid, theſe two phraſes [it was reputed to him for righteouſneſſe] there, and here [it is reputed to him according to grace, or favour] being directly of the ſame importance) but that upon his perfect innocence and blameleſneſſe, God was bound (by lawes of ſtrict juſtice) to reward and crown his innocence, and his virtues, as paying him that which he ought him (a due debt,) and not freely giving it him by way of favour and grace, as is implied in accounting or imputing to him for righteouſneſſe.

5. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſſe.]

5. But his way of juſtification was by believing pardon for ſinners upon reformation, and thereupon reforming and giving himſelf up to doe whatſoever God now would have him doe; and ſo 'twas not any originall innocence of his (which might challenge the reward, as due) but onely God's acceptation of his faith, which was an act of God's meer mercy, and that may be vouchſafed to Idolatrous Gentiles upon their repentance, as well as to him, and their receiving of the faith, and leaving their former courſes of ſinne on Chriſts command, as he did in his countrey, upon God's, be accepted to the juſtification.

6. Even as David alſo deſcribeth the bleſſedneſſe of the man unto whom God imputeth righteouſneſſe without works,]

6. Agreeable to which is that deſcription of bleſſedneſſe in David, Pſal. 32. that he is bleſſed whom the Lord out of his free grace and pardon of ſinne accepteth and accounteth as righteous, and not on any merit of their own performances ; that is, that bleſſedneſſe conſiſts in having this Evangelical way of juſtifying ſinners (or thoſe who have been ſinners, and now repent and return) vouchſafed to any man, not that of never having lived in ſinne (for want of which the Jewes will not admit the Gentiles to any hope of juſtification) but the other, I ſay, of mercy and forgiveneſſe, upon reformation, and forſaking their former evil waies, as appears by the words of the Pſalme.

7. Saying, Bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiven, and whoſe ſinnes are covered.]

7. Bleſſed are they, not who never ſinn'd at all, that were never in a wicked or wrong courſe, (as of the Gentiles it is acknowledged that they were) but who having been ill, have reformed, and found place of repentance, and of mercy upon reformation, meerly by the forgiveneſſe and pardon of God.

8. Bleſſed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute ſinne.]

8 Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſinne (though he have been guilty, as 'tis acknowledg'd the Gentiles have) is not charged on him by God, but freely pardoned and forgiven unto him upon his reformation.

9. Cometh this bleſſedneſſe then upon the circumciſion onely, or upon the uncircumciſion alſo ? for we ſay that faith was reckoned unto Abraham for righteouſneſſe.]

9. This then being the nature of the Evangelical courſe of God's gracious way of dealing with ſinners, giving them place for repentance, and upon the ſincerity of that, juſtifying and accepting them, whatſoever their former ſinnes have been, we may now farther conſider, whether this courſe may not be taken with uncircumciſed Gentiles, as well as with the Jewes; and that will beſt be done, by conſidering how God dealt with Abraham, and what condition Abraham was in, when God thus reckoned his faith to him for righteouſneſſe, or juſtified and approved of him, and rewarded him ſo richly for believing.

10. How was it then reckoned ? when he was in circumciſion, or in uncircumciſion ? not in circumciſion, but in uncircumciſion.]

10. And of this the account is eaſie, if we but obſerve the time when Abraham's juſtification is ſpoken of, viz. when thoſe words were ſaid of him, Abraham believed, and it was counted to him for righteouſneſſe. For we find that was Gen. 15. 6. before he was circumciſed ch. 17. 24. and therefore it could not be a privilege annext to circumciſion, but is a grace and favour of God, whereof the uncircumciſed Gentiles are no leſſe capable then the Jewes, who are within the covenant of circumciſion : (which is an evidence that receiving of Chriſt now, and believing and obeying of him, as then Abraham obeyed, will be accepted by God, without circumciſion.)

11. And he received the ſigne of circumciſion, a ſeal of the righteouſneſſe of the faith, which he had yet being uncircumciſed ; that he might be the father of all them that believe, * though they be not circumciſed, that righteouſneſſe might be imputed unto them alſo ;]

11. And being juſtified after this Evangelical manner upon his faith, without and before circumciſion, he received the ſacrament of circumciſion, for a ſeal, on his part, of his performing thoſe commands of God given to him, his walking before him ſincerely, Gen. 17. 1. (upon which the covenant is made to him, and thus ſealed v. 2,4, 10.) and on God's part, for a teſtification of that *through, or in uncircumciſion διὰ ἀκροβυστίας ſee note on c. 2. b.

faith of his, and obſignation of that precedent juſtification; and ſo by conſequence he is the father in a ſpirituall ſenſe, that is, an exemplar, or copy (which they that tranſcribe are called his ſonnes) of every uncircumciſed believer, who therefore ſucceeds him, as a ſon to a father, in that privilege of being juſtified before God:

12. And in like manner a ſpirituall father conveying down mercies and the inheritance to the Jewes, that were circumciſed, and do now convert to Chriſt, and ſo beſides circumciſion, which they drew from him, do alſo tranſcribe his diviner Copy, follow his example of faith and obedience, which were remarkable in him before he was circumciſed, leave their ſinnes, as he did his countrey, and believe all Gods promiſes, and adhere to him againſt all temptations to the contrary.

12. And the father of circumciſion to them who are not of the circumciſion onely, but alſo walk in the ſteps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumciſed.]

13. For the great promiſe made to Abraham and his poſterity, that they ſhould poſſeſſe ſo great a part of the world, Idumæa and a great deal more beſide Canaan, (under which alſo heaven was typically promiſed and comprehended, Heb. 11. 14, 16.) was not made by the Moſaicall Law, or conſequently upon condition of performing and obſerving of that, (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) but by this other Evangelicall way of new obedience, without having obſerved the Law of Moſes, without being circumciſed.

13. For the promiſe † that he ſhould be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his ſeed, through the Law, but through the righteouſneſs of faith.]

† to Abraham or his ſeed, that he ſhould be the heir of the world, was not by the Law, ἀ γὰρ διὰ νόμου ἐπαγγελία τοῦ Ἀβραὰμ ἢ τῷ σπέρματι αὐτοῦ, τὸ κληρονόμον αὐτὸν εἶναι τοῦ κόσμου

14. For if that inheritance were made over to them upon obſervation of the Moſaical Law, upon the Jewes being circumciſed, &c. then, as faith, or this Evangelicall way of juſtifying ſinners, is vaniſhed on one ſide, and what is ſaid of Abraham's being juſtified by faith is concluded to be falſe, ſo the promiſe it ſelf, which was ſhewed to be the thing by which Abraham was juſtified, and to belong to all Abraham's ſeed, not to the Jewes onely, v. 12. is vaniſhed alſo.

14. For if they which are of the Law be heires, faith is made void, and the promiſe made of none effect.]

15, 16. This again appears by another argument; for it's evident of the Law of Moſes, that all which that doth, is to bring ſinne and puniſhment into the world, as the Law of circumciſion given to the Jewes made it a ſinne, and puniſhable in a Jew, if he were not circumciſed on the eighth day, but gave him no right of merit, no title to heaven, or to any other reward, in caſe he did obſerve that or the like ordinances, were circumciſed, &c. (for theſe were before the command of circumciſion made over to Abraham and his ſeed by the promiſe of God.) And ſo for other more ſubſtantiall duties, the Law by commanding them doth but enhanſe the contrary ſinne, which if it were not for the commandment could not be ſo high a degree of crime, or contempt of known law, but doth not give a man right to any reward for obſerving it. From whence it neceſſarily follows, that it, that is, the promiſe of reward, v. 13. juſtification, &c. muſt have been made in reſpect to faith, or to believers (and not founded upon any merit of any legall performances, on God's giving, or our obſerving that law of circumciſion, &c.) and by that means indeed it becomes an act of promiſe, and that promiſe meerly of grace, not depending on Judaicall performances, and ſo it belongs to all the ſeed (that is, to all that do as Abraham did) is made good (ſee note on 1 Pet. 2. d.) to all ſorts of believers (not onely to the Jewes) who are ſpiritually children of Abraham, that is, believers like him, born anew after his example or ſimilitude, though not ſpringing from his loyns, for in this reſpect it is, that he is ſaid to be the father of us all, that is, of all the faithfull, Gentiles as well as Jewes.

15. * Becauſe the Law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no tranſgreſſion.

16. Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; † to the end the promiſe might be ſure to all the ſeed, not to that onely which is of the Law, but to that alſo which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all,]

* For γὰρ

† that it may be a firm promiſe, εἰς τὸ εἶναι βεβαίαν τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν

b. 17. (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations) ‖b before him whom he believed, even God, who quickneth the dead, and calleth thoſe things which be not as though they were;]

‖ anſwerable to him,

17, (As it is written of him, that he ſhould be the father of more nations then one, nay (as the word [many] often ſignifies) of all, that is, of the Gentile believers alſo) in like manner as God, in whom he believed, is the Father of the Gentiles as well as Jewiſh believers, and accordingly juſtified Abraham without Moſaicall obedience, and ſo will juſtifie Gentile Chriſtians, begetting them by the Goſpell to a new life, and then upon this change, this reformation, though ſinners and Gentiles by birth, yet accounting them children, receiving and embracing them in Chriſt. And there is nothing ſtrange in all this, when we remember who it is that hath made this promiſe, even that God who is able to doe all things, even to raiſe the dead to life again, and ſo to quicken the Gentiles that are dead in ſinnes (as he quickned the womb of Sarah, and enabled old Abraham to beget a ſonne) and give them grace to forſake their former deadneſs and barrenneſs, and incapacity of Gods favour, viz. their heathen ſinnes, and to deal with thoſe deſpiſed heathen as he doth with the Jewes themſelves, that have received moſt of his favour, and pretend a peculiar title to it, ſee Luk. 15. 24.

18. And this is exemplified to us in that which, we ſee, befell Abraham, who having no naturall grounds of hope (either in reſpect of Sarah or himſelf) did yet (upon Gods promiſe Gen. 15.) hope and believe that he ſhould have a Sonne, and ſo be a ſtock, from whence (that is, literally, from his body) many nations ſhould ſpring, a moſt numerous progeny, even as many as the ſtars of heaven for multitude. (And then why may not the Gentiles upon coming in to the faith of Chriſt, and reforming their Gentile lives, be as capable of God's promiſes, made to all true penitents, whatſoever impoſſibility ſeem to be in it, in reſpect of their former ſinnes, and deſperateneſs of their condition?)

18. Who againſt hope believed in hope, that he * might become the father of many nations: according to that which was ſpoken, ſo ſhall thy ſeed be.]

* ſhou'd become εἰς τὸ γενέσθαι

19. He, we know, by a ſtrong faith overcame all the difficulties in nature, and conſidered no objections that might be made againſt the probableneſs of God's performing the promiſe:

19. And being not weak in faith, he conſidered not his own body † now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadneſs of Sarah's womb:]

† grown already dead, ἤδη νεκρὸν

c. 20. Neither interpoſed he any queſtion, demurre, or doubt, through any ſuſpicious fearfull paſſion in himſelf, but, without all diſpute to the contrary, depended fully on God for the performance, and how difficult ſoever, yet he lookt upon God in his glorious attributes, perfectly able to do whatſoever he promiſed, and moſt faithfull, and ſure never to faile in the performance, collecting nothing elſe from the difficulty of the matter, but that it was the fitter for an almighty power, and a God that cannot lye, having promiſed, to magnifie his power in performing it.

20. He c* ſtaggered not at the promiſe of God through unbelief, but was ſtrong in faith, giving glory to God:]

* doubted

21. Having for it all, this one hold, on which he depended moſt confidently, that as God was able, ſo he would certainly make good and perform what he had freely promiſed to him. (And then, now that the Goſpell is by Chriſt ſent to the Gentiles, and mercy offered them upon reformation, why ſhould the wickedneſs of their former lives (any more then Sarahs barren womb, and Abrahams old age) keep God from performing his promiſe to them, of accepting, and juſtifying penitent Gentiles, whoſe reformation tends ſo much to Gods glory, though they be not circumciſed?)

21. And being fully perſwaded that, what he had promiſed, he was able alſo to perform.]

22. And

22. And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.]

21. Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him;

24. But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, * if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead.]

* that believe: πιστεύουσι

22. Which stedfast faith of his was a signe of the opinion he had of God's power and fidelity, and was most graciously accepted by God, and rewarded in him with the performance of the promise, and not onely so, but also (and over and above it) was reputed to him as an eminent piece of virtue. And so it will be now in the Gentiles, if upon our preaching to them, they now believe and repent.

23, 24. For this is recorded of him for our instruction, to teach us how God will reward us, if we believe on him, without doubt or dispute, in other things of the like or greater difficulty, such is the raising Christ from the dead, which was wrought by God for us and all mankind, Gentiles as well as Jewes, and our belief of it is now absolutely required of us, to fit us to receive and obey him, that is thus wonderfully testified to us to be the Messias of the world, and that receiving and obeying of him will now be sufficient to the justifying of us, without the observations of the Mosaical Law, as Abrahams faith was to him, before he was circumcised.

25. Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification.]

25. For to this end was both the death and resurrection of Christ designed: he died as our surety, to obtain us release and pardon, to make expiation for our sinnes past, to deliver us from the punishments due to sinne; and rose again from the dead, to open the gates of a celestial life to us, to ensure us of a like glorious resurrection, which could never have been had, if Christ had not been raised, 1 Cor. 15. 16, 17, 20. And in order to our receiving this joyful benefit of his resurrection other special advantages there are of his rising, partly to convince the unbelieving world by that supreme act of power, and so to bring them to the faith that before stood out against it; partly that he might take us off from the sinnes of our former lives, bring us to new life, by the example of his rising, and by the mission of the Spirit to us, whereby he was raised, and so to help us to actual justification, which is not had by the death of Christ, but upon our coming in to the faith, and performance of the condition required of us, sincere obedience to the commands of Christ.

So that as the faith of Abraham, which was here said to be reputed to him for righteousnesse, was the obeying of God in his commands, of walking before him, &c. the believing God's promise, and without all dubitancy relying on his all-sufficient power to doe that most impossible thing in nature, and his veracity and fidelity, that he would certainly doe it, having promised it, (which contains under it also by analogie a belief of all other his divine attributes, and affirmations, and promises, and a practice agreeable to this belief, going on constantly upon those grounds, in despight of all resistances and temptations to the contrary,) so the faith that shall be reputed to our justification, is the believing on God in the same latitude that he did, walking uprightly before him, acknowledging his power, his veracity, and all other his attributes, believing whatsoever he hath affirmed, or promised, or revealed unto us concerning himself, particularly his receiving of the greatest sinners, the most Idolatrous heathens, upon their receiving the faith of Christ, and betaking themselves to a new Christian life, and as an Embleme, and token, and assurance of that, that great fundamental work, the basis of all Christianity, his raising Jesus from the dead, whom by that means he hath set forth to us to be our Lord, to be obeyed in all his commands, delivered to us, when he was here on earth (the obligingnesse of which is now sealed to us by God in his raising this Lord of ours from the dead) and this faith not only in our brains, but sunk down into our hearts, and bringing forth actions in our lives (as it did in Abraham) agreeable and proportionable to our faith. And as this faith is now required to our justification, so will it be accepted by God to the benefit of all the heathen world that shall thus make use of it, without the addition of Mosaical observances, circumcision, &c. as in Abraham it was, before he was circumcised.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

2. V. 1. What shall we say then——] The understanding of the Apostles discourse in this chapter depends much on a right understanding of this verse, which contains the question to which the satisfaction is rendred in the following words. And in this verse four things must be observed: First, that the τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν what say we then? is a form of introducing a question, and though not here (in the ordinary printed copies) yet in other places hath a note of interrogation immediately following it, as c. 6. 1. and 7. 7. This being supposed, the second thing is, that the remainder of the verse is the very question thus introduced, that Abraham, &c. that is, Doe we say that Abraham found according to the flesh? And this interrogation being not here formally answer'd, must it self be taken for an answer to it self; and as interrogations are the strongest negations, so will this, and must thus be made up by addition of these or the like words, No certainly he did not. Then for the third difficulty, viz. what is here the meaning of εὑρηκέναι, hath found, that will soon be answered, 1. that to find, agreeably to the Hebrew מצא signifies to gain, obtain, acquire, as to find life, Mat. 16. 25. 2dly, that there must be some Substantive understood, somewhat which he may be said to have found, and that is either indefinitely ὃ εὗρε, that which he did find, or obtain, or else more distinctly δικαιοσύνην righteousness or justification, which had before been named favour, approbation with God. So we have εὗρες χάριν thou hast found favour, Luk. 1. 30. and it seems to be a proverbial form, and will then be the same with being justified ver. 2. And so the illative particle For, concludes, Doe we say he hath found? (or, Certainly he hath not found) For if he were justified, that is, if he had thus found—— which notes finding and being justified to be all one. Fourthly, then it must be examined what is meant by κατὰ σάρκα, according to the flesh. And first it appears to connect with the εὑρηκέναι, for so it lies εὑρηκέναι κατὰ σάρκα found according to the flesh, and is not joyned with Abraham our father as in reason it would have been, (and not εὑρηκέναι interposed,) if the meaning of it had been, our father according to the flesh: which being supposed, it will likewise follow that κατὰ σάρκα, according to the flesh, must signifie the same with ἐξ ἔργων, by works, v. 2. in like manner as found and justified import the same. And this again is evident by the Lawes of reasoning. For this second verse being by the For in the front evidenced to be the proof of what was set down in the first, and this proof being in form of an hypothetical syllogisme, thus, If Abraham were by works justified before God, then he hath matter of boasting before God; But Abraham hath not any matter of boasting before God; Therefore he was not justified by works, it must follow necessarily that this conclusion, Abraham was not justified by works, was the same with that which was set down in other words, v. 1. or if not of the same latitude and extent with it, was comprehended, as a part, under it. Which it cannot be, unlesse κατὰ σάρκα, according to the flesh, and ἐξ ἔργων by works, be either of the same force directly, or the latter contained in the former. Any greater (though never so small) difference, that should be admitted, being of necessity to affix four terms to the Apostles syllogism, and so to evacuate all force in his argument. From hence it follows, that the way of discerning what is meant by ἐξ ἔργων by works will be the most probable means of interpreting κατὰ σάρκα according to the flesh. And this we have from v. 4, & 5. in these words, To him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. But to him that worketh not,

κατὰ Σάρκα

τὸν ἁμάρτιον

but believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his faith is reckoned for righteouſneſſe. Where it is evident, that working is that to which reward is by debt, or juſt wages, to be adjudged, and that in oppoſition to Gods reckoning of grace, or favour, and juſtifying the ungodly. From whence it follows, that being juſtified by works in this place (in S. Paul's and not S. James's dialect) ſignifies that innocence of the former life, and thoſe eminent performances wrought by a mans ſelf, that may challenge from God as due unto them God's acquittance, and ſpecial reward, without any intervening of pardon, as to an offender, or of grace, in giving him any thing that is not perfectly due to him. Whereas on the contrary, Gods imputing righteouſneſs without works ver. 6. is Gods pardoning graciouſly the ſinnes that the man hath been guilty of, (viz. upon repentance and reformation,) which he might moſt juſtly have puniſhed, v. 7, 8. and rewarding ſome mean imperfect act, or acts of fidelity, or obedience in him, which could no way challenge impunity, much leſſe ſuch a degree of reward, did not God out of meer mercy thus improve, and enhanſe the value of them. So that ἔργα works are the mans own performances, firſt blameleſſe in not ſinning, and then meritorious, as the eminent difficulty of the commands, wherein his obedience is tried and exerciſed, is apt to enhanſe the value of them; and he that were ſuppoſed to be juſtified by them muſt 1. have lived blameleſly all his former life, and then have done eminent, rewardable actions alſo, at leaſt the former of theſe. And Abraham having been ἀσεβὴς a ſinner v. 5. having lived in Idolatry for ſome time, and all that he did, upon which he was juſtified Gen. 15. 6. being but obeying Gods call, Gen. 12. 4. and believing his promiſes, Gen. 15. 5. it is clear he was not, nor could be thus juſtified, but only by the way mentioned by the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 32. by God's forgiving, covering, not imputing of ſinne. And ſo this muſt be the meaning alſo of his not finding according to the fleſh, viz. being not juſtified by any thing in himſelf, abſtracted from the mercy and gracious acceptance of God. Thus Rom. 9. 8. the children of the fleſh are oppoſed to the children of the promiſe, and ſignifie literally Iſmael that was begotten by the ſtrength of nature, (as Iſaak was a work of Gods promiſe and ſpeciall mercy,) and myſtically the Jewes conſidered with their own performances, whereby they expected Juſtification, without any reſpect to the pardon and mercy of Chriſt. And thus Gal. 4. 29. Iſmael is ſaid to be κατὰ σάρκα γεννηθὶς, born according to the fleſh, and Iſaak κατὰ πνεῦμα, according to the ſpirit, in the ſame notion, the Spirit and the promiſe ſignifying the ſame thing in that place, as appears by v. 28. The words being thus interpreted, are a confutation of one part of the objection of the Jewes againſt the Apoſtles practice of preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles, viz. that taken from the ſinnes of the Gentiles, which here by the example of Abraham is proved to be of no force againſt their juſtification, they being as juſtifiable as Abraham a ſinner was, by Gods free pardon of ſinnes paſt, upon forſaking of them. And this is inſiſted on and proved in the eight firſt verſes. In the ninth verſe the Apoſtle proceeds to the confuting the other part of their objection (ſee Note b. on the Title of the Epiſtle) viz. that if the heathens would be capable of any part of the benefit of God's promiſe, they muſt then be Proſelytes of their Moſaical covenant, or righteouſneſs, be circumciſed, &c. Which again is proved falſe by the example of Abraham, who was juſtified before he was circumciſed, and before the giving of the Law, by Faith, not by Circumciſion, by Gods pardon and mercy, not by any legal performances. The only matter of doubt and uncertainty is, whether theſe objections which are thus in the inſuing chapter confuted, were both propoſed in the firſt verſe, (for if they were, then, ἐξ ἔργων by works v. 2. will not be of the ſame latitude with κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh, but contained under it, as a part under the whole) or whether the firſt only were there comprehended, and the ſecond ſeverally ſubjoyned v. 9. The latter of theſe ſeems moſt probable, and accordingly the explication of the Chapter hath proceeded, though if the former were true, it would be of no greater concernment then only this, that κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh ſhould referre tô Circumciſion, and Moſaical obſervances, as well as to the blameleſſe and meritorious performances wrought by a mans own natural ſtrength, abſtracted from God's pardon and favourable acceptance.

V. 17. Before him] The importance of κατέναντι θεοῦ is not ordinarily obſerved, and muſt be fetch'd from the uſe of כנגדו in Hebrew, as it is uſed Gen. 2. 18. where God ſaith he will make Adam an help, we render it meet for him, and the vulgar, ſimile ei, like, or agreeable or anſwerable to him; where the Septuagint have κατ' αὐτὸν by him, or on the ſide of him, or anſwerable, parallel to him. And to this Hebrew the Greek κατέναντι bears exact proportion, the word נגד ſignifying coram, ex oppoſito, and yet uſed to denote that which is like and anſwerable. Thus 'tis certain S. Chryſoſtome underſtood the word in this place; for ſo ſaith he, κατέναντι ἔστιν εἰπεῖν τοῦτον θεὸν, ὥσπερ ὁ θεὸς οὐκ ἔστι μεριὸς θεὸς, ἀλλὰ πάντων πατὴρ ὅτω καὶ αὐτὸς, The meaning is, as God is no partial God, but the Father of all, ſo Abraham: and again, if he were not the father of all that dwell on the earth, τὸ κατέναντι οὐκ ἴσχυε χώραν, this word ſhould have no place, ἀλλ' ἠκρωτηριάσατο ἂν ἡ τοῦ θεοῦ δωρεὰ, but Gods gift would be maimed; and in expreſs words, τὸ δὲ κατέναντι ὁμοίως ἔχει, the word ſignifies, in like manner. And ſo Theophylact from him, Κατέναντι τοῦ θεοῦ, ἀντὶ τοῦ ὁμοίου τῷ θεῷ, before God, is inſtead of, like God.—— This obſervation may poſſibly be uſefull to the finding out the full importance of ſome other places. As when the commandment is given to Abraham of walking before God, and being perfect, Gen. 17. 1. which in this notion of before will be all one with, Be ye perfect, as your Father in heaven is perfect.

V. 20. Staggered] Διεκρίθη is ἀμφιβάλλειν, ἀπιστεῖν, ſaith Phavorinus, to doubt, demurre, diſpute, and be incredulous. So is the word uſed Mat. 21. 21. Act. 10. 20. and 11. 2, 12. Rom. 14. 23. Jam. 1. 6. and 2. 24. Jude 9, and 22. See Paulus Fagius on Pirche Aboth, p. 82.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. V.

1. By this faith therefore it is, that as many as ſincerely embrace the Goſpel are freely pardoned, and accepted by God in Chriſt, and being ſo, they are reconciled unto God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and though they have formerly been Gentiles, need not become Proſelytes of the Jewes, need not any legal performances of circumciſion, &c. to give them admiſſion to the Church of Chriſt, as the Judaizing Gnoſticks contend.

1. THerefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace * with God, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt:] * contaſ. vyic

2. By

† have had ἐσχήκαμεν * or joy, for the King's MS. reads καυχᾶν † have stood, ἑστήκαμεν * glory, or rejoyce exceedingly, καυχώμεθα

2. By whom also we † have accesse by faith into this *grace, wherein we †stand, and * rejoice in hope of the glory of God.]

2. Nay by him we have already received, by faith only, (not by virtue of those performances,) reception and admission to those privileges, to this Evangelical estate, wherein now we stand, and have done for some time, and have a confident assurance that God, which hath dealt thus graciously with us, will, if we be not wanting on our part, make us hereafter partakers of his glory: and this is matter of present rejoicing to us.

3. And not onely so, but we glory in tribulations also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience;]

3. And we not only rejoice in this hope of future glory, but (on this score) also we are infinitely pleased with our present sufferings, (see Note on Heb. 3. b.) whatsoever befall us now, knowing that although our afflictions be in their own nature bitter, yet they are occasions to exercise, and thereby to work in us the habit of many excellent virtues, as first patience, and constancy, which is required of us, and which is most reasonable to be shewed in so precious a cause.

* tryall, δοκιμὴν

4. And patience, * experience; and experience, hope:]

4. And this patience works another fruit, for without that we could have no way of exploring or trying our selves touching our sincerity, which is only to be judged of by triall, and without this triall and approbation of our sincerity we could have no safe ground of hope (which is only grounded on God's promises, and those made onely to the faithfull, sincere, constant Christians.)

† poured out on ἐκκέχυται ἐν

5. And hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is † shed abroad in our hearts by the holy Ghost, which is given unto us.]

5. Which hope being thus grounded will be sure never to fail us, 'tis impossible we should ever be ashamed or repent of having thus hoped, and adhered to Christ. An evidence of which we have in God's having so plentifully expres'd his love to us, in testifying the truth of what we believe, by sending his holy Spirit to that purpose, which assures us that we can never miscarry in depending on him for the performance of his promises, that being the great fundamental one, promised before his death, on which all the others depend.

* weak, ἀδύνατοι † at a fit season, κατὰ καιρὸν

6. For when we were yet * without strength, † in due time Christ died for the ungodly.]

6. This appears from the very beginning of Christ's dealing with us; for without all respect to any worth in us, Christ, when we were all in a sick, yea a mortal, that is, sinfull (see Theophylact) damnable estate, (see 1 Cor. 8. note b.) came then in a most seasonable opportunity, to rescue us from that certain damnation which attended us, as impious wicked creatures, vouchsafed to suffer in our stead, himself to die that he might free us from certain eternal death, if we would now reform, and come in to the obedience of the Gospel.

* any one εἰς † though

7. For scarcely for a righteous man will * one die: † yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die.]

7. And what a degree of love this was, you may judge by this, that among men, though for a very mercifull person (see note on Mat. 20. b.) some one man would perhaps venture his life, yet for any man else, though he were a righteous and just man, you shall hardly find any man that will be so liberal or friendly as to part with it.

8. But God commendeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us.]

8. Whereas God's expression of mercy was infinitely above this proportion of any the most friendly man; for he, when he had nothing in the object to move him to it, when we were so farre from being good or just men, from being mercifull or pious in the highest degree, that we were profane customary sinners, he then sent his Son Christ to die for us, to obtain, by the shedding of his own blood, pardon of sinnes for us upon our reformation and amendment.

9. Much more then, being now a justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.]

9. And having thus dyed and done so much for us, a.

when we had nothing (but our sins) to provoke him to, or make us capable of any mercy, much more now being thus far restored to his favour, and by that ransome of his paid for us, redeemed out of that certain ruine that attended us, we shall, if we be not wanting to our selves, in performing the condition required on our parts, be actually delivered from all effects of his displeasure in another world: and for the effecting of this, great advantage we receive from him also, viz. by his resurrection from death, and mission of his spirit, which tends more to our actuall justification then his death did, (see c. 4. 25.)

10. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Sonne, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life.]

10. For if God, when men lived and went on in sinne and hostility against him, were pleased to have such favourable thoughts toward them (see note on Mat. 5. m.) if by the satisfaction wrought for our sins by Christ, we were then thus farre restored to his favour, that he was pleased to propose unto us free and easie conditions of mercy in the Gospell; if he then used us so friendly, as not to præclude the way of salvation, but called us to repentance, with promise of pardon for all past sinnes, upon our coming penitently in unto him; much more easie will it be, and agreeable to that former essay of his goodness to us, now (after he hath gone so farre with us) to rescue us out of the power and danger of our sins, by his rising from the dead, c. 4. 25. and sending that Spirit by which he was raised, to raise us up to a new life. And this also, as far as concerns Gods part, is wrought for us.

* glory, καυχώμενοι † reconciliation, καταλλαγὴν

11. And not onely so, but we also * joy in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the † atonement.]

11. And yet this is not all, but having received these benefits of reconciliation, (and promises of future salvation, if we be not wanting to our selves) we have now ground even of the greatest joy, and confidence, and dependence on God in all that can befall us in this life (see v. 3.) through this same Christ Jesus, who having made peace between God and us, and tendred us such easie conditions of mercy now under the Gospell, hath also given us a title to all consequent acts of friendship and kindnesse, which can be received from God, so that all that now befalls us, being for our good, is consequently matter of rejoycing to us.

* passed through to, (or, on) διῆλθεν εἰς

12. b Wherefore, as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sinne, and so death * passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.]

12. From all which the conclusion is, that as by Adam's disobedience to that Law given to him under the penalty of death, (that is, by eating the forbidden fruit) sin came into the world, and death or mortality by sinne, and being come in seized not onely on Adam, to whom 'twas particularly and expressely threatned (In the day that thou eatest thou shalt die the death) but upon all meer men also, that were after born, because all were sinners, that is, born after the image and likeness of Adam, (that was now a sinner, and had begotten no childe in his innocence.) b.

† or, was not imputed, while there was, for the Kings's MS. reads οὐκ ἐλογεῖτο

13. For untill the Law sinne was in the world: but sinne † is not imputed when there is no Law.

14. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come.]

13, 14. For after Adam's time, before Moses, or the time of giving the Law, men sinned; and though it be true, that sinne is not charged to punishment, but when there is a Law to forbid it expressly under that penalty, and therefore it might be thought that sinne without the Law would not bring in death into the world, yet, by the parity of reason, all men, being Adam's posterity, and begotten after the image or similitude of a sinfull parent, v. 12. (and God being supposed to rule the world still, after the manner that he had first explicitely revealed) that death that was once come in did lay hold on all that posterity of Adam from that time till Moses (when the Law was given, and death again denounced expressly) though they sinned not against a Law promulgated under that penalty, or in that high presumptuous degree that Adam did. In which thing Adam is in the comparison the opposite member to Christ the Messias to come; for as death, which was the punishment of Adam's sin, past on all men, begotten after the similitude of sinfull Adam, though they committed not that particular sin of eating the apple, against which the death was expressly decreed and threatned, that is, though they sinnd not so presumptuously against a Law promulgated under that penalty; so justification and eternal life belongeth not only to those who were, as Christ, perfectly just, who have never lived in sinne, but cometh upon all others, who having not obeyed after the likenesse of Christ, doe yet return unto him by faith and repentance, and then for the future obey sincerely, though not exactly, and so in some manner and degree resemble Christ, as children doe parents, and as mankind did Adam.

15. But not as the offence, so also is the free gift: for if through the offence of one, many * be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift † by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.]

15. In this place there ought to be, in ordinary manner of writing, another member of the period, answerable to the beginning of it v. 12. (the 13th and 14th verses being certainly to be read as in a parenthesis) after this manner, For as, &c. So, &c. But the Apostle having insisted on the first part of the comparison thus farre, and finding that the grace in Christ rose much higher then the condemnation in Adam, he is fain to forsake that comparison, and to rise above a comparison, and conclude not with a [So] but with a [Not onely so, but much more] thus, The gift communicated from Christ to believers, is farre greater then the punishment communicated from Adam to his posterity as sinners; for as they were begotten after the similitude of laps'd Adam, and so were all sinners, as well as Adam, so probably were they as great sinners in other kinds, as Adam was in that, but these to whom the mercy in Christ belongs, are not righteous in such a degree, as well as Christ.

* died, ἀπέθανον

† through grace, that grace of one, is χάρις τῆς τοῦ ἑνὸς

16. And not * as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the † judgment was by one to condemnation; but the * free gift is of many offences unto justification.]

16. And as in respect of the likenesse, the advantage is on Christ's side of the comparison, believers being not so like Christ in degree of holinesse, as they were like Adam in degree of sinne, so again for the sinne for which Christ wrought atonement, the advantage is great again, on Christ's side above Adam's: and not only as by Adam, so by Christ; but the benefit farre exceeded the hurt, for indeed the charge or enditement (see note on ch. 3. b.) and consequently the sentence that was on occasion of one sinne, did naturally and by the same reason belong to the condemnation of all others, that were born after his image, sinners as well as he, but the gift that was brought in by Christ, pardon for all new creatures, was upon occasion of many sinnes, and to the justifying of those that were not righteous, as Christ, no nor as Adam, but had been guilty of more then one, even of many sinnes. And this makes the comparison again very uneven: for if as sinne was a meanes to bring condemnation into the world, so the same or some other one sinne had been the occasion of bringing mercy in, and pardon had been wrought for that one sinne, and no more, or for those that should for the future perfectly and exactly obey, then the comparison had been equall; but the sinnes that occasioned the mercy, and have their parts in the benefit of this justification, are many sinnes, and the persons that should receive it, not righteous in that degree as Christ was, and that makes the comparison uneven.

17. For if by Adam's sinne in that one kind, death came into the world, and through that one mans loynes, and by the parity of reason, that death was entailed upon all his posterity, as being born after his image, and guilty of other sinnes, though not of that special kind; then in like manner, or rather indeed much more, they that believe on Christ, that receive and make use of that (most rich) grace, & righteousnesse of Christ, that is, are holy, gracious, and righteous too, though not in his degree, and so are, according to this Evangelical way, capable of this justification, shall, by the resurrection of Christ, and by his living and interceding forever for them, be sure to reigne with him.

18. * Therefore, as by the offence of one † judgment came upon all men to condemnation: even so by the rightousnesse of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.]

18. To conclude therefore, as by one Adam's offence v. 12, and 16. sentence came on all offenders, that is, upon all meer sonnes of Adam, to condemnation; so by the righteousnesse of one, God's gift of mercy in Christ v. 17. is come on all men, Gentiles as well as Jewes, to justification, that is, to the accepting them as just (though they formerly lived in never so sinfull a course,) if they imitate the righteousnesse of Christ by sincere renovation.

* therefore, I say, Ἄρα οὖν

† the sentence was v. 16.

19 For as by one man's disobedience * many were made sinners; so by the obedience of one shall † many be made righteous.]

19. For as by Adam's one act of eating the forbidden fruit, against which death was threatned, all his posterity, as such, and (much more) all that sinn'd in any other kind, that is, all meer men in the world, were subjected to that punishment, death, which was then pronounced only against the eating of that: so by Christ's having performed exact perfect obedience, and then suffered death in our stead, or to make satisfaction for us, all men, even the Gentiles themselves, that shall come in to Christ, and perform sincere, faithfull obedience to him, shall be justified, (though they be not perfectly just) and accepted by him.

20. As for the Law (that was given by Moses) that came in by the by, as it were, to give men the more convincing clear knowledge of duty and sinne, and so though it were not designed to that end (see Theophylact) yet by consequence it became a means to aggravate and enhanse sinne (see note on Mat. 1. k.) to render it more exceedingly criminous, by being against a promulgate Law; and that again is a means of making the mercy now in the Gospel to be farre a greater mercy to the Jewes, to whom Christ and the Gospel were first sent.

21. That as we visibly see the great power and authority of sinne over men, by the punishment it hath brought on them, as is evident by death's seizing upon all; so it may be as visible, what a royall illustrious power there is in the mercy of Christ over sinne, in respect of this new way of justification by Christ, even to take away all its condemning and reigning power from it, by granting pardon and forgivenesse of, and victory over it, through Jesus Christ our Lord, and all this to Gentiles as well as Jewes.

Annotations on Chap. V.

2. V. 9. Justified] Having formerly given the notion at large of δικαιοῦν to justifie, Note on c. 3. b. all that is here necessary to be added, will be by way of enquiry whether the passive δικαιωθέντες, being justified here, be only a Nominal or Real passive, that is, whether it only note the action, as farre as concerns Christ's part, in meriting, and obtaining Gods pardon and acceptance for us, and God the Fathers part, in admitting sinners to pardon, giving them place of repentance, which is no more, in effect, but the offering pardon, and acceptance on the conditions of the Gospel; or whether to this action of the Father, and Christ, it farther superadde the reception thereof in the patient, the actual partaking of it. For these two (somewhat distant) notions, the word is capable of, either 1. that we are, as farre as belongs to God's and Christ's part, justified, (the price being paid by him, and accepted by his Father) and that if we be not now actually so, 'tis through our own default, our non-performance of the condition; or 2. that we have the benefits of Christs death bestowed and conferred actually on us, pardon of sinnes, &c, that is, are actually justified.

Δικαιωθέντες

That

That the former is the meaning of the word here, may appear 1. by the generall drift of this chapter, which is to set out the love of the Father and of Christ towards us, v. 8, &c. God commendeth his love towards us, &c. where therefore the matter is determined to that which Christ doth for us toward our Justification, that is, to his death, the sole meritorious cause of it, without looking to that which is extrinsecall to it, our performance or non-performance of the condition, which is required on our parts to make us capable of the benefit thereof, that having been formerly (and often) mention'd, v. 1. δικαιωθέντες ἐκ πίστεως being justified by faith: 2dly, by that which is said v. 8. we being yet sinners Christ died for us; where 1. his dying for us is all one with our being justified by his death, as appears by the circumstances of the Context, the 8, 9, 10. verses compared together; and 2. by sinners meaning habituall grosse sinners, which is also expres'd by ἀσθενῶν, v 6. not weak, but sick, even to death (see 1 Cor. 8. Note b.) 'tis certain that to them, continuing such, actual justification belongs not; so again v. 10. We, when we were enemies, were reconciled to God by the death of his son; where as death is all one with blood, so is reconciled to God with justified, and that belongeth to enemies, while they are such, to whom yet we know by many other places, that actual pardon, and so actual justification or reconciliation belongs not: 3dly, by comparing of this justification by Christ with the condemnation by Adam, v. 16. where Adams condemnation belonging to all, the justification spoken of must be that also which belongs to all, and so not the actual pardon, which doth not belong to all, or to any, but those who perform the condition. All which being supposed, 'tis from other places manifest, that some condition there is required of us to make us capable of this benefit of the death of Christ, the non-performance of which is that which restrains and limits the number of men actually justified to a farre narrower compasse then that which is here spoken of; and this condition being to be performed by us, by the means of the resurrection and grace of Christ, 'tis therefore said c. 4. 25. that he rose again for our justification, that is, to make us capable of those fruits and benefits of Christs death, as well as died for our sinnes. See Note on c. 3. h.

b. διὰ τοῦτο

V. 12. Wherefore] Διὰ τοῦτο here being an illative form, and most fitly rendred Wherefore, makes it here necessary to enquire, how that which followes is inferr'd from what went before; and the satisfying that enquiry will prepare for a right understanding of the remainder of this chapter. The former chapters had maintained the right of the Apostles preaching to the Gentiles, by shewing that God was an impartial Judge both to punish impenitent, foul sins, and to reward penitence and good living, without any partiality, whether in Jew or Gentile, c. 1. and 2. but most discernibly c. 2, 6. to the end. Then in the third chapter follow objections against this, and answers to them; and on occasion of one of them, taken from the sinfulness of the Gentiles, is inserted a discourse of Justification under the Gospel, shewing how that is no way prejudiced by past sinnes, if they be sincerely forsaken, nor hindred by want of Circumcision and Mosaical observances. And this is insisted on, and exemplified, in both parts, by the story of Abraham chapter 4. and then brought home to all believers in the former part of this chapter. From all which, as so many premisses, or mediums of probation, the conclusion is here inferr'd, but withall by comparing the Justification by Christ with the Condemnation by Adam, farther confirm'd and illustrated in the remainder of this chapter, viz. that the mercy of God under the Gospel belongs unlimitedly, or indefinitely, to all sorts of men, the Gentiles as well as Jews. For the discerning of which, it will be needfull, that through the remainder of the chapter, an Emphasis be laid on the universal forms of speech, τὸν κόσμον the world, and πάντας ἀνθρώπους all men, v. 12. ἐν κόσμῳ in the world, v. 13. οἱ πολλοὶ the many, and εἰς τοὺς πολλοὺς toward the many, v. 15. and again εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους toward all men, twice v. 18. and οἱ πολλοὶ the many, twice v. 19. By all and each of which are meant in the widest latitude, without exclusion of any, all mankind, to whom (Jewes and Gentiles) the mercy and life introduced by Christ belongeth, (only on condition of new life required of them) as the condemnation or death in Adam did to all his posterity. The other difficulties in the chapter, (caused by elipses, v. 15, 16, 18. by a parenthesis of two verses, 13, 14. by a comparison, divided one part from the other by that parenthesis, and the second part of it rising higher then the former, and so necessarily changed from the form of a comparison or equality, to that of an argument à minori ad majus, from the lesse to the greater) are explicated in the Paraphrase, and need not here farther be insisted on.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase.

1. What therefore doe we say? Shall we continue in sinne, that grace may abound?

2. God forbid: How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

1, 2. Now therefore for that objection (against our doctrine of the Gentiles being taken in by God,) intimated ch. 3. 8. Doe we affirm indeed, what we are accused to affirm, that men may live, and continue, and go on in sin, that by that means the mercy of God, which we acknowledge is illustrated by his looking graciously on the Gentile sinners, may be, in like manner, the more set out by pardoning the greater sinners continued and gone on in by us Christians? God forbid we should make any such conclusion, or make any such use of the doctrine of God's mercy to sinners, which we know was designed only to call and draw the Gentiles out of their sinfull courses to sincere reformation, upon this promise of pardon for what is past, Act. 17. 30. on condition of future amendment, and not to encourage them to continue, or go on one minute longer in that course, or to flatter them with hope of impunity if they did. Certainly our doctrine is of a farre distant making from this, and our profession of Christianity most strictly obliges us to the contrary; for our baptism is a vowed death to sin, and therefore we that are baptized must not in any reason return to, or live any longer in it; our being baptized Christians obligeth us not to return to this mire again, after we are thus washed.

* What therefore doe we say? Τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν † or, Let us continue, for the King's MS. reads Ἐπιμένωμεν

* As many of us as have died to sin, how shall we. Οἵτινες ἀπεθάνομεν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ

3. Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death?

4. Therefore we are buried with him by baptisme into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newnesse of life.

3, 4. 'Tis a thing that every Christian knows, that the immersion in baptisme referres to the death of Christ, the putting the person baptized into the water denotes and proclaims the death and buriall of Christ, and signifies our undertaking in baptisme, that we will give over all the sins of our former lives (which is our being buried together with Christ, or baptized to his death) that so we may live that regenerate new life (answerable to Christ's resurrection) which consists in a course of all sanctity, a constant Christian walk all our daies.

5. For

5. For if wee have in baptiſme undertaken to forſake ſin, and to be dead to the motions of it, and ſo to imitate Chriſt's death, and thereby have been ſo graffed into Chriſt, that we are become the ſame tree with him, partaking of the ſame juice with that root, we are then under the very ſame obligation to imitate and tranſcribe his reſurrection, by our new regenerate lives, which are our firſt reſurrection, and the lively reſemblance, and pourtraiture of his.

5. For if we have been planted together in the likeneſſe of his death, we ſhall be alſo in the likeneſſe of his reſurrection;]

6. Reſolving this with our ſelves, that as this was one end of Chriſt's ſuffering for our ſins, and dying upon the croſſe, that he might give us example to doe ſo too, (ſee Tit. 2. 14) to crucifie, that is, forſake, our former courſe of life; ſo our forſaking of ſin, and conforming our ſelves to his crucifixion, which in baptiſme we undertake, obliges us to the mortifying of every ſin, ſo farre that we no longer yield any obedience to it, that is, neither willingly indulge to any preſumptuous acts, nor ſlaviſhly lie down in any habit or courſe of ſin.

6. Knowing this, that our old man‡is crucified with him, that [a] the body of ſinne might be deſtroyed, * that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſin.]

‡ was crucified together, συνεσταυρώθη

* that we ſhould no longer τοῦ μηκέτι

7. For as a man truly dead, is freed from the authority of all thoſe that in life-time had power over him; ſo he that is dead to ſin (in this figurative ſenſe, wherein I now ſpeak) is freed from the power of ſin acting formerly in him, and conſequently he that hath, by being baptized into Chriſt, ſo farre undertaken to accompany Chriſt in his death, as really to die unto ſin, muſt demonſtrate himſelf to be freed from the power of it, muſt not permit it to live in him, that is, himſelf to be acted by it, or elſe he doth quite contrary to his undertaking.

7. For he that is dead, is † freed from ſin.]

† abſolved δεδικαίωται

8. And if we ſincerely perform our part in this, if we imitate Chriſt in his death, that is, die to ſin, forſake and never return to it again, then we muſt alſo remember, that it is another part of our Chriſtian faith, and undertaking of our baptiſme, to imitate Chriſt in his reſurrection, to riſe to new and holy and godly, lives (and then we have grounds of believing that we ſhall together with him, or after his example, have a joyfull reſurrection to eternall life. But upon no other terms but theſe doe we expect or believe any good from Chriſt.)

8. Now if we be dead with Chriſt, we believe that we ſhall alſo live with him:]

9 This being it for which we have a copie in Chriſt's reſurrection alſo, as well as in his death, viz. So to riſe to new life, as never to return to our old ſins again; as his was a reſurrection that inſtated him on an eternal life, never to come under the power of death again.

9. Knowing that Chriſt being raiſed from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.]

10, 11. For as when he died for our ſins, he died once, never to undergo that death again, but when he roſe from death he was immediately inſtated, not into one ſingle act of life (ſo only, as it might be truly ſaid, he was once alive after death) but no more; but into an immortall endleſſe life, a life co-immortal with the Father, God eternal: ſo muſt we, after that double example, of his death, and reſurrection, account our ſelves obliged by our baptiſme (which accordingly is not wont to be reiterated) ſo to die, to forſake ſin, as that we need never die any more, die one final death, never reſume our former courſes again and on the other ſide, for our new Chriſtian life, to take care; that that be eternal, no more to return to our ſins again, then we think Chriſt or God can die again, but perſevere in all virtuous and Godly living, according to the example and precepts of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who died and aoſe again on purpoſe to raiſe us up to this kind of new life, never to die again.

10. * For in that he died, he died unto ſinne once; † but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

11. Likewiſe reckon ye alſo your ſelves to be dead indeed unto ſinne; but alive unto God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.]

* For that which died, died unto ſin once for all, ὃ γὰρ ἀπέθανεν, τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ἀπέθανεν ἐφάπαξ

† but that which liveth, liveth ὃ ζῇ, ζῇ τῷ

12. And ſo you now ſee what your Chriſtian duty is, whatſoever we are calumniated to affirm, that whereas your fleſh hath many ſinfull deſires, which, if they be obeyed, or obſerved, will ſet up a kingdome or dominion of ſin in you, make you ſervants and ſlaves to ſin, you are moſt ſtrictly obliged to take care that ſin get not this dominion, that you obey it not in yielding to, or ſatisfying the luſts or prohibited deſires of your bodies.

12. Let not ſinne reigne therefore in your mortal body, that ye ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof.]

13. But in ſtead of offering up, or preſenting your members unto ſin, as inſtruments or weapons to do what ſin would have done, ye muſt conſecrate your ſelves unto God, as men that are raiſed unto new life, and therefore are fit to do him ſervice, and your bodies as active and military inſtruments of performing to him all the obedience in the world.

13. Neither *yeeld ye your members as inſtruments of unrighteouſneſs unto ſin; but yeeld your ſelves unto God, as thoſe that are alive from the dead, and your members as inſtruments of righteouſneſs unto God.]

* preſent your members unto ſinne, weapons of unrighteouſneſs, but preſent-ye yourſelves παριστάνετε μᾶλλον ἑαυτοὺς τῷ μὴ ὄντα δούλους τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ, ἀλλὰ παραστήσατε

14. 'Twere the vileſt thing in the world for ſin to have dominion over you, who are now no longer under the weak unefficacious pædagogy of the Law (which could onely forbid ſin, and denounce judgement, but never yeeld any man that hope of mercy on amendment, which is neceſſary to the working reformation on him, or checking any ſin that men are tempted to) but under a kingdome of grace, where there is pardon for ſin upon repentance, and ſtrength from heaven to repent, and ſo no want of ability or encouragement to amend our lives. (See note on Mat. 5. g.)

14. For ſin ſhall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the Law, but under grace.]

15. From hence again ſome carnall men are ready to collect matter of ſecurity in ſin: For, ſay they, if now under the Goſpell there be pardon allowed for ſin, and not condemnation (as it was under the Law,) for every wilfull ſin we have committed, why may we not ſecurely ſin? This is the unreaſonableſt concluſion, and detorſion of this doctrine, very diſtant from the truth of it, which is, that this pardon for ſin belongeth not to them that ſecurely go on in ſin, but onely to the penitent, and is offered to men that are ſinners, on purpoſe, that in hope of pardon upon returning, they may timely do ſo, and not that they may the longer continue in their courſe, which is the moſt abhorred uſe of God's mercy imaginable.

15. What then? ſhall we ſin, becauſe we are not under the Law, but under grace? God forbid.]

16. 'Tis a known thing, that he that delivers himſelfe up to any man as a ſervant or ſlave, and actually ſerveth or obeyeth him, is to be accounted his ſervant, and to receive wages from him: and ſo it muſt be among you, if ye give your ſelves up to any ſinne, to ſerve that, ye are ſlaves to ſin, and muſt expect the wages of that ſervice, eternal death: as on the other ſide, if ye deliver your ſelves up to ſerve God in obeying his commands, ye will be reputed his ſervants, and have the wages that belong thereto, eternall life. See 2 Tim. 4. note a.

16. Know ye not, that to whom ye † yeeld your ſelves ſervants to obey, his ſervants ye are to whom ye obey, whether of ſin, unto death, or of obedience, unto righteouſneſs?]

† preſent παριστάνετε

17. But 'tis a great mercy of God to you, that having been formerly the ſervants of ſin, having lived and gone on ſo long in the courſe of ſinne, ye have now cordially obey'd that ſummary of Chriſtian doctrine, to the beliefe and practice of which ye were delivered up, and ſolemnly conſecrated in your baptiſme: ſee note on Matt. 9. d.

17. But God be thanked, that ye were the ſervants of ſinne, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine * which was delivered to you.]

* unto which ye were delivered up, εἰς ὃν παρεδόθητε

19. I [b] ſpeak after the manner of men, becauſe of the infirmity of your fleſh: for as you have yeelded your members ſervants to uncleanneſs and to iniquity unto iniquity, even ſo now yeeld your members ſervants to righteouſneſs unto *holineſs.]

19. I ſhall expreſs this by an ordinary reſemblance, or I will deal with you after the mildeſt and moſt eaſie equitable manner, require no more then any man would in reaſon require, becauſe of the weakneſs of your fleſh, which I cannot expect ſhould bear too much ſeverity, or elſe too high expreſſions: All that I ſhall ſay, is, that you will but have the ſame care of ſanctity now, be but as diligent to obey the precepts of Chriſt, and by that means aſpire to ſanctification, as you were formerly induſtrious in the ſerving of your luſts and unlawfull vile affections, to act all the villany in the world. This in all reaſon I muſt require of you, and ſhall require no more (though according to ſtrict juſtice I might require greater care to ſecure your life and ſalvation, then to ruine and damne your ſelves ye had expreſs'd.) b.

* ſanctification ἁγιασμός

20. For when ye were ſervants of ſin, ye were †free from righteouſneſs.]

20. For (by way of ordinary diſtributive juſtice) when ye ſerved ſin, righteouſneſs or piety (ye know) had no whit of your ſervice; why then ſhould ſin now have any of your ſervice, when you have delivered up your ſelves to righteouſneſs or Chriſtian life, to be obſervant followers of that? why ſhould ye not now abſtein as ſtrictly from all ſin, as then ye did from all good? ſure this the rules of juſtice will oblige you to.

† free men to righteouſneſs, ἐλεύθεροι τῇ δικ.

21. What fruit had ye then in thoſe things, whereof ye are now aſhamed? for the end of thoſe things is death.]

21. And this will be much more reaſonable, if ye conſider the nature of your former ſins, in your own experience of them, how little fruit, or benefit, or ſatisfaction they brought you at the very time of enjoying them, and how nothing but ſhame at the preſent remembrance of them, and how certain the concluſion is, that they will bring death upon you; whereas the ſerving of Chriſt on the other ſide will be matter of joy and pleaſure at the preſent, matter of comfort and confidence after, and will bring ſalvation at the end.

* have ye your ſanctification, v. 19.

22. But now being made free from ſin, and become ſervants to God, * ye have your fruit unto †holineſs, and the end everlaſting life.]

22. But now having given over the ſervice of ſin, (vowed your ſelves never to go on farther in that courſe) and undertaken the ſervice of God, bring forth fruit, ſuch as by which ſanctification may daily encreaſe in you, and as may reap, for it's crown, eternall life.

23. For the wages of ſin is death: but the gift of God is eternall life, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.]

23. For according to the Law, and ſo ſtill to every impenitent, the reward or payment of every deliberate ſin, all that it brings in to him by way of ſtipend, is death: but the mercy that is in the Goſpell reach'd out to all penitents, is eternall life, as it is now purchaſed and contrived, by what Chriſt Jeſus our Lord hath done and ſuffered for us in the Goſpell.

And perhaps 1 Cor. 9. 27. κωπιδῶ τὸ σῶμά μου, I beat, or cuffe, my ſelf, for ſo the matter of the diſcourſe before, concerning the uſe of Chriſtian liberty, doth moſt encline us to interpret it. And all this ſeems in S. Paul to be an imitation of the Hebrews form of ſpeech, among whom the word עצם that ſignifies a body, frequently ſignifies no more then being or identity, ſo that עצמו his body ſignifies no more then idem ipſe, the ſame he. So Joſ. 9. עצמכם your body, that is, your very ſelves, or as the Targum reads it, קריבכון your neer kinſman, and Job 2. touch עצמו his body: the Targum reads לגרמה himſelf, the former touches having been on

As for the

Of which ſort many other phraſes there are in Scripture, which ſignifie the ſame thing, ſome of them referring to the new life, to which the change is made, others to the old courſe that is forſaken. I ſhall ſet down ſome of them; to repent, to be converted, to be transformed, to be waſhed, to purifie hands and heart, Jam. 4. 8. himſelf, 1 Joh. 3. 3. to be purified with the laver of regeneration by the word, Epheſ. 5. 26. ſprinkled in the heart from an evil conſcience, Heb. 10. 22. to be renewed in the mind, to put on the new man, created according to God, Epheſ. 4. 24. a new creature, to be born of the Spirit, Joh. 3. 6. to be ſpiritually-minded, (in oppoſition to being born of the fleſh, and minding fleſhly things,) to be regenerate, or to be born again, or of water and of the Spirit, to be begotten by the word of truth, Jam. 1. 18. to be enlightned, to revive, and be riſen with Chriſt, to riſe from the dead, to be circumciſed with the circumciſion not made with hands, Col. 2. 11. the circumciſion of the heart, (explained by putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh, that is, carnal ſins,) to eſcape from the wicked generation, and ſimply to eſcape, or to be ſaved, Act. 2. 47. to go out from among them, to grow ſober, 2 Tim. 2. 26. to awake out of ſleep, Rom. 13. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 34. and (in a ſpecial Scripture-ſenſe of the phraſe) to be reconciled unto God, 2 Cor. 5. 20. that is, to lay down all that averſation and enmity which they had had formerly to God, or by their wicked works (Col. 1. 21.) had expreſs'd toward him, to put off all filthineſs, Jam. 1. 21. works of darkneſs, Rom. 13. 12. the old man, &c. Epheſ. 4. 22, 24. and to put on Chriſt, Gal. 3. 27. to depart from evil, 1 Pet. 3. 11. to deny, or renounce, ungodlineſſe, Tit. 2. 12. to draw nigh unto God, Jam. 4. 8. to become ſervants to God, Rom. 6. 22. to take Chriſts yoke upon us, Mat. 11. 29. to yield our members weapons of righteouſneſſe to God, Rom. 6. 13. to be freed from the law (that is, the empire or dominion or command) of ſin, Rom. 8. 2. to ſuffer in, or to, the fleſh, 1 Pet. 4. 1. that is, judged and executed to carnal fleſhly actions, ſo cuſtomary among men, that they may live according to God (in imitation of, or compliance with him) to the Spirit, after a ſanctified ſpirituall manner. So the world being crucified to me, and I to the world, Gal. 6. 14. mortifying by the Spirit the actions of the body (Rom. 8. 13.) and the members on the earth, to be dead to ſin, Rom. 6. 11. and here being planted together with Chriſt in the likeneſſe of his death, v. 5.

b. Ἀνθρώπινον λέγω

V. 19. Speake after the manner of men] Ἀνθρώπινον λέγειν here is thought to ſignifie his taking expreſſions out of common life, διὰ ἀδένειαν τ σαρκὸς ὑμῶν, in reſpect of the weakneſſe of their groſſe, or carnal unſtandings, his uſing Allegories and figures; and as before he had uſed proofs from ſacred types, the death and reſurrection of Chriſt applied to his purpoſe of mortification, and new life, ſo now proceeding to vulgar known ſimilitudes, taken from maſters, and ſervants, as Gal. 3. 15. And thus is may fitly be interpreted; But it may otherwiſe be rendred alſo, that the weakneſs of their fleſh be taken in reſpect of ſtrength to perform God's will, (and not to underſtand Paul's language) and conſequently the ἀνθρώπινον λέγειν be, ſpeaking, or requiring from them, moſt moderately, by way of condeſcenſion to their infirmities, requiring the leaſt that in any reaſon could be required of them, ſo as ἀνθρώπινος 1 Cor. 10. 12. ſignifies that which hath nothing extraordinary in it, that which is common among men; ſo S. Chryſoſtome there, ἀνθρώπιν & τυτέςι μικρὸς, βραχὺς, σύμμετρος, it ſignifies little, ſhort, proportionable to their ſtrength. So in Demoſthenes contr. Midiam, ἀνθρωπίνη & μετρία σκέψις, an humane and moderate conſideration. So in Horace lib. 2. humanè commoda ſignifies parum commoda, little profitable. And if it be here conſidered how moderate and equitable a propoſal it is which here followes, 'twill be acknowledged that this of ἀνθρώπινον λέγω in this notion, may very well be the form to introduce it.

CHAP. VII.

2. 1. But to that which is laſt ſaid ch. 6. 23. of eternal life to be had by Chriſtians through the Goſpel, ye are ready to object, Yea, but Chriſtians of your inſtitution doe not obſerve the Law of Moſes, and ſo ſin contemptuouſly againſt God, that gave that Law to Moſes; nay, not onely the Gentiles, that are converted to Chriſtianity, are by you permitted to neglect circumciſion, &c. and not to become Proſelytes of juſtice Act. 15. but, which is more unreaſonable, the converted Jewes are taught by you that they need not obſerve the Law of Moſes (ſee Act. 21. 21. and note b. on the title of this Epiſtle) and then how can the Goſpel help them to eternall life that thus offend againſt the preſcript Law of God? To this third head of objections the Apoſtle in the beginning of this chapter gives a perſpicuous anſwer, affirming (that which was now neceſſary to be declared, though perhaps formerly it had not been affirmed to the Jewes at Rome) that they were now no longer obliged to obſervance of the ceremonies of the Moſaical Law: Which being to Paul revealed from heaven Epheſ. 3. 3. among the many revelations which he had received, 2 Cor. 12. 7. he thus declares to them, preparing them firſt by ſhewing the reaſonableneſſe of it, by the ſimilitude of an husband and a wife; My brethren of the ſtock of Abraham, ye cannot but know the quality or nature of thoſe lawes which give one perſon intereſt in, or power over another, (for I ſuppoſe you inſtructed therein, by frequent hearing, and reading of the books of Moſes) that any ſuch law ſtands in force, as long as the perſon that hath that intereſt liveth.

Know ye not, brethren, (for I ſpeak to them that know the Law) that * the a law hath power over a man as long as he liveth?]

* or the law of the Man hath power, or force, ὁ νόμος κυριεύει τ ἀνθρώπε

2. For it is known of any married woman, that by the conjugal law ſhe is obliged to cleave to the husband as long as he lives; but upon the husband's death the conjugal law, which is founded in his life, is dead alſo, and ſo the wife is abſolutely free, the law of matrimony hath no force upon her, ſee Gal. 5. 4.

2. For the woman which hath an husband, is bound by the Law to * her husband, ſo ſong as he liveth: but if the husband be dead, ſhe is looſed fom the law of her husband.]

* the living husband, τ ζῶντα ἀνδρὸς

3. And this is ſo farre from being a nicety, that indeed matters of the greateſt importance depend upon it; For if while her busband liveth, ſhe yield her ſelf to any other, ſhe is acknowledgedly guilty of adultery: but if her husband be dead, ſhe may freely marry any other man, and live with him conjugally, and be as innocent in ſo doing, as if ſhe had never had former husband.

3. So then, if while her husband liveth, † ſhe be married to another man, ſhe ſhall be called an adultereſſe: but if her husband be dead, ſhe is free from that law; ſo that ſhe is no adultereſſe, though ſhe be married to another man.]

† ſhe be to another γε γένηται ἑτέρῳ

b. 4. And thus (my brethren, even thoſe of the Jewes that are believers in Chriſt) the Law is through Chriſt dead to you alſo, (and not only to the Gentile believers, Act. 15.) and ſo ye alſo are freed from the obligation of the Law, that is, as it were dead to it, that ye may now according to the laws of marriage, be ſafely joyned and eſpouſed to another, viz. to that Chriſt, whoſe reſurrection from the dead ſhewes him to be alive, that ſo ye may live in conjugal affection and obedience to him, and being made fruitfull by his Spirit we may, as wives that live with their husbands, bring forth all holy Chriſtian actions to the honour and praiſe of God.

4 Wherefore, my brethren, ye alſo b are become dead to the Law by the body of Chriſt, that ye * ſhould be married to another, even to him who is raiſed from the dead, that we † ſhould bring forth fruit unto God.]

* may be to another γενέσθαι ἑτέρῳ † may

c. 5. This, while we lived under the pædagogie of the Law, was not done by us, (which is one reaſon of aboliſhing it, Chriſt now giving precepts of inward purity, in ſtead of thoſe externall ordinances, and giving his Spirit to enable to perform them, over and above what was under the Law.) For when we were under thoſe carnal ordinances, though all ſinfull practices were forbidden by that Law, and ſo were rendred more criminous by being prohibited by a promulgate law, yet our ſinfull deſires and affections, that propoſed thoſe objects which were thus forbidden, that law had no power to mortifie and ſubdue, and ſo notwithſtanding that law, thoſe ſinfull affections were obeyed and yielded to in our members, and ſo brought forth that ſad fruit, obligation to puniſhment eternal, and that was all the good we reap'd by the Law.

5. For when we were in the fleſh, the * motions of ſins, which † were by the Law, × did work in our members † to bring forth fruit unto death.]

* affections παθήματα † are by × were wrought ἐνηργεῖτο † ſo as to bring forth fruit, εἰς τὸ καρποφορῆσαι

2. But now we are freed from the Law as that (beſide the morall precepts) contain'd alſo thoſe carnal external performances, (ſee Mat. 5. g.) that obligation being cancelled by which they were due, ſo that now in ſtead of being outwardly circumciſed, and in our lives impure, we muſt think our ſelves moſt ſtrictly obliged to ſet to the performing of that real ſubſtantial purity which was ſignified by the legal obſervances of circumciſion, &c. ſerving Chriſt in new life, and Evangelical obedience, (ſee ch. 8. 1.) in lieu of that external bloody obedience, which the Law of

6. But now we are delivered from the Law, that being dead wherein we were held, that we ſhould ſerve in newneſſe of ſpirit, and not in the oldneſſe of the letter.]

Moſes

Moſes (written of old by God's appointment, and ſo here called the writing or the letter) did then require of all Jewes. See note on Mat. 5. g.

* ſay we, ſee ch. 4. a. † nay but I had not known the ſin d'ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔγνων τὴν ἁμαρτίαν • coveting, luſting

7 What * ſhall we ſay then? Is the Law ſin? God forbid. † Nay, [d] I had not known ſinne but by the Law: for I had not known * [e] luſt, except the Law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not covet.]

7. But here again it is objected to us, that by thus arguing we lay charge and blame upon the Law, that it is ſin, or the cauſe of ſin, contenting it ſelf with that external performance of the ceremony, and not exacting the inward purity of us. To this I anſwer by way of deteſtation of that calumny, of which our doctrine is perfectly guiltleſſe: No ſure, we lay no ſuch thing to the charge of the Law, we ſhould be moſt unjuſt, if we did. For the Law hath done its part, given us knowledge that the very deſires of the heart are ſins (and that diſtinctly in the tenth commandement) which I had not known, had not the Law diſtinctly told me that it was ſo, and ſet circumciſion as an emblem of that duty of mortifying all carnall deſires. d. e.

† receiving advantage ἀφορμὴν λαβοῦσα • coveting or luſting † us

8. But ſin † taking occaſion by the commandement, wrought in me all * manner of concupiſcence: for without the Law ſin † was dead.]

8. But the Law having indeed onely given me the prohibition, and that ceremony to fence it, and no more, and in this particular of coveting, not ſo much as denouncing any preſent legal infliction upon the commiſſion of it, the cuſtomary ſins of men, ſeeing there was no puniſhment aſſigned to this ſin (that is, being only forbid by the Law without any annexation of puniſhment) took an advantage by the Lawes only prohibiting, and not puniſhing this ſin, and ſo perſwading me, that the external ceremony of circumciſion (which was commanded under penalty of exciſion) would ſerve the turn, without any more, invaded me, and wrought in me all inward impurity; which as it would not ſo probably have been able to doe, if the Law, that mentioned this prohibition, had fortified it with denunciation of puniſhment (as in other caſes) or if indeed the truſting on the external performance, the privilege of being circumciſed, had not given men ſome ſecurity and confidence, that nothing ſhould be able to doe them hurt, (deprive them of the favour of God, that were thus circumciſed) ſo would it not have been neer ſo criminous, if it had not been diſtinctly prohibited by the Law. For it is a known truth, that the criminouſneſſe and puniſhableneſſe of any act ariſeth from its being prohibited by ſome law.

* I indeed lived ἐγὼ ἔζων

9. For * I was alive without the Law once; but when the commandement came, ſin revived, and I dyed.]

9. The people indeed of the Jewes lived formerly without the Law, (ſee note d.) that is, before the promulgation of it; but as ſoon as the Law was given, the ſin of diſobeying a promulgate Law became greater, and the diſobedient Jew more puniſhable by reaſon of the Law, and no way the better for it: As when a man is ſick, and doth not know his condition and danger, the Phyſician coming tells him of both, and preſcribes him a ſtrict diet for the future, if he will recover; but he obſerves not his preſcriptions, continues intemperate, and ſo dyes under the Phyſicians hand, and in ſpite of his care.

10. And the commandement, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.]

10. And the Law, which was meant to keep them ſinleſs, and ſo to bring them to life, being not obeyed, did in the iſſue of it bring onely death on them.

† advantage v. 8.

11. For ſin taking † occaſion by the commandement, deceived me, and by it ſlew me.]

11. For the Law preſcribing circumciſion under penalty of exciſion, but not preſcribing the inward purity under that threat (nor denouncing any preſent judiciall puniſhment upon the commiſſion of the contrary ſin) but onely prohibiting it, and no more, ſinne took advantage by this impunity of the Law, and firſt ſeduced me to inward impurity, and then, by occaſion of the commandement which forbad it, and ſo made it criminous, inſnared and wounded me to death.

* So that ὥστε

12. * Wherefore the Law is holy, and the commandement holy, and juſt and good.]

12. And ſo the objection v. 7. was a groundleſs objection, for though the Moſaicall Law were the occaſion of ſin (or were made advantage of by ſin) yet it was not the cauſe, and ſo ſtill that Law is holy, (and the Commandement againſt coveting, holy) juſt, and good: firſt holy) whither that ſignifie piety toward God, or purity from all allowance of impurity; and ſo ſecondly, juſt, in allowing no manner of injuſtice; and thirdly, good, as requiring charity to others, and ſo no manner of colour or tincture of ill in it, (onely 'twas not ſo highly perfect in any of theſe reſpects, 'twas not fill'd up to ſo high a pitch, as is now by Chriſt required of us.)

† Hath then that which is good become to me death? τὸ οὖν ἀγαθὸν ἐμοὶ γέγονε θάνατος; * to me μοι

13. † Was that then which is good, made death unto me? God forbid. But ſinne, that it might appear ſinne, working death * in me by that which is good; that ſin by the commandement might become exceeding ſinfull.]

13. Was therefore this good Law guilty of death to me? was it the cauſe of bringing it on me? No, not ſo neither, but ſin was that onely cauſe, which is guilty of all. And ſo (ſee note on Mat. 1. k.) this is a means of ſetting out ſin in its colours, that it works deſtruction to men by that which is good, and ſo ſin it ſelf is by this means extremely aggravated, and making this uſe of the Law, it becomes extremely or ſuperlatively ſinfull, or the Law ſhewes me what a ſinfull thing ſinne is, which will not be repreſs'd by the Law.

14. For we know that the Law is ſpiritual, but I am carnall, [f] ſold under ſinne.]

14. And the reaſon why the effect of the Law is ſo contrary to what was intended by it, is this, that the Law is ſpirituall, and not performable by a carnall man, but the carnality of men (ſold under ſinne, that is, habituall ſlaves to ſinne, ready to do all that it bids them, though the Law never ſo diſtinctly prohibite) that is the cauſe of all. f.

† know γινώσκω

15. For that which I doe, I † allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I.]

15. For ſuch men as I now ſpeak of, carnall men, v. 14. though they are taught their duty by the Law, yet do they not by the dictate of their underſtanding or conſcience, that which they do, it is not that which in conſent to the Law they approve, but that which by their conſcience, directed and inſtructed by the Law, they hate and diſlike, that they do.

16. If then I do that which I would not, I conſent unto the Law, that it is good.]

16. And this very thing is an argument, that the Law is acknowledg'd to be good, that they diſlike that which they do in diſobedience to the Law, they never commit any prohibited evill, but their conſcience accuſes and ſmites them for it.

* But now Νυνὶ δὲ † no longer οὐκέτι

17. * Now then it is † no more I that do it, but ſinne that dwelleth in me.]

17. And ſo 'tis not the whole they that commits ſinne, or they as they are led and inſtructed by the Law (and ſo the Law ſtill is vindicated from the charge v. 7.) but it is their carnality reſiſting the Law, or ſin having gotten power over them, and ſo carrying them in deſpight of the Law, and conſcience admoniſhing the contrary.

* good dwelleth not ἀγαθὸν οἰκεῖ † to me μοι, * or, not to do that which is good, for the King's MS. reades τὸ δὲ κατεργάζεσθαι τὸ καλὸν

18. For I know that in me (that is, in my fleſh) * dwelleth no good thing: for to will is preſent † with me, but * how to perform that which is good, I finde not.]

18. For in men whoſe affections are not mortified by the ſpirit of Chriſt, but carnally nally diſpoſed, or led by their own corrupt cuſtomes, 'tis not the law, or knowing their duty that will doe any good on them. To approve indeed, or like that which is good, the law enableth them, but the carnal affections do ſtill ſuggeſt the contrary, and carry them in deſpight of the prohibitions of the law.

19. And this is clear by the experiment, for they do not perform that good, which, as the law commands, ſo they conſent to be good; but the evill which they conſent not to be good, and which the law tells them they ſhould not do, that they do.

19. For the good that I would I doe not, but the evil which I would not that I do.]

20. Which plainly argues the truth of that which was ſaid v. 15. and 17. (and is full anſwer to the objection againſt the law, v. 7.) that the law is farre from being guilty of their ſin, and that 'tis not they by the duct and dictate of the law, or their own conſcience guided by the law, that do evill; but carnality or cuſtome of ſinne, that hath got ſuch a ſway or power over them.

20. Now if I doe that I would not, it is no more I that doe it, but ſin that dwelleth in me.]

21. By this then you may diſcern the law, and the goodneſs, and the energy or force of it, that when carnality moves men to evill, the minde illuminated by the law enclines them to good; or, that evill, when it is repreſented to them, findes them inclined to the contrary.

21. I finde then * a law, that when I would do good, evill is preſent with me.]

* the law that, or, in that τὸν νόμον, ὅτι

22. For according to the underſtanding, or ſuperiour faculty (contrary to the carnal or bodily part of them) they are pleaſed with all thoſe things that the law of God is pleaſed with.

22. For I † delight in the law of God, after the inward man.]

† have the ſame delight with, συνήδομαι τῷ

g. 23. But there is another commanding power in the members, which ſets it ſelf in direct oppoſition to thoſe dictates of the law in the mind, which in carnall men, v. 14. gets the better of the day, carries them captive ſlaves, to doe what the fleſh requires to have done by them.

23. But I ſee another law in my members, warring againſt the law of my minde, and bringing me into captivity to the law of ſin which is in my members.]

24. This is a ſad condition, (the very ſtate of a carnal man under the law,) and out of which the law cannot reſcue any man, nor from the deſtruction that attends it.

24. O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death?]

25. Yet, bleſſed be God, by the grace and ſtrength of Jeſus Chriſt, ch. 6. 23. there is a way to get out of this curſed eſtate; 1. pardon to every penitent ſinner, which may encourage any to break off this eſtate of ſin; and 2. grace and ſtrength in Chriſt, to perform what God in Chriſt will accept, that is, ſincere, though not perfect, obedience, (the thing affirmed v. 6. and reſumed at the beginning of Chap. 8.) So then the concluſion of this digreſſion from v. 7. to this place, is, that the bare knowledge of the Law of Moſes doth only direct the underſtanding, what is the duty; which notwithſtanding, the carnal man accuſtomed to his own waies of ſin, may think fit ſtill to go on in them, and ſo (though one and the ſame perſon) doth two things at once, with his underſtanding he ſerves the law of God, is delighted and pleaſed with thoſe things wherewith that is delighted, and yet at the ſame time with the fleſh ſubmits to the ſuggeſtions and cuſtomary actions of the fleſh, and falls into ſins directly contrary to the ſuggeſtions of his conſcience, and the law in it, and this is juſtly rewarded with death, ch. 6. 23.

25. I thank God th ough Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. So then * with the mind I my ſelf ſerve the law of God, but with the fleſh the law of ſinne.]

* the ſame I with my mind, αὐτὸς ἐγὼ τῷ νοΐ

Annotations on Chap. VII.

a. ὁ Νόμος κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου

V. 1. The law hath power over——] The conſtruction and meaning of theſe words, ὁ νόμος κυριεύει ἀνθρώπου ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ, which are commonly rendred, the law hath power over a man as long as he liveth, is ſomewhat uncertain; and for the determining of it, the firſt thing to be conſidered, is the deſigne and matter of the diſcourſe in this chapter, which is diſcernibly this, To vindicate his doctrine, (charged on him Act. 21. 21. it is not certain whether then truly or no, but without doubt now profeſs'dly taught by him) that the Judaical law was aboliſhed by the death of Chriſt, Epheſ. 2. 15, 16. Col. 2. 14. and ſo now was not obligatory to a Jew. This he now thinks fit to declare to the Jewiſh Chriſtians at Rome, as in the former chapters he had vindicated the liberty of the Gentiles from the obligation of it to them, and juſtified his preaching the Goſpel to them, both which together did, by way of interpretation, and neceſſary conſequence, contain under them this of the obligingneſſe of the Law to a Jew. For the Law of the Jewes commanding a ſtrict ſeparation from the Gentiles, all that were not their Proſelytes, and circumciſed, and Paul and other the Apoſtles being Jewes, their converſing with, and preaching to the Gentiles, could not be allow'd upon any ſcore, but that of the abrogation of the Jewiſh Law, which accordingly was of neceſſity to be revealed to S. Peter in a viſion, Act. 10. (and ſo ſeems to have been to S. Paul Epheſ. 3. 3.) before he durſt preach to Cornelius, who though a Proſelyte of the Jewes, yet was not a Proſelyte of their Covenant, or righteouſneſs, that is, was not circumciſed. This abolition of the Law to you, that is, to his brethren the Jewes v. 4. and to the ἡμᾶς us v. 6. that is, to S. Paul, and thoſe he ſpeaks to, that is, to them that know the law, v. 1. and ſo ſtill the Jew-Chriſtians at Rome, is here evidently proclaimed, v. 4. and 6. And therefore in all probability that muſt be the importance of theſe words, which may moſt directly prepare, and contribute to the inferring of that concluſion. To which end firſt it is neceſſary, that ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ muſt be rendred, as long as he (the man, not as it) liveth. This appeareth by the inſtance v. 2. by which that which is ſaid v. 1. is exemplified, ἡ γὰρ ὕπανδρος γυνὴ τῷ ζῶντι ἀνδρὶ δέδεται νόμῳ, The woman which hath an husband is by the (conjugal) law bound to the living husband; where the husband is the perſon whoſe life is conſidered in this caſe, who as long as he lives, hath power over his wife, and ſo long the wife by law is bound unto him, but if he die, ſhe is free, &c. By this alſo it is manifeſt in the ſecond place, that the man which is meant in the latter part of this firſt verſe, as long as he liveth, cannot be the perſon on whom the Law hath power or force, but ſome other, who by law hath power and authority veſted in him. For it is apparent, v. 2, and 3. that the life or death of the perſon under ſubjection is not the thing taken into conſideration, and if it were, it would not tend to the inferring of the deſigned concluſion; for the Jewes could not be ſuppoſed to be dead, but the Law that had power over them, and though v. 4. the word ἐθανατώθητε you are put to death may make that ſeem poſſible to be here meant, yet the contrary being ſo evident by the whole drift of the diſcourſe, it is certain that ἐθανατώθητε τῷ νόμῳ there, you are put to death to the law, muſt be interpreted as a figurative ſpeech, to ſignifie the law is put to death to you; as when καταργεῖσθαι ſignifies to be made ἀργὸν void, to be evacuated or cancelled, and ſo is all one with being put to death, (and is ſo uſed Epheſ. 2. 15. καταργήσας νόμον, having cancell'd the law, all one with ἐξαλείψας having blotted it out, Col. 2. 14. and προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ having nailed it to the croſſe) we read of the woman v. 2. κατήργηται ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου τοῦ ἀνδρός, which would literally be rendred, ſhe is cancell'd from the law of the husband, but indeed ſignifies, the law of the husband is cancell'd, or ceaſeth to be in force, ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ

force, to her; and ſo v. 6. κατηργήθημεν τῷ νόμῳ, we are cancelled to the law, ſignifies, the law is cancelled to us. Which being thus farre deduced, it remaineth in the third place, that the former part of the words, ὁ νόμος κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, muſt either thus be rendred, the law of the man hath power, or force, or remains valid (joyning τοῦ ἀνθρώπου of the man to νόμος law, not to κυριεύει hath power,) or elſe (becauſe the word ἀνθρώπου is otherwiſe placed, being affix'd to κυριεύει, and indeed κυριεύει properly governs a Genitive caſe, and is uſed with one, Lu. 22. 25. juſt as here it will be, if τοῦ ἀνθρώπου be governed by it,) it is poſſible that the word man, which is the he in the latter part, may be implied and underſtood (though not ſpecified) in the word ὁ νόμος law, thereby ſignifying not Law in generall, but more ſpecially any law which conveyeth a right, or giveth power or dominion to one man over another; according to the primitive notion of νόμος law, from νέμω diſtribuo, noting an aſſignation, or diſtribution of every mans right unto him, (and ſo νόμος ver. 2. evidently ſignifies the conjugal law, which ſubjects and binds the wife to the huſband) for of ſuch a law it will be truly ſaid, that κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, it is in validity, or force, over the man, (meaning the ſubject,) as long as he, that is, the owner, or the Lord, liveth. That this is the true ſenſe and aime of the words is unqueſtionable, and the latter way of expreſſing it ſeems to be the moſt commodious and eaſie, though the former may poſſibly be it, (by an eaſie and ordinary ὑπάλλαγη:) and then νόμος τοῦ ἀνθρώπου the law of the man will be a fit phraſe to ſignifie any ſuch law, wherein mens intereſts are concerned, Municipall, or humane laws, which are in force till they be aboliſhed legally.

Νόμος τοῦ ἀνθρώπου

b. Ἐθανατώθητε τῷ νόμῳ

V. 4. Dead to the Law] That ἐθανατώθητε τῷ νόμῳ you are dead to the Law ſignifies the Laws being dead to them, being aboliſhed, having no power over them, hath been ſaid, (Note a.) and may farther appear by v. 6. where the ground of their freedome from the Law is expreſs'd by ἀποθανόντος ἐν ᾧ κατειχόμεθα that being dead by which we were held; where the law being by an ordinary proſopopœia (as when ſin is ſaid to reigne c. 6. 12.) uſed for a perſon, is ſaid to be dead, (and to be nail'd to Chriſts croſſe, Col. 2. 14.) and ſo under the fiction of a perſon, is more fitly anſwerable to the Husband, whoſe death frees the Wife from all obligation to him, that ſhe may lawfully marry and ſubject herſelf to any other; and ſo in like manner may Jewes to Chriſt, upon the abolition of their Law. As for the διὰ τοῦ σώματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ, by the body of Christ, by which the Judaical Law is aboliſhed, that ſure notes the crucified body, the death of Chriſt, and is accordingly expreſs'd in this very matter Epheſ. 2. both by ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ αὐτοῦ by his fleſh, v. 15. and διὰ τοῦ σταυροῦ by the croſſe, ver. 16. and ſo Col. 2. 14. by προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ nailing to the croſſe.

διὰ τοῦ σώματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ

c. Ὅτε ἦμεν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ

V. 5. Were in the fleſh] That ὅτε ἦμεν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, when we were in the fleſh, ſignifies the Judaical ſtate under the Law, appears by the whole diſcourſe in this chapter, which is of the ſtate of men conſidered under the Law (ſee Note d.) and particularly by the oppoſition here betwixt this, and κατηργήθημεν ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου, we are freed from the Law. For ſo 'tis manifeſt the oppoſition ſtands, For when we were in the fleſh —— But now we are freed from the Law, —— And it is thus ſtyled in oppoſition to ἐν πνεύματι ὄντι, being in the ſpirit, uſed for them that have received the Goſpel, and are partakers of the grace which is afforded there, to which that they have not attained, but are only under the Pædagogie of the Law, they are only in the fleſh, have no other but that weak and corrupt principle of their own nature (which is ſo prone to carnality) abiding in them. And thus it is uſed c. 8. 8. They that are in the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God: but you are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit, if ſo be the ſpirit of God dwelleth in you, that is, if, as ye are outwardly profeſſors of the faith, baptized Chriſtians, ſo ye are ſincerely ſo, ſuch as in whom the holy Spirit of God may vouchſafe to inhabit, which will not abide when unrighteouſneſſe cometh in. And accordingly Chriſtianity is call'd the law of the Spirit of life, ch. 8. 2. and here v. 6. the newneſs of the Spirit, in oppoſition to the oldneſs of the letter, the Moſaical Law. And a peculiar propriety there is in this phraſe for this matter in many reſpects; Firſt, in reſpect of the nature of the Moſaical precepts, which were external, Waſhings, Circumciſion, bodily reſts, &c. (all which are ſeated in the fleſh) and ſo proportionably carnal promiſes, and threats; whereas the precepts of Chriſt go deeper to the mind and ſpirit, require the purity of that, and accordingly are back'd with ſpiritual promiſes and terrors: Secondly, in reſpect of the aſſiſtance that Chriſt affords toward his obedience, by giving of his ſpirit, to aſſiſt (if it be not grieved and reſiſted) our ſpirits, in oppoſition to which the ſtate under the Law having none of that ſtrength joyned with it, may juſtly be called the being in the fleſh. To which may be added, that one eminent effect of the Spirits deſcending, was the commiſſionating of the Apoſtles for their office of preaching to the Gentile world remiſſion of ſinnes upon Repentance, and in oppoſition to that, the Law allowing no place for repentance for any preſumptuous ſin, but inflicting preſent puniſhment on the offender, that ſtate may be fitly ſtyled being in the fleſh. Mean while as there is a difference betwixt the weakneſs of the natural eſtate conſidered without any other aid, then what the Law affordeth, and the ſinfulneſſe of carnal acts and habits continued and indulged to, and on the other ſide, betwixt the ſtate of a baptized Chriſtian, afforded the grace and ſtrength of Chriſt, and of him that makes uſe of that grace, and leads a pure Chriſtian life; ſo the being ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, in the fleſh, differs from living, or walking κατὰ σάρκα, after, or according, to the fleſh, and on the other ſide, being in the Spirit, or being in Chriſt, from walking after the Spirit: All which phraſes are to be met with here, and in the next chapter. Here and ch. 8. 9. we have being in the fleſh, and κατὰ σάρκα ὄντες, they that are after the fleſh, v. 5. that is, under the Law, not elevated above the fleſh, or reſcued out of the power of it by Chriſt; and c. 8. 1. walking after the fleſh, (and ſo v. 4. and 12. all in the ſame ſenſe) for going on in a carnal courſe, obeying and following the fleſh in the luſts thereof. And ſo c. 8. 9. being in the Spirit, or having the Spirit of Chriſt, and being in Chriſt Jeſus, v. 2. all to the ſame ſenſe, of having the Spirit of Chriſt beſtowed on us, which as it enableth, ſo it obligeth us to walk, and lead a Chriſtian life, and if we doe ſo, then that is περιπατεῖν κατὰ πνεῦμα walking after the Spirit, v. 1, and 4. All which muſt thus nicely be diſtinguiſhed, or elſe they will be apt to betray to ſome miſtake.

d. Οὐκ ἔγνων

V. 7. I had not known] It is an ordinary figure to ſpeak of other men in the firſt perſon, but moſt frequent in blaming, or noting any fault in others; for then by the putting it in this diſguiſe, faſtning it on ones own perſon, it is more likely to be well taken by them to whom it belongs. So ſaith S. Chryſoſtome of this Apoſtle, Ἀεὶ τὰ φορτικὰ ὅταν τοῖς ὀικείοις προσώποις γυμνάζῃ, when he mentions things that are any way grievous, or likely to be ill taken, he doth it in his own perſon. And S. Hierome on Daniel, Peccata populi enumerat perſonâ ſuâ, quod & Apoſtolum in Epiſtola ad Romanos facere legimus, Confeſſing the ſins of the people, he doth it in his own perſon, which we read practiſed by the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Romans, that is, moſt probably, in this place. Thus when 1. Cor. 4. 4. S. Paul had ſpoken in his own perſon, I know nothing by my ſelf, but hereby I am not juſtified, he tells them plainly v. 6. that he had in a figure transferred theſe things unto himſelf for their ſakes, that they might not be puff'd up, as counting ſuch ſchemes and figures as theſe, the moſt profitable & efficacious on the Reader. Thus the ſame Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 6. 12. All things are lawfull to me, but all things are not expedient, that is, thoſe things which are by you look'd on as indifferent, if they be yielded to, may be very hurtfull in you; and 1 Cor. 13. 2. If I have all faith, and have not charity, that is, if ye want charity to your other gifts. So Gal. 2. 18. If what I have deſtroyed I build the ſame again, I make my ſelf a tranſgreſſor, that is, whoſoever doth ſo, or whenſoever ye do ſo, it muſt needs be a fault in you. Thus Rom. 3. 7. If the truth of God have abounded by my lie unto his glory, why am I alſo judged as a ſinner? Which words are certainly the perſonating of an impious objecter, which ſpeaks or diſputes thus, not of the Apoſtle himſelf. And the ſame ſcheme or faſhion of ſpeaking or writing is very frequent among all Authors. And that it muſt be ſo taken here may appear by theſe evidences. Firſt by v. 9. Ἐγὼ δὲ ἔζων ποτὲ, I indeed once lived without the law, which can with no appearance of truth be affirmed of Paul's perſon who was born and brought up a Jew in the knowledge of the Moſaical Law, and muſt therefore be the perſonating of a man firſt conſidered without, then with the Law, to whom becauſe the Law is given in the ſecond perſon, μὴ ἐπιθυμήσῃς, Thou ſhalt not covet, v. 7. therefore he to whom it is given is in the following verſes fitly ſet down in the firſt perſon, I, being relative to the thou antecedent: and ſo Marcus Eremita, De baptiſm. p. 921. E. ὅπω καὶ τὰς λοιπὰς, &c. Thus doe men pervert other Scriptures. Read the chapter from the beginning, and you ſhall find that S. Paul ſpeakes not of himſelf after his baptiſme, ἀλλὰ τὸ τῶν ἀπίστων Ἰουδαίων πρόσωπον λαμβάνει, but aſſumes the perſon of unbelieving Jewes. And ſo Theophylact diſtinctly affirmes, ἐν τῷ οἰκείῳ προσώπῳ ἀνθρωπίνην φύσιν λέγει, In his own perſon he ſpeakes of humane nature; and again on v. 15. he ſpeakes of men before Chriſts coming, though he ſets it in his own perſon. Secondly, by the ſeverals affirmed in this chapter, which cannot belong to S. Paul. For that Paul was at the writing of this a reformed, regenerate perſon there is no doubt, and they which would have it ſpoken by him in his own perſon, make that advantage of this chapter, by reconciling thoſe things which are here mention'd to a regenerate ſtate. But if we compare the ſeverals which are here mention'd with the parts of a regenerate mans character, given by the ſame Apoſtle in other places, we ſhall find them directly contrary. Here in the 8th verſe, he ſaith, that ſin had wrought in him all manner of concupiſcence, whereas of the regenerate man it is affirmed, Gal. 5. 24. they that are Chriſts have crucified the fleſh with the affections and luſts. Here in the 9th verſe 'tis ſaid, ſinne revived, and I died; whereas of the regenerate man 'tis ſaid c. 6. 2. How ſhall we that are dead to ſinne, live any longer therein? Here in the 14th verſe 'tis ſaid, I am carnal; whereas of the regenerate man 'tis affirmed c. 8. 1. that he walketh not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit. Here again in that 14th verſe 'tis ſaid, I am ſold under ſinne, (of which ſee Note f.) whereas of the regenerate 'tis affirmed c. 6. 18. that he becomes free from ſinne, and becomes the ſervant of righteouſneſs. Here v. 20. ſinne dwelleth in me, and κατεργάζεται accompliſheth, worketh, that which I will not, like not with my mind, or conſcience, and ſo 'tis ſaid ver. 23, 24. that the law in the members carries him into captivity to the law of ſinne, and, who ſhall deliver him from this body of death? and ſo that he is under the power of the law of ſinne and death, that he obeyes the law of ſinne v. 25. whereas c. 8. 2. of the regenerate 'tis affirmed that the law of the ſpirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus hath made him free from the law of ſin and death. Nothing can be more contrary and unreconcileable to a regenerate ſtate in theſe ſo many particulars, then what is here affirmed of the ἐγὼ I, the perſon here thus repreſented. And indeed unleſſe ſinning againſt Conſcience be the only way of alleviating (and not aggravating) ſinne, it is impoſſible that the doing that ill he would not, and the not doing that good he would, v. 19, 20. can be deemed a fit ingredient in the character of a regenerate man: 'tis certain this was, in the perſon of Medea, made, by the Heathens, the higheſt pitch of villany, to ſee and like that which was good, and doe the direct contrary (ſee Note f.) and therefore cannot in any reaſon be thought to be the Apoſtles deſcription of a regenerate man, or good Chriſtian.

Μετεσχημάτισα

Ἔζων ποτὲ

1b. Luſt] That by ἐπιθυμία coveting here is meant the ſin forbidden in the tenth commandement of the Decalogue, appears by the end of the verſe. But how the Apoſtle can truly ſay, that he had not known it had been a ſin, if the Law had not told him it was, will be all the difficulty. To which may be anſwer'd, 1. that the Apoſtle doth not ſpeak particularly of himſelf (ſee Note d.) but in the perſon of a Jew, or man in generall, and then it is not onely true of this, but of all other the Commandements (of which this one may be ſet as the inſtance) that the knowledge of ſin is by the promulgation of the Law, that forbids it. But then there may from the Jewiſh doctrine appeare ſome reaſon why the Apoſtle ſhould rather inſtance in this commandement, then any other. For the Jewes before and under Chriſt's time, ſeeing that there was no puniſhment judicially appointed for thoughts or deſires, whether unclean, or of getting any thing from their neighbours, had reſolved this to be no ſin, and conſequently that the tenth commandement was but a Moral proverbial eſſay or counſel, like that of Menander,

e. Ἐπιθυμία

——— εὖ δὲ βελόμης,
Δαιμόνιε, ἐπιθύμησον ἀλλοτρίας ποτὲ,

Not to covet ſo much as a pin of anothers, but not any precept of God, or of nature, affirming that, unleſſe it be in caſe of the worſhip of falſe gods, no ſin is committed by the bare will, without ſome actual commiſſion following it. Thus ſaith Aben-Ezra in the beginning of the Decalogue, Kimchi on Pſal. 66. 18. and Joſephus concerning Antiochus's deſigned ſacrilege, Τὸ γὰρ μηχάνῃ ποιῆσαι τὸ ἔργον βουλευσάμενον, οὐκ ἔστι τιμωρίας ἄξιον, to have conſulted only, and not acted, doth not deſerve puniſhment. According to which S. Paul might well ſay of any Jew brought up under ſuch Maſters, that he had not believed Coveting to be a ſin, had not the more exact conſideration of the direct words of the Law aſſured him that it was.

V. 14. Sold under ſin] The phraſe ſold under ſin ſignifies as it doth, when 'tis ſaid of Ahab, that he was ſold to work wickedneſs, or of the revolting Jewes 1 Mac. 1. 15. as a ſlave or captive ſold from one Maſter, one ſin, to another: and ſo here 'tis joyned with σαρκικὸς a carnal man, and is farther expreſs'd by the character of him following, that the evil that he would not, that he doth, and the good that he would, that he doth not; juſt like that which the Poets ſay by way of aggravation of that wicked condition of Medea, the witch,

Ὅστις μεγίστων αἴτιος κακῶν βροτοῖς,

It is the author of the greateſt evils unto men, ſo 'tis by Plutarch ſet down for the greateſt aggravation; for citing that in the Tragedy of Aireus,

* Lib. 4. de dict. & fact. mem.

§. Νόμος ἐν μέλεσι ἀντιστρατεύομαι.

V. 23. Another's law] For the underſtanding the ſenſe of the Apoſtle in this whole chapter, 'tis uſefull to compare this paſſage with Gal. 5. 17. The ſpirit luſteth againſt the fleſh, and the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, &c. Which is thought to be parallel, and to import the ſame ſenſe with this. Of theſe two places therefore it muſt firſt be remembred, that the difference which is between theſe Texts ariſeth not from the diſtinction between the ſpirit in the one, and the Law of the mind in the other, nor conſequently is it to be placed betwixt the luſting of the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, ſimply taken, and the warring of the Law in the members againſt the Law in the mind, as that is no more than a warre; but betwixt the former ſimply taken, or with the addition of the ſpirit luſting back again againſt the fleſh, or with the circumſtances mentioned Gal. 5. 17. (none of which imply a yielding to the luſts of the fleſh) and the latter, taken with that addition, here mentioned, of bringing the man into captivity to the Law of ſinne. And this indeed is all the difference that can be aſſigned betwixt a regenerate and unregenerate man, that in the one the ſpirit prevailes, in the other the fleſh is victorious; that is, the will of the one is led by the ſpirit, chooſes and acts the deeds of the ſpirit (the will of God) but the will of the other followes the carnal dictates, τελεῖ ἐπιθυμίαν σαρκὸς performes the will of the fleſh, and ſo falls under the condemnation which belongs to ſuch: ἡ δὲ τοιαύτη κατάστασις ὑπόκειται πάντως τῇ κολάσει, πᾶσα γὰρ ἡ κατ' ἐνέργειαν ἁμαρτία ὑπὸ κρίσιν ἔρχεται, ſaith Dorotheus διδασκαλ. 1. ſuch a ſtate is altogether ſubject to puniſhment, for every ſinne that is acted is under hell, and ὑπὸ κρίσιν εἰσὶ πάντες ἐφ' ὅσον ἐνεργοῦσιν, they are all under hell, in that they act. And if it be ſuggeſted, that the conſequents in the place to the Galath, ἵνα μὴ ἃ ἂν θέλητε ταῦτα ποιῆτε, ſo that what things you would, ye do them not, ſeem parallel to ἃ ὃ θέλω ποιῶ, what I would that I do not, Here, v. 15, 19. and ſo neither of them ſignifie this carnal ſtate; to this it muſt be anſwered that theſe two are not parallel, but on the contrary that paſſage, ἃ ὃ θέλω ποιῶ, what I would, I do not, is really equivalent with the captivation to the Law of ſinne, (as by the whole Context appears) though indeed there is ſome obſcurity in it, which till by the Context it be explained, may miſlead one to think otherwiſe. The truth is evident, theſe two things are conjoyned in both thoſe verſes, what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that I do, v. 15. and the good that I would, I do not; but the evil that I would not, that I do, v. 19. And being ſo conjoyned in the ſame perſon, the ſubject of the diſcourſe, and but equivalent phraſes with thoſe other of captivation to the Law of the members, and being carnal, and ſold under ſinne, the meaning muſt be, that he neglects to doe the good that the Law of God and his own mind dictates to him, and doth commit, on the contrary, the evill, that according to his mind and the declaration of God's willin the Law he diſliketh and hateth, and ſo evidently acteth in oppoſition to conſcience, commits the ſins of the fleſh willingly and knowingly, non obſtante the contrary dictate and ſolicitation of conſcience. But then this is much more than is contained in that luſting of the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, Gal. 5. (ſtyled by Nemeſius περὶ φύσ. c. 37. μάχη τοῦ λογισμοῦ καὶ ἐπιθυμίας, the ſtrife of the reaſon and luſt, στάσις καὶ φιλονεικία, a diſſention and emulation betwixt them.) For as there the fleſh luſteth, ſo the ſpirit luſteth too, and it is not affirmed of either of them, that it leads the other captive. All the event that is taken notice of is, ἵνα μὴ ἃ ἂν θέλητε ταῦτα ἃ ἂν θέλητε, ποιῆτε, that what you would that you do not; which being the effect of the double ἐπιθυμία or luſting, muſt have ſuch a ſenſe proportioned to it as ſhall be founded in that double ἐπιθυμία, and that can be no other than this, that θέλειν to will be taken in the ſenſe of ἐπιθυμεῖν to luſt, and ſo not for an act of the elective faculty which to one matter is but one, either chooſing or refuſing, but for an act of ſome kind of woulding, or appetite, and that is conſtantly twofold to the ſame matter; the fleſh hath one woulding, and the Spirit hath another: the fleſh deſires, and would have a man yield to the pleaſant propoſal, the Spirit would have him reſiſt it; and both theſe are evidently mentioned in that verſe, one called the luſting of the ſpirit, and the other of the fleſh. From the contrariety of which it neceſſarily followes, that whatſoever [illegible] matters of this nature, good or evil) any man [illegible] he doth againſt one of theſe wouldings, and con[illegible]ently he doth not ποιεῖν ὃ θέλει, do what he would. Whereas if θέλειν were taken for the elective faculty, which we ordinarily call the will of man, it is evident every voluntary agent doth ποεῖν ὃ θέλει, do what he will, his actings follow his will or choice, and whenſoever he doth not ſo, he acts by violence, or rather is acted, and to that is required, that he be conquered by ſome other; and yet of any ſuch conqueſt there is no mention in that place of Gal. 5. 16. which mentions onely an ἐπιθυμία luſting equally on both ſides: and ſo the reſult is, that Gal. 5. 16. there is no more ſaid but this, that which way ſoever a man act, he acts againſt ſome ἐπιθυμία deſire, or luſting of his; if he act according to the fleſh, he acts againſt the ſolicitation of the mind and ſpirit; and if he act according to the ſpirit, he doth not τελεῖν ἐπιθυμίαν σαρκὸς, but acts contrary to all its importunities: and he that doth the latter of theſe is far from being led captive to the law of ſinne, which is in the fleſh, or members, being indeed a conqueror over it, though he have not eradicated or extirpated it. For the yet fuller clearing of this, take the plain importance of thoſe two verſes, and ſet them ſeverally, and then you will ſoon ſee how no correſpondence there is between them. Gal. 5. 16. the Apoſtle ſets down this plain Aphoriſme, that the deſires of the fleſh and ſpirit are one contrary to the other, and conſequently that to whichſoever of them the Will of man conſents, it muſt needs reject the other. But Rom. 7. 15, 19. the Apoſtle ſets down the ſtate of a particular man, which deliberately chooſes and acts the evil which he knowes he ſhould not do, or which the Law of God in his own mind tells him diſtinctly he ought not to do; as when Nemeſius περὶ φύσ. ἀνθρ. ch. 33. ſpeaks of an intemperate man, that he is κρατούμενος ὑπὸ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας, καὶ πεφύκοτων ταύτην μὴ μόνοι καὶ κατ' προαίρεσιν, ἀντιβαίνει γὰρ ἐπ' ἀυτῷ ἡ προαίρεσις τῇ ἐπιθυμίᾳ, his election is contrary to his luſt, yet he is overcome by his luſt, and acts what that ſuggeſts. And ſo S. Auguſtine confeſſ. l. 8. c. 5. Lex peccati eſt violentia conſuetudinis, quâ trahitur & tenetur etiam invitus animus, The law of ſinne (in that place) is the violence of cuſtome by which the mind is drawn and held againſt its inclination; plainly ſignifying the ſtate of the perſon ſpoken of Rom. 7. to be that of an habitual ſinner. What agreement now is, or can there be betwixt theſe two verſes? 'Tis true indeed, that they which do what they hate, and would not, may well be ſaid not to do the things which they would, and ſo are included in thoſe words, Gal. 5. 17. but that proves not that thoſe places Rom. 7. and Gal. 5. are parallel; becauſe Rom. 7. 'tis determined to doing the ill which he hates, whereas Gal. 5. the ſpeech lyes open to both parts, to the doing the good which the fleſh hates, as well as the evil which the fleſh loves. Now this being ſpoken of men indefinitely, is very diſtant from defining it on one ſide, and applying it to a particular perſon, as it is evidently done, Rom. 7. when he ſaith, Non quod volo bonum, hoc ago, ſed quod odi malum, illud facio, I do not the good that I would, but the evil which I hate that do I: and conſequently, though the fleſh's diſliking the virtuous actions, and liking the vitious, be perfectly reconcileable with walking in the ſpirit, and ſo with a regenerate ſtate, and ſo the place to the Galatians, (though not ſpoken particularly of the actions of regenerate men, but delivered as an Aphoriſme indefinitely, appliable to mens actions whether good or evil) may be appliable to the actings of ſuch; yet the place to the Romans being determined to the facio malum, I do the evill, and that evidently againſt the dictate of the mind, the reſiſtence of the conſcience, is ſtill unreconcileable with that ſpiritual walking, and ſo with the regenerate ſtate, Rom. 8. 1. Another notion there is, which ſome of the ancients have had of the words ὃ μισῶ τοῦτο ποιῶ, what I hate that I do, viz. that it ſhould belong only to * deſires or thoughts unconſented to. So S. Jerome, and S. Auguſtine alſo l. 1. Cont. 2. Epiſt. Pelag. c. 10. being perſwaded by ſome Doctors, and a conceited advantage againſt the Pelagian hereſie, to retract in ſome part what before he had aſſerted, and ſpoken the moſt for of any man. And of this opinion is * Methodius alſo, "Ὃ μισῶ, ποιῶ, ſaith he, that which I hate, I do, is to be underſtood οὐκ ὅτι τῇ πράξει τὸ φαῦλον, not of the doing that which is ill, ἀλλ' ὅτι τῇ μόνῃ ἐνθυμήσει, but only of thinking, or imagining; and again, ὅτι λογισμῶν ἀοικείων ἡμῖν παρεισφαμένων πλεονάκις, καὶ ἐμφανταζόντων ἡμᾶς πρὸς ἃ μὴ θέλομεν, of aliene imaginations which frequently make incurſions on us, and bring us to phanſy things which we would not, adding, ὃ δὲ ἐφ' ἡμῖν ὅλως τὸ ἐνθυμεῖσθαι ἢ μὴ ἐνθυμεῖσθαι κεῖται τὰ ἄτοπα, ἀλλὰ τὸ χρῆσθαι ἢ μὴ χρῆσθαι τοῖς ἐνθυμήμασι· κωλῦσαι μὲν γὰρ μὴ ἐμπίπτειν εἰς ἡμᾶς τοὺ λογισμοὺς ὁ δύναμαι —— μὴ πεισθῆναι μέντοι ἢ μὴ χρῆσθαι αὐτοῖς δύναμαι, for it is not wholly in our power, to think or not to think abſurd things, but either to uſe or not to uſe ſuch thoughts or phanſies; for we cannot hinder thoughts from coming upon us, but we can chooſe whether we will be perſwaded by them, or uſe them. And again, Πῶς ὁ Ἀπόστολος τὸ κακὸν —— ἐποίει, εἰ μὴ περὶ τῶν ἀθυσίων ἐνθυμημάτων ἔλεγεν; How did the Apoſtle do evil, if he ſpake not of abſurd thoughts? This interpretation of S. Paul's words, if it were ſecure from being any farther extended then the authors of it deſigned, could have no hurt or noxiouſneſs in it, it being certainly true, that every regenerate man is thus infeſted with phanſies and thoughts which he hates, and gives no conſent unto. Yet if the words of the text be well conſidered, this cannot but appear a ſtrange interpretation. For when it is certain that θέλειν ſignifies neither leſs, nor other, then ποιῆσαι to do, and when that word is varied into κατεργάζομαι and πράσσω, v. 15. and both thoſe are directly all one with θέλειν, and when ὃ μισῶ what I hate in one place, is ὃ οὐ θέλω what I would not, v. 16. and that again ὃ οὐ θέλω κακὸν, the evil that I would not, v. 19. and κακὸν and φαῦλον are directly all one, 'tis not imaginable how ὃ μισῶ, ποιῶ, what I hate, I do, ſhould not be underſtood ὅτι τῇ πράξει τὸ φαῦλον of doing evil, this being no leſs than a direct contradiction, to interpret ποιῶ, by οὐ πράσσω, for that is ποιῶ, by οὐ ποιῶ, πράσσω, by οὐ πράσσω, do, by not do, which neither Methodius nor any other mans authority can prevaile with any reaſonable man to receive from him. This inconvenience when Methodius foreſees, his onely anſwer is, that he deſires them who make this objection, to declare what evil it was that the Apoſtle hated, and would not do, and yet did; whether when he willed to ſerve God, he yet committed Idolatry. But ſure the whole force of this anſwer (if there be any) is founded in interpreting the words to be ſpoken by S. Paul in his own perſon, and ſo is perfectly prevented by him that underſtands the Apoſtle not of himſelf, but of an unregenerate man. From which proceſs of Methodius, and what he there addes in that place of the Apoſtles pronouncing againſt Idolaters, and other ſuch ſinners, that they cannot inherit the kingdome of heaven, the concluſion is regular and unavoidable, that if ποιῶ ſignifies ποιῶ, and πράσσω and κατεργάζομαι, do, and work, be interpreted of actions, or of any more then thoughts unconſented to, then the perſon that is ſpoken of by S. Paul, Rom. 7. is one that ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God, and then ſure no regenerate perſon, by Methodius's arguing: Which therefore is moſt conſtringent, and convincing, that this chapter ſpeaks of an unregenerate perſon; for that 'tis beyond all controverſie, that he cannot uſe thoſe words, ποιῶ I do, &c. of meer λογίζεσθαι, ἐνθυμεῖσθαι, thinking or phanſying only, καὶ οὐ πείθεσθαι, or πράσσειν, and not of conſenting, or doing. And ſo in like manner, that being carnal, and ſold under ſin, (which is all one with a ſervant of ſin, in other places of the ſame Apoſtle, it being then ſo ordinary to ſell ſervants ſub haſta, under his ſpeare, as it were, that had taken or conquered them) and carried captive by the law in his members, (that is, by his own carnal heart) cannot be affirmed of him that lives in, and walkes after the ſpirit. To which this farther evidence may alſo be added, from the uſing the phraſe the Law of ſin, v. 23. the unqueſtionable importance of which we have from the immediate conſequents. Νόμος ἁμαρτίας or law of ſin, is ſure the command or empire of ſinne, to which he that is captivated, as the perſon here ſpoken of is, muſt be acknowledged to be under the dominion of ſin, and that certainly is unreconcileable with a regenerate ſtate. This is farther expreſs'd v. 24. by the body of death, and ſo beares proportion proportion to what had been ſaid v. 5. when we were in the fleſh, as that is there oppoſed to the ſpirit, the motions of ſin did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death; which concludes that condition which is here ſpoken of to be a damnable condition. And it is remarkable that ch. 8. 2. the law of the ſpirit of life which is in Jeſus Chriſt is ſaid to have made the Apoſtle free from this law of ſin & death. From whence the argument is irrefragable; That to which the perſon Rom. 7.23. is ſaid to be captivated, is the ſame from which the grace of Chriſt hath delivered the regenerate juſtifyed perſon ch. 8. 2. But the grace of Chriſt doth not free the regenerate man in this life from injections of phanſy, or thoughts unconſented to (for certainly the regenerate man doth not pretend to that meaſure of grace as ſhall free him from all ſuch) Therefore, that of thoughts unconſented to is not it to which the perſon Rom. 7. 23. is ſaid to be captivated. Againſt the evidence of this I foreſee not what can reaſonably be ſuggeſted.

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Chriſt Jeſus, * who walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit.]

1. There is therefore now no obligation lying on a Chriſtian, to obſerve thoſe ceremonies of Moſes's Law, circumciſion, &c. ch. 7. 4, 6. (from whence to the end of that chapter the Apoſtle had made a digreſſion to anſwer an objection ver. 7.) nor conſequently danger of damnation to him for that neglect, ſuppoſing that he forſake thoſe carnal ſins that the circumciſed Jews yet indulged themſelves to, and perform that Evangelical obedience, (in doing what the mind illuminated by Chriſt directs us to) that inward true purity (which that circumciſion of the fleſh was ſet to ſignifie) that is now required by Chriſt under the Goſpel, (ſee note on c. 7. c.)

* not walking κατὰ σάρκα περιπατοῦν

2. For the Law of the Spirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus hath made me free from [a] the law of ſin and death.]

2. For the Goſpel, which deales not in commanding of carnal outward performances, but of ſpiritual inward purity, the ſubſtance of thoſe legal ſhadowes, and that which was meant by them, and ſo is proper to quicken us to new life in or through the grace and aſſiſtance of Chriſt, who brought this new law into the world, hath freed us Chriſtians from the power and captivity of ſin c. 7. 23. and ſo alſo from death the wages of ſin, from neither of which was the Law of Moſes able to reſcue any man. a.

3. For † what the Law could not doe, for that it was weak through the [b] fleſh, God ſending his own Son in the likeneſſe of ſinfull fleſh, and * for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh.]

3. For when through the fleſhly deſires of men, carrying them headlong into all ſin, in deſpite of the prohibitions of the Law, c. 7. 14. the Law of Moſes was by this means weak, and unable to reform and amend mens lives, then moſt ſeaſonably God ſent his own Son in the likeneſſe of fleſh, that is, in a mortal body which was like ſinfull fleſh (and differed nothing from it, ſave onely in innocence) and that on purpoſe that he might be a ſacrifice for ſin, and by laying our ſins on him ſhew'd great example of his wrath againſt all carnal ſins by puniſhing ſin in his fleſh, that ſo men might be perſwaded by love, or wrought on by terrors, to forſake their ſinfull courſes, b.

* as to that which was impoſſible to the law τὸ ἀδύνατον τοῦ νόμου

* a ſacrifice for ſin, περὶ ἁμαρτίας, ſee note on 2 Cor. 5. d.

4. That the [c] † righteouſneſſe of the Law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit.]

4. That ſo all thoſe ordinances of the Law, circumciſion, &c. which were given the Jewes, to inſtruct them in their duties, might in a higher manner more perfectly be performed by us (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) which think our ſelves ſtrictly obliged to abſtain from all that carnality that that outward ceremony was meant to forbid them, and now to perform the Evangelical obedience that he requires, and will accept from us, without being circumciſed. c.

† ordinance

5. For they that are after the fleſh, doe mind the things of the fleſh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit.]

5. For they that are carried by their own carnal inclinations, or by cuſtomes and habits of ſin, and the carnall affections conſequent thereto, do generally mind and meditate on carnal things; but they that are led by the Spirit of Chriſt, the duct of the Goſpel, ſtudy and mind thoſe things wherein inward purity and ſanctity doth conſiſt.

6. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be ſpiritually minded is life and peace.]

6. And as the Goſpel is of force to free from ſin, more then the Law was, ſo to free from death too, v. 2. For that ſtudy or appetite or deſire of the carnal man bringeth death, ch. 7. 5. but that will or deſire that the Spirit or Goſpel infuſes into us, or the deſire and purſuite of Spiritual things (ſee Theophylact) brings life and peace, that is, a vital ſtate of ſoul under God here, and eternall ſalvation hereafter.

7. Becauſe the carnal mind is enmity againſt God: for it is not ſubject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.]

7. For the carnal appetite is a downright oppoſition to the Law of God, too unruly to obey the commands of God: neither indeed can it be brought to that obedience by a bare prohibition of the Law, for the ſwinge of paſſions and luſts are much more violent then ſo.

8. So then they that are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God.]

8. And ſo theſe men, carnall Jewes, though they know the Law, are very farre from pleaſing God (ſee note on Mat. 12.e.) from being acceptable to him: the Law doth nothing to the juſtifying of them, that are thus farre from obeying the true meaning of the Law.

9. But ye are not in the fleſh, but in the Spirit, if ſo be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his.]

9. But ye Chriſtians under the Goſpel, if ye have any of that ſpiritual divine temper which Chriſt came to infuſe by his doctrine and example, are thereby engaged to all manner of ſincere inward purity, to mortifie the fleſh with the affections and luſts; and if ye doe not ſo, ye live not according to the Goſpel, and if not ſo, ye may thereby know that ye are no Chriſtians, Chriſt will not own you for his, however ye have received the faith, and are admitted into that number.

* the body indeed may be a dead body, τὸ μὲν σῶμα νεκρὸν

10. And if Chriſt be in you, * the body is dead, becauſe of ſin; but the Spirit is life, becauſe of righteouſneſſe.]

11. But if ye be Chriſtians indeed, tranſlated and raiſed above the pretenſions of the Jew, to the purity of the Goſpel of Chriſt, and your lives be anſwerable thereto, then, though being ſinners, the puniſhment of ſin, that is, death, befall you, and ſo your bodies die, and return to duſt, which is the puniſhment of ſin, yet your ſouls ſhall live for ever an happy and a bleſſed life, as the reward of your return to Chriſt in the ſincerity of a new and righteous life, to which the Evangelical juſtification belongs.

11. But if the Spirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus from the dead dwell in you, he that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead ſhall alſo quicken your mortal bodies, by the Spirit that dwelleth in you.]

11. And then even for your dead bodies, they ſhall not finally periſh neither, they ſhall be ſure to be raiſed again; For the Spirit of God, by which you are to be guided and led, is that divine omnipotent Spirit that raiſed Chriſt's dead body out of the grave, and if ye be guided by that, animated and quickned by that, live a pious and holy life, there is no doubt but God will raiſe your mortal bodies out of the graves alſo by the power of that ſame Spirit that raiſed Chriſt's.

12. By theſe ſo many obligations therefore and intereſts of yours, the eternall well-being both of ſoules and bodies, ye are engaged to give over all care of ſatisfying or gratifying your fleſh in its prohibited demands, to live no longer in your former habits of ſin, now ye have received the faith of Chriſt.

12. Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the fleſh, to live after the fleſh.]

13. For if conſenting your ſelves with the external performances of the Moſaical law, circumciſion &c. ye ſtill continue to commit thoſe ſins which that was ſet to prohibite, this will bring all deſtruction upon you; 'tis not the Moſaical Law will keep you from ruine. But if by the faith and example, and withall the grace and aſſiſtance of Chriſt, ye ſhall actually mortifie all the polluted deſires of the fleſh, and live ſpiritually, according to what Chriſt now requires, ye ſhall certainly riſe to the life immortal, or live eternally.

13. For if ye live after the fleſh, ye ſhall die; but if ye through the Spirit doe mortifie the deeds of the body, ye ſhall live.]

14. For this being led by the Spirit of Chriſt, living after Chriſts example, and doing what he commands and enables us to doe, is an evidence that we, and not only the Jewes, who challenge it as their peculiar, are (not onely the ſervants, but) the children of God, and conſequently that God will deale with us as with children, beſtow the inheritance upon us.

14. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the ſons of God.]

d. 15. Nay the truth is, the condition of a Jew (ſee note on Lu. 9. 10.) is ſo farre from making men ſons of God, that at the beſt it is but a ſlaviſh condition, to be obliged to thoſe performances, which being external, (as circumciſion, &c.) and having nothing of goodneſſe in them, are done meerly for fear of diſobeying, and being puniſhed by ſtoning and the like (ſee Theophylact.) Which is juſt the condition of ſervants, who muſt doe what the maſter commands, or be beaten if they doe them not, (and ſo was fitteſt for the Jewes, an hard ſtubborn people, and accordingly had effect among them, they obſerved what came ſo back'd, but what did not, they obſerved not, which is it that denominates the Law weak through the fleſh, v. 3.) But our Chriſt now hath engaged and drawn us with more liberall bands, the cords of a man, the bands of love, ingenuous commands, ſuch as of our ſelves we cannot but judge beſt to be done, and moſt agreeable to our reaſonable natures, and to them added, as to children, the promiſe of an eternal inheritance, upon our obeying of him; and for the puniſhments now left in his Church, they are not thoſe ſervile of ſtoning and the like, but paternal, ſuch as toward children, removing them from the Table of the Lord, by ſuch fatherly diſcipline, frownes, and chaſtiſements to reforme them (ſee Theophylact.) And ſo his dealing with us is (as with children adopted, and received into the family) paternal and gracious, by which we are allow'd to come unto God, as to a father, to expect all fatherly uſage from him, grace and aſſiſtance to doe what he now commands us to doe, and the reward of eternall bliſſe, able infinitely to outweigh all the carnal pleaſures and delights of ſin, that can ſolicite us to the contrary. And ſo this is infinitely an happier condition, then that ſervile condition of the Jewes, of being bound to doe things which had no goodneſſe in them, but as they were commanded, and had no promiſe of heaven upon the performing them, but puniſhments upon the non-performance.

15. For ye have not received the ſpirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we d crie, Abba, Father.]

16. And this condition, and manner of God's dealing with us under the Goſpel, (ſee Lu. 9. Note d.) is on God's part a ſure evidence to our conſciences, if our filial obedience, and being wrought on by theſe means, be the like evidence on our parts, that we are more then ſervants, which was the higheſt that that kind of legall obedience could pretend to, even ſons of God.

16. † The Spirit it ſelf beareth witneſſe with our ſpirit, that we are the children of God.] † That ſame Spirit alſo is ſpeaking

17. And if ſons, then (according to the cuſtomes of all nations, ſee note c.) heirs of heaven, heirs indeed of God the Father, and coheirs with Chriſt, coming to the inheritance after the ſame manner that Chriſt did, to wit, by ſufferings v. 29. which are proper for ſons alſo, to ſuffer firſt with Chriſt, and then to reigne with him.

17. And if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joynt-heires with Chriſt: if ſo be that we ſuffer with him, that we may be alſo glorified together.]

18. And when I mention ſufferings, (which as filial chaſtiſements muſt be expected by us from our father) the ſufferings which at this time lie upon us Chriſtians, I muſt not be thought to look upon them with any ſadneſſe, even in reſpect of this preſent life; for whatever our ſufferings are, the deliverance is likely to be ſo much the more eminent, and illuſtrious, and glorious toward us that firmly adhere to Chriſt, (perhaps in this life, in reſcuing us, while the Jewes that perſecute us, and all others that joyn with them are deſtroyed, but moſt certainly in another) that our ſufferings will not be thought to bear any the ſlighteſt proportion with them.

18. For I reckon, that the ſufferings of this preſent * time are not worthy to be compared with the glory † which ſhall be revealed * in us.] * ſeaſon † ready to be diſcovered * on us, or to us

e. 19. For all the Gentile world are now attending or
f. waiting as it were, to ſee what you Jewes will doe, who of you be true ſons of God, who not, that is, who will now accept
g. and embrace the faith of Chriſt, who will not, their happineſſe depending punctually upon the iſſue of this.

19. For the earneſt expectation of the e creature † f waiteth for the g manifeſtation of the ſons of God.] † attends the revelation.

h. 20. For the heathen world
i. hath for theſe many years been (for the generality of them) enſlaved to Satan, and, by him, to that wretched miſerable eſtate of ignorance and Idolatry, and all thoſe vain and unclean beſtiall worſhips, and ſo as many as have gone on in thoſe vile courſes have been involved alſo under that deſperate impoſſibility (as to the eye of man) of recovering to the leaſt degree of bliſs: And all this not (abſolutely) willingly, or upon their own free choice, but by the devils impoſing it on them as an act of religion, a concomitant and effect of their Idol-worſhips (ſee note g.) in which he commanded all theſe villanies. This makes it reaſonable to ſuppoſe of theſe heathens, that they are willing to be reſcued from living any longer under theſe ſlaveries, and the Goſpell was the onely means to do that. Thus much of the verſe ſeemes to be beſt put in a parentheſis, that ſo that which follows may connect the 19. with the 20. verſe, thus, The creature attends the revelation of the Sons of God, In hope,

20. For the creature was h made ſubject to i vanity, not willingly, but by reaſon of him who hath ſubjected the ſame, in hope.]

k. 21. That they alſo (the very heathens) ſhall by the Goſpell and the grace of Chriſt be reſcued from thoſe courſes of ſinne, to which they have been ſo long inſlaved, into that glorious condition, not onely of free men redeem'd by Chriſt out of that bondage to Satan, to live and amend their lives, but even of Sonnes of God, to have right to his favour, and that immarceſſible inheritance attending it.

21. † Becauſe the creature it ſelf alſo ſhall be delivered from the bondage of k corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.] † That ſame

22. For this is viſible enough every where in our preaching, that the Gentiles are very forward to receive the Goſpell, when they hear it, while ye Jewes generally reject it, and ſo the Gentile world is as it were in pangs of travaile, ever ſince Chriſt's time till now, ready to bring forth the ſons of God, the true children of faithfull Abraham, when the Apoſtles, who muſt midwife out this birth, ſhall but preach unto them, Act. 28. 28.

22. For we know that the whole creation groaneth, and * travaileth in pain together untill now.] * is in pangs of child-birth

l. 23. And as the Gentile world do earneſtly expect this
m. diſcovery (v. 19.) who of you Jewes will receive Chriſt, who not, that they may reap their advantage by it, have the Goſpell freely preached to them; ſo they that have received the faith, that are already converted, and ſo have not that want of the preaching or revealing of it, have yet another advantage of this revelation, viz. to have their perſecutions at an end, which ſhall be according to Chriſt's promiſe as ſoon as Chriſt hath been preached over all the Cities of Jewry, Mat. 10. 23. and ſo even we our ſelves waite for this

23. † And not onely they, but our ſelves alſo which have the firſt fruits of the Spirit, even we our ſelves groan within our ſelves, waiting for l adoption, to wit * the m redemption of our body.] † And not onely ſo, but they alſo * the deliverance this ſeaſon, and groan in the mean while under the perſecutions, expecting one kinde of adoption, deliverance from ſervitude and oppreſſions, the reſcuing our outward man out of the afflictions which encompaſs us at the preſent (ſee v. 18.) (and deliverance from which 'tis clear we have not yet attained to) and alſo from death it ſelf by the reſurrection of the body.

† For in hope we are eſcaped, Τῇ γὰρ ἐλπίδι ἐσώθημεν * why doth he alſo hope? τί καὶ ἐλπίζει;

24. † For we are ſaved by hope: but hope that is ſeen is not hope; for what a man ſeeth * why doth he yet hope for?]

24. For though by the promiſe of Chriſt we certainly expect this reſcue in Gods time, yet this we have as yet no poſſeſſion of, ſave onely in hope, which, according to the nature of it, is of things not preſently enjoyed, for viſion or poſſeſſion excludeth hope.

25. But if we hope for that we ſee not, then do we with patience waite for it.]

25. All that hope doth is to provide us patience of what hardſhips at preſent lye upon us, being confident that in God's time we ſhall be, though yet we are not, reſcued out of them.

† joynes in relieving συναντιλαμβάνεται, See note on Lu. 10. b.

26. Likewiſe the ſpirit alſo † helpeth our n * infirmities: for we know not what we ſhould pray for as we ought; but the † ſpirit it ſelf * maketh interceſſion for us with † groanings which cannot be uttered.]

26. And for the fortifying and confirming of this hope, and this patience in us, even in the time of our greateſt preſent preſſures, we have this advantage from Chriſt now in the Goſpel, his ſpirit that raiſed him from the dead, and will raiſe us v. 11. intercedes and prayes for us at the right hand of his father, where he alwayes maketh interceſſion for us, that not what is moſt eaſie, but moſt advantageous, may be ſent us. And ſo though according to the notion of things under the law, temporal felicity was a very conſiderable thing, and affliction in this world an expreſſion of God's wrath; now under the Goſpel there is a ſpeciall kinde of proviſion made, by aſſuring us that God knows beſt what is for our turns, and conſequently that when we pray, but know not our ſelves what is beſt, nor conſequently what we ought to pray for particularly, health, or wealth, or honour, then Chriſt joynes his helping hand to ours, joynes his all-wiſe and divine prayers (for that which he knows we moſt want) to our prayers, and ſo helps to relieve us in all our diſtreſſes, not by rehearſing or reciting all our particular requeſts, and inforcing them upon his father, but (which is far more for our turnes) preſenting unto him our general wants, interceding, yea more then interceding for us, even powerfully beſtowing thoſe things which are truly beſt for us, though oft-times they be leaſt for our palates at the preſent.

[illegible] that knoweth our wants exactly, underſtands alſo the deſire and intention of the ſpirit of Chriſt [illegible] hearts [illegible] any need of its being articulately formed in words, viz. that interceding for all holy men, it askes for them all thoſe things that tend to the making them better, whatſoever God likes, and thinks beſt for them, not what they like themſelves (and this immediately God grants to us, whatſoever it is, ſometimes tribulations and afflictions, as the moſt proper and agreeable for us.)

* that ὅτι † perhaps, for holy things ὑπὲρ ἁγίων * according to God κατὰ Θεὸν

28. And we know that † all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called o according * to his purpoſe.]

28. And accordingly this we know and finde, that all things that doe come to paſs, or befall them that ſincerely love God, thoſe that cordially adhere to him, or that according to the purport of the Goſpell are received and favoured by him (ſee Rom. 1. 6. and note on Mat. 20. c.) doe by the gracious diſpoſition of God concurre and cooperate to their advantage, which ſure is a ſigne that the ſpirit of Chriſt by its interceſſion obteines for all ſuch thoſe things that are beſt for them v. 27. though not at preſent ſo pleaſing for themſelves.

† or, God cooperates all to good, for the Kings MS. reads συνεργεῖ ὁ Θεὸς εἰς τὸ ἀγαθὸν * to purpoſe προθέσιν † hath predeſtinated προώρισεν

29. For whom he did foreknow, he alſo † did predeſtinate to be conformed to the image of his Sonne, that he might be the firſt born amongſt many brethren.]

29. For indeed whatſoever thus befalls us is not to be look'd on as the act of man, by ſome generall permiſſion onely of God, but as his ſpecial decree and choice for us. For all whom God hath foreapproved and acknowledged for his, according to the purport of the Goſpell, whom he knew as a ſhepheard doth his flock, Joh. 10. 14. (that is, the lovers of God, ſo favoured by him, v. 28. and c. 11. 2.) thoſe he hath alſo foreappointed to ſuffer, 2 Theſſ. 3. 3. after the manner of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 10. that they might be like unto him as younger brothers unto the elder, Heb. 2. 10. and 12. 2. that he might have a Church of perſecuted Chriſtians attaining to deliverances, and to glory v. 18. juſt as he himſelf hath done before them.

30. Moreover whom he did predeſtinate, them he alſo called; and whom he called, them he alſo juſtified; and whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified.]

30. And thoſe whom he hath thus predetermined to ſufferings, thoſe he hath accordingly called to ſuffer actually, 1 Pet. 2. 21. and thoſe whom he hath thus called to ſuffer, thoſe upon ſuch tryals ſincerely paſt, he juſtifieth, or approveth of, commendeth, and pronounceth them ſincere; and thoſe again he either hath, or certainly will reward with eternall glory.

* What ſay we then c. 6. 1. † who ſhall

31. * What ſhall we then ſay to theſe things? If God be for us † who can be againſt us?]

31. What difficulty then can there be in all this? what matter of doubt but that it will go well with us? For if God be a friend, all tends to our good (which was the thing to be proved v. 28. and is proved convincingly v. 29, 30. by an argument called by Logicians Sorites.)

32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things?]

32. For he that parted with his own Son in his boſome, and delivered him up to dye for our ſakes, how is it poſſible that he ſhould not complete that gift by beſtowing all other things that are profitable for us? and either afflictions or deliverances from preſent preſſures, as he ſees them moſt for our reall advantage.

33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that juſtifieth.]

33. Who ſhall produce any accuſation againſt thoſe whom God doth approve of? (This the Jewes did moſt bitterly againſt the Chriſtians, and eſpecially againſt Saint Paul the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, judging them for breakers of the Law &c. c. 2. 1. and c. 7. 2.) 'Tis certain that God hath acquitted them.

34. Who is he that condemneth? It is Chriſt that dyed; yea rather that is riſen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who alſo maketh interceſſion for us.]

34. And then who dares be ſo bold as to condemne them? As for us, whatever we ſuffer here, our comfort and ſure ground of hope and rejoycing is, that Chriſt our Lord and Captain hath ſuffered before us, and, which is more for our advantage, to aſſure us of delivery either here or hereafter, our crucified Lord is riſen again, is aſcended to the greateſt dignity, and now reignes in heaven, and is perfectly able to defend and protect his, and hath that advantage to intercede for us to his Father (which he really doth v. 26.) to help us to that conſtantly, which is moſt for the ſupply of our wants.

35. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? ſhall tribulation, or diſtreſs, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſs, or perill, or ſword?]

35. And then 'tis not in the power of any perſecutor on earth to put us out of the favour of God, or to deprive us of the benefits of his love to us, when Chriſt hath thus fortified us, and ordered even afflictions themſelves to tend to our good; we may now challenge all preſent or poſſible evills to doe their worſt, all preſſures, diſtreſſes, perſecutions, wants, ſhame, the utmoſt fear, and force, the ſharpeſt encounters.

36. (As it is written, For thy ſake we are killed all the day long, we are accounted as ſheep for the ſlaughter.)]

36. (As indeed 'tis the portion of a Chriſtian to meet with all theſe things in the diſcharge of his duty, and to have never a part of his life free from them, our Chriſtianity being but but as it were the paſſage to our ſlaughter, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 44, 22. ſpoken of himſelf, but moſt punctually appliable to us at this time, For thy ſake &c.)

37. No certainly; we have had experience of all theſe, and finde theſe have no power to put us out of God's favour, they are on the contrary the ſureſt means to ſecure us in it, to exerciſe our Chriſtian virtues, and to encreaſe our reward, and ſo the moſt fatherly acts of grace that could be beſtowed on us, through the aſſiſtance of that ſtrength of Chriſt enabling us to bear all theſe, and be the better for them.

37. † Nay in all theſe things we are more then conquerors, through him that loved us.] † But and

38. For I am reſolved that neither fear of death, norhope of life, nor evill angels, nor perſecuting Princes or potentates, nor the preſſures that are already upon us, nor thoſe that are now ready to come,

38. For I am perſwaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, * nor things preſent, nor things to come,] * nor the preſent things nor thoſe that are to come, οὔτε ἐνεστῶτα οὔτε μέλλοντα

39. Nor ſublimity of honours, nor depth of ignominy, nor any thing elſe ſhall be able to evacuate the promiſes of the Goſpell, or deprive us of thoſe advantages which belong to Chriſtians (according to God's faithfull promiſes) immutably, irreverſibly.

39 Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.]

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Νόμος ἁμαρτίας

V. 2. The law of ſin] What νόμος ἁμαρτίας the law of ſin here ſignifies, is diſcernible by the phraſe immediately foregoing, Ὁ νόμος τοῦ πνεύματος τῆς ζωῆς, &c. the law of the ſpirit of life by Jeſus Chriſt, which unqueſtionably ſignifies more then the holy Spirit now under the Goſpell, which frees us from that which the Law was not able to do. So ſaith Chryſoſtome and Theophylact, νόμον πνεύματος ἐνταῦθα τὸ πνεῦμα (τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα) καλῶν, The law of the ſpirit he there calls the ſpirit, or holy ſpirit. And then proportionably the law of ſin muſt ſignifie ſin it ſelf, which this holy ſpirit given by Chriſt in the Goſpel ἐνανάτωσι, ſay they, hath mortified. This thoſe two antients preſſe, in oppoſition to ſome πονηραὶ γλῶσσαι evil tongues, which interpreted the law of ſin to be the Moſaical Law. Of which yet the ſame Apoſtle in the precedent chapter, ſaith that it is ſpiritual, v. 14. and holy, juſt, and good, v. 12. ſpiritual, as given by the ſpirit of God, and the teacher and cauſe of virtue; and holy, juſt, and good, as giving rules of Piety, Juſtice and Charity, and as they add, Chryſoſt. t. 3. p. 184. l. 1. ἁμαρτίας ἀναιρετικὸν that which hath power to take away ſin, and Theophyl. p. 66. κακίας πολέμιον an enemy to ſin. And in this ſenſe the phraſe is evidently uſed ch. 7. 23. where bringing into captivity to the law of ſin is no more then bringing to the commiſſion of ſin, or as Theophylact δυνάμει καὶ τυραννίδι to the power and tyranny of it.

b. Σὰρξ

V. 3. The fleſh] Σὰρξ the fleſh in this place cannot ſo fitly be ſaid to ſignifie the ſtate or condition of men under the Law (mention'd c. 7. Note c.) but that which is the means by which occaſionally (as the διὰ notes) the Law became ſo weak and unable to reſtrain men, viz. the carnall or fleſhly appetite, which is ſo contrary to the propoſals and preſcriptions of the Law. So c. 7. v. 18. I know that in me, that is, in my fleſh, that is, the carnall part of a man, (ſuch eſpecially as is there repreſented, and defined v. 14. to be carnall, and ſold under ſinne) dwelleth no good thing: ſo here v. 1. They that walk after the fleſh, are oppoſed to thoſe that walk after the ſpirit, and that are in Chriſt Jeſus: and ſo v. 4. 5, 6, 7. where the φρόνημα σαρκὸς, minde, or deſire, of the fleſh is enmity to God, direct oppoſition to him (viz. that law in the members warring againſt the law in the minde, c. 7. 23.) and v. 8, 9, 12, 13. And ſo in this verſe, viz. that the carnality of mens hearts was too ſtrong for the Moſaicall Law to do any good upon them. And ſo the Law was weak, not abſolutely, but διὰ τῆς σαρκὸς, through the fleſh, that is, The Moſaicall diſpenſation by the promiſes and terrors which it propoſed, was not able to ſubdue carnall affections, to mortifie luſts, to bring men to inward purity, which to the fleſh was more ingrateſull then that temporall promiſes ſhould perſwade any man to undertake it, when there were not temporal puniſhments to drive them to it, as in caſe of Concupiſcence, oppoſed to that inward purity, there were not, (ſee Note on ch. 7. e.) And ſo 'twas not poſſible for the Law to bring them to any good, Chriſt's reformation was neceſſary thus to call carnal ſinners to repentance.

c. Δικαίωμα

V. 4. Righteouſneſs] The word δικαίωμα is any thing that God hath thought meet to appoint or command his people (ſee c. 2. 26.) from δίκαιον meet or right, as ἀρεστὸν, or δόγμα, an ordinance, or decree, are from ἀρέσκω and δοκέω, being pleaſed, or thinking good. It is anſwerable to the Hebrew חקים Num. 30. 17. Deut. 4. 14, 40, 45. Pſ. 119. 12. and denotes thoſe lawes which God had given to the Jewes beſide the Moral Law, or law of Nature to all, the peculiar ordinances of Circumciſion, &c. So Heb. 9. 1. The firſt covenant had δικαιώματα ordinances, σύμβολα, δισμὸν καὶ νομοθεσίας, ſaith Theophylact, types, inſtitutions, lawes, as alſo λατρείας worſhips, and ἅγιον κοσμικὸν, meaning the Tabernacle, all which were peculiar to the firſt covenant, the Moſaical œconomy; ſo Luk. 1. 6. where to ἐντολαὶ, the commandements or Moral Law, is ſubjoyned δικαιώματα ordinances, or Jewiſh obſervances. And ſo here δικαίωμα τοῦ νόμου is the ordinances of the Law, or ſtatute-law, as it were, as that of Circumciſion, &c. which being deſigned by God to teach them abſtinence from all impurity, but not ſo made uſe of by the carnal Jewes, is ſaid here to be perfected and compleated by Chriſt by his plain precepts of inward purity. By this perhaps may be explained Rev. 19. 8. where of the βύσσινον καθαρὸν καὶ λαμπρὸν, fine linen pure and white, it is affirmed, that it is δικαιώματα ἁγίων, which may be rendred the ordinances of the ſanctuary (for ſo ἅγια ſignifies Heb. 9. 2, 8.) that is, the garment that the Prieſt, when he entred into the Sanctuary, was to wear, by the Levitical Law. See Note on Rev. 19. a.

d. Κράζομεν, ὁ πατὴρ, ἀββᾶ

V. 15. Cry, Abba, Father] The phraſe κράζειν, ἀββᾶ, ὁ πατὴρ, may perhaps beſt be rendred crying Abba, that is, Father, ſo as the ὁ be the Neuter, not Maſculine gender, and the abbreviate of ὅ ἐστι μεθερμηνευόμενον, or ὅ ἐστι, which is by interpretation, or, which is. If that be not it, both here and Gal. 4. 6. then, as Mar. 14. 36. (when it is uſed by Chriſt, who ſpake Syriack, 'tis certain that it was but the ſame word twice repeated) ſo muſt it be here, and no more then a form of compellation, wherein a ſon expreſſeth his confidence and dependence on his fathers kindneſſe and goodneſſe to him; or elſe a form of petitioning, as in Chriſt it was, Abba, Father, all things are poſſible to thee, remove this cup from me. And ſo it ſignifies no more then to look upon God, as children on a father, as on one that means all good to us, if we be not wanting to our ſelves; referring to his rich Evangelical promiſes, in oppoſition to the more ſervile affections of the Jewes, which performed thoſe external obediences onely that were commanded under penalties, but had no care of purity and uprightneſs of actions, as ſlaves, and not as ſons.

sons. That this should be taken from a Roman form of heredipetæ, suing to a rich man for his inheritance, is but a fancy, sufficiently confuted by this, that the crying Abba here supposes having received the Spirit of adoption, and doth not prepare for it. And so Gal. 4. Because ye are (not, that ye may be) sons, God hath sent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba Father; where first they are sons, and have the Spirit of Christ in their hearts, that filial spirit, and because they are such, God hath sent, &c. As for that that follows, And if sons, then heires, that is not peculiar to the Romans neither; for though among them the children of both sexes were admitted to inherit, but among the Jewes the females were not admitted, save in defect of males, yet speaking here of sons, he may very fitly referre to sons among the Jewes, and from the law of their inheriting the fathers goods, conclude of all children of God, and not only of males (for that difference is not at all considered here) that they shall doe so too, that is, be heirs also. Besides, it was a law among the Jewes, as well as the Romans, that adopted sons, in respect of inheriting, were equall with naturall; and that is the thing that is chiefly here meant by, If sons, then heirs, that is, this adoption into sonship is as sure to bring us the inheritance, as if we were the natural sons of God.

εἰ τέκνα, καὶ κληρονόμοι

V. 19. Creature] The word κτίσις the creation or creature, being a general word, without a restraint (and likewise with πᾶσα all joyned to it v. 22.) is here set to comprehend all mankind, the Gentiles as well as the Jewes, and (having before spoken of the Jewes) here the Gentiles peculiarly. Thus κτίσις and κόσμος are all one, the creature, and the world, and πᾶσα κτίσις, all the creation, (as the same is expres'd here v. 22.) and πᾶς ὁ κόσμος, all the world, Mar. 16. 15. which is in S. Matthew in the parallel place, Mat. 28. 19. πάντα τὰ ἔθνη all nations, and so Col. 1. 15. and so also κόσμος the world simply, as κτίσις creature here, for the heathen world, 2 Pet. 1. 4. and elsewhere. So καινὴ κτίσις a new creature, 2 Cor. 5. 17. is all one with καινὸς ἄνθρωπος the new man, Eph. 4. 24. All by Hebrew idiom, wherein בריאה creature, signifies man among their Rabbins, as when they say of God, יבוא לדין את הבריות, he shall come to judge the creatures, that is, men. And that this is the meaning of πάσῃ ἀνθρωπίνῃ κτίσει 1 Pet. 2. 13. every humane creature, that is, the heathens peculiarly (as farre as the Relative ὑποτάγητε subjection will extend it, that is, to all heathen magistrates in authority over them, which is the importance of all v. 17. not all men absolutely, but all superiors, as it followes, εἴτε βασιλεῖ, εἴτε ἡγεμόσι) will appear, 1. by the doctrine which he is there confuting, that of the Gnosticks, which taught liberty and manumission of Christian servants from heathen masters, and proportionably of Christian subjects from heathen Kings; and 2dly by the particularity of his care v. 12. that their conversation should be good among the Gentiles, that they might not speak ill of them as of evil doers, which they would be most apt to doe, in case they should withdraw their obedience from their lawfull Princes, as soon as they were become Christians; and 3dly by the use of the phrase πάντες ἄνθρωποι all men in the same sense, for the Gentiles among whom they lived, Rom. 12. 17, 18. with whom they are there required to live peaceably, and to doe nothing but what might be καλὸν good before them. From which generall precept the Apostle there immediately proceeds to (the same particular, which is the matter of S. Peter's command) obedience to the supreme power (then heathen) ch. 13. 1. (see Note on Col. 1. 6.)

c. Κτίσις

Κόσμος

πᾶσα ἀνθρωπίνη κτίσις

πάντες ἄνθρωποι

Ib. Waiteth] What is here said of the ἀποκαραδοκία τῆς κτίσεως, the expectation of the creature, that is, of the Gentile world, must be understood according to the sacred prophetick dialect, wherein men are said to desire, and seek, and hope, and expect that (sometimes) wch they doe not distinctly know or think of, upon this score, that it is the general, indefinite, though not the particular, determinate object of their desires; that, supposing men to desire that which is best for them, most for their present turn, this being most eminently so, is the only true matter of satisfaction to those their appetites. Thus all men being supposed to desire felicity, are said to expect and desire Christ, because he is the onely true way to that: As on the other side, the wicked, that pursue an evil course, are by the wise man said to seek death, though 'tis sure they have no particular designe upon it; and so Prov. 8. 36. to love death. Thus when Jacob Gen. 49. calls Shiloh, or the Messias, προσδοκία τῶν ἐθνῶν the expectation of the Gentiles, and on whom the Gentiles shall trust, and so Hag. 2. 7. The desire of all nations shall come, that is, literally the Temple (that should then be reedified) and under that shadow, Christ, he in whose coming was contained a full satisfaction to all the wants, and desires and thirsts of all the heathens in the world. And so here it is not at all necessary to the verifying of this speech of the Apostle, that the Gentile world all this while, (or even at that time wherein he spake) should either know Christ, or what 'twas to be the sons of God, or that the revelation of this by the preaching of the Gospel to the Jewes tended so particularly to their advantage: But, as the Gospel of Christ was the collection of all those advantages that they aspired to, and as being the sons of God was the believing on Christ when he was preached, so the Apostle, that knew that upon the having preach'd over all the cities of Jewry (and so made discovery, who of them would repent and believe the Gospel, who would be finally contumacious) the Gospel should immediately be preached to the Gentiles, and so the blessedst thing in the world befall them, the satisfaction to all their desires and groanings, may truly say, that the expectation of the Gentile world attended and waited for this. Which interpretation will be more perspicuous, when it is considered, that both ἀποκαραδοκία lifting up the head, or, as Theophylact fetcheth it, πρὸς τὸ ἐκ παντὸς ὅλην δοκὴν ἐπιδίδωσιν πρὸς τὸ βεβαίως ἐλπιζόμενον, from holding out and bending forward the whole head to that which is firmely hoped for, and the ἀπεκδέχεσθαι waiting, or attending, that follows, are but phrases noting the approach of any thing, and not their explicit knowledge that it doth so; as when Christ bids them, when such and such things come to passe, lift up their heads, for their redemption draweth nigh, Luk. 21. 28. that is, then your deliverance approacheth, though perhaps many of them that should have their parts in it, knew nothing of it. And indeed ἀπεκδέχεται being best rendred attendeth, waiteth, notes onely this period to be it, before which the Gospel was not to be so freely preached to the Gentiles and after which it was, and is not to be restrained to their looking, or expecting of it.

f. Ἀποκαραδοκία κτίσεως

Ἀπεκδέχεται

Ib. Manifestation] The word ἀποκάλυψις Revelation signifies the explaining or displaying somewhat that was before obscure and covered, and so the revelation of the sons of God will be the discovering who are truly such. This was to be done among the Jewes, who all pretended to that title, by the Apostles preaching the Gospel to them, in the power of Christs resurrection; and they that did not now receive him so testified, 'tis evident they were bastards and not sons, though before, they might have the excuse of ignorance to extenuate their fact, Luk. 23. 34. 1 Cor. 2. 8. Thus it is said by old Simeon of Christ (which should prove for the falling and raising of many in Israel. Luk. 2. 34. a stumbling block to the proud obstinate Pharisee, but a means of raising the humble sinner to new life, and a signe that should be matter of contradiction, a strange person, that should be matter of great dispute and

g. Ἀποκάλυψις

and diviſion among the Jewes, ſome believing and others rejecting him) that by this means the thoughts, or machinations, or deſigns, of many ſhould be revealed, that is, by their dealing with Chriſt it ſhould be diſcovered what kind of men they were, truly pious, or no, thoſe obedient children of God which they pretended to be, or elſe the quite contrary. Now becauſe by the Apoſtles preaching of Chriſt to the Jewes this diſcovery was to be made, and ſo the Goſpel firſt preached to them, before they went to the Gentiles, and upon the Jewes rejecting Chriſt, the Apoſtles were then to depart and goe to the Gentiles, therefore the creature, or Gentile world, are ſaid earneſtly to expect, or wait for, this diſcovery, as a thing by which they were to receive this great advantage, ἐπ' ἐλπίδι (in the end of ver. 20. which muſt connect with this, the former part of that verſe ſo farre being but in a parentheſis) in hope that they alſo ver. 21. that is, the Gentiles, that ſhall receive the Goſpel, as well as the believing Jewes, ſhall be redeemed from their cuſtomes of ſin, which made them ſuch ſlaves, and become partakers of that glorious title of ſons of God alſo.

h. Ὑπετάγη

V. 20. Made ſubject] The only difficulty here is, by whom the heathen world was ſubjected to that which is here called vanity, and after φθορᾶς corruption, ver. 21. For though here the paſſive ὑπετάγη was ſubjected might be ſo rendred as to referre to no other Agent but themſelves, that αὐθαιρέτῳ δαίμονι the ſpontaneous devil, that moſt of our miſchief and ſin is imputable to, yet here followes, in this verſe, mention of the ὑποτάξας he that hath ſubjected them; and 'tis alſo affirmed of the creature, that is, the Gentile world, that it was thus ſubjected, οὐχ ἑκοῦσα, not willingly, but διὰ τὸν ὑποτάξαντα, becauſe of him, whoſoever it is, that ſubjected them. The place is generally interpreted of God, that he is the ὁ ὑποτάξας, and if ſo, it muſt then be ſaid that he ſubjected the heathen not by any poſitive act, but (as he is ſaid to harden) by deſertion, & leaving to themſelves, to which this ſlavery to their cuſtomes of ſin is conſequent. But it may alſo be interpreted of the Devil, who by Gods permiſſion (in juſt puniſhment for their Idolatries) had, and exerciſed ſuch power among the heathens, and engaged them in all wickedneſſe. And this is perfectly agreeable with the truth of the fact. For the Devil being worſhip'd by the heathens, did by that means infuſe into their worſhips all the villany in the world, made all unnatural ſins part of their devotions, in their myſteries, Eleuſinia ſacra, Venus and Flora's feaſts, &c. and ſo what they did in that kind they did not willingly, as 'tis here ſaid, but in obedience to this ὁ ὑποτάξας, that is, the Devil that had gotten ſuch authority among them, and kept them in this δουλεία τῆς φθορᾶς ſlavery, or ſervitude, of corruption, doing it in obedience to his commands. Thus doth Euſebius, l. 4. c. ζ' tell us of Carpocrates, that it was his avow'd doctrine, that there was no other way of eſcaping or appeaſing the κοσμικοὺς ἄρχοντας, worldly princes, as they called them, but by paying them their dues by all their ἀῤῥητοποιΐα unnatural filthineſſe. And we know 'twas moſt ordinary among the heathen to have ſacrificing of men and devoting them preſcribed ad pacanda numina, to appeaſe thoſe falſe gods. Thus are men ſaid to be caught, and held ἐζωγρημένοι in the ſnare of the Devill, and ἐζωγρημένοι taken alive, or captive, by him, 2 Tim. 2. 26. which concludes them in the ſtate of ſlaves and ſervants forever after, till by repentance and reformation they get out of it. And there is no circumſtance in the whole Context, that renders this improbable to be the meaning of it, but on the contrary this ſubjection from whence they hope to be delivered, is oppoſed to that freedome which Chriſt gives, and that is, from the hands of enemies, Luk. 1. 74. that is, from Satan, &c. who may therefore be reſolved to be the ὁ ὑποτάξας he that ſubjected them. That which hath enclined interpreters to apply it to God is, firſt, the ἐπ' ἐλπίδι in hope, which followes, it being not imaginable that the Devill ſhould ſubject them thus, in hope, &c. But that ſeems to be a miſtake, the ἐπ' ἐλπίδι in hope belonging to the end of the former verſe, ἀπεκδέχεται ἐπ' ἐλπίδι, waites in hope, all the reſt of the 20th v. being read in a parentheſis, as the reaſon of their waiting, v. 19. Secondly, the reſolving that κτίσις creature ſignifies the other creatures of God, beſide man; but that hath been ſhewed to be a miſtake alſo, Noted.

Ib. Vanity] Ματαιότης vanity hath a double notion, one as it referres to the heathen Idols, which being אלילים nothings, are called μάταια vaine, or vanities, Act. 14. 14. and ſo vanity here is all their ignorant filthy Idol-worſhip; and ſo 'tis Eph. 4. 17. where he warneth them not to walk, as the reſt of the Gentiles do, in the vanity of their own minde; and ſo ἐματαιώθησαν they grew vain, Rom. 1. 21. and φύσει μάταιοι, vaine by nature, in the Book of Wiſdome, ſpeaking of that popular cuſtome of Idolatry, that had generally over-run them all, and ſo 2 Pet. 2. 18. Another notion of the word there is as it is rendred by Heſychius, Μάταιος, τάλας, wretched, miſerable. And both theſe may ſeem to be here put together, as the courſe of the Gentiles was an idolatrous, villanous, and withall an unhappy wretched courſe (to which the Devill had brought them, and God in his juſt judgements had delivered them up, for their deſpiſing the light of nature) of which ſome of them were ſo ſenſible, viz. thoſe that by ſtudy of Philoſophy, or travail into Ægypt (where they might hear of the worſhip of the true God) came to any knowledge of the truth, that they expreſs'd their diſlike of their own wayes, and their deſires to be rid of theſe ſo great burthens, that thus preſs'd down their Soules. Thus did Porphyrie and others lament the impurities of their natures, which they found within themſelves, and ſet up a ſpeciall project and purſuit of καθαρτικὰ purgatives, and, when other helps failed, made uſe of γοητεία and θαυμαργία, magick and ſorcery to that end, conſulted with the Devill to help to make them pure; and this, as diſcerning this want of purity to be utterly deſtructive of that true happineſs which, as rationall creatures, they could not but ſeek after. And in this reſpect it is, that here 'tis ſaid of theſe heathens, that they were thus ſubjected not willingly, but through Satan's malice, and God's juſt judgements upon them, and yet had ſome kinde of dark hope, that they ſhould have ſome means allow'd of reſcuing them, and ſo did in a manner expect Chriſt, and waite for a reverſion of the Goſpell, when the Jewes had done with it, and ſo (as 'tis obſervable in the Acts) when he was preach'd unto them and the Jewes together, did more readily and univerſally receive him, then the Jewes did.

i. Ματαιότης

k. Φθορᾶ

V. 21. Corruption] Φθορὰ ſignifies ſometimes thoſe abominable unnaturall uncleanneſſes which the Gentiles were guilty of, πᾶσης ἐν κόσμῳ ἐπιθυμίᾳ φθορᾶς, 2 Pet. 1. 4. the corruption through luſt which was in the world, the unnaturall luſts among the Gentiles and Gnoſticks. So again 2 Pet. 2. 12. γεγεννημένα εἰς φθορὰν, made to corrupt, or good for nothing but to corrupt others, an expreſſion of ἄλογα ζῶα φυσικὰ, unnaturall irrationall creatures; and again in the end of the verſe, ἐν τῇ φθορᾷ αὐτῶν, in their corruption, which what it ſignifies may be gueſs'd by the luxury and licentiouſneſs that followes v. 13. and ἡδυπαθοῦντες ἐν ταῖς ἀπάταις αὐτῶν living luxuriouſly in their deceits, or hereticall Gnoſtick practices: ſo again δοῦλοι τῆς φθορᾶς v. 19. ſervants of corruption, anſwerable to δουλεία φθορᾶς here, the ſervitude of corruption, in the ſame ſenſe clearly, and this very agreeable to Deut. 4. 16. leſt you corrupt your ſelves, &c. So Wiſd. 14. 12. having ſaid that the deviſing of Idols is the beginning of fornication, he adds that the invention of them is φθορὰ ζωῆς the corrupting of life. And in Philo

Philo de ſpecial. leg. præc. 7. we have φθορὰ, πορνία, μοιχία, corruption, fornication, adultery, ſeverall branches of ſinne againſt that law. (See Note on 2 Pet. 1. b. and c. 2. b. and Col. 2. h.)

l. υἱοθεσία

V. 23. Adoption] Υἱοθεσία adoption ſignifies the aſſuming thoſe into the number of children which are not ſo naturally. In the 15. v. it is ſet oppoſite to δουλεία ſervitude, and v. 21. it is called ἐλευθερία the liberty of the ſonnes of God; for they that are adopted, if they were ſervants before, are made free men and ſonnes together: and ſo here it may ſignifie the change of ſtate from ſervitude to ſon-ſhip; and becauſe it is ſpoken of in this verſe as a thing not yet had, but expected by Saint Paul and ſuch as he, thoſe that had the firſt-fruits of the ſpirit, that is, had received the Goſpell, and believed in Chriſt, and ſo were already Sonnes of God, received into his family by adoption, therefore it muſt here be taken in ſome other notion, different from that which is ordinary, and in oppoſition to ſome other ſervitude; and the ἀπολύτρωσις τῦ σώματος that followes, will incline to interpret it an aſſumption and delivery out of that that then lay upon the body, the perſecutions (a kinde of Ægyptian ſervitude) which lay then ſharply upon the Orthodox Chriſtians, and that partly by reſcue here out of them, granting them Halcyonian dayes, as upon the deſtruction of the Jewes, their perſecutors, they had, and partly by the reſurrection of the body, for thoſe that were not thus reſcued in this life.

m. ἀπολύτρωσις

Ib. Redemption] Ἀπολύτρωσις ſignifies deliverance generally, and that from preſſure or calamity, preſent or approching, ἀποφυγὴ, ἀπόλυσις, eſcaping, releaſe; and ſo ἀπολύτρωσις τῦ σώματος may well be the bodies eſcaping from thoſe preſſures and perils that lye upon that, and make it groan alſo (though in another ſenſe then that wherein the word is uſed v. 22. according to the uſe of Scripture-ſtyle and the figure ἀνταπόκλασις, of uſing a word, that had been uſed before in a different ſenſe) Thus Luk. 21. 28. your ἀπολύτρωσις redemption, deliverance from perſecutions, draweth nigh; and ſo it ſeems to be uſed here, of which he ſaith v. 24. that in hope they are eſcaped, and in the mean time with patience expect, v. 25. And of theſe diſtreſſes, and the advantages of, and deliverance from them, he continues the diſcourſe from hence to the end of the Chapter, (as he had begun it v. 17, 18.) as that wherein our conformity with our elder brother conſiſted, to ſuffer, as he did, and wherein their delivery, ſo glorious and remarkable, would be a firſt preparative conformity to his reſurrection. But this not to exclude, but include alſo the farther deliverance of the body from death it ſelf, by the reſurrection, which is anſwerable to Chriſts reſurrection alſo, and promiſed as the onely means to ſupport their faith, and patience, who ſhould not be delivered here, but loſe their lives for the faith of Chriſt. Thus the word is uſed 1 Cor. 1. 30.

ἀνταπόκλασις

n. ἀσθένεια

V. 26. Infirmities] The word ἀσθένεια, and ἀσθενέω, weakneſſe, weak, and being weak, in the New Teſtament oft ſignifies diſeaſes, diſtreſſe, miſeries, afflictions, that befall our humane ſtate; ſo Mat. 8. 17. it ſignifies the diſeaſe that Chriſt cured, and ſo Luk. 13. 11, 12. Joh. 5. 5. and 11. 4. Act. 28. 9. and ſo ἀσθενὴς ſick, Mat. 25. 39. Luk. 10. 9. Act. 4. 9. and 5. 15, 16. 1 Cor. 11. 30. (as on the contrary, ἰσχύων the ſtrong, Mat. 9. 12. ſignifies the healthy) and ἀσθενέω Mat. 10. 8. 25. 36. Mar. 6. 56. Luk. 4. 40. 7. 10. 9. 2. Joh. 4. 46. 5. 3. and 7. ſo c. 6. 2. 11. 1, 2, 3, 6. Act. 9. 37. 19. 12. Phil. 2. 26, 27. 2 Tim. 4. 20. Jam. 5. 14. (and very oft for ſin the diſeaſe of the ſoul.) And ſo it ſignifies here, even all the ſad particulars mention'd v. 35. and which, if the Context be obſerved, will appear to belong unto this place, and will be agreeable to the notion of עצב, which ſignifying πόνος, ὀδύνη, labour, ſorrow, is frequently uſed for diſeaſe, diſtreſs, and rendred by the word here uſed, ἀσθένεια weakneſſes; ſo is the word uſed 1 Cor. 2. 3. referring to the perſecutions and dangers that Paul at Corinth had met with in his preaching. See note on 1 Cor. 8. b. and on Gal. 4. 2.

V. 28. According to his purpoſe] The phraſe κατὰ πρόθεσιν according to purpoſe is by * Cyril of Hieruſalem thus interpreted, that it ſignifies γνησίαν προαίρεσιν every mans genuine choice, and reſolution of mind, that love of God that caſts out feare, that courage that is not daunted with ſufferings, (not, as Grodecius interprets it, cujuſlibet propriam voluntatem, in oppoſition to God's, but, I ſay) every man's genuine, that is, ſincere, choiſe, or purpoſe, in oppoſition to the hypocritical, temporary, outward profeſſion of ſome that enter into Chriſtianity. For as in him it followes, κἂν σῶμα ἔνδον ἔχῃς, καὶ τὸ διάνοιαν μὴ ἔχῃς, οὐδὲν ὠφελῇ, if thy body be preſent among the diſciples of Chriſt, or the illuminate, but thy mind go not along with thy body, it profits thee nothing. Thus, ſaith he, Simon had his body baptized with water, but not his heart illuminated by the Spirit; his body deſcended into, and aſcended out of the water, but his ſoule was not buried with Chriſt, nor raiſed again with him. And ſo he concludes, ἡ προθέσεις γνησία ἔτι κλητὸν σε ποιεῖ, the purpoſe of mind when it is genuine, or intire, all one with προθέσεις καρδίας purpoſe of heart Act. 11. 23. (not, as the interpreter reads, propoſitum cùm adeſt proprium) renders thee called, that is, puts thee in number of thoſe who are ſtyled the called of God, that is, ſincere diſciples of his, to whom this Goſpel-privilege here belongs, that all things tend to their good, from tribulation to death it ſelf. So in the ſame author a little before, προθέσεις ἀγαθὴ, a good purpoſe and reſolution (conſequent to the ὀνοματογραφία and σρατείας κλῆσις having their names enrolled, and their perſons entred into the military calling) is uſed as a phraſe to expreſſe them to be Chriſtians that had reſolvedly taken that calling upon them. And ſo indeed κλητὸς is oft taken in the Old Teſtament for a follower, adherent, ſubject, ſervant, eſpecially in an army, 1 Kin. 1. 41, 49. 2 Sam. 14. 11. This is clearly the interpretation of that very ancient Father, making our ſincere embracing of Chriſts diſcipleſhip (or the being called, that is, wrought upon by Chriſts call effectually, and not bringing onely the body to Chriſt, and leaving the mind behind) the condition without which the promiſes and advantages of the Goſpel doe not belong to any. In the ſame ſenſe as * Clemens Alexandr. Strom. 7. ſpeaking of the one true Church, in oppoſition to hereſical mixtures, ſaith, εἰς ἣν οἱ κατὰ πρόθεσιν δίκαιοι ἐγκαταλέγονται, into which thoſe that are juſt according to purpoſe are admitted; in the ſenſe that elſewhere * ἡ ἑκάστου πρόθεσις, every mans purpoſe, and * πρόθεσις εὐνυχίας a purpoſe, or reſolution, of ſingle life is uſed by him. In like manner Theophylact, Κλητὸς γίνεται ἄνθρωπος κατὰ πρόθεσιν, τυτέσι κατ' ἰδίαν προαίρεσιν, A man becomes called according to purpoſe, that is, according to his own choice, for, ſaith he, οὐ γὰρ ἀρκεῖ ἡ κλῆσις, ἐπεὶ πάντες ἂν ἐσώθησαν, πάντες γὰρ ἐκλήθησαν, ἀλλὰ χρεία καὶ τῆς προαιρέσεως, Calling is not ſufficient, for then all ſhould be ſaved, for all are called, but there is need of our will and choice in obeying the call. But if the word πρόθεσις purpoſe be applied to God, which calls (and not to them which are obedient to the call) then the meaning muſt be, thoſe that are called according to purpoſe, that is, thoſe that according to Gods counſels revealed in the Goſpel, are the men to whom Gods favour, and ſo his promiſes belong. That the former of theſe is rather to be imbraced in this place, may be conjectured by the nature of the ſubject, which this phraſe called according to purpoſe, is ſet to expreſſe, viz. thoſe that love God, which are Chriſtians, endued with that grace of charity, or love of God, which will fit them to ſuffer for, or with Chriſt, and if it doth ſo, doth by that appear to be cordial and ſincere, not hypocritical. And of ſuch conſtant reſolute lovers of Chriſt it is here ſaid, that it is one of the privileges of the Goſpel, that all things (how ſharp ſoever) that befall them, doe tend to their good. And ſo κατ' πρόθεσιν κλητοὶς οὖσιν here, one that is called according to purpoſe, one that ſtedfaſtly and cordially adheres to God, will be directly all one with ὁ τῇ προθέσει τῆς καρδίας προσμένων τῷ Κυρίῳ, Act. 11. 23. one that with purpoſe of heart adheres to the Lord. And though Rom. 9. 10. πρόθεσις purpoſe be clearly applied to God, and that in the matter of election without conſideration of works, onely ἐκ τοῦ καλοῦντος, in reſpect of God that calls the Gentile Idolaters to Chriſt, when the perverſe Jewes are left to themſelves, yet that which determines it there to God is not onely the matter which makes it neceſſary, but the very word Θεοῦ of God joyned with πρόθεσις purpoſe, the purpoſe of God to call the Gentile world to the knowledge of Chriſt. And in other places, as there is πρόθεσις αἰώνων, Epheſ. 3. 11. the eternal purpoſe (of God again,) or God's promiſe concerning the ſeverall ages of the world, ſo there is alſo πρόθεσις purpoſe 2 Tim. 3. 10. which demonſtratively ſignifies a grace or vertue among Chriſtians, being joyned with πίστις faith, μακροθυμία long-ſuffering, ἀγάπη charity, ὑπομονὴ patience, and ſure ſignifies a generall good reſolution and purpoſe of mind, having an influence on the whole Chriſtian life, and ſo fit to follow ἀναστροφὴν, the whole converſation next before it.

CHAP. IX.

a. 1. Theſe things being ſo, that there is no true purity or conſequent juſtification to be had by the Law of Moſes, nor any way but by Chriſt, whatſoever ye think of me, (looking on me, I know, with an evil eye, as if I were your enemy) I proteſt before Chriſt, and teſtifie to you, my brethren of the Jewiſh nation, that truth, of which mine own conſcience in the preſence of the holy Ghoſt (that is privie to, and ſearcher of hearts) is witneſſe to me, my brethren the Jewes, that depend upon the Law, and confide in their own righteouſneſſe, and will not be brought to look after Chriſt, and that inward purity by him preſcribed, in ſtead of the external circumciſion, &c. is matter of great grief and inceſſant torment to my ſoul.

b. 3. So farre am I from deſerving to be thought (as I

Or that, as Chriſt being not accurſed, or worthy of any ill, became a curſe for us, ſo after his example, any the ſaddeſt condition might fall on me; Or, if it were poſſible, and if it might any way tend to this end, I could, me thinks, be content to part with all mine own hopes and intereſts in Chriſt, even mine eternall heaven and bliſſe, on condition my brethren and conſanguineans, the Jewes, would leave their truſt in the Law, and in their being Abraham's ſeed, and come in to the Goſpel, and make uſe of the privileges that are allowed them there. So paſſionate is my love toward them, that I could endure any loſſe by way of expiation for them, to reſcue them from their infidelity, and the deſtruction that attends them.

poſterity of Abraham, and Iſaac, and Jacob (and favoured by God for their fathers ſakes) and honoured with the privilege of being acknowledged as ſons, or people of God, the privilege of having God preſent among them, his majeſty ſhining, as it did in the ark, 1 Sam. 2. 12. 6. But whatſoever becomes of theſe children of Abraham

* But it is not poſſible that, οὐχ ὅτι † ſhould have miſcarried in promiſes

according to the fleſh, yet for all this the promiſe of God made to him doth no way miſcarry, the ſins of Abraham's carnal ſeed cannot make God's promiſe to be fruſtrated, ch. 3. 3. (from which place to this, the diſcourſe begun ch. 3. 2. had been interrupted, and not reſumed again till now, and here reſumed and purſued) for the promiſe was not made to his carnal, but ſpiritual ſeed, to believers begotten after the image of his faith; the privileges made to Iſraelites doe not belong to all that are of the ſtock of Jacob.

7. Nor doth the adoption (the ſecond privilege v. 4.) or the privilege of being received in by God as his peculiar people, belong to all that are come from Abraham, for it was once ſaid to Sarah, Gen. 21. 12. that the promiſed ſeed ſhould be confined to Iſaac's line (or, from Iſaac ſhall come the bleſſed ſeed, or, that ſhall be the bleſſed ſeed that comes from Iſaac, ſee note on Mat. 2. k.) and Iſmael, though he were Abraham's child, ſhould not inherit, nor have any part in it, or (as Theophylact) thoſe ſhall be the ſeed of Abraham, who are born after the manner of Iſaacs birth, that is, by the word or promiſe of God.

8. Which ſignifies that the privilege of adoption belongs

8. That is, they which are the children of the fleſh, theſe are not the children of God: but the children of the promiſe are counted for the ſeed.]

not to all Jewes, or to men as being born of that ſtock, but being made over by promiſe, it belongs to thoſe to whom the promiſe was made: that is, not to thoſe that expect juſtification by obſervation of the Moſaical law of circumciſion, &c. or depend upon their abſolute election, as Abraham's ſeed, and ſo live negligently and ſecurely; but to the faithfull regenerate Chriſtians, which are the ſeed adumbrated in Iſaac, and called the children of promiſe here, & heirs according to promiſe, Gal. 3. 29. the men to whom the promiſe belongs which was made to the faithfull Abraham, and ſuch as he was, begotten ſpiritually after the ſimilitude of his faith, though they ſprang not from his loyns.

an act meerly of God's free mercy, a work of extraordinary providence, for which neither Abraham nor Sarah had any ground to hope, but onely that promiſe made Gen. 17. 21. & 18. 10. in theſe words, According to this time, (that is, the time of bearing children after conception) I will viſit thee and give thee a ſon; by which 'tis clear, that the birth of Iſaac was an effect of God's promiſe, and nothing elſe, and ſo that they to whom the promiſe belongs, that is, not the natural ſons of Abraham, but the ſpiritual ſons, not they that deſcend from his loynes, but they that follow the example of his faith, whoſoever they be, Jewes or Gentiles, may, (upon obedience to the faith) and ſhall be accepted for his children, as Abraham was.

† but alſo Rebecca conceiving at once

10. And not only this, † but when Rebecca alſo had conceived f by one, even by our father Iſaac,] 10. Another type there was, and proof of this, in the children of Rebecca, twinnes, which ſhe conceived by our father Iſaac, to wit, Eſau and Jacob. f.

* abide ſtirp † not from works, but from him εκ εξ εργων αλλ' εκ του

11. (For the children being not yet born, nor having done any good or evil, that the purpoſe of God according to g election might * ſtand, † not of works, but of him that calleth,)] 11. For before their birth, and when neither had done good or evil (which notes the Jewes and Gentiles, the one conſidered without any reſpect of their legal ſervices, the other of their Idolatries,) that the intention and reſolution of God to preferre one before the other might appear to be not on conſideration of their (nor conſequently of the Jewes and Gentiles) performances, but as an act of his own free diſpoſal, in diſpenſing that greater meaſure of his favours as ſeemed beſt to him, (for that is meant by calling, ſee note on Mat. 20. c.) even to the Gentiles which had done a great deal of ill, and not to the Jewes when they rejected Chriſt, even though they performed ſome external obediences, g.

12. It was ſaid unto her, The elder ſhall ſerve the younger,] 12. It was revealed to her by God, that the elder of the twins ſhould be inferiour to the younger (which ſignifies by way of accommodation, that the Jewes the elder people, who had the privilege as it were of primogeniture, ſhould forfeit and loſe thoſe privileges which the Gentile Chriſtians attained to, whom God after begat to himſelf)

13. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Eſau have I hated.] 13. According to the prediction of the elder's ſerving the younger, Mal. 1. 2, 3. which though it had been true in their perſons, Jacob getting away the birthright firſt, then the prime bleſſing from Eſau, yet it had not its primary completion in their perſons (it no way appearing probable, that Eſau did in his perſon forſake the true God, and fall off to Idols) but had its principal and full accompliſhment in their poſterities, of whom Malachi hath delivered it from God, long after the death of both their perſons, that God preferred the Iſraelites before the Edomites, though indeed their progenitors Jacob and Eſau were brothers, and Eſau the elder of them. By both which typical ſtories it is plain, that as God binds not himſelf to obſerve privileges, to give Iſmael inheritance with Iſaac, only becauſe he was born of Abraham as well as he, nor to preferre Eſau before Jacob, and the Edumæans before the Iſraelites, only becauſe they were of the elder houſe or line; ſo neither doth he beſtow the promiſes made in Chriſt either as a prerogative of Iſraelites, or a reward of legal obedience, but leaves himſelf free to receive Gentiles as well as Jewes, nay to call Gentiles, and reject the Jewes, and to accept of the Chriſtian faith in ſtead of the Moſaical obſervances, the internal, ſincere, Evangelical, in ſtead of the external, legal obedience.

* What ſay we then? ch. 6. 1.

14. * What ſhall we ſay then? Is there unrighteouſneſſe with God? God forbid.] 14. But doe we not by ſaying this make God unjuſt? Is it not injuſtice in him to accept theſe, to have mercy on believing Gentiles, and to caſt off Jewes, that are Abraham's ſeed, which perform the ordinances of the Law, circumciſion, &c. No certainly, we charge nothing on God by this; that which we ſay is agreeable to his own words, Exod. 33. 19.

15. For he ſaith unto Moſes, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compaſſion on whom I will have compaſſion.] 15. For there, upon Moſes's deſire to ſee his glory, he tells him his name by which he will be proclaimed, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, &c. and ſo again Exod. 34. 6. that is, In ſhewing mercy I will doe what I think good, without giving thee or any man any further account of it, then mine own moſt gracious will and pleaſure, (not that I have not reaſons to doe it, but that I need not, in diſtributing of mercies, which have no foundation in the merits of men, render any other reaſon or motive, but mine own will, whereby I may doe what I will with mine own.) And accordingly God cannot now be reſtrained in reaſon or juſtice from ſhewing mercy to the heathen world, ſo farre, as to appoint Chriſt to be preached to them. For what ſhould oblige or lay any neceſſity on him to damne or reject eternally every one that deſerved it? From which declaration of God's it follows, that therefore God may moſt juſtly call, and accept, and have mercy on Gentiles, invite them to Chriſtianity, though never ſo Idolatrous, and then ſave them upon Chriſtian, without legal, performances.

16. So then it is not of him that willeth, or of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth mercy.] 16. From which teſtimony it is plain, that this mercy is not the merit or due peculiarly of them that moſt violently pretend to have it ſo, and ſtrive moſt for it, (that is, of the Jewes, as is implied v. 31. though they ſtrive not as they ought to doe,) and again that 'tis not any thing of merit in the Gentile, for which God calls him to Chriſtianity, (now the Jew hath rejected it) as 'twas not all that Iſaac could doe by willing to beſtow the bleſſing on Eſau, nor that Eſau could doe by running to obtain it, when he came running and crying, Haſt thou but one bleſſing, &c. (ſee Chryſoſt. t. 5. p. 775.) but only the free mercy of God to undeſerving Gentiles, (when the Jewes have firſt had, and contemned this mercy.)

† raiſed thee

17. For the Scripture ſaith unto Pharaoh, Even for this ſame purpoſe have I h † raiſed thee up, that I might ſhew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.] 17. And for the other part of the doctrine, againſt which injuſtice was objected, viz. that of the rejecting of the Jewes, and not juſtifying them, upon obſervation of Moſaical external performances, without inward purity preach'd by Chriſt, there is as plain a teſtimony again of God's, concerning his dealing in the like caſe, viz. ſhewing exemplary puniſhments on impenitent ſinners (and ſuch were the Jewes that would not believe on Chriſt, but depended on the prerogative of their birth and legal performances.) And this is in the caſe of Pharaoh Exod. 9. 10. when after the ſixth judgment, Pharaoh having hardned his own heart ſo long, and over and above fruſtrated Moſes's ſpecial laſt warning, Exod. 8. 29. and hardned his heart that time alſo, v. 32. (anſwerable to which was the Jewes reſiſting of Chriſt alſo after all the reſt of the Prophets, ſtoning the ſon after the ſervants, in the parable, and moreover reſiſting of the Apoſtles preaching through all their cities, after Chriſt's reſurrection, upon which God gave them up to obduration, and the Apoſtles departed to the Gentiles,) God takes Pharaoh in hand, and ſaith he will harden his heart (v. 12.) this time, though not before v. 14. and adds that he had or would have cut him off with the peſtilence (ſee note i.) and utterly deſtroyed him from the earth, ſee v. 15. in the præter, not future tenſe, but that he preſerved him alive beyond his time, raiſed him out of that great danger, or peſtilential diſeaſe, that had been upon the land, for no other end, but to make the divine power more illuſtriouſly viſible in him, and make all the earth hear of the exemplary puniſhments of God, in this life, upon one that had thus often hardned his heart againſt God. h.

* So then αρα ου

18. * Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he wil he i hardneth.] 18. From which ſpeech of God's to Pharaoh 'tis evident, that as God in ſhewing mercy is not bound to render any reaſon of it beyond his own will, v. 15. ſo when he delivers up an obdurate ſinner to the obduration of his heart, this he may juſtly doe if he pleaſe, eſpecially when all that is done in this, is not by infuſing any quality into him, but by leaving him now to himſelf, who had ſo often held out againſt God, and by inflicting that judgment on him on earth, which had otherwiſe been at this time his portion in hell; and this for ends formerly mentioned v. 17. Whereas to many others, not ſo farre advanced in obduration, he continueth his admonitions & chaſtiſements, and by that means brings them to reformation. (And as this was moſt viſibly true on one ſide in Pharaoh, and on many other men on the other ſide, i.

to whom God ſhewes himſelf thus mercifull, infinitely beyond their merit, of which no account can be given by us, but only God's free mercy; ſo in the caſe in hand of the Jewes and Gentiles, 'tis moſt obſervable, God's free undeſerved grace is his only motive to ſhew mercy to the Gentiles, to call them to the Goſpel, and his free pleaſure to deal thus with the incredulous obdurate Jewes, to leave them at laſt to themſelves (upon their hardning themſelves ſo oft, deſpiſing the prophets, crucifying the Son of God, and at laſt rejecting the Apoſtles, and in them the holy Ghoſt coming to them, fortified with that great teſtimony (as of Jonas out of the whales belly, which converted ſinfull Ninive) the reſurrection of Chriſt from the dead) and ſo by hiding from their eyes the things that belong to their peace, by withdrawing the Goſpel from them, to harden their hearts, Mat. 13. 14. Mar. 4. 12. Luk. 8. 10. Joh. 21. 40. Act. 28. 26. Rom. 11. 8.)

19. But upon this paſſage of Pharaoh 'tis, or may be objected, If God after the ſixth judgement hardned Pharaoh's heart, why doth he then expoſtulate or chide with him after that, as 'tis clear he doth, Exod. 9. 17. [As yet exalteſt thou thy ſelf?] for then God might be ſaid to will his obduration, which he had inflicted on him as a puniſhment, and then what poſſibility was there for him to reſiſt his will, that God ſhould ſtill find fault? (Parallel to this it may perhaps be objected in reſpect of the Jewes, who after God's delivering up the Jewes to that obduration, foretold Mat. 13. 14. and intimated (though not yet, at the ſpeaking of thoſe words, come to paſſe) Luk. 19. 42. that after the Apoſtles departing from them, and preaching to the Gentiles, Act. 13. 46. he yet by himſelf and his Apoſtles reproves and chides them, when now the prediction of their ſubverſion and total deſtruction is irreverſibly gone out againſt them, Luk. 23. 44.) To this objection moſt clearly and punctually propoſed (as it concerns Pharaoh at that time of his life, when God ſaid [As yet exalteſt thou thy ſelf?] and by intimation and analogie, as it concerns the Jews, his parallel) and indeed to the whole matter before ſet down, the Apoſtle anſwers, 1. by way of indignation againſt the objecter, to repell the force of his argument, thus,

19. Thou wilt ſay then unto me, Why doth he yet find fault? for who hath reſiſted his will?]

20. In matters that thus belong to the wiſdome of God, and his diſpenſations, what man ſhall dare object any thing againſt his proceedings? ſhall the creature diſpute with the Creator, or queſtion him, to what end he hath thus and thus dealt with him? Is there any reaſon to find fault with God (or ſo much as to make any reply to him) for asking that queſtion of Pharaoh after that time, or doing any thing proportionable to that, to the Jewes after judgement was gone out againſt them? In matters of juſt and equall God is willing to appeal to and to be judged by us, Iſa. 5. 3. Ezech. 18. 25. but in matters of wiſdome, whether he hath done wiſely or no, in expoſtulating with Pharaoh and the Jewes, when he hath deſerted and delivered them up irreverſibly to the hardneſſe of their own hearts, there is no reaſon in the world, that what God hath done ſhould be diſputed againſt by us, or that he ſhould be bound to render, or we be ſuppoſed to diſcern a reaſon of it.

20. Nay but, O man, who art thou that replieſt * againſt God? ſhall the thing formed ſay to him that formed it, Why haſt thou made me thus?] * to God πρὸς Θεὸν

21. Nay we give that liberty to an ordinary tradeſman, a potter by name (God uſing that reſemblance in this matter Jer. 18. 3.) of the ſame lump of clay to make one veſſel for an honorable uſe, to be employed at the table, &c. and while the wheel runs, or the ſtuffe growes worſe, or miſcarries in the hand of the potter, Jer. 18. 4. and ſo proves unfit for ſo good an employment, to make another for an inferior, leſſe honourable uſe, as it ſeems good to him; and why may we not give God leave to have mercy upon one, who according to the condition of things laid down in the Goſpel, is capable of mercy, and ſo to bring ſome Jewes (a tithe of them Iſa. 16. 14.) and a multitude of heathens to Chriſtianity, and to life, by their performance of thoſe conditions on which God hath promiſed reception, and on the other ſide to reject all obſtinate contemners of them, to leave them in their obduration, nay to deal with them as he did with Pharaoh, by withdrawing all grace, by hiding from their eyes the things that belonged to their peace, after they have ſo long ſhut their eyes wilfully and reſolvedly againſt the Goſpel, to harden them irreverſibly, to make another kind of veſſel of them, to ſome, though not an honourable uſe, Jer. 18. 4. and ſo to fulfill that propheſie Iſa. 6. 10. Make their hearts fat, &c. and that till their land be utterly deſolate, v. 11. and all this upon their former obdurating their own hearts, Mat. 13. 15. which is meant by the veſſels miſcarrying in the hand of the potter, that is, while he was doing that toward them which belonged to their peace? This being premiſed for the repelling of the diſputer, he now proceeds to a more punctual, clear, ſatisfactory anſwer, by way of queſtion alſo or interrogation, which may be eaſily diſſolved into this poſitive concluſion:

21. Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the ſame lump to make one veſſel to honour, and another unto diſhonour?]

22. God on purpoſe to expreſſe his wrath viſibly in this life upon Pharaoh (and in like manner on the rebellious Jewes) and to make other nations to take notice what God is able to doe in the puniſhing of ſinners (an effect of which you may ſee clearly in the Philiſtims, who took warning by the ſtory of Pharaoh, 1 Sam. 6. 6.) ſuffered this man to live, when he was fit for nothing but hell (having filled up the meaſure of his iniquities) by his continuing alive, to ſhew ſome exemplary judgments upon him: Wherein yet there was longanimity expreſs'd, and mercy to him, this eſtate on earth being more tolerable then it had been to have been thrown into hell preſently; as alſo to the Jewes it was, in not cutting them off preſently upon their direfull rebellions (as moſt juſtly he might,) but ſuffering them to continue a people ſome time after the crucifying of Chriſt, and the Apoſtles preaching his reſurrection to them, nay ſending them ſtill to preach over every city of Jewry, as Moſes was ſent to Pharaoh after God's hardning his heart. All which being an act of long-ſuffering to them, was deſigned by God to this end of magnifying his judgments on thoſe who ſhould perſiſt in their obſtinacy, and ſhewing forth his power moſt illuſtriouſly in their deſtruction. Well then, this on Pharaoh and on the Jewes was done firſt to ſhew God's wrath in puniſhing of obdurate ſinners, but that is not all.

22. † What if God, willing to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long-ſuffering the veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction?] † But if

23. There was another more remote end of it, (ſee ch. 11. 11, 12.) by this means of diſcernible ſeverity on them, to illuſtrate and ſet forth more notably his abundant goodneſſe to others, to afford the Goſpel, and the benefits of the coming of Chriſt, and his preſence here on earth (for that ſeems to be the meaning of the word [glory] as that notes the preſence of God among the Jewes, ſee note c. and on John 1. c.) on ſome others, whom he had prepared and fitted before-hand for theſe more honourable purpoſes, believing in Chriſt here, and reigning with him hereafter. (And thus that is true alſo, which was ſaid in the other part of v. 18. He decreed to ſhew mercy on the Gentiles and others believing in Chriſt, as he hardned the veſſels of wrath, the obdurate contumacious Jewes.)

23. And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the veſſels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory?]

24. Even us, to whom God hath vouchſafed this favour of revealing Chriſt to us, ſome of us Jews, but the farre greater number of the Gentiles, who have made uſe of that mercy of his, and obeyed his call,

24. Even us, whom he hath called, not of the Jewes onely, but alſo of the Gentiles,]

25. According to that prediction in Hoſea ch. 2. 23. where God ſaith, I will ſay unto them which were not my people, Ye are my people; and I will have mercy on her which had not obtained mercy, which notes God's receiving the Gentiles into the Church, which was an act meerly of God's mercy (at which the Jewiſh believers were aſtoniſhed Act. 10. 45.) utterly undeſerved.

25. As he ſaith alſo in Oſee, I will call them my people which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved:]

26. And according to that other ſaying of Hoſea, c. 1. 10. which is thus to be rendred out of the originall, And it ſhall come to paſſe in ſtead of that which was ſaid to them, Ye are not my people, it ſhall be ſaid to them, Ye are the Sonnes of the living God; which place ſeems to belong to the Jewes (not Gentiles) thoſe of them that ſhould believe at the preaching of the Goſpell, (for ſo the next verſe Hoſ. 1. 11. ſeems to import, and the place which here follows of Iſaiah) now after they had been carried captive ſo oft, and ſo ſeverely puniſh'd by God for their ſins.

26. And it ſhall come to paſſe, that in the place where it was ſaid unto them, Ye are not my people, there ſhall they be called the children of the living God.]

27. Eſaias alſo cryeth concerning Iſrael, Though the number of the children of Iſrael be as the ſand of the ſea, a remnant ſhall † be ſaved.] 27. Whereupon Iſaiah alſo propheſies, and proclaimes concerning the Jewes, Iſa. 10. 22, 23. thus, Though the number of the people of the Jewes be as the ſand of the ſea, the number of earnall Iſraelites never ſo great, yet a very few of them ſhall believe in Chriſt, (ſee Act. 2. 47.) or, as it is in the originall, return, that is, convert from their rebellions to Chriſt.

† eſcape σωθήσεται

28. k For * he will finiſh the work, and cut it ſhort in righteouſneſſe, becauſe a ſhort work will the Lord make upon the earth.] 28. For the Lord ſhall deal in juſtice with, or upon the land of Judæa (the people of the Jewes) as one that perfects or makes up an account, and caſts off, that is, which in making up an account of a ſtewardſhip, having ballanced the diſburſements with the receipts, leaves ſome ſmall ſum behinde; be there never ſo many of that people, there ſhall but few be left, the farre greater part being involved in infidelity firſt, and then in deſtruction. k.

* perfecting and cutting off the account in juſtice, the Lord ſhall even make a ſummary account on the land; or, the Lord ſhall make an account on the land, perfecting and cutting ſhort,

29. And as Eſaias ſaid before, Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a ſeed, we had been as Sodome, and been made like unto Gomorrha.] 29. And as Iſaiah ſaith again, c. 1. g. of the ſame people, Unleſſe the Lord of the hoſts of Angels and ſtarres in heaven, and of the whole frame of the world, had left to us Jewes a ſeed, (in which, as other things when they are dead uſe to revive, ſo that people, almoſt utterly deſtroyed, might have ſome poſſibility of ſpringing up again) or, as the originall in Iſaiah hath it, a very ſmall remnant, we had been as utterly deſtroyed, as Sodome and Gomorrha were.

† ſay we then c 6.1.

30. What † ſhall we ſay then? that the Gentiles which followed not after righteouſneſſe, have l attained to righteouſneſſe, even the righteouſneſſe which is of faith.] 30. To conclude therefore, that which all this while hath been a proving (and to the proving of which all that hath been ſaid in this Chapter muſt be referr'd, as premiſſes to infer this concluſion and no other) is this, That the Gentiles that ſtrove not for juſtification, that did not ſo zealouſly pretend that they were the favourites of God, did attain to it by receiving the faith of Chriſt, upon which, though they had formerly been Idolaters, they were juſtified. l.

* came not foremoſt, ἐφθασεν

31. But Iſrael, which followed after the Law of righteouſneſſe, * hath not attained to the Law of righteouſneſſe.] 31. But the Jewes that did moſt diligently contend to be juſtified by the Law, did not yet outrun the Gentiles, attain the goale, or get juſtification before them, but on the contrary, the Gentiles have gotten the advantage of them very much.

32. Wherefore? becauſe they ſought it not by faith, but, as it were, by the works of the Law: for they ſtumbled at † that ſtumbling-ſtone,] 32. And why not? why, becauſe they ſought it not by Chriſt, or by the Evangelicall way, nay could not endure that, when it was revealed to them, but onely by the privileges of being Jewes, and performance of externall, legal obſervances, and ſo fell down in the midſt of their race, being not patient to believe that their law ſhould be aboliſhed (or that Chriſt that was born, lived, and dyed in a mean condition, ſhould be the Meſſias of the world, 1 Cor. 1. 23.) but upon that one prejudice, caſting off all Chriſtianity,

* a ſtone of offence and a ſtone of ſcandall, λίθον προσκόμματος καὶ πέτραν σκανδάλου, 33. As it is written, Behold I lay in Sion * a ſtumbling ſtone, and a rock of offence: and whoſoever believeth on him, m ſhall not be aſhamed.] 33. According to that which is written Iſ. 28. 16. Behold I lay in Sion a ſtone tryed and pretious (ſee note on Mat. 10. b.) but ſuch an one as the Jewes ſhould ſtumble at, thinking it contrary to the Moſaicall way, and ſo falling off from, and perſecuting Chriſtianity; which notwithſtanding, the true orthodox faithfull Chriſtian will ſtill adhere to, and hold faſt, and never forſake or deny Chriſt (ſee c. 10, 11. and 1 Pet. 2. 6.) nor conſequently ſhall he ever be denyed, or forſaken by him. m.

The ſumme then of this whole chapter will be reduced to theſe five heads: firſt, the privileges of the Jewes, and among them eſpecially Chriſt's being born of that ſtock; ſecondly, that thoſe of them which reſiſted and believed not in Chriſt, were delivered up to obduration by God, and the Gentiles taken in in their ſtead; thirdly, that 'twas moſt juſt in God to deal thus with them; fourthly, that ſome of the Jewes at that time believed in Chriſt; fifthly, that the cauſe that the reſt believed not, was, that after a Phariſaicall manner they ſought juſtification by the works of the Law, circumciſion, &c. deſpiſing the faith and doctrine of Chriſt, and that Evangelicall way of juſtification, and ſo ſtumbled at the Chriſtian doctrine which they ſhould have believed, were the worſe for him and the preaching of the Apoſtles, by whom they ſhould have been ſo much the better.

Annotations on Chap. IX.

3. ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ τῶν

V. 1. In the holy Ghoſt] This ſpeciall expreſſion of God in, or by, the holy Ghoſt, which in ſtead of ὁ θεὸς God c. 1. 9 is uſed in this and ſome other places, doth denote the ſpeciall office and prerogative of that holy Spirit, as to plant purity and ſincerity in the heart, contrary to all kinde of pollution and mixture, eſpecially that of deceit and hypocriſie, ſo to be privy to the ſecrets, to take notice of the motions of the heart. And this in proportion with the ſpirit of a man, of which as Solomon ſaith, that it is the candle of the Lord, ſearching the inner parts of the belly, ſo ſaith the Apoſtle 1 Cor. 2. 11. The Spirit of a man knoweth the things of a man, ſo as no man elſe knowes them: by analogy to which he infers, that there is no other way of knowing the things of God, but by his Spirits revealing them to us; For the Spirit ſearcheth all things, even the depths of God, v. 10. in which reſpect the ſpirit of the world, v. 12. is ſet to denote the meanes which the world hath to inſtruct us in any thing, the wiſdome of the world, v. 13. which is there ſet oppoſite to the ſpirit of God. Thus Act. 5. Ananias, that had in heart and reſolution conſecrated his eſtate to the ſervice of Chriſt, and broke this reſolution, or promiſe of his heart, is ſaid to ly to, or to have deceived, the holy Ghoſt peculiarly, v. 3. becauſe he had done contrary to the vow of his heart, which (though not under mans, yet) was under the Holy Ghoſts privity. And ſo here beſide the witneſſe of the conſcience, the Holy Ghoſt is appealed to, as he that knowes the inmoſt ſecrecies, and conſequently, that that is the teſtimony of his conſcience, which he pretends to be ſo.

V. 3. Accurſed] The phraſe ἀνάθεμα εἶναι, to be a curſe, in this place, is capable of many ſignifications, each of which may be applyable to the matter in hand, to expreſſe the Apoſtles fervent affection towards his countrymen. Firſt, it may ſignifie, to be excommunicate and caſt out of the Church: Ἀνάθεμα, ἀκοινώνητον, it ſignifies excommunicate, ſaith Heſychius. Thus ἤτω ἀνάθεμα 1 Cor. 16. 22. Let him be anathema, is, let him be removed from the Chriſtian aſſemblies, deprived of thoſe privileges of Chriſtians, which there are afforded them; and ſo Gal. 1. 8, 9. ἀνάθεμα ἔστω, let him b. Ἀνάθεμα εἶναι be excommunicated, turned out with the greateſt averſation out of the Church of God, avoided, ſeparated from, whoſoever ſhall teach any other doctrine, though he were an Apoſtle, or an Angel of God, that did it. So in S. Chryſoſtome, ἀνάθεμα ἐκκλησίας ποιήσαντες ἄνθρωπον, they that excommunicate any man, or make him anathema from the Church. If this be the notion, then ἀπὸ Χριστοῦ from Chriſt muſt ſignifie from the body of Chriſt, as by a ſynecdoche the word Chriſt is uſed. 1 Cor. 12. 12. Gal. 3. 27. or as it is manifeſt, that Chriſt being the head of the Church, he that is cut off from the body, may truly be ſaid to be cut off from Chriſt. And then he that was by the Jewes accuſed and perſecuted for having made a defection and departure from the Moſaicall law, and ſetting up Chriſtian aſſemblies, in oppoſition to their Judaicall ſervice, may here fitly expreſs his kindneſs to them, (and how little pleaſure he took in departing from them) in wiſhing himſelf ejected from the participation of thoſe moſt valuable privileges, on condition they might be made capable of them. Secondly, it is known that in thoſe Primitive times this anathematizing, or excommunicating, was attended with the delivering up to Satan, and that with the ὀλεθρῳ σαρκὸς, very ſharp, ſevere inflictions on the fleſh, diſeaſes, afflictions, &c. And therefore anathema in this notion, may be taken with this improvement, and ſo contain all temporall calamities that he was willing to endure, or undergoe for their good. That this is the meaning of the place, may ſeem probable by comparing it with a like phraſe of Ignatius the holy Martyr in his Epiſtle to the Romans, where in an expreſſion of his zeale to Chriſt he hath this phraſe, Κόλασις τοῦ διαβόλου ἐπ' ἐμὲ ἐρχέσθω, μόνον ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω, Let the puniſhment of the devill come upon me, onely that I may obtain Chriſt: where the puniſhment of the devill cannot be the puniſhments of hell, which are no way ordinable to the obtaining of Chriſt, but any the greateſt torments or inflictions in this life, or even death it ſelf, that ὀλεθρῳ σαρκὸς the deſtruction of the fleſh. As when Moſes in an expreſſion of the like zeale and kindneſſe to his brethren, wiſheth that God would blot him out of his book, that is, I ſuppoſe, out of the book of the living, in the Pſalmiſts phraſe, ſo as not to be written among the righteous, in that roll wherein the names of all the people of God are ſuppoſed to be inſcribed; and to be capable of being blotted out, not noting the ſtate of life, and bliſſe in heaven, for out of that there is no poſſibility of blotting but that which belongs to this life, that is, either life ſimply, or living among the people of God, (anſwerable to excommunication before mention'd.) And accordingly the Arabick tranſlation is, that my body were מחרמא an anathema from Chriſt. And it is an ordinary form of ſpeech among the Jews, אני כפרתו, may I be his expiation; ſee Aruch, and Cod. Sanhedrin, c. 2. אנו כפרתך be we thy expiation, which, ſaith Maimonides, is uſed to expreſſe רוב אהבותו the exceſſe of love or kindneſſe to any. The other notions of the phraſe, of which it is capable, and have therefore been mentioned in the paraphraſe, may be ſeen at large in Photius, Epiſt. 216.

c. δόξα.

V. 4. The glory] That the Ark of God, where he was pleaſed to exhibit himſelf, is the thing expreſſed by ἡ δόξα the glory, is clear by that known place in the Old Teſtament. The glory is departed from Iſrael, for the Ark of God is taken. And the reaſon of the appellation is as clear, becauſe the Cherubims being placed in the Ark on the ἱλαστήριον, or covering, God was ſaid to be preſent there in the ſame manner as on Mount Sinai, (that is, by the viſible apparition of Angels there) Act. 7 53. Gal. 3. 19. Heb. 2. 2. And this preſence of his by Angels is ordinarily called δόξα glory in the New Teſtament, anſwerable to שכינה among the Rabbins (from Exod. 24. 16. the glory of the Lord ישכן dwelt, or abode upon the Mount, to which the Apoſtle refers 2. Cor. 3. 9. where the giving of the Law was ſaid to be δόξα glory) as may appeare by many places. Thus when Iſa. 6. 1. we read, after the Lord's ſitting on the throne, that his train filled the Temple, the Septuagint have πλήρης ὁ οἶκος δόξης αὐτοῦ, the houſe was full of his glory; and then follows immediately, καὶ Σεραφὶμ ἱστήκεισαν κύκλῳ αὐτοῦ, the Seraphim ſtood about him: and Saint John retains the Septuagints reading, Joh. 12. 41. theſe things ſpake Iſaiah, when he ſaw his glory (ſee Note on Joh. 1. c. and Mat. 3. k.) ſo Mat. 16. 27. where ἔρχεσθαι ἐν δόξῃ τοῦ πατρὸς to come in the glory of the father, is explained preſently by μετ' ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ, with his angels; and ſo Mat. 25. 31. in his glory, and all his Angels with him; and ſo Mar. 8. 38. the glory of the Father, with his holy Angels, and c. 13. 26. where his coming in the clouds (which belongs to the appearance of Angels, which was wont to be in a bright ſhining cloud, which we ordinarily call a glory) is ſaid to be in power and great glory; and it followes immediately v. 27. and then ſhall he ſend his Angels: and ſo Lu. 21. 27. So Lu. 2. 9. the Angel of the Lord appeared, and the glory ſhone round about. So Joh. 1. 19 when he had ſaid of Chriſt incarnate, ἐσκήνωσεν, he dwelt among us, (that Greek word being of the ſame Hebrew origination with the שכינה) it followes, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the onely-begotten of the father, viz. in the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt (with that ſatellitium of Angels) upon him after his Baptiſme; the like to which 2 Pet. 1. 17. is called a voice from heaven, from the excellent glory. See alſo 2 Pet. 1. 3. and 1 Pet. 4. f. So Act. 7. 55. when 'tis ſaid of Stephen, that he ſaw the glory of God, that is, ſure, the guard of Angels about God: ſo theſe very Angels in the Ark are called the Cherubims of glory. Heb. 9. 5. Agreeable to this is the ναὸς κατασκηνώσεως τοῦ ὑψίστου, Job 1. 5. the temple of the inhabitation, or שכינה appearance, or glory, of the moſt high; and ſo 2 Cor. 12. 9. ἵνα ἐπισκηνώσῃ ἐπ' ἐμὲ ἡ δύναμις τοῦ Χριστοῦ, that the power of Chriſt may inhabit upon me, referres to the uſe of the word σκηνόω from שכן, to this ſenſe, that the power of Chriſt ſhould ſo ſhew it ſelf upon him, as God was wont to exhibit himſelf in the שכינה, or glorious appearance in the Ark. And thus in the Gemara Babylonica, ſpeaking of the High-prieſt, when he enquires any thing of the Urim and Thummim, פניו כלפי שכינה, he turnes his face toward Schechinah, that is, toward the Ark, where God is ſaid to inhabit.

V. 5. God bleſſed for ever] This place is ſo clear a proof of the Divinity of Chriſt, that Proclus de fide p. 53. ſaith of it, that it convinces all the Hereſies concerning Chriſt, ᾗ παρέδυσιν συκοφαντίας ἀποτειχίζει πᾶσι φιλολοιδόροις, and it ſhuts and walls up all paſſages for calumny from them that love contumely, or railing at Chriſt. So Theophylact, Καὶ ἐντεῦθεν ἡ κατασχύνεται Ἄρειος, ὅτε τοῦ Παύλου τὸν Χριστὸν ὅλων πάντων Θεὸν ἀναπηδύοντος. From hence is Arius confuted and put to ſhame, S. Paul proclaiming Chriſt to be God over all. This will more appear, if it be remembred that it was a cuſtome among the Jewes ſolemnly obſerved, that when ever the Prieſt in the Sanctuary delivered the name of God, the people uſed ſome words of bleſſing or praiſing him, ſuch as theſe, ברוך שם חבוד מלכותו לעולם ועד, benedictum ſit nomen gloriæ regni ejus in ſecula ſeculorum, bleſſed be the name of the glory of his kingdome for ever and ever. So in Gemara Babylonica, Rabbi ſaid כי שם ה' אקרא &c. when I call on the name of Jehovah, doe you magnifie our Lord; ſo ſaid Moſes to Iſrael, Deut. 32. 3. when I mention the name of the bleſſed God, doe you magnifie. So ſaith Solomon Jarchi on Deut. 32. 3.

From

From that command of Moſes it is, that after the benediction in the Sanctuary the people anſwer ברוך שם, &c. Bleſſed be the glorious name of his kingdome. To theſe forms were after added the words לעולם ועד εἰς αἰῶνας for ever and ever, or, to age and age, that is, εἰς αἰῶνας, to ages, here, becauſe (ſay the Rabbins) of the Hereſie of the Sadducees, who ſaid there was but one age. So Cod. Berachoth c. 9. In all the concluſions of the ברכות benedictions, which were in the Sanctuary, they ſaid מן העולם from age, but after that the Sadducees had perverted that, and ſaid there was but one age, they decreed that they ſhould ſay, from age to age. Many evidences of this cuſtome there are in the Old Teſtament, eſpecially in the Pſalms. And the abbreviate of all theſe forms was (the words uſed Rom. 1. 25.) ὃς ἐστιν εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Ἀμήν. Who is bleſſed for ever, Amen; and here ſomewhat more largely, ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς, &c. Who is above all, God bleſſed for ever and ever, Amen. Parallel to this are thoſe other, the Doxology at the end of the Lord's Prayer, Mat. 6 and in this Epiſtle ᾧ ἡ δόξα εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Ἀμήν, to him be glory for ever, Amen. c. 11. 36. and c. 16. 7. and Gal. 1. 5. and Eph. 3. 21. Phil. 4. 20. 1 Tim. 1. 17. 2 Tim. 4. 18. and Hebr. 13. 21. 1 Pet. 4. 11. and 5. 11. and 2 Pet. 3. 18. Jude 25. Rev. 1. 6. and 7. 12. In all which places this giving of glory being an acknowledgment of the eternall God, and in leverall of them being applyed peculiarly to Chriſt (who is diſtinctly called God, Act. 20. 28. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Tit. 2. 13.) as here, and Heb. 13. 21. and in all the places in S. Peter, and Revel. 1. 6. this is a moſt convincing proofe of the Godhead of Chriſt teſtified in all theſe places. And of this cuſtome of the Jews applyed to Chriſt, the Chriſtian Church hath continued two imitations, one in bowing at the name of Jeſus, that other in the Eulogie, Glory be to thee, ô Lord, when the Goſpel of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt is named.

e. Κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον.

9. At this time] What is meant by κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον, according to this ſeaſon, will beſt appeare by Gen. 17. 21. and 18. 10. in the former of which 'tis rendred in the Greek εἰς τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον ἐν τῷ ἐνιαυτῷ ἑτέρῳ, according to this time in another year; in the latter, κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον εἰς ὥρας, according to this ſeaſon for times, which, I ſuppoſe, is corruptly ſet out for τῆς ὥρας of time, ὥρα being a ſeaſon, or time of yeare, and ſo the meaning will be, according to this time of the year. The Hebrew reads it c. 17. למועד הזה literally κατὰ καιρὸν τοῦτον according to this ſeaſon, the word rendred καιρὸς ſignifying indifferently time, (though coming from a root that ſignifies conſtituit, it be ordinarily rendred appointed time) and in c. 18. 'tis בעת חיה, we render it, according to the time of life, the Jeruſalem Targum, quaſi hoc tempore quo vos vivitis, as it were at this time wherein ye live (unleſſe perhaps that be capable of an emendation, and ſhould be הזה, or האת according to this time; for ſo Rabbi Solomon כעת הואת, &c. ſecundùm hoc tempus anni futuri, according to this time of the future year, and Aben Ezra כעת הואת, juxta tempus hoc in anno ſequenti, cùm Sarah erit viva, about this time in the year following, when Sarah ſhall be alive, taking in the reading of חיה alſo.) All this ſeems to denote, not that time twelve moneth, but the next year at the time of childbirth, reckoning from that time wherein the promiſe was made (ſee Paulus Fagius in Collat.) And ſo 2 Kin. 4. 16. the like phraſe, about this ſeaſon according to the time of life thou ſhalt embrace a Son, is by the Hebrews interpreted, after the time wherein the fruit ſhall be quickened in the wombe, and come to a perfect firmneſſe of parts, and ſo come to birth thou ſhalt embrace, or have, a ſon. So that according to the time of life may moſt fitly ſignifie according to the manner, or courſe, of childrens being formed in the womb, quickened & born.

f. ἐξ ἑνὸς

V. 10. By one] Some other waies of rendring theſe words ἐξ ἑνὸς of one have been thought of by learned men, which it will not be unfit to mention; as that ἑνὸς ſhould be all one with μονογενοῦς, for ſo יחיד unigenitus was the title of Iſaac among the Jewes Gen. 22. 2. Heb 11. 17. and from thence Ἰεσσὲ in Philo Byblius by the Tyrian dialect, for Ἰεσσαὶ, and then the ſenſe will be, Rebecca having conceived by the only-begotten to wit Iſaac, our father, or, by Iſaac the only-begotten of our father. But ἐξ ἑνὸς ſeems rather to be taken Adverbially to ſignifie at once, (there being no priority in their conception on which to ground any favour to one above another.) and beſt agrees with the deſigne or argument which that is brought to confirme here. As for κοίτην ἔχειν, that is but a modeſt circumlocution to expreſs that which is not wont to be plainly ſpoken, as we find κοίτη a bed uſed ch. 13. 13. and Heb. 13. 4. Κοίτην ἔχειν

g. Ἐκλογὴ

V. 11. Election] The Hebrew בחר ſignifies both to chuſe, and to preferre, and is therefore rendred not only ἐκλέγειν to chuſe, but alſo προαιρεῖσθαι to preferre, Deut 7. 6. and 10. 15. Prov. 1. 29. and agreeable to that ἐκλογὴ election here ſignifies prelation and ἡ κατ' ἐκλογὴν Θεοῦ πρόθεσις is God's purpoſe in reſpect of this (or for the) preferring one before the other. See Note on 1 Pet. 2. c.

h. Ἐξηγείρειν

V. 17. Raiſed] The word ἐξεγείρειν ſignifies not here the raiſing up, as that notes bringing into the world, but the raiſing out of ſome low condition; yet not the grave neither, (though to that the word may properly be applied, where the matter requires it) but diſeaſe or danger, as it is often uſed, but eſpecially Jam. 5. 15. the prayer of faith ſhall ſave, that is, deliver, recover, the ſick, and the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, that is, reſtore him from that ſickneſſe. For the notion of it here, it will appear by the Hebrew word Exod. 9. 16. העמדתיך I have made thee ſtand, which the Chaldee renders קימתך raiſed thee (from the danger before ſpoken of, the peſtilential diſeaſe, or murrein that had lately been upon the land) and the ancient Latine, ſuſtentavi te, I have ſuſtained thee; but the Septuagint expreſly, διετηρήθης, thou wert kept, guarded, not ſuffered to fall into it, preſerved and kept alive; ſo Iſa. 49. 8. to raiſe up or make ſtand (the word uſed there) is an expreſſion of preſerving, reſcuing from danger, delivering. (See Note on Mat. 22. d.) And ſo this ſpeech muſt neceſſarily belong to that part of Pharao's life peculiarly, where in the murrein fell on Egypt, Exod. 9. 3. at which time he, for his many repeated obdurations of his own heart, was fit to have been delivered up to inſtant ruine, had not God for the illuſtrating of his glory in this veſſell of wrath, (thus fitted by himſelf for deſtruction) kept him alive a little longer. Theophylact renders it a little otherwiſe, εἰς μέσον σε ἤγαγον, I have ſet thee in the midſt, brought thee out as a perſon to be exemplarily puniſhed.

i. Σκληρύνει

V. 18. Hardeneth] God's hardning of Pharaoh's heart in this place, is that which befell Pharaoh Exod. 10. 1. when God ſaieth of him, I have hardned his heart. This was indeed foretold by God from the firſt of his ſending Moſes to him, c. 4. 21. Doe all the wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put into thine hand, but I will harden his heart, that he ſhall not let the people goe; and again c. 7. 3. I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply my ſigns, and, &c. But this foretelling it ſo early is no argument that it was immediately done, but on the contray, his own hardning his own heart is alſo foretold Exod. 3. 19. I am ſure that the king of Egypt will not let you goe, no not by a mighty hand. And accordingly ſo the ſtory proceeds, God ſhews miracles and ſigns before Pharaoh, Exod. 7. 10. and becauſe the Magicians of Ægypt did the like with their inchantments, it follows, Pharaoh's heart was hardned (not, he (as if it were God) hardned Pharaohs heart, but) ויחזק לב פרעה Pharaohs heart waxed hard, or ſtrong, was hardned, or, by an ordinary acception of Kal for Hithpahel, Pharaohs heart hardned it ſelf. And ſo it followes, v. 14. the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, Pharaohs heart is waxen hard, he refuſeth, &c. (and ſo the very ſame words are rendred by our Engliſh c. 7. 22. and ch. 8. 19. was hardned, in the paſſive, or, hardned its ſelf in the Reciprocal (not Actively, he hardned) and he hearkned not unto them.) After his hardning his heart thus againſt this firſt ſigne and command, God proceeds to a judgment of turning their water into blood, Exod. 7. 16, 17. and this as a ſufficient conviction to Pharaoh; for ſo ſaith God, Hitherto thou wouldſt not hear, but in this thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord, behold I will ſmite, &c. And yet after this, Pharaohs heart was hardned, or hardned it ſelf, v. 22. neither did he ſet his heart to this alſo, v. 23. becauſe the Magicians did the ſame things alſo by their enchantments. Then comes the plague of the Frogges on him, Exod. 8. 4. and into the Kings chamber, ſaith the Pſalmiſt; and to deliver him from them he calls for Moſes and promiſes fair, v. 8. and Moſes to work ſome good upon him bids him chuſe his time when, v. 9. and it ſhould be done for him, that thou mayſt know that there is none like unto the Lord our God, v. 10. But this had no effect on him neither, for when he ſaw there was reſpite, not yet diſcerning Gods purpoſe of vengeance on him for his contumacy, he hardned his heart. Whereupon ſaith * Kimchi, that God hardens hearts by concealing his counſels of judgment from them, as in Pharaoh and Sihon; and it is * S. Baſils obſervation, that Θεῦ μακροθυμία σκληρότητος αἰτία, God's long-ſuffering, giving him reſpite, was the cauſe, or occaſion, of his obduration of heart, He hardned his heart, and hearkned not, v. 15. And this was a third wilfull act of his own obduration, agreeable to what God had foretold of him, c. 3. 19. as the Lord had ſaid. Then comes the plague of Lice, v. 17. and the Magicians are poſed with that, and confeſſe the finger of God; and yet for all this his heart was hardned, or hardned its ſelf, v. 19. and he hearkned not, as the Lord had ſaid. Then 5ly, comes a ſwarm of flies, and with it a ſigne, as well as a miraculous puniſhment, no flies ſwarming in Goſhen, but in all the land of Ægypt beſides, by the diviſion and particularity of the puniſhment, to make him ſenſible of his ſinne, to the end that he might know, v. 22. on purpoſe to ſoften his heart. By this Pharaoh was wrought on a little, and gives leave firſt, that they ſhould ſacrifice, then that they ſhould go into the wilderneſs, only not very farre away, Exod. 10. 28. and upon this promiſe Moſes will intreat for him, v. 29. But ſeeing Pharaoh had already hardned his heart four times, and at one of thoſe times over and above dealt falſly, promiſed fair ch. 8. 8. and brake his promiſe, therefore now after this fifth judgment though Moſes promiſe to pray upon his promiſe to mend, yet he doth it with a particular admonition or warning, more then any time before, But let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more, v. 29. intimating that if he did, it would be worſe with him then before; and yet v. 32. as ſoon as the judgment was removed, Pharaoh hardned his heart, בפעם הזאת this turn, this time alſo. Upon this God ſends the ſixth plague, that of Murrein upon all the cattel of Ægypt, c. 9. 6. and the heart of Pharaoh was hardned, v. 7. and ſo ſtill, all this while, for theſe ſix judgments together, though Pharaoh were obdurate, yet this was not God's hardning his heart, but Pharaoh hardens his own heart, and will not let Iſrael goe, as the Lord commanded. Upon this God ſends another judgment, that of Boyles and Blaines v. 10. and then 'tis ſaid in a new ſtyle, The Lord hardned Pharaohs heart, v. 12. which as it was the very time at firſt referred to by the prediction of God to Moſes, c. 4. 21. ſo was it the judgment implicitly threatned in that ſpeciall warning, c. 8. 29. and this God never did till then; and therefore as after that warning 'twas ſaid, that Pharaoh hardned his heart this time alſo, ſo 'tis here ſaid v. 14. that this time, this turn, now, though not before, God would pour out all his plagues upon his heart, viz. this obduration, or the effects of it. Upon which followes that paſſage wherein our common tranſlation hath ſo much miſtaken, c. 9. 14, 15. not, as we read, For now I will ſtretch out my hand that I may ſmite thee and thy people with the peſtilence, for the event proves there was no ſuch matter, Pharaoh was not ſmitten with the peſtilence, nor cut off by that means, but drowned in the red ſea, ſome time after; but thus, And, or, For now I had ſent, or ſtretch'd out my hand, and I had ſmitten thee and thy people with the peſtilence, and thou hadſt been cut off from the earth. It is שלחתי in the præter tenſe, ſent, or had ſent, as Mr Aynſworth confeſſes, and the learned Paulus Fagius out of the Chaldee Paraphraſe, Nunc prope erat coram me, ut miſiſſem plagam, & percuſſiſſem te, & deletus eſſes, I was neer ſtretching out my hand to have ſent the plague, and have ſtruck thee, and thou hadſt been blotted out; referring probably to the plague of the Murrein at the beginning of the chapter (called דבר both here, and v. 3. and that falling on the cattel might have fallen on him and the people alſo,) or elſe to the Boyles ver. 12. which might be plague-ſwellings, and ſo proper enough to have cut him off: But (not, And) in very deed for this cauſe I have made thee ſtand, kept thee alive, to ſhew, or make to be ſeen (ſo הראותך literally ſignifies) my power in thee; as when, ſaith * Chryſoſtome, a man condemned to death is cut up, and anatomized alive, that others may be inſtructed and benefited by that diſſection. By this then 'tis viſible, what was the point of time wherein 'tis truly ſaid of God, that he hardned Pharaohs heart; then when 'tis ſaid he kept him alive, that is, after the ſixth judgment, and a ſpeciall warning before that, both contemned by Pharaoh, when he had filled up the meaſure of his obduration, and in ordinary courſe was to be cut off by death: and ſo 'tis here added in reference to this example of Pharaoh v. 22. God willing to ſhew his wrath, and make his power to be known (to other men that might ſee or hear of this) endured with much long-ſuffering the veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction; which notes that he was by himſelf fitted to deſtruction, when God thus reprieved him, at which time alſo 'tis ſaid that he, that is, God, hardned his heart. By this obſervation of the time when God hardned Pharaoh, not till after his hardning his own heart ſix times againſt Gods ſignes and judgments, will appear what this hardning ſignifies, the total withdrawing of Gods grace of repentance from him, in the ſame manner, as when one is caſt into hell, which Pharaoh at that time had been, had it not been more for God's glory to continue him alive a while, in that deſperate irreverſible condition, which ſure was no whit worſe to him, but ſomewhat better and more deſirable, then to have been adjudged to thoſe flames all that time. To this may be added what the Greek Fathers obſerve, that God's giving him reſpite, removing his puniſhments, was all that God poſitively did toward the hardning of him, (as ſaith Theophylact, when a Maſter forbears to puniſh a wicked ſervant, πονηρότερον αὐτὸν ἐργάζεται he makes him much more wicked) as on the other ſide the great mercy of reforming ſinners lives, is moſt effectually wrought by chaſtiſements. See Origen, Philocal. c. 26. This was a notable, and withall (as farre as we find in Scripture) a ſingular example of God's dealing with an impenitent, that had filled up his meaſure, keeping him alive, but without all grace, and conſequent poſſibility of amending. And by this example appears, how juſtly God might now doe the like to the Jewes of that age, (if ſo he pleaſed) thoſe who, contrary to all his mercies and long ſuffering, continued obſtinate, reſiſted all Gods methods by Prophets, by Chriſt himſelf, by the Apoſtles, teſtifying the Reſurrection (and giving them a ſpecial warning what would befall them if they now continued obſtinate Act. 28. 28.) and now are juſtly left to themſelves, the Goſpel taken from them, and preach'd to the Gentiles, and this upon ends of infinite wiſdome, firſt in mercy to them (above the proportion of that to Pharaoh) that the Gentiles coming in might ſtirre them up to emulation, and ſo, if 'twere poſſible, work upon them; and 2ly, that if this alſo prevailed not, God might be glorified in their deſtruction, that as Pharaoh by purſuing the Iſraelites after this came to that moſt remarkable, illuſtrious deſtruction in the Red ſea, ſo theſe hardned Jewes (perſecuting the orthodox Chriſtians) and all the falſe impious profeſſors joyning with them herein, might be involved in one common deſtruction, viz. that by Titus and the Roman Eagles, the moſt eminent and notable that ever was in the world.

k. Μέρη ζωτε. λοι τῆ ζωντων

V. 28. For he will finiſh——] This verſe is cited out of Iſaiah c. 10. 22. where the Greek reads it juſt as 'tis in the ordinary copies here, only leaving out the γὰρ for, and in ſtead of ὅτι ἐπὶ τῆς on the land, ἐν τῇ οἰκουμένῃ ὅλῃ on the whole world. As for the γὰρ that is here, it cannot well accord with the ὅτι following, unleſſe the ὅτι be taken in another ſenſe, for an Expletive, or ſcilicet, not a Cauſal. But the truth is, the ordinary reading here, beginning with λόγον γὰρ, ſeems to be the true one ſo farre, but in the proceſſe of it to have ſome words put in out of the Septuagint, viz. ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ ὅτι λόγον ζωτετμημένον. For without thoſe the King's MS. reads it perſpicuouſly thus, λόγον γὰρ ζωτελῶν καὶ ζωτέμνων ποιήσει Κύριος ὅλη τῆς γῆς, For the Lord ſhall doe upon the land, perfecting and cutting ſhort the account (that is, ſhall perfect and cut ſhort) or, the Lord ſhall make up an account, perfecting and cutting it ſhort upon the land. Where the uſe of λόγος for an account, is agreeable to what was obſerved c. 3. 1. and ζωτελεῖν and ζωτέμνειν λόγον is upon the ballancing of accounts, (receits on one ſide, and expenſes on the other,) to cut off one from the other, and to ſet down the remainder, which is ordinarily (in a ſtewards account) a very contemptible low ſumme; and ſo is it, that the Prophets call שְׁאָר a remnant, ἐγκατάλειμμα, that which remains of a farre greater ſumme, and ſo is fit to denote that ſmall number of the Jewes which received the faith of Chriſt (at the preaching of the Goſpel then unto them) in proportion to, and compariſon with the farre greater number that ſtood out againſt it. So c. 11. 4. out of 1 Kin. 19. 18. κατέλιπον ἐμαυτῷ I have left, or reſerved, to my ſelf 7000 men, &c. And accordingly here v. 27. they that thus believe are called κατάλειμμα a remainder, and generally in the Prophets are expreſs'd by that and the like words, fetch'd from this Metaphor of accounts.

Ἐγκατά λειμμα

l. διώκειν

30. Attained to] Three words there are here together, διώκειν, καταλαμβάνειν, φθάνειν, to follow after, to attain, to be foremoſt, which are all Agoniſtical, referring to the cuſtomes of the Græcian exerciſes in their Olympian, Nemæan, Iſthmian, Pythian games, which are often alluded to in theſe Epiſtles. Five of theſe games there were, Cuffing, Wreſtling, Running, Coiting, and Leaping. That of running δρόμος or ποδωκείη (in reference to which in Homer Achilles is ſo conſtantly called πόδας ὠκὺς, ſwift-footed, to denote his excellence above all in that kind of exerciſe) is here ſpecified by διώκειν purſuing, or ſtriving to overtake, as any did in that exerciſe when he was behind another. In this, as in the other, there was an ἆθλον or βραβεῖον, a reward or prize propoſed to the racers, which he that came firſt to the goale was by the βραβευτὴς or judge adjudged to have, and it was ordinarily a Crown of leaves, (Ἆθλα ἦν τὸ κότινος· μῆλα, σίλινα, πίτυς. Anthol. l. 1.) called therefore στέφανος φθαρτὸς, a fading crown, 1 Cor. 9. 25. and this generally ſet over the goale, that he that came thither foremoſt might catch it off, and carry it away with him, but ſo, as that the judgment of the Ἑλλανοδίκαι judges of the game did firſt intervene; for ſo ſaith Ælian, Var. Hiſt. l. 9. c. 31. of the conquerour, ἀπιὼν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλλανοδίκας ἵνα λάβῃ τὸ στέφανον, going to the judges of the game that he might receive the crown. And this is called here καταλαμβάνειν to attain, 1 Tim. 2. 12. ἐπιλαμβάνειν and λαμβάνειν to apprehend and receive 1 Cor. 9. 24. which Plutarch calls καθελεῖν τὸ στέφανον κρεμάμενον, to catch the crown that hangs over the goale, from whence the conquerours are called ἆθλοφόροι that bear away the reward. Then for φθάνειν to be foremoſt, that is to conquer in this race, to come foremoſt thither, according to that of Plutarch, τὸ νικᾶν τῶν φθάσαι δεῖ, the victory is his that comes firſt. So is the word uſed Phil. 1. 16. and is to get before other men, ſo that (as to the victory) the prize ſhall belong to him. Juſtification then, the approbation and mercy of God, was the prize or βραβεῖον that all ran for, Jewes and Gentiles, ver. 30, 31. but the Jewes running for it, or purſuing it by a wrong rule or νόμος, viz. by that of the external, legal performances, did not get foremoſt thither, nor conſequently had the reward, but the Gentiles had the advantage of them, and ſo got it. Where of the Jewes 'tis ſaid particularly, that they met with a block in the way, ſtumbled and fell at that, as racers ſometimes doe, and by that means utterly miſcarried.

m. Καταισχυνθῇ

V. 33. Shall not be aſhamed] The Hebrew in Iſa. 28. 16. read יָחִישׁ, make haſte, but the Greek are thought to have read יָבִישׁ; which ſignifies moſt obviouſly erubuerunt. So Cappellus citeth it as the opinion of a learned man, and ſo Grotius's Notes have it. But Mr. Pocock ſeems to have hit upon the right (and then there is no need of that conjecture) that the Hebrew חוּשׁ had antiently three ſignifications of ſome affinity one with another, which are all retained in the Arabick Hauſh and Hiſh which anſwers it; 1. to make haſte, 2. to fear, 3. to be aſhamed: and it may well be here uſed in that ſenſe that comprehends all three; for he that is in a fright or conſternation turnes this way and that way haſtily, & is in confuſion of face or ſhame. In the firſt of theſe ſenſes the Syriack interpreter and Chaldee Paraphraſt underſtood it; the former read לָא נִרְחַל he ſhall not fear, the latter לָא יִזְדַּעְזְעוּן they ſhall not be troubled, or in commotion; in the ſecond the Vulgar, non feſtinet, ſhall not make haſte; in the third the Greek (as alſo the Arabick) οὐ καταισχυνθῇ he ſhall not be aſhamed: and this laſt is here made uſe of by the Apoſtle οὐ καταισχυνθήσεται, and ſo 1 Pet. 2. 6. where the Syriack and Arabick and Vulgar are all to the ſame purpoſe. And this is capable of a double ſenſe, either as ſhame ſignifies baſhfulneſs, inconfidence, which keeps us from confeſſing of Chriſt, and ſo οὐ καταισχυνθήσεται is, he will never be cowardly or baſhfull, he will boldly and confidently confeſs Chriſt; or elſe it may ſignifie being put to ſhame, as any man is that finds himſelf deceived, that hath miſcarried in a matter on which he hath depended, and ſo it belongs to Chriſts not forſaking him, οὐ καταισχυνθήσεται he ſhall never be deſtituted by Chriſt, never miſcarry or be diſappointed in that hope which he hath repoſed in him: and ſo it will moſt fitly be rendred in all the three places, here in oppoſition to the fate of unbelievers, they ſhall bruiſe themſelves at this ſtone, be the worſe for Chriſt, but the believer ſhall be ſure never to be fruſtrated in his expectation of all good from him. So c. 10. 11. as a proof that a man is juſtified by faith, v. 10. this teſtimony is produced, he that believeth ſhall not be aſhamed. And ſo the word ſignifies c. 5. 5. Hope maketh not aſhamed, the chriſtians hope will never miſcarry,

he

he ſhall never be in danger to faile in his truſt repoſed in Chriſt; and ſo in S. Peter, it is as a demonſtration of the pretiouſneſs of that ſtone, that whoſoever depends on it, it will never faile him; he ſhall never miſcarry that laies all his weight on that foundation.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. X.

1. And as before c. 9. 1. ſo now again I muſt confeſſe to you, (my brethren, the Chriſtian Jewes) that whatever the Jewes believe of me, as though I were their enemy, there is none more paſſionately and tenderly affected to them, then I am. From this it is, and nothing elſe, that I doe ſo heartily deſire and pray to God for all that people, that they may timely believe and turn unto Chriſt, that ſo they may be delivered at this time and eſcape, (and not be involv'd in the fatal deſtruction that attends that people) and withall be ſaved eternally by ſo doing.

a. 1. BRethren, * My heart's deſire and prayer to God for Iſrael is, that they might † be a ſaved.]

* the good pleaſure of my heart
† eſcape

2. For I muſt teſtifie this of them, that they are, very many of them, great zelots for their Law, as that which is commanded them by God, and ſo in their way zealous to have God obeyed; but for want of true knowledge, which the Goſpel offers them, and they will not receive, they are miſtaken in their zeale, are not ſuch as they ought to be.

2. For I bear them record, that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.]

3. For they being not ſatisfied in the truth of what we teach them, particularly of God's way of juſtifying men under the Goſpel, and deſiring and intending to be juſtified by the Law, their external legal obſervances, they will not part with them, and thereupon have refuſed that Evangelical way of juſtification, which is ſo much better then that.

3. For they being ignorant of Gods righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the righteouſneſs of God.]

4. For Chriſt hath conſummated and reformed the Law of Moſes, requiring internal in ſtead of external obediences, and hath ſet up a new way of juſtification, which belongeth to all thoſe that believe and obey him, though they doe not perform the Law.

4. For Chriſt is the end of the Law for righteouſneſſe to every one that believeth.]

5. For Lev. 18. 5. the way of being juſtified under the Law is ſet down by Moſes, to be a task of ſtrict performances required of us, that he that will be juſtified by that, muſt never offend againſt any part of it, for upon thoſe terms onely juſtification is promiſed there, and he that offends once is guilty of all, (that is, hath loſt all pretenſe of juſtification by that) and this every man doth, and ſo this is not ſo excellent and happy a courſe, that ye ſhould be ſo fond of it, and withall it conſiſteth of a great burthen of ceremonies and externall performances, all required to juſtifie a Jew, before the coming of Chriſt; and Chriſt that requires the ſubſtantiall duties requir'd by thoſe ſhadowes, hath done you no injury to free you from them.

b. 5. For Moſes deſcribeth the righteouſneſſe which is of the Law, that the man which [b] doth thoſe things ſhall live by them.]

6, 7. But that juſtification which is to be had by the Goſpell is not on ſuch ſtrict, difficult terms, above the reach of our knowledge or our ſtrength; that deſcription of the perſpicuity and intelligibleneſs of Gods commands (given then by Moſes to the people, and ſetting life and death before them) Deut. 30. 12. being very fitly appliable to the Goſpell, viz. that it is neither obſcure, not ſuch as depends on any difficult performances of ours, but on that which Chriſt hath done for us: The Chriſt by which we are to be juſtified, is not by any paines of ours to be fetch'd down from heaven, he came down himſelf and dyed for us; nor is he to be fetch'd out of the abyſſe by us, he is riſen again of himſelf for our juſtification (to obtain pardon for our paſt ſins, upon our reformation for the future, and to give us grace to doe ſo:) and theſe two being the two main parts of our faith, ſignifie this truth, that all that is required of us, is by him made very plain to be known, and poſſible to be performed, all the difficult part is performed by himſelf, and the eaſie required of us.

c. 6. But the righteouſneſſe which is of faith ſpeaketh on this wiſe, Say not in thine heart, Who ſhall aſcend into heaven? that is to [c] bring Chriſt down from above:

7. Or, Who ſhall deſcend into the deep? that is, to bring up Chriſt again from the dead.]

d. 8. But thus the Evangelicall juſtification is deſcribed, That which is required of us toward it is within the reach of any ordinary underſtanding to conceive, being proclaimed by us to all that will believe, and within the compaſſe of a Chriſtian to perform through Chriſt that ſtrengthens him. A ſort of precepts ſo agreeable to humane nature, and ſo familiar to our knowledg, that thou maiſt without much pains learn them thy ſelf, and teach them others, and (for thy practice) with pleaſure and felicity perform them; which character cannot ſo fitly belong to any thing, as to the way of faith and new obedience ſet down in the Goſpell, which we now preach unto you in oppoſition to that other of legal performances, which had ſo much of unprofitable weight, and even impoſſibility in it.

8. But what ſaith it? [d] The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that is, the word of faith which we preach:]

9. And this but of two parts, as it were, one for thy mouth, the other for thy heart, v. 8. For thy mouth, that if in ſpight of all perſecution and danger, that ſhall attend the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith, thou ſhalt yet venture all, and make profeſſion of it; and in thine heart, as the principle of Chriſtian practice, believe the reſurrection of Chriſt, and conform thy practice to that belief in forſaking of ſin, and ariſing to new life, in imitation of Chriſt's riſing from the grave; thou ſhalt eſcape this huge judgement impendent on the Jewes, and withall be juſtified and ſaved eternally.

9. That if thou ſhalt confeſſe with thy mouth the Lord Jeſus, and ſhalt believe in thine heart that God hath raiſed him from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved.]

10. For the juſtifying faith is onely that practicall of the heart, which muſt have confeſſion of the mouth go along with it, and that ſhall give you your part in that great delivery (ſee v. 13.) and in that eternall reſt hereafter.

10. For with the heart man believeth unto righteouſneſs, and with the mouth confeſſion is made unto ſalvation.]

11. For to that is appliable that of Iſa. 28. 16. made uſe of here c. 9. 33. and 1 Pet. 2. that whoſoever believeth on him ſhall be certainly owned and ſaved by him. See note on c. 9. m.

11. For the Scripture ſaith, Whoſoever believeth on him ſhall not be aſhamed.]

12. And in this 'tis not being circumciſed, or of the ſtock of Abraham, that will doe any man any good, or the wanting of it, that will hurt any: There is no difference of Jew or Greek, ſo that one ſhould be more acceptable to God then the other, for he is the common Lord and father of both, abundantly

12. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, for * the ſame Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.]

* he is the ſame Lord of all, rich εἷς πάντων πλουτῶν, dantly merciſull unto all, both Jew and Gentile, that give up their names unto Chriſt ſincerely, live obediently and faithfully in his family.

13. For whoſoever ſhall call upon the name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved.] 13. For to theſe times peculiarly belongs that promiſe in Joel 2. 32. (ſee Act. 2. 21.) that when the great calamity befals the Jewiſh nation, and all other confidences fail and prove treacherous, they that ſhould conſtantly confeſſe, pray, and adhere to Chriſt, ſhould be delivered from it, and this as a pledge of eternall deliverance, or ſalvation.

14. How then ſhall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how ſhall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how ſhall they heare without a preacher?

15. And how ſhall they preach, except they be ſent? as it is written, How beautifull are the feet of them that preach the Goſpell of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things?] 14, 15. But here the Chriſtian Jew objects againſt Saint Paul, in the name of the unbelievers, that be the condition of Evangelicall juſtification never ſo eaſie (but the acknowledging of Chriſt, giving up their names to him) yet how is that believing poſſible for thoſe that hear not of him, which 'tis clear they cannot doe, except they be preach'd to? and when the Apoſtles have left the Jewes and gone to the Gentiles, and yet there is no preaching to be had, but by them, either perſonally, or by ſome ſent by them, how now ſhall the Jewes doe? how is it poſſible for them to believe? or well done of the Apoſtles thus to leave them?

16. But they have not all obeyed the Goſpell: for Eſaias ſaith, Lord, who hath believed our report?] 16. This objection may eaſily be anſwered, that if all to whom the Goſpell hath been preached, had received and obey'd it, there would have been no place for this objection of the Jewes. For the Goſpell hath been preached through all the cities of Jewry before the Apoſtles left them, but the onely fault is, they have not believed it, nay not any conſiderable number of them; and that was foretold by Iſaiah, that when the Jewes ſhould have the Goſpell preach'd to them, they ſhould generally give no heed to it.

17. * So then, faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

18. But I ſay, Have they not heard? yes verily. e Their † ſound went out into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.] 17, 18. And therefore although it be moſt willingly granted, that preaching is neceſſary to receive the faith, and that none can preach but he that is ſent and appointed by God, (ſee note on Joh. 10. 34.) that mediately or immediately hath received commiſſion from heaven; yet this objection is of no force, for the Jewes though all their cities have certainly had the Goſpell preach'd to them by the Apoſtles, according to Chriſt's command, that they ſhould go over all the cities of Jewry, Act. 1. 8. before they went to the Gentiles: and to this may be accommodated that of Pſal. 19. 4. as if by that were foretold, firſt, that their preaching ſhould be afforded to all the land of Judæa, and then, that they ſhould proceed and preach alſo to the whole world beſide. e.

* Faith indeed, Acts 8 † voice is gone out into all the land

19. But I ſay, Did not Iſrael know? Firſt Moſes ſaith, I will provoke you to jealouſie by them that are no people, and by a fooliſh nation will I anger you.] 19. On the other ſide can the Jewes be ignorant, that upon their provoking God, God will caſt them off, and preferre even the heathen before them? 'Is impoſſible they ſhould be ignorant, if Moſes or the Prophets writings be heeded by them: For of them firſt Moſes ſaith, Deut. 32. 21. by way of prediction of theſe (as ſtory of thoſe) times, they have moved me to jealouſie with that which is not God, angred and provoked me by preferring Idols before me, and I will make them jealous with a no-nation, give the Philiſtine victory over them then, and now take the Gentiles, and preferre them before them, and make them angry (as now they are) to ſee them taken in their ſtead, more favoured by God then they.

20. But Iſaias is very bold, and ſaith, I was found of them that ſought me not: I was made manifeſt to them that f * asked not after me.] 20. Then by Iſaiah, 65. 1. who ſaith in plain words that the heathen world, that was farre from thinking of ſuch a dignity, ſhould have the Goſpell preach'd to them, and receive it. f.

* inquired not of me.

21. But to Iſrael he ſaith, All day long I have ſtretched forth my hands unto a diſobedient and gain-ſaying people.] 21. Whereas v. 2. he ſaith to the Jewes, that though he ſhall moſt diligently have called and ſent Apoſtles unto them, never giving over, till their meaſure of iniquities being filled up, their deſtruction was now at the dore, as a night at the end of a long day, yet they will continue refractary, and not believe the Goſpell of Chriſt; which ſure is a teſtimony both that the Jewes have had, and rejected it, and that this dealing of the Apoſtles was in all reaſon to be expected by them.

Annotations on Chap. X.

a. Σωζειν

V. 1. Saved] According to the notion of σώζειν, to be ſaved, or delivered, Lu. 13. 23. Note b. σωτηρία may here moſt probably ſignifie the Jewes converting to the faith of Chriſt, eſcaping out of that deluge of unbelief and obduration which had overwhelmed that people; for ſo it ſeems to be interpreted v. 3. by the contrary of not ſubmitting to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt. So c. 11. 11. ἡ σωτηρία τοῖς ἔθνεσι ſalvation to the Gentiles, is the Gentiles coming in and believing on Chriſt, as σώζειν v. 14. So καταργάζεσθε σωτηρίαν Phil. 2. 12. is to complete, or perfect their Chriſtian courſe, in reſolving, and acting accordingly, (proportionably to God's giving them to will and to doe v. 13.) So Rom. 1. 16. where the Goſpel is ſaid to be the power of God unto ſalvation, to Jew and Gentile, and that proved by that ſaying of Habakkuk, the juſt ſhall live by faith, that is, return from captivity, and live peaceably, and that as an embleme of his returning from ſinne and living an holy life, it will be moſt reaſonable ſo to interpret ſalvation, as may beſt agree with that notion of life, that is, for repentance and reformation. So perhaps μετάνοια εἰς σωτηρίαν, 2 Cor. 7. 10. will denote ſuch a repentance or change that proceeds to eſcaping out of and forſaking the ſins of the former life. So 2 Pet. 3. 15. where he bids them count that the longanimity of God is σωτηρία ſalvation, that is that God's deferring the puniſhment of the Jews ſo long after the crucifying of Chriſt was on purpoſe that by the preaching of the Apoſtles over all the cities of Jewry, they might yet timely return, and repent, and believe on him, and ſo eſcape in that great approaching deſtruction. Yet this ſtill not excluding but including alſo the reward of our faith, the eternall bliſſe in heaven. Of another acception of σωτηρία, ſee Note on c. 13. c.

b. Ποιήσας αὐτά

V. 5. Doth theſe things] Theſe things ſignifie the ſeverall branches of the Judaicall Law, which being required by Moſes under ſevere penalties of exciſion to thoſe that contemned or deſpiſed them, and all the promiſes of long life in Canaan depending on the obſervance of them, and the Law affording no place of repentance or pardon for any preſumptuous ſinne committed againſt that Law, it is from thence conſequent, that he that lives not in all thoſe commands to doe them, could not have life by them, even that temporall life, or what ever elſe were typically contained or included in that: And accordingly Saint Paul concludes Gal. 3. 10. that there was no life to be had by the Law, and indeed nothing but a curſe; for that it was alſo written,

Deut.

Deut. 27. 26. Curſed is every one that continues not in all things that are written in the book of the Law to doe them; and only he that doth them ſhall live in them, v. 12. All this while ſuppoſing that no man did all his life thus doe, or continue, ſo as not to incurre this curſe. And herein doth the difference of the Law and the Goſpell conſiſt, that the Law promiſes life only upon doing all that was required of them to doe, and pronounced a curſe to them that did not continue in all; he that wilfully offended in one, was guilty of all, that is, was involved as irreverſibly under the curſe for that one breach, according to that covenant, as if he had broken all, and repentance or reformation would not relieve him: But now under the Goſpell the condition was changed; firſt, many things were not required at all now, which were then enacted under the higheſt penalty, as Circumciſion, &c. onely the inward purity is now called for, which had been always typified by that; ſecondly, place was allowed for repentance, and by the ſatisfaction of Chriſt, ſure mercy and pardon for the ſinner, whatſoever his ſinnes were, upon his return to new life; and for frailties and weakneſſes, for which onely there were ſacrifices admitted under the Law, now there was without thoſe ſacrifices free pardon to be had for all thoſe that ſincerely obey'd Chriſt, and laid hold on his ſacrifice for their expiation. And ſo faith is ſaid to be the condition of our Juſtification, and not the doing theſe things; the law of faith, not of workes, that by which the Chriſtian muſt live.

c. Εἰς ἀναβήσεται εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν

V. 6. Bring Chriſt down] The two phraſes here uſed of going up to heaven, or deſcending into the deep, or abyſſe, are certainly proverbial phraſes to ſignifie the doing, or attempting to doe, ſome hard, impoſſible thing; and conſequently to ſay in the heart, Who ſhall do this? is to be preſcribed ſome hard impoſſible task, that neither by our ſelves, nor by any body elſe we know how to ſet about, as they that are at their wits end, (know not which way to turn themſelves) are wont to cry out, or ſay within themſelves, Who ſhall doe it for them? Theſe phraſes had been of old uſed by Moſes in this ſenſe, Deut. 30 12. For this commandment which I command thee this day is not hidden from thee, neither is it farre off. It is not in heaven, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall goe up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may ſee it and doe it? Neither is it beyond the ſea, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall goe over the ſea for us, and bring it unto us &c. Which words being uſed by Moſes to expreſſe the eaſineſs and readineſs of the way which the Jewes had to know their duty, and to perform it, are here by the Apoſtle accommodated to expreſs the eaſineſs of the Goſpel-condition above that of the Moſaical Law. The righteouſneſs which is of faith ſaith thus, that is, this is the ſtyle or language of the Evangelical law, the law of faith v. 8. Say not in thy heart, that is, the Chriſtian hath no need to ſay, or think within himſelf, Who ſhall goe up to heaven? that is, that he hath any weighty, impoſſible condition required of him. This part of the words of Moſes, the Apoſtle, as in a parentheſis, applies to one of the moſt difficult things on which our ſalvation depends, viz. Chriſts coming down from heaven to earth. This indeed if it were required of us to contribute any thing toward it, would be a weighty task for us; but when Chriſt hath himſelf done it for us without any contribution of ours, this is an evidence, of the eaſineſs of the Chriſtians task. As for the ſecond part of the words in Moſes, the Apoſtle reads them with ſome change, not πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης, over the ſea, as the Septuagint now reads it, but τίς καταβήσεται εἰς τὸν ἄβυσσον, who ſhall goe down into the abyſſe? which variety of readings may poſſibly be reconciled by the various ſignification, and uſe of the Hebrew prepoſitions. And accordingly that which is here uſed by S. Paul, will be found to agree to the paraphraſe which we have in the Jeruſalem-Targum, in theſe words, Utinam eſſet nobis aliquis Propheta, Jonæ ſimilis, qui in profundum maris magni deſcenderet, Would we had ſome Prophet, like Jonas, that might deſcend into the deep of the great ſea, and bring it up to us. And this ſeems to be the ground of S. Paul's application, which here followes, that is, to bring Chriſt from the dead, that deſcending of Jonah into the deep (being devoured firſt, and then vomited up by the whale on drie land) being by Chriſt himſelf made the preſignification of his death and reſurrection. And ſo this again will be the meaning of the ſecond part of the ſpeech, the ſtyle, or language of the Goſpel, The reſurrection of Chriſt from the dead, the great ingredient in our Chriſtian religion, and which tends ſo much to our Juſtification, c. 4. 25. is that to which we contributed nothing our ſelves but was wrought for us by the power of Chriſt: And as it followes here v. 9. our believing it now it is done, and abundantly teſtified to us, is the great fundamental act of faith required of us, and that is no very weighty taske to be required of us.

Κατάγαγεῖν Χριστόν

Τίς καταβήσεται εἰς τὸν ἄβυσσον

Ἀναγαγεῖν Χριστόν

V. 8. The word is nigh thee] The word ἐγγύς nigh is beſt to be underſtood by the oppoſition of it to hidden and farre off Deut. 3. 11. Where the Hebrew for hidden is by the Septuagint rendred ἀβαρὲς καὶ overweighty and heavy, and in other places ἀδύνατον impoſſible. So Gen. 18. 14. (and from thence tranſcribed Lu. 1. 37.) οὐκ ἀδυνατήσει πᾶν ῥῆμα, no word, or thing, ſhall be impoſſible, this word is uſed in the Original. This is there farther expreſſed by thoſe proverbial ſpeeches of being in heaven, or (beyond, or) in the bottome of the ſea, and being fetch'd from thence, all noting ſome ſpecial difficulty, or impoſſibility, above our knowledge, farre off, removed out of our reach; and ſo the ἐγγὺς nigh, muſt be feaſible and eaſie, to be known firſt, and then to be practiſed, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, (the Septuagint adds, καὶ ἐν χερσί σου, and in thine hands) that thou mayſt doe it.

d. Ἐγγὺς σου τὸ ῥῆμα

V. 18. Their ſound] This place is cited out of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 19. 4 but ſo as it lies in the Greek tranſlation, not as in the Original; for in ſtead of their voice here, 'tis rendred out of the Hebrew their line, or rule, or direction, for ſo the word קום there ſignifies. The Pſalmiſt there ſpeaks of the heavens v. 1. The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament ſheweth his handy work, and ſo on, v. 2, 3. and then v. 4. their line is gone out through the land, and their words unto the end of the world, that is, in a poetial ſtyle, (wherein the Pſalms are written) though the heavens ſtand in one place, keeping one conſtant motion, equidiſtant from the earth, yet the commands and words thereof are heard every where, that is, their virtue and efficacy are underſtood and admired by all. Here the Septuagint ſeem to have read קולם their voice, for קום their line, and ſo render it ὁ φθόγγος αὐτῶν, nothing different from the meaning of it, as appears by the τὰ ῥήματα αὐτῶν their words, that immediately follow, for by that 'tis plain that קום ſignifies commands, (as it were,) or rule, or direction delivered by them, ſuch as may agree with words, and that is all one with קולם their voice. Others rather think that the Septuagint, reſpecting the ſenſe and not the word, did thus render it paraphraſtically. But Mr. Pocock conceives from the Arabick uſe of the word, that the very קוה was antiently uſed by the Hebrews for vociferation. See his Miſcellan. p. 48. And S. Paul according to his manner writing to thoſe that uſed the Greek Bible in their aſſemblies, recites it as he finds it there, and applies it by accommodation (frequent in theſe writers) to the Goſpel that voice, or doctrine, of heaven, that is, of God himſelf; and when he ſaith it was gone out into all the land, that ſeems (as frequently it doth) to belong to the land of Judæa, as the τὰ πέρατα τῆς γῆς, the bounds or extreme parts of the earth may well be the Gentile world; and this to convince the Jewes (and repell their objection, ſuppoſed v. 14. and now anſwered) that the Goſpel was amply revealed to the Jewes, both within and without Judæa, whereſoever they were in the Gentile cities: for being by the Apoſtles preached not only in Jeruſalem, and over all the cities of Jewry, but alſo in Cæſarea, Joppa, Antioch, Epheſus, Corinth, Philippi, Theſſalonica, Galatia, Laodicea, and Rome it ſelf, and firſt to the Jewes in every of thoſe places, it muſt needs, as the influences of the heavens, to which the compariſon is here made, be dilated and extended to all other parts, whereever the Jewes were diſperſed; ſo that the Apoſtle may (as he doth) appeal to their own conſciences (but I ſay, Have they not heard?) whether they did not believe that the Jewes had univerſally heard of it, and conſequently did out of obſtinacy reject, and not remain ignorant of it, which was a full anſwer to their objection of how ſhall they hear without a preacher? and an account of the reaſonableneſſe of the Apoſtles dealings in forſaking of them that had been thus obdurate. But withall it may denote, that having begun, and ſo fully performed their duty to them, it is now by conſequence to be expected from them, that they ſhould lift up their voices to the Gentile people themſelves, and preach the Goſpel to them alſo over all the world.

f. Ἐπυνθ. V. 20. Aſked not after me] That ἐπερωτῶσι muſt here be rendred enquiring of, not after, making God the terminus, or perſon to whom the addreſs is made, and not the matter of their queſtion, whom they asked, not concerning whom, appeareth 1. by the nature of the word, which literally denotes it: and 2dly by the uſe of it in all other places; as Mat. 12. 10. ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτὸν, they asked him, ſaying, Is it lawfull, &c. and ch. 16. 1. ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτὸν σημεῖον, they asked him a ſigne, and Mar. 11. 29. ἐπερωτήσω ὑμᾶς, I will aske you a queſtion, and ἐπερωτηθεὶς being asked, Lu. 17. 20. and Joh. 18. 21. Τί με ἐπερωᾷς; ἐπερώτησον τοὺς ἀκούσαντας, Why askeſt thou me? aske them that heard: and alſo 3dly, by the Hebrew, which from Iſa. 65. 1. is rendred by it, for that is דָּרַשְׁתִּי, from דרש quæſivit, conſuluit, as when one conſulteth the Oracle, asks counſel of God. Agreeable to which is that of Heſychius, Ἐρωτησόμεθα, πυθόμεθα, rendring it by that word which is ordinarily uſed for conſulting the oracle, and from which Apollo, that gave the oracles, is called Pytho. For ſo the place belonged in that Prophet to thoſe that were delivered out of Antiochus's hands, at a time when they deſpaired, and hoped not for ſuch a mercy; and that deſpairing, or not hoping of theirs, is there expreſs'd by not ſeeking of God, nor conſulting him, nor applying themſelves to him at all for that purpoſe. So Hoſ. 4. 12. where we read, my people aske counſel of their ſtocks, the Greek hath ἐν συμβόλοις αὐτῶν ἐπηρώτων, they asked at their images. By this, I conceive, may be diſcerned the meaning of that phraſe, 1 Pet. 3. 21. where Baptiſme is ſaid to be τὸ ἀγαθῆς συνειδήσεως ἐπερώτημα εἰς τὸν Θεὸν, which is ordinarily rendred, the anſwer of a good conſcience toward God, and otherwiſe, a promiſe, or ſtipulation, or bargain, becauſe thoſe conſiſted, ſaith Theophilus, ἐξ ἐπερωτήσεως καὶ συμφώνε ὑποκείσεως. of a queſtion, and an agreeable anſwer, and were wont to be made in this form by way of anſwer to a queſtion, thus, Spondes? Spondeo, Dabis? Dabo. Doſt thou promiſe? I do promiſe. Wilt thou give? I will: and ſo the Catechumenus, Doſt thou forſake the devil, &c? I doe forſake. Πιστεύεις; Πιστεύω, Doſt thou believe? I doe believe. This interpretation of ſome learned men depends upon a preſumption, that ἐπερώτημα is an anſwer, not a queſtion; the pretenſe of which is, becauſe Ἐπερωτῶμαι is rendred by the Gloſſary, promitto, ſpondeo, and Ἐπερωτῶ, ſtipulor, which indeed will reaſonably be admitted by a Metonymie, as in Seneca de beneficiis, interrogatio is uſed for ſtipulatio; and ſo it may be appliable here, becauſe he that thus comes to God or any to deſire directions or counſel from him, is preſumed to promiſe on his part to perform what ſhall be required of him. But then ſtill this ſponſio is not an anſwer, but rather a queſtion, the anſwer being reſponſio a return to this ſponſio, that is, an agreement between parties. σύμφωνος ἀπόκρισις in Theophilus; whereas ἐρώτημα and ἐπερώτημα is generally the queſtion, and it is not any more according to Analogie, that it ſhould be the anſwer, then that the Latine inquiro or interrogo ſhould be the anſwering of a queſtion, which we know is only the asking of it. It may, I ſuppoſe, more regularly be rendred, the queſtion, or addreſſe, of a good conſcience to God, as enquiring ſignifies, in our preſent notion, conſulting with, ſeeking to, asking counſel of God, (as in Dorotheus, διδάσκαλ. ε'. ὑδέποτε συνεχώρουν λογισμῷ πίθεσθαι ἐμαυτῷ ἄνευ ἐπερωτήσεως, I never permitted my own conceit to perſwade me, without asking ſome others counſel; and παιδάσατε ἐπερωτᾶν ἀδελφοὺς, καὶ μὴ στηρίζειν ἑαυτοῖς, be carefull to aske others counſell, and not to be directed by your ſelves) when the true penitent believer comes to God, as to the oracle, to enquire of him for the whole future life, with a Lord, what wilt thou have me to doe? or, Good maſter, what ſhall I doe to inherit eternal life? applying himſelf to God for his directions of all his future actions, and that with a ſincere, upright conſcience, reſolving firmly to doe what is there required of him; which reſolution of univerſal ſincere obedience is that which is there ſet oppoſite to the βάπτισμα σαρκὸς, the waſhing of the fleſh, ἀπόθεσις ῥύπε, the rinſing of ſullages with the water, which is but the ceremony that ſignified that other, and was not to be thought to avail any, but thoſe that performed what was ſignified by it, any more then the circumciſion of a Jew, without the inward purity. According to this it is, that as Tertullian calls Baptiſme, ſponſio ſalutis, an undertaking of ſalvation, that is, of the way laid down by God to it, l. de Bapt. and l. de Reſurr. Carnis, Anima non lavatione ſed reſponſione (I ſuppoſe again it ſhould be read ſponſione) ſancitur, the ſoul receives its ſanction, not by waſhing, but by undertaking (for that is the meaning of ſponſio, and accordingly ſponſores and ſuſceptores are all one;) ſo Cyprian expreſsly calls it interrogatio Baptiſmi, Ep. 76, and 80. the asking, or inquiring of Baptiſme. And this is indeed the peculiar nature of Baptiſme, the ceremony of the Chriſtians Proſelytiſme (his initiation and admiſſion into Chriſts family) which is (according to the nature of the word προσήλυτος) his coming unto God as a diſciple, and accordingly it is μαθητεύσατε βαπτίζοντες, Mat. 28. 19. make diſciples baptizing: Baptiſme is the ceremony of their entrance on diſcipleſhip.

CHAP. XI.

Paraphraſe.

1. I Say then, Hath God caſt away his people? God forbid. For I alſo am an Iſraelite of the ſeed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.]

1. Here it will be objected again, that by this it ſeems to be concluded, that then God hath utterly caſt off the Jewes his antient people, having caſt them off from the preaching of the Goſpel. To this I anſwer that the objection is utterly cauſleſſe and groundleſſe, for that the Jewes are not utterly caſt off,

I my self am a visible example, who had not only the Gospel revealed to me from heaven by Christ, but am employed as an Apostle to preach to others, who yet am an Israelite, as lineally descended from Abraham by Benjamin, as any can be supposed to be.

2. God hath according to his threats, Deut. 29. 28. cast off the rebellious Israelites; but those whom he did foresee to be such, whom he might according to the rules which in the Gospel he hath prescribed, approve and love, his honest faithfull servants that have any kind of probity in them, those sheep that hear his voice he hath not now cast off, or pass'd any decree against them: Of which kind, though they seem but few, yet are there not so few. In like manner as in the story of Elias, 1 Kin. 19. 10. when he comes to God and complains of the wickedness of that people, their murthering God's prophets, and throwing down his altars (then built by pious men of the ten Tribes to serve God with, when they were not permitted to go to Jerusalem, in which case the prohibition of building private altars is by the learned Jews said to have ceased,) and doing it in so universal a style, as if he were the one only pious man left in the land, and that that was the reason that they now plotted and attempted to kill him also.

a. 2. God hath not cast away his people, which he foreknew. Wot yet not what the Scripture saith of Elias? how he a * maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying,

3. Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars, and I am left alone, and they seek my life.]

* brings a charge.

4. To this complaint he receives answer by the voice from heaven, 1 Kin. 19. 12. in these words, I have reserved, or left for my self out of that deluge of sin, wherein the ten Tribes are involved, or, (as the Hebrew may be rendred) I will reserve a remnant of seven thousand men, which have not, or shall not bow the knee to Baal, (as there were some that observed the Law, and so were exempt from the destruction wrought on the Jews by Nebuchadnezzar, Ezek. 9. 4.)

4. But what saith the answer of God unto him? I have reserved to my self seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal.]

5. So at this season some, though a few in proportion, have been preserved, such as, according to the rules of the Gospel, God hath determined to receive, humble obedient servants of his, which have readily received the faith of Christ (answerable to those v. 4. that bowed not the knee to Baal) and from their former sins did now, on Christs call, turn to him, and so were capable of that justification brought in by Christ, which consisting in pardon of sins to all penitent believers, and not in rewarding of works, belongs to those which thus return to him. See note on 1 Pet. 2. 6.

5. Even so then at this present time also there * is a remnant according to the election of grace.]

* hath been γέγονε

6. And if this means of reserving of them, and of their escaping out of that deluge, were by the mercies of God in Christ and their embracing the Gospel, the only condition required on their part to make them capable of it, then sure is it not by adhering to the Mosaical performances, nor by speciall merit of their own, imputable to themselves, for then the Gospel were not the Gospel.

6. And if by grace, then it is no more of works; otherwise grace is no more grace:] * But if it be of works, then it is no more grace; otherwise work is no more work.

* the King's MS. omits these words to the end of the verse, and so doth the ancient Lat. Translation, & Origen, Chrysostome and Ambrose.

7, 8. The short then is, that the generality of that people have not attained that justification that God will crown, but the election, the remnant (see note on Lu. 13. b. and 1 Pet. 2. c.) that being called by Christ did not neglect to make use of it, these have attained it; but all the rest, that made not use of that grace (resisted Christ when he was preached to them) these have grown obstinately blind, and in them is performed what Isaiah ch. 29. 10. spoke of those who had first hardned their hearts against God, God gave them up to absolute obduration, and blindness, and deafness, and so they continue unto this day.

b. 7. What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded.

8. According as it is written, God hath given them the spirit * of b slumber; eyes that they should not see, and eares that they should not hear untill this day.]

* of senselessness, eyes not to see, ὀφθαλμοὺς τοῦ μὴ βλέπειν

9, 10. And so what David said prophetically of some in his time, Psal. 69. 22. (by way of retribution to their sins) that the things that were for their good, their very necessary food and refreshment, should turn to their mischief; so doth the preaching of the Gospel now to their obduration. As he said that they should be blinded and go stooping, not able to look up to heaven; the like is now fallen on the Jews, the preaching of the Gospel hath been their obduration, they are the worse, not the better for it, they are blinded, and able to see nothing of heavenly things.

9. And David saith, Let their table be made a snare, and a † trap, and a stumbling-block, and a recompense unto them.

10. Let their eyes be darkned that they may not see, and * bow down their back alway.]

† gin and trap, θήραν καὶ ἄγραν

* bow thou down σὺ κάμψον

11. But here 'tis again objected, that this doctrine of ours concludes us to think that the Jews are utterly cast off, by this their not receiving the Gospel, and that now they are past all hope of recovering. To this I answer again that this is not our doctrine, or duely concluded from it, but this only, that, as by their obstinacy the Gentiles have received an huge advantage, the Gospel preach'd to them by us, when we were driven away by the Jews; so the Gentiles receiving the Gospel hath been made use of by the infinite wisdome of God, to make the Jews jealous and emulous, and troubled to see themselves so out-strip'd by those whom they so contemned, so to make that emulation an instrument to bring them in to Christ also.

c. 11. * I say then, Have they stumbled that they should c fall? God forbid. But rather through their fall salvation is come to the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousie.]

* Do I say then, Have they not stumbled that they might fall? Λέγω οὖν, μὴ ἔπταισαν ἵνα πέσωσιν

12. And if by thus punishing of their unbelief and obduration, so much advantage have accrued to the Gentiles, and so the multitude of the Jewish unbelievers hath been the means of converting many heathens; how much more shall the addition of the multitude of Jewish believers, if they shall yet repent and come in, be matter of confirmation of the faith to the Gentiles, and a means to bring them all to receive it, to convert the Gentiles over all the world?

d. 12. Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and * the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their d fullness?]

* their poverty ἥττημα

13. This of the multitude of the converted Gentiles I speak with some reflection on my self, and therein I proclaim the success I have had in preaching to the Gentiles, (many of whom have been converted by me.)

13. For I speak to the Gentiles, in as much as I am the Apostle of the Gentiles, I magnifie mine office,]

14. To this end, that I may work some emulation or jealousie in my brethren the Jews, and bring some of them to repentance and belief in Christ.

14. If by any means I might provoke to emulation them which are my flesh, and might save some of them.]

15. For if the casting off the contumacious Jews be a means of sending and spreading the Gospel to the Gentiles, and so of bringing them into the Church, and obtaining pardon for them upon their repentance, what a miracle of mercy will it be for these Jews now to repent, and to be actually reassumed into God's favour, and to receive the faith of Christ? Even as great a miracle, as fit to work upon the Gentiles (both to make them all believe on Christ, when his crucifiers doe so, and rejoyce at this happy turn) as if they should see them raised from the dead again.

15. For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead?]

16. † For

† And if ei ſi

16. † For if the firſt fruits be holy, the lump is alſo holy: and if the root be holy, ſo are the branches. |

16. And ſure they are not yet ſo totally rejected, the whole nation of them, but that God hath ſtill ſome reſpect unto them, if more of them will believe, and come in to Chriſt alſo, as ſome have done; for as when the cake of the firſt of the dough is offered up for a heave-offering, Num. 15. 20. the whole lump or maſs of dough is by that means hallowed, ſo if the Patriarchs, Abraham &c. were perſons ſo favourably look'd on by God, then there is no doubt of it, but that the reſt of the whole nation, that ſprang from them, are ſo look'd on alſo, if they be believers, and ſo capable of God's mercy, as Abraham was, or if now they ſhall returne, and repent, and come in to Chriſt: And therefore in the mean time they ought not to look on themſelves with deſperation, nor to be look'd on with deſpiſing and cenſure by the Gentiles.

* wild-olive branch, ἀγριέλαιος

17. But if ſome of the branches be broken off, and thou, being * a wilde-olive-tree, art graffed in amongſt them, and with them partakeſt of the root and fatneſs of the olive tree,]

17. But on the contrary if God, in his juſt judgments on the Jewes, have broken off ſome of them, as branches from a tree, and ingraffed thee (the Gentiles) as a Cien is wont to be, in that place where the branch was cut off, and ſo made thee partaker of the juice of the root, and the fatneſs of the good Olive-tree, that is of Abraham, made thee partaker of the promiſes to his ſeed, remiſſion of ſins, and juſtification (ſee v. 24.)

18. Boaſt not againſt the branches: but if thou boaſt, thou beareſt not the root, but the root thee.]

18. Do not thou triumph over them, and for thoſe of them that have received the faith, but ſtand zealouſly for their ceremonies of the Moſaicall Law, do not thou deſpiſe or reject them for that; or, if thou be apt to doe ſo, then for thy humiliation, remember that Abraham, being the root from which the Jews naturally ſpring, and the Gentiles only graffed in, you being now but branches at moſt, and not the naturall ſeed of Abraham, muſt not think higher of your ſelves then of Abraham, and that naturall ſeed of his, all Chriſtian Jews, that lineally deſcend from him, and by being believers partake of his faith alſo as well as of his fleſh. See c. 14. 1.

19. Thou wilt ſay then, The branches were taken off, that I might be graffed in.]

19. Or if thou that art a Gentile ſhalt, for the magnifying thy ſelf, and deſpiſing the Jew, think fit to pretend that the Jews were rejected on purpoſe that the Gentiles might be taken in in their ſtead;

† haſt ſtood ἕστηκας

20. Well, becauſe of unbelief they were broken off, and thou † ſtandeſt by faith. Be not high-minded, but fear.]

20. The anſwer to ſuch is ready, that if this be true, yet there is little matter of ſecurity or boaſting for them, for 'twas their pride, and contumacy, and infidelity, that provoked God (v. 21.) to break them off, and 'tis thy faith, by which thou wert received, and ſtill continueſt in; and if thou become guilty of the ſame ſins, thou art to expect the like fate with them, and therefore art not to boaſt of thy condition, (which is quite contrary to the nature of juſtification by faith, for that is not founded in any merit of thine, but only upon the promiſe of God through Chriſt to accept thee upon thy repentance and ſincere reformation, and practice of Chriſtian virtues, of which humility and charity are the chief, and thoſe moſt contrary to boaſting over, and deſpiſing of other men) but with all humility to work out thine own ſalvation.

21. For if God ſpared not the naturall branches, take heed leſt he alſo ſpare not thee.]

21. For if God proceeded with ſo much ſeverity againſt his owne people the Jews, ye are in reaſon to expect no leſſe ſeverity to you Gentiles, if ye do not obey the Goſpell, and live regularly, according to the dictates of Chriſt.

22. Behold therefore the goodneſſe and ſeverity of God: on them which fell, ſeverity; but towards thee, goodneſſe, if thou continue in his goodneſſe: otherwiſe thou ſhalt alſo be cut off.]

22. Two things then there are in this matter moſt viſible and remarkable, the abundant kindneſſe of God, and withall his ſeverity; ſeverity on the Jews that ſtand out contumaciouſly againſt the faith of Chriſt, but infinite mercy on the Gentiles, if they make that uſe of his mercy afforded them, which is fit, if having received they obey the Goſpell, and walk worthy of it, for otherwiſe they muſt expect ſeverity alſo.

23. And they alſo, if they abide not ſtill in unbelief, ſhall be graffed in: for God is able to graffe them in again.]

23 And ſo likewiſe nothing can keep the Jewes in this ſtate of rejection or exciſion, but their wilfull continuing in unbelief, which when they break off, God can, and certainly will, receive them in again.

* cut off from the wilde Olive, tree which was natural to thee, ἐκ τῆς φύσεως ἐξεκκεντρισθὲν, † beſide nature παρὰ φύσιν

24. For if thou wert * cut out of the Olive tree, which is wild by nature, and wert graffed † contrary to nature, into a good Olive tree; how much more ſhall * theſe, which be the naturall branches, be graffed into their own Olive tree?]

24. For if ye Gentiles, which were a kinde of wild Olive branch, were taken off from the wildneſs naturall to you, and ingraffed into the ſtock of Abraham, received into the Church, graffed into the ſtock of a good Olive tree, from which the Jews were cut off, which is not only againſt the cuſtome (ſee note on 1 Cor. 11. f.) of the Jews, grounded on Lev. 19. 19. who uſe not to graffe one tree upon another of another kind, but more generally againſt what could be expected in reaſon, and againſt all laws of graffing (for, Firſt, the good Olive being the fatteſt of trees admitts no ingraffing, graffs will not proſper in any fat tree or ſtock, no Olive graffe proſpers, unleſs it be in an hungry ſtock; Secondly, no graffe converts into the nature or quality of the ſtock, but ſtill reteines its own; and therefore, Thirdly, men alwaies graff a good fruit into a wild, an apple into a crab, &c. they never graffe a wild fruit into a good one,) how much more ſhall the Jews, which are branches of this ſtock, and of the ſame kinde, branches of that very tree into which you Gentiles are now ingraffed, be now, if they ſhall yet believe, graffed in alſo, according to that cuſtome of graffing moſt ordinary among the Jews, to graffe one tree upon another of the ſame kinde?

* theſe which are according to nature, τοὺς κατὰ φύσιν

† obduration is in part befallen, πώρωσις ἀπὸ μέρους γέγονεν * ſo long till the fullneſs of the Gentiles doe come in, ἄχρις οὗ τὸ πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν * eſcape ουκ ἔστιν

25. For I would not, brethren, that ye ſhould be ignorant of this myſtery (leſt ye ſhould be wiſe in your own conceits) that † blindneſſe in part is hapned to Iſrael, * untill the fulneſſe of the Gentiles be come in.]

25. For I ſhall declare this myſtery to you, this great ſecret of God's providence, (which may keep the Gentiles from being proud, v. 18. 20.) viz. that a great part of the people of the Jews are now at this preſent become blinde, and that that is made uſe of by God, that, by occaſion of that, the Goſpell may (by departing a while from them) be preached to and received by the generality of the Gentiles, and they compacted into Chriſtian Churches (and this in very mercy to thoſe Jews, that they by ſeeing the Gentiles believe might at length be provoked to do ſo too, by way of emulation, v. 11, and 31.)

26. And ſo all Iſrael ſhall * be ſaved, as it is written, There ſhall come out of Sion the deliverer, and ſhall c turn away ungodlineſſe from Jacob.]

26. And ſo all the true children of Abraham, Jews and heathens both, but particularly the remnant of the Jews, ſhall come in, and repent, and believe in Chriſt: and this agreeably to that prophecy, Iſa. 59. 20. There ſhall come to Sion a redeemer, ſome powerfull means ſhall be uſed, to bring the Jews to repentance, and reformation of their impieties; or a deliverer to them that turn from iniquities in Jacob, who ſhall reſcue all the penitent believing Jews from the approaching evills.

c.

* And καὶ

27. * For this is my covenant unto them, when I ſhall take away their ſins.]

27. And ſo by this means God's covenant ſhall be made good to them, in bringing them to reformation and amendment, and then accepting and pardoning as many as ſhall come in, after all this.

28. As concerning the Goſpell, they are enemies for your ſakes; but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers ſakes.]

28. 'Tis true indeed, and obſervable to you Gentiles, that in reſpect of the preſent preaching of the Goſpell, they are now laid aſide as perſons utterly rejected, on purpoſe that ye may receive the benefit of it. The Apoſtles having preach'd throughout all their cities, and ſucceeded ſo ill among them, are now departed to you Gentiles, and have given them over; but yet for as many of them as any means will bring in, in reſpect of the promiſes made to that people for Abraham's ſake (ſee note on 1 Pet. 2.b.) and the ſpeciall favour of God to them, they are ſtill ſo farre loved by God, that if they will come in, and be capable, they ſhall be received by him, and to that end this diſpenſation of mercy and providence, the calling and converting the Gentiles, is now made uſe of, as the laſt and onely probable means to work on the Jewes, v. 11, 14.

29. For God's ſpeciall favours allowed to this people, and his promiſes made to their fathers are ſuch, as that he will never change, or repent of them, v. 1. and conſequently will ſtill make them good to them upon their repentance, and to that end doth, in his providence, uſe a moſt excellent way to bring the obdurate Jewes to repentance, by ſhewing them the iſſue of the Goſpell among the Gentiles, that that may provoke them by way of emulation, not to fall ſhort of ſuch heathens whom they have ſo long deſpiſed.

29. For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.]

30. For as ye Gentiles having gone on in a long courſe of Idolatry, have now, upon the Jewes rejecting the Goſpell, had the Goſpell preach'd to you;

30. For as ye * in times paſt have not believed God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief;]

* Formerly were diſobedient to it.

31. So the Jewes of this age having been contumacious, and from whoſe diſobedience it is that this mercy hath come to the Gentiles, ſhall by this very means (this mercy upon you in ſuffering the Goſpell to be preach'd to you) reap ſome conſiderable benefit alſo; viz. be ſtirr'd by emulation to look after the Goſpell, thus believed on by the Gentiles, and count it a ſhame to them, a people ſo favoured by God, if they be not as wiſe or pious as the Gentiles, which from their Idolatry they now behold to come in, and believe on God.

31. Even ſo have theſe alſo now not believed, † that through your mercy they alſo might attain mercy.]

† Shewn to the ſhewing mercy upon you, that they alſo τὸ ὑμετέρῳ ἐλέει, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ

32. All this ſerves to illuſtrate the grace and mercy of God both to Jewes and Gentiles, that both may attain ſalvation by his grace, without which neither of them can be ſaved. For God hath permitted the Gentiles firſt, and now the Jewes, and all ſorts of men, to wallow in diſobedience and contumacy, that by that means he might reduce both. The Gentiles being Idolaters had Chriſt preached to them, which was occaſion'd by the Jewes rejecting of him, for thereupon the Apoſtles left them, and preached to the Gentiles: The Jewes thus contumacious ſee the Gentiles believe in Chriſt, and receive the Holy Ghoſt, Act. 10. and are in any reaſon by that means to be ſtirr'd up to emulation, not to be behinde them in piety; that ſo, many of them may come in, and believe on Chriſt: and ſo (by this means thus wiſely diſpoſed by God) God hath fulfill'd his great counſell of goodneſſe toward all, in ſhewing undeſerved mercy upon each of them, Jewes as well as Gentiles.

32. For God hath concluded them all under unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all.]

33. O the depth of the abundant goodneſſe of God (in bearing the contumacy of the Gentiles firſt, and then of the Jewes) and of his wiſedome, in making the deſertion of the Jewes a means of calling the Gentiles, and of his knowledg, in knowing how (probably) to work upon the moſt obſtinate Jewes, viz. by envy and emulation toward the Gentiles (as alſo by thoſe heavy calamities that according to Chriſts prediction fell upon them, ſee note e.) how unſearchable are his determinations, and how admirable his wayes of bringing them to paſſe!

33. O the depth of the riches both of the wiſdome and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his judgments, and his wayes * paſt finding out!]

* not to be traced ἀνεξιχνίαστοι

34. According to that of Iſa. 40. 13. that his ways are in wiſdom ſo much above ours, that no thoughts of ours are fit in any degree to be taken into counſell with him. It is impoſſible all the men upon the earth could have foreſeen theſe methods, or ever have thought to have adviſed them.

34. For who hath known the mind of the Lord, or who hath been his counſellor?]

35. And the juſtice is ſuch alſo, that no man can ſpeak any thing againſt the equality of his proceedings herein: for firſt, 'tis a matter of meer bounty and goodneſſe, and every man may with his own doe what he liſts, no man can claim any thing that hath not been allow'd him, and therefore there can be nothing of injuſtice objected to him, if others have been more bountifully treated; and yet farther ſecondly, the Jewes themſelves thus deſerted of God, have their wayes of mercy alſo, if they doe obſerve it.

35. Or who hath firſt given to him, and it ſhall be recompenſed to him again?]

36. For the whole diſpenſation of grace, calling, and ſalvation both of Jewes and Gentiles, is to be imputed to God's free undeſerved merey, the mercy of the call is from him, all good is received by him, and the honour of all belongs unto him; and therefore to him be aſcribed all the glory of this and all other things for ever and ever. Amen.

36. For of him and through him and to him are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen.]

The ſumme then of this Chapter being the ſetting forth the great mercy and wiſdome of God toward Jewes and Gentiles, but particularly toward the Jewes, (who though for their crucifying of Chriſt, and contumacy againſt the Spirit in the preaching of the Apoſtles, they were ſo farre forſaken, as that, leaving them the Apoſtles departed to the Gentiles, yet were by way of rebound benefitted by this preaching to the Gentiles provoked to emulation by the multitude of the converted Gentiles, and ſo themſelves brought to believe alſo, great multitudes of them) is ſaid to be a great myſtery v. 25. and ſo intimated again v. 33. &c. and ſeems to be the very doctrine to which S. Peter refers 2 Pet. 3. 15. concerning God's longanimity, deferring and delaying his execution on his enemies (foretold Mat. 24.) on purpoſe, that as many Jewes as poſſibly might, ſhould before that be brought in to believe, and ſo eſcape their parts in that judgment. This is the plain meaning of what S. Peter expreſſes by [account the long-ſuffering of our Lord, deliverance:] to which he ſaith that Paul had written parallel in many places, and withall tells us that what he had written on that ſubject, was much miſtaken, and wreſted to very diſtant doctrines in thoſe firſt times, and ſo hath been ever ſince, as to that of the Millenaries of both ſorts, and ſome other matters.

and

and again a trance or extaſie, and ſo Gen. 2. 21. 'tis rendred ἔκστασις extaſie, and ſo Act. 10. 10. ἔκστασις extaſie is ſet for a deep ſleep or trance, wherein viſions are received; Aquila renders it in Iſaiah καλαφορὰ tranſportation, Theodotion extaſie, ἔκστασις, Pſal 68. 29. the Septuagint have θάμβος amazement. By all which it appears, that the word in its latitude ſignifies ſuch a ſupine habit of mind as is uſuall in the ſtate of lethargie or ſtupidity, a ſtate of ſenſleſneſs, a ſpirit of ſtupidity ſaith the Syriack, however acquired, whether from a ſleepy lethargick humour (and ſo it follows here, Eyes that ſee not, &c.) or elſe from a trance. Of which ſecond notion ſee Note on Act. 10. d. The word, ſaith Theophylact, properly ſignifies ἐμπήγνυσθαι καὶ προσηλῶσθαι, being nailed and faſten'd to any thing, and ſo denotes ἄγλωτον καὶ ἀμετάθετον, an incurableneſs and immutableneſs of mind. But this referres to the Attical notion of the word as 'tis rendred compunction, which is not it which the Helleniſts underſtood, or uſed it in.

Ἔκστασις

V. 11. Fall] The Hebrew נָפַל, which is rendred by πίπτω to fall, often ſignifies to lie along in the poſture of one that is fallen, and accordingly Exod. 21. 18. is rendred καταπλίνειν to lie along; and ſo Verbs are often taken in a ſenſe noting continuance or duration, as to be born of God, is to live a regenerate or new life. And ſo the Context here inclines it, where it cannot be denied that they did fall, and that that was the effect (he ſpeaks not of the intention or deſigne) of their ſtumbling. All that can be denied therefore is, that this fall of theirs is to continue forever, and accordingly he adds, that this their ſtumbling and falling was, if made uſe of, a very proper means as yet to recover them; for the Gentiles being preached to by this means, might very fitly move the Jewes to emulation, and ſo recover them from their fall: and this God foreſaw, and had that, among other reaſons, in his wiſdome, why he did permit them to deny Chriſt, and reject the Goſpel.

d. Πλήρωμα

V. 12. Fulneſs] The word πλήρωμα fulneſs is a known famous word, uſed by the antients for the whole body of the congregation or Church compacted together, in oppoſition to Schiſmes and breaches in it. So in * Meletius, ἄρχοντες καὶ ἱερεῖς σὺν τῷ Χειροτονήμῳ πληρώματι, the Governors and prieſts with all the fulneſs, that is, Church, that bears the name of Christ. So in * Dionyſius Alexandrinus, πᾶν τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς συναγωγῆς, all the fulneſs of the congregation of Iſrael, from Exod. 12. where the Septuagint read πλῆθος multitude. So in S. Baſils Liturgy, p. 43. d. τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς ἐκκλησίας φύλαξον, preſerve the fulneſs of the Church. And accordingly being admitted into the Church is by S. Baſil, Ep. 197. ad Diodor. and the fathers expreſs'd by εἰς ἐκκλησιαστικὸν πλήρωμα διαδέχεσθαι to be receiv'd into the Eccleſiaſtick fulneſs; either according to the Hebrew idiome, which uſes מלא (from מלא to be filled) for collecting and congregating, or perhaps according as Mat. 9. 16. πλήρωμα is the piece that being put into the garment, the garment, which was before torn, is made whole again. In this ſenſe, I conceive, the word is here to be taken, for the Jewes being added to the Church, their coming in, or being gathered, and laying hold on the faith (being provoked thereto by ſeeing the Gentiles believe) and ſo filling up the vacuity, as it were, which was formerly in the Church, by their ſtanding out impenitently. That this ſhould now ſtill belong to any (yet future) return of the Jewes in a viſible remarkable manner, is no way neceſſary, the circumſtances of the Context applying it to thoſe firſt times, wherein the Epiſtle was written: and therefore Origen againſt Celſus, ſpeaking of the Jewes, ſaith diſtinctly, Σαφῶς δ' ἐροῦμεν, ὅτι οὐδὲ ἀπολελοίπασιν, We affirm confidently that they ſhall not be reſtored. And S. Chryſoſtome, in his diſcourſe againſt the Jewes, denies that they ſhall ever be returned to their country; and cites Joſephus for that opinion, that their ἐρήμωσις or deſolation ſhall be perpetuall. And ſo Cæſarius, Gregory Nazianz'n's brother, being asked of the ἀνάκλησις revocation of the Jewes about the end of the world, anſwers reſolutely, * οὐδέποτε πεισθήσομαι Ἰουδαίους ἀναπλασθῆναι, &c. I will never be perſwaded that the Jewes ſhall be recalled, nor indeed doth the Apoſtle teach any ſuch thing in the words that are well and truely delivered by him, but not rightly underſtood or applyed by others. And all this ſeems to have foundation in the expreſs words of Daniel, ch. 9. 27 he ſhall make it deſolate even to the conſummation. And the Jewiſh writing called Seder-Olam affirms the ſame, viz. that after their ſecond ejection out of Canaan, the Jewes ſhall never return thither again. Others indeed have been of another opinion, that there ſhall be a viſible calling of the Jewes, and ſome of the antients have joyned thereto the thouſand years reign of Chriſt upon the earth, and pretended Apoſtolical tradition for it, but have not by the Church of God been judged to have any juſt plea to it, undoubtedly cannot deduce it from this place, any farther then this, that if they ſhall repent and believe in Chriſt, they ſhall yet be received into mercy. And as πλήρωμα Ἰουδαίων the Jewes fulneſſe is their coming in to the faith, or the Church of Chriſt, ſo likewiſe πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν the fulneſſe of the Gentiles, v. 25. is the Gentiles coming in to the Church, receiving the faith, they then becoming one part of the body of the viſible Church, as the Jewes another. See Note on Lu. 21. c. And ſo Eph. 1. 23. the Church, as the body of Chriſt, is called τὸ πλήρωμα his fulneſs in the ſame kind as ἴδιον μέγεθος or ἴδιον σωμάτιον, the Churches greatneſſe and body, is uſed by Ignatius in Epiſt. ad Smyrnenſes, of the reſtoring the aſſemblies of the Church, by a calme, which had befaln the Chriſtians in Syria.

V. 26. Turne away ungodlineſſe] The Hebrew, Iſa. 59. 20. read לְשָׁבֵי, that is, and to them that turn, or even to them, the ו being often Expletive, or noting Appoſition. In ſtead of this the Septuagint read, it ſeems, וְשִׁיב, and ſo render it καὶ ἀποστρέψει ἀσεβείας ἀπὸ Ἰακὼβ, and ſhall turn iniquities from Jacob; and S. Paul, as his manner is, cites the words of their tranſlation, wherein they have a ſenſe very commodious, and moſt agreeable to the Context here, that many of the Jewes ſhall by Gods grace, and wiſe methods uſed toward them, be reformed and converted. But beſide this, it will be moſt reaſonable to enlarge them alſo, and interpret them according to the original notation of the Hebrew, that God will take care for the delivering of them that thus return and repent. As for the truth of that which is here concluded from this citation, that as yet many more Jewes ſhould repent, and receive the Goſpel, that hath been demonſtrated by the event, 1. when the Jewes ſaw Chriſts predictions Mat. 24. manifeſtly fulfilled in the Roman armies ſitting down before the city; for then many turned Chriſtians, and went out of the city, and were delivered from the following evils: and 2dly, after that, when the Temple and the city were deſtroyed, and they brought in ſubjection by the Romans, then many were humbled and turned Chriſtians: and 3dly, after that alſo, in Juſtin Martyr's daies, γινόσκον ὅτι καθ' ἡμέραν τινὲς μαθητευόμενοι εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, Every day there were ſome that came in to be Chriſts diſciples, which is the cauſe of the ſealing ſo many of every tribe, Revel. 7. 4. (ſee Notes on that Chap. c. d. e.) anſwerable to Ezech. 9. 4. and is the meaning of their eſcaping here.

Paraphrase. CHAP. XII.

1. Seeing then the Gospel, without any addition of legal performances, is the only way to salvation (which is the thing on the proving of which all the former part of the Epistle was spent) and that the Gospel is the spiritualizing and perfecting of the Law, (which he shewes by going ethically through the severall parts of it, the ritual or ceremonial in this chapter, the judicial chap. 13. 1. the moral v. 8. &c.) I doe therefore exhort you, brethren, by the bowels or exceeding great mercies of God, that (in stead of the impure Gnostick practices that are so rife among you, and which pretend to be grounded on their mystical understanding of the Law and scriptures of the old Testament,) you preserve your selves in all purity and holiness, and so offer up unto God (as a kind of heave-offering) your bodies (the work-houses and shops of action and practice) a living sacrifice (in opposition to their dead ones under the Law) an holy pure one (in opposition to those external, carnal, legal ones, which had no kind of intrinsecal goodnesse in them, but only as they were commanded them for a time by God) acceptable to God (whereas the other were not so, whensoever they were not joyned with holy life, nor are now any longer so, having been abolished by Christ) your rational worship of him, (in opposition to that wherein the irrational creatures, the cattel, &c. were offered up to God in his worship.)

1. I Beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your [a] reasonable service.]

[*] I exhort you- by the compassion, Παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς διὰ τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν

[a] reasonable

2. And suffer not your selves to be ensnared with the filthy sensual practices of the Gnosticks of this age, that by joyning with the Jews against the orthodox Christians, avoid persecution themselves, and bring it upon others, and by that means seduce many; but by undertaking the Christian faith, and that renovation of mind and actions, wherein repentance (required of you at your baptisme) consists, let your Christianity appear in the new form and shape of your lives, that ye may be able to discern and approve and practise (see note on ch. 2. f.) what 'tis that God now commands us Christians, even those Evangelical commands of his, which are good (as all the Judaical law cannot be said to be, there being many things permitted for the hardnesse of their hearts, which must not be permitted now) and well pleasing (as now their ceremonial performances, sacrifice, &c. are not, nor ever were, but when joyned with good lives) and perfect (as even the moral part, as it was understood by the Jewes, was not, till it was enlarged, or at least interpreted by Christ Mat. 5. and as the practices of the Gnosticks certainly are not, which yet pretend to the highest perfection.)

2. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, that acceptable and perfect will of God.]

3. For I, in respect of that Apostolical authority which, by the favour and commission of Christ, is given unto me, take upon me to admonish every person among you, that he doe not exalt himself above that which belongs to him, (as the Gnosticks doe, who pretend to such heights of knowledge and perfection, as to despise the Governors of the Church (see Jude 8. d.) and consequently run into such extravagances) but every man in sobriety to possesse the graces which God hath given him, to the benefit of the Church, and not the despising of others, especially those that are placed over him by Christ.

3. For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly then he ought to think, but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith.]

4. For as in the body of man, where there are many members, they have not all offices or places of the same esteem or dignity, which some have;

4. For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office;]

5. So all we Christians make up one body, of which Christ is the head, and are fellow-members in respect of one another, but yet have severall functions and offices in his Church.

5. So we being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.]

6. And having such peculiar functions to which we are designed, differing one from another, according to our severall designations, let us exercise them to the edification of one another: If a man be designed to the office of expounding the Scripture, let him take care that he doe it according to that form of faith, or wholsome doctrine, by which every man, which is sent out to preach the Gospel, is appointed to regulate his preaching, according to those heads and principles of faith and good life, which are known among you:

6. Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophesie, let us prophesie according to the proportion of faith:]

7. If to the office of a Deacon, one designed to doe some inferiour services in the Church, let him set himself to the discharge of that: the Doctor, or he that teacheth the doctrine of the Gospel where it is already planted, let him busie himself about that:

7. Or ministery, let us wait on our ministering: or he that teacheth, on teaching:]

8. He that, when the doctrine of the Gospel is taught and planted, is appointed to preach to them the practical use of it, and exhort them to live accordingly, let him employ himself thus: he that distributes his goods, or perhaps the goods of the Church, to the poor, let him doe it liberally: he that is to govern in the Church, let him be very carefull and diligent in government: he that gives almes (which is the duty of every private Christian that is able) let him doe it merrily, not fearing or doubting that he shall impoverish himself or his posterity by that means.

8. Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him doe it with [*] simplicity: he that ruleth, with diligence: he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulnesse.]

[*] liberality ἐν ἁπλότητι see Mat. 6. 1.

9. Let your love of God appear to be sincere, and such as will abide the triall, Ephes. 1. 4. Lu. 1. 6. and so also your love to one another let it be unfeigned, detesting and flying from every impious practice, such as are observable among the Gnosticks, and for the true Christian course both toward God and men, cleave fast and zealously to it.

9. Let love be without dissimulation. Abhorre that which is evil, cleave to that which is good.]

10. Made up of nothing but perfect kindnesse to one another, contrary to the envying, &c. ch. 1. 29. in the Gnosticks; humble, contrary to their fastidiousnesse and pride, ch. 1. 30.

10. Be kindly affectioned one to another in brotherly love, in honour preferring one another.]

b. 11. Industrious and nimble to doe any thing that belongs to your calling, and having that earnest affection to God's service that shall inflame and set you most ardently about it, and accordingly doing those things that in respect of the circumstances of time and place, wherein now you are, may most tend to the honour of God, and building up of the Church.

11. † Not slothfull in businesse; fervent in spirit; [*] b serving the Lord;]

† in respect of diligence: not slothfull: τῇ σπουδῇ μὴ ὀκνηροί

[*] or, serving the season, so other copies read καιρῷ δουλεύοντες

12. In the midst of those afflictions that now fall upon you, rejoicing in respect of that blisse which we hope for in another world, and consequently never renouncing the faith (as the Gnosticks professe to doe) in time of persecution, but persevering constant to the end, and in order to that observing your set times of prayer with all zeal and importunity.

12. Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer;]

13. Shewing liberality to all that want, as earnest in it as in any thing that brings in most advantage to your selves, or in stead of pursuing others v. 14. doing them as much kindnesse as you can.

13. Distributing to the necessity of saints; † given to hospitality.]

† pursuing διωκόμενοι

14. Blesse

14. Blesse them which persecute you; blesse, and curse not.] 14. Repay nothing to contumelies, but friendly and kind usage.

15. c Rejoice with them that doe rejoice, and weep with them that weep.] 15. Comply with the condition and state of other men, affected with all the good and evil that belongs to them. c.

16. Be of the same mind one towards another. Mind not high things, but *condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits.] 16. Very affectionate and compassionate in your kindnesse one to another, pretending not to mysterious knowledge, as the Gnosticks doe, but behaving your selves as the modestest sort of Christians doe, not perswading or conceiting your selves that you are wiser then the rest of your brethren.

* following along with the lowly τοῖς ταπεινοῖς συναπαγόμενοι

17. Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.] 17. Never acting any revenges upon them which you think have done you injuries; taking care before-hand that whatsoever you doe, it be that which is fit for you to doe before the heathens, and which may not disgrace the Christian profession before them, or aliene them from it, by seeing your lives and actions vile.

18. If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.] 18. And particularly (as farre as lyeth in you, and is possible for you by all actions of meeknesse and charity to procure) living peaceably among them.

19. Dearly beloved, avenge not your selves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord.] 19. To that end (as ver. 17. so again) not taking the matter of avenging the injuries done to you into your own hands, but referring it to the punishment of God, or the magistrate under him, to whom, as he himselfe saith Deut. 32. 25. it belongs to punish offences.

20. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head.] 20. It being the Christian's duty, and his only prudent method of overcoming enemies, to doe them all acts of kindnesse and charity, whereby thou shalt melt them at length, be they never so hard-hearted (as when an artificer that deals in metals cannot melt any metall by putting fire under it, he pours live coals on the top of it, and by that means melts any thing that is hardest to melt. This figure must be made use of to interpret this place, which if it were literally understood, might seem to command that foule crime of wishing mischief, saith S. Augustine de Doct. Christ. l. 3. c. 6)

21. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.] 21. Let not another man's injustice to thee bring thee to that vilenesse of doing the like to him, for then hath he conquered the most divine precious part of thee, enslaved thy soul to so vile a sinne; but let thy way be (that which of all others is most likely to thrive) by doing good to him, by fair words and deeds to overcome him.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

8. Λογικὴ λατρεία

V. 1. Reasonable service] What notion of λογικὴ λατρεία, which we have rendred rational service, is here to be fastned on, is not easie to determine. It may possibly be such as will be agreeable to the notion of ὁ λόγος the word, as it signifies Christ, and then 'tis the Christian service. It may be as λόγος signifies the word or scripture, and then 'twill be that worship which is prescribed us in the Scripture; and so the Syriack seems to understand it, setting down for λογικὴ לפי דבר secundùm os verbi, according to the mouth of the word, that is, such as the word prescribes. It may be also as λόγος word is opposed to νόμος law, and then 'twill be the Evangelical worship. And once more, it may note such a worship of God as is most agreeable to reason, and such as a rational man will resolve to be most agreeable to so excellent and pure a Deity. But the circumstances of the place, and opposition to the sacrifices of the Law, the beasts that were offered there, seem to restrain it to the vulgar and ordinary notion of λογικὴ rational, in opposition to the irrational sacrifices under the Law, as ζῶσα living, before, to the dead bodies among them. Thus is the Table of Christ called by Theodoret λογικὴ τράπεζα rationalis mensa, Serm. 6. de Provid. that is, the table, or altar, where we offer up our selves, our souls and bodies, to be a reasonable, holy, and lively sacrifice unto God, in stead of those tables or altars on which the beasts were offered. Thus in Hermes in Pœmandro, in the Hymne or ὑμνόλογον which closes the book, this prayer is to be found, Δέξαι λογικὰς θυσίας, receive these rational sacrifices. Thus, I conceive, may λογικὸν γάλα rational milk 1. Pet. 2. 2. be rendred also, not that milk of cattl, which mens bodies are wont to be fed with, but this rationall milk by which mens souls are improved, to wit instruction, or Christian doctrine. And thus the ancient Latine translation hath rendred it in both places.

b. Καιρῷ δουλεύοντες

V. 11. Serving the Lord] The authority of those copies is great which read καιρῷ δουλεύοντες in this place, serving the time, or the season, which being written short thus, κῳ, might easily be mistaken for κυρίῳ. One argument that it is here to be retain'd is Ignatius's Epistle to Polycarp, where he joynes two precepts together, Πλέον σπουδαίος γίνου ἢ εἶ, τοὺς καιροὺς καταμάνθανε, Become more diligent then thou art, observe, or consider, the seasons, or times: that is, the times being times of great corruption first, and then of persecution also (both mention'd in the former part of the period, ἐπεσθίασαι γὰρ οἱ ἑτεροδιδάσκαλοι μή σε καταπλανήσωσιν, let not the heterodox, or false teachers, move thee, or terrifie thee, σὺ δὲ ἑδραῖος, stand firm, and μᾶλλον δὲ ἔνεκεν τοῦ πάντα ὑπομένειν ὑμᾶς δεῖ, we must beyond all persevere and endure all for Gods sake) he must not be slothfull, but very diligent to defend his flock against all false infusions, and sustain them constant in sufferings. And this is exactly agreeable and parallel to this exhortation here thus set, and may well seem an imitation of it. In respect of diligence, not slothfull; zealous in spirit, serving the time, or season, which was in like manner a season of great corruption from the Gnosticks, and of persecution also from the Jewes, with whom these Gnosticks comply'd, and stirr'd them up against the Orthodox Christians. See Note on Eph. 5. d.

V. 15. Rejoyce with them that doe——] This verse seems to referre to the two gates of the Temple, one called the gate of the Bridegrooms, and the other, of the mourners, into which two sorts of men all kindes of persons are divided: under the first are contained all those that continue unblemish'd members of the Church, under no kind of censure; under the other are the excommunicate of any the lowest kind, those under Nidui, which though they might come into the Temple, yet were to come in at that dore of mourners, with some difference upon them, & discrimination from other men; that they that saw them might pray for them in this form, Qui inhabitat domum hanc consoletur te, inditque animo tuo ut obtemperes, He that dwels in this house comfort thee, and give thee a heart to obey. See 1 Cor. 5. 2. Note c. and 7. 30. and 2 Cor. 2. 1. and 7. 8. and 12. 21. And accordingly the exhortation is to have affections Christianly disposed toward all men; c. χαίρειν μετὰ χαιρόντων to be very much afflicted, which 2 Cor. 12. 21. is called μενθεῖν mourning, or bewailing ſuch as are (for their faults) juſtly fallen under the cenſures of the Church, and to doe the utmoſt we can toward their recovery; and on the other ſide to rejoyce at the ſpirituall good and proficiency of all others.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XIII.

a. 1. Then for the judiciall lawes, that great ſupreme one ought to be taken into ſpeciall care of all Chriſtians, that of obedience to the ſupreme powers rightly eſtabliſhed and conſtituted, although they be not Jewes but Romans. Nothing in Chriſtianity ought to be pretended or made uſe of, to give any man immunity from obedience, which from all ſubjects, of what quality ſoever; Apoſtles, teachers, &c. is due to thoſe to whom allegiance belongs, (contrary to the Gnoſticks doctrine and practice Jude 8.) but on the contrary, every perſon under government, of what rank ſoever he be, is to yield ſubjection to the ſupreme governour legally placed in that kingdome, as to him which hath commiſſion from God, as every ſupreme magiſtrate muſt be reſolved to have, though he be an heathen.

1. Let every ſoul be ſubject unto the * a higher powers: for there is no power but † of God. The powers that be are ordained * of God.]

* ſupreme † from God * by God

b. 2. From which divine commiſſion it is directly conſequent, that he that makes any violent reſiſtance or oppoſition to the ſupreme magiſtrate, oppoſes that violence to God's commiſſion, and ſhall accordingly receive that puniſhment which belongs to ſo ſacrilegious a contumacy, the wrath and judgement of God belongs to him.

2. Whoſoever therefore reſiſteth the power, reſiſteth the ordinance of God; and they that reſiſt, ſhall receive to themſelves [b] damnation.]

3. And certainly if thou haſt not ſome wicked purpoſes in thine heart, thou wilt never be tempted to doe this, for they that do not deſign any ill, have little reaſon to be afraid of magiſtrates; or conſequently to deſire to prevent their ill uſage of them by taking up armes againſt them. For though it be poſſible Governors may be tyrants, yet this poſſible fear is not in any reaſon to move any to certain ſin; but on the other ſide every one is to look on the magiſtrate as God's officer, and to truſt himſelf in God's protection, and count that Princes doe not uſe to puniſh men for doing well, but for doing ill, for ſeditions, conſpiracies, &c. and therefore if thou wouldſt make a prudent proviſion for thy ſelf, if thou doſt deſire to be ſecure from being puniſhed by the magiſtrate, doe not offend againſt his lawes, and thou ſhalt, in all probability, receive nothing but reward for it from him.

3. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evill. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? doe that which is good, and thou ſhalt have praiſe † of the ſame.]

† from it ἐξ αὐτῆς

4. For that is as conſiderable a part of the magiſtrate's office (to which he is deſigned by God, and for which thou art to count thy ſelf happy in him, to aſſiſt, and not reſiſt him) that God hath ſet him over thee, to ſecure and defend thee, and help thee to a peaceable poſſeſſion of all God's other benefits, which are all worth nothing to thee, if thou maiſt not enjoy them peaceably. And that is a reaſonable conſideration to move thee to adventure the hazard of being injured by magiſtrates, and not to caſt off their yoke on every remoter fear of it, but to take the poſſible dangers and certain benefits together, and from thence to conclude, that 'tis for the ſubjects good, that Princes are ſo over them. And generally 'tis our own fault if there be any thing formidable in them. In that caſe indeed the Magiſtrate hath a ſword put in his hands by God, and 'tis his office to be God's executioner of puniſhment on malefactors, and he is obliged to doe ſo by conſcience toward God, whoſe officer and commiſſioner he is.

4. For he is the miniſter of God to thee for good: but if thou doe that which is evill, be afraid; for he beareth not the ſword in vain: for he is the miniſter of God, a revenger * to execute wrath on him that doth evill.]

* for wrath εἰς ὀργὴν

5. And conſequently our obedience is due to him, not onely for fear of puniſhment from the magiſtrate, for 'tis poſſible a cunning or a proſperous offender or rebell may avoid that, but in obedience to the conſtitution of God, whoſe officer he is, and to the command of honouring and paying ſubjection, &c. to him.

5. Wherefore ye † muſt needs be ſubject, not onely for wrath, but alſo for conſcience ſake.]

† ought to be ὀφείλετε

6. For this is the diſtinct reaſon why tributes and cuſtomes are paid to Kings, viz. becauſe they are commiſſioners ſent from God; who having full power over all we have, as the free donor of all, may aſſign his commiſſioners what proportion he pleaſe, and that a liberall one, as he did the double portion to the elder brother; and this but very reaſonable, ſeeing, in the diſcharge of their office, they ſpend themſelves with an unwearied patience and conſtancy, attending on it, as the hardeſt and heavieſt task that any man in a kingdom undergoes, and is therefore in proportion the moſt richly to be rewarded of any.

6. For, for this cauſe pay you tribute alſo: for they are God's miniſters attending continually upon this very thing.]

7. This therefore layes all obligation on you to render to Princes (as a debt due from ſubjects) all extraordinary or ordinary payments, as alſo that reverence and honour which by the Law of God belongs to them, as well as obedience and diligent ſubjection, v. 1.

7. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute, to whom tribute is due; cuſtome, to whom cuſtome; fear, to whom fear; honour, to whom honour.]

8. For ye Chriſtians muſt not think that your Chriſtian liberty will free or diſoblige you from the diſcharge of any debt or duty to any man, inferior or ſuperior, that is, either of juſtice to ordinary men, or ſubjection to thoſe whom God hath ſet over you: One debt onely ye muſt owe all (and yet pay that too, as oft as occaſions are preſented) that of charity, which muſt be ſo paid that it be alwayes owing; and if this be diſcharged as Chriſt requires, not onely to friends, but to all, even thoſe that have behaved themſelves as enemies to us, the perſecuting heathen Emperors, &c. this is that perfection of the Law which Chriſt requires, Mat. 9. 48.

9. Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. ἐξουσία

V. 1. Higher powers] What ἐξουσία power here ſignifies will appear ſufficiently by the ὑπὸ ἀρχοντας, for the Rulers, &c. v. 3. for the ὑπὸ for being a rationall or cauſall particle, applies the ſpeech to that which had gone before, and ſo expreſſes the ἐξουσίαι powers v. 1. to be the ἄρχοντες rulers, v. 3. and ſo again the annexing of ἐξουσίαν power v. 3. doth confirm the ſame. Nor indeed can the power, abſtracted from the perſon of the magiſtrate, be able to doe what is here ſaid of ἐξουσία, viz. commend, or encourage v. 3. avenge and puniſh v. 4. And the matter is clear, for v. 3. φοβεραὶ ἐξουσίαι, the powers being feared, is all one with ἄρχοντες εἰσὶ φόβος the rulers are a fear, or terror, in the beginning of the verſe, and v. 4. immediately upon the mention of the power, and the praiſe which they that doe well ſhall have ἐξ αὐτῆς v. 3. from the power, it is added, Θεοῦ γὰρ διάκονός ἐστί σοι, For he (that muſt needs be the perſon of the magiſtrate) is a miniſter of God to thee for good; and, He bears not the ſword in vain, or, for no end, for he is the miniſter of God, an avenger of wrath, &c. Thus is ἐξουσίαι and ἀρχαὶ uſed Lu. 12. 11. when the diſciples are ſaid to be brought before principalities and powers, that is, without queſtion, princes and men in authority, and ſo are κυριότητες dominions 2 Pet. 2. 10. all that are in authority; and ſo in this Epiſt. c. 8. 38. ἀρχαὶ and ἐξουσίαι principalities and powers, are certainly perſons (heathen magiſtrates) who perſecute Chriſtians; and ſo Epheſ. 3. 11. ἀρχαὶ and ἐξουσίαι are perſons to whom ſomewhat was to be made known. And ſo Col. 1. 16, & 2. 15, 22. where ἐξουσίαι and δυνάμεις are joyned with Angels, and all ſaid to be made ſubject to Chriſt. And that it may not ſeem ſtrange that the word ἐξουσία power ſhould be ſet to note a perſon, it will be worth obſerving, not only that the Latine, magiſtratus, which ſignifies magiſtracy, ſignifies the perſon of the magiſtrate alſo, and is moſt commonly ſo uſed, not for the power, but for the perſon inveſted with that power; but which is punctually for the point in hand, that the Latine Poteſtas, which is directly anſwerable to the Greek ἐξουσία, ſignifies a ruler or Governour in good and ancient authors, as in Juvenal Sat. 10. ſpeaking of the unfortunate end of Sejanus, after all his greatneſſe, he asks,

Hujus, qui trahitur, prætextam ſumere mavis,
An Fidenorum Gabiorúmque eſſe Poteſtas?

which had you rather thoſe? to ſucceed Sejanus, that was thus uſed, that is, have that great preferment and dignity of his (aſſumed by the Emperor of Rome into the participation of his ſupremacy) and pay ſo dear for it, or elſe to be quietly and peaceably the power, that is, ruler or governour, of thoſe mean people, the Fideni or Gabii? Then for the word which is here added to ἐξουσίαι, ὑπερέχουσαι, that that is to be rendred, ὑπερέχουσαι the ſupreme (not the higher) powers, will appear, not onely by comparing it with 1 Pet. 2. 13. where the βασιλεῖ King, or Emperour, is the ὑπερέχων ſupreme, and all others ſaid to be ſent by him, he having his commiſſion from God (as here alſo 'tis ſaid in the end of this v. 1.) and all others are not from God immediately, but from him; but alſo by the nature and uſe of the word; the nature of it confining it to thoſe that are over, and not under others: and ſo in Simplicius upon Epictetus p. 2. 14. αἴτια πρῶτα καὶ ὑπερέχοντα, the firſt cauſes and ὑπερέχοντα, which muſt therefore be rendred ſupreme, are joyned together, and ſaid to be all one with ἐξῃρημένα αἴτια, the exempt, abſolute, independent principles, viz. the gods, ſaith he, or, in his ſtile, the κρείττονες, to whom worſhip is due; and ſo in proportion ſpeaking here of men, it muſt belong to the ſupreme in any kingdome, who, as he is πρῶτος firſt, ſo is he ἐξῃρημένος exempt, and ἀνεπίσπευστος not accountable to any man or men upon earth: and for the uſe of it, beſide that which hath already been ſaid, it may be obſerved, that Gen. 49. 3. in the deſcription of that condition which had belonged to Reuben, (if he had not forfeited it) by his primogeniture, viz. that he ſhould have been the King (as, upon his ſin, Judah was,) it is ſaid of him, that he was יתר שאת ויתר עז the excellence of principality, and the excellence of power, that is, the excellent principality and excellent power; which ſeems to me to be the very phraſe here uſed, of ὑπέχουσα ἐξουσία, and is there ſpoken perſonally of that elder brother.

b. κρῖμα

V. 2. Damnation] The word κρῖμα, according to its literal importance, ſignifies judgment, and no more, and is applied to humane judgments ſometimes, either going to law, contentiones in foro, 1 Cor. 6. 7. or elſe ſentences of temporal puniſhments on malefactors. So Lu. 23. 40. where one thief ſaith to the other, οὐδὲ φοβῇ σὺ ὅτι ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ κρίματι εἶ, thou art in the ſame judgment, or ſentence of death, capital puniſhment, called κρῖμα θανάτου c. 24. 20. judgment of death temporal. Otherwhere it as clearly ſignifies divine, and that eternal puniſhment; as Act. 24. 25. τοῦ κρίματος τοῦ μέλλοντος τοῦδε, judgment to come, that is, certainly at the end of the world, at the day of doom; and ſo Rom. 2. 2. κρῖμα τοῦ Θεοῦ

Θεῦ the judgment of God, and ſo again v. 3. which v. 5. is explained to be wrath, or puniſhment, againſt the day of wrath; ſo Heb. 6. 2. αἰώνιον κεῖμα eternal judgment joyned with the reſurrection of the dead. So Mat. 23. 14. and Mar. 12. 40. Lu. 20. 47. περισσότερον κρῖμα more abundant judgment, which they ſhould receive in another world (when this world affords none) for their Hypocriſies; and Rom. 3. 8. ὧν τὸ κρῖμα ἔνδικόν ἐστιν, whoſe judgment (or puniſhment eternal) is juſt; and 2 Pet. 2. 3. οἷς τὸ κρῖμα ἔκπαλαι οὐκ ἀργεῖ, whoſe judgment, that is, deſtruction, (temporal here by the hand of God, preparatory and procœmial to) eternal lingreth not, as appears by the next words, whoſe deſtruction ſleepeth not. So 1 Tim. 3. 6. κρῖμα διαβόλου the condemnation of the devil, that ſentence that befell Lucifer for his pride preſently after his creation, and ſo may befall the novice lifted up with pride there. And therefore Heſychius, from the more general uſage, renders it, ἀνταπόδοσις Θεῦ, God's retribution, or payment, or rendring according to works, which is ſure his eternal puniſhment. Three places there are, which belong certainly to this ſenſe, which yet have been queſtion'd by ſome men, and denied to doe ſo. Firſt this in this place, They that reſiſt, that is, by force or violence oppoſe the ſupreme power, ἑαυτοῖς κρῖμα λήψονται, ſhall receive judgment to themſelves. That this ſignifies temporal puniſhment, which the magiſtrate may inflict, and no more, they think appears by the following words, for rulers are a terror to evil works. But if that argument were of force, it would conclude alſo, that no more but temporal puniſhment belonged to any other crime which was puniſhable by the magiſtrate; for of him it is ſaid, that he is Θεῦ διάκονος ἔκδικος εἰς ὀργὴν τῷ τὸ κακὸν πράσσοντι, the miniſter, or officer, of God, his executioner for wrath, that is, puniſhment temporal, to him indefinitly that doth evil, that is, every viſible malefactor. And ſo if this would conclude for the reſiſter or rebell, it would alſo be priviledge or protection to all other ſins, which the magiſtrate is wont to puniſh, the thief, the murtherer, &c. he that were hanged ſhould not for that be damned, whatever his crime were. And 2dly, if that reſiſter ſhould eſcape the hand of juſtice here, by flight, &c. or if he ſhould proſper in his rebellion, ſo that the magiſtrate ſhould not be able to puniſh him, or yet farther, ſo as to get into the throne, what judgment or puniſhment is that man likely to receive, if the κρῖμα or judgment here ſignifie none but the magiſtrates wrath or puniſhment? 3dly, 'Tis here v. 5. concluded from hence, Wherefore ye muſt be ſubject, not only for wrath, but alſo for conſcience ſake: where wrath ſignifying temporal puniſhment v. 4. if that were all that were meant by κρῖμα, then could it not be true, much leſſe concluded from hence, that men muſt be ſubject not onely for wrath. Certainly he that reſiſts is not ſubject (ἀντεῖναι is all one with ἀντιτάσσεσθαι, and both directly contrary to ὑποτάσσεσθαι, being ſubject, v. 3, 5.) and therefore if we muſt be ſubject, not onely for wrath, as that ſignifies temporal puniſhment, then he that reſiſts ſhall receive more then wrath, as that ſignifies temporal puniſhment, viz. κρῖμα eternal judgment, or condemnation, which muſt be the importance of ἀλλὰ καὶ διὰ συνείδησιν, but alſo for conſcience ſake, viz. that if he doe it not, it will be ſinne to him, wound his conſcience, and ſo binde over to that puniſhment that belongs to an accuſing conſcience, or the breach of that divine law (which is the rule of conſcience) the command of obedience v. 1. to a damning ſinne, if it be not timely repented of. The ſecond place thus doubted of is 1 Cor. 11. 29. He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh κρῖμα judgement to himſelf. That it doth not there ſignifie damnation is attempted to be proved by 3. arguments: 1. by that which followes v. 30. For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and many ſleep; which belonging only to temporal puniſhment, is conceived to be the periphraſis of κρῖμα judgment precedent, and conſequently that that is ſo alſo. 2dly, Becauſe the Apoſtle ſpeaks there of any one ſingle act of this ſinne, which being not an habit or cuſtome, the objectors conceive not to be actually damning under the ſecond covenant. 3dly, Becauſe v. 32. 'tis ſaid, When we are judged, we are chaſtened of the Lord, that we ſhould not be condemned, &c. To the firſt of theſe the anſwer is clear, 1. that ſickneſſe and death, though they be temporal puniſhments, are yet divine, inflicted by the hand of God, not of the magiſtrate, and 'tis acknowledged that it doth ſeldome ſignifie eternal puniſhment, excluſively to God's temporal puniſhments, but eternal, and ſometimes temporal too (as was ſaid of 2 Pet. 2. 3.) or eternal if he repent not, and perhaps temporal if he doe, or to bring him to repentance: 2dly, that theſe temporal doe not exclude eternal puniſhments; they may be ſick, and die, and be damn'd alſo, or elſe ſome being reformed by theſe temporal chaſtiſements, others may be damn'd alſo that doe not reform; and that this is juſt with God, and the meaning of κεῖμα there appears v. 27. which is parallel to v. 29. whoſoever ſhall eat or drink unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, that is, ſhall be thought guilty of the greateſt violation of Chriſt, to profane and tread under feet his body and blood. To the ſecond, it need not here be diſputed whether one act of mortal or wilfull ſin bring damnation, it being as much to the preſent purpoſe, that cuſtomary or frequent ſinning doth; for whatever mercy may belong to him that commits only one act, yet, if he that cuſtomarily or frequently doth it, incurre damnation, this will be the Apoſtles meaning by κεῖμα there, who ſpeaks indefinitely of the ſinne (as when he ſaith, the drunkard or adulterer ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God,) and deſcends not to that minuter conſideration, what 'tis that contracts the guilt of that ſin. As for the third objection, 'tis an evident confirmation of this rendring; for if thoſe that were ſick, &c. were chaſtned of the Lord, that they ſhould not be condemned, then ſure if they had not been ſo chaſtned, or not reformed by that chaſtning, they ſhould have been condemned with the world, which is no argument that eternal judgments are not due to them on their impenitence, but an evident intimation that they are. The third place thus doubted of (and brought to countenance the former interpretations of theſe two) is 1 Pet. 4. 17. Ὁ καιρὸς τοῦ ἄρξασθαι τὸ κρῖμα ἀπὸ τοῦ οἴκου τοῦ Θεοῦ, It is the ſeaſon of judgments beginning from the houſe of God, where that that befalls the houſe of God cannot be condemnation. To which I anſwer by granting the objection, and conſequently that κρῖμα in its latitude muſt not there be applied to the houſe of God, but only one part of it. For of κρῖμα in that verſe there are ſpecified two parts, τὸ μέσον and τὸ τέλος, the firſt part, and the end or laſt part of it. The firſt part of God's revenge on ſin may be in this life, and befall the godly, who hath ſin to be puniſhed alſo, and ſo μόλις σώζεται hardly eſcapes v. 18. or (as that phraſe is in the original Prov. 11. 31.) is recompenſed on the earth; but the ſecond ſadder part is τῶν ἀπειθούντων of the contumacious, that obey not the Goſpel of Chriſt, and it ſeizeth on them here, and ſweeps them away, and then continues to them eternally: and ſo ſtill κρῖμα is ἀνταπόδοσις Θεῦ, God's puniſhment and retribution to ſinne, whereever it is, both here and in another world.

V. 7. Salvation] What σωτηρία ſalvation or deliverance here ſignifies (ſomewhat different from the notion of it ch. 10. a.) may be gueſſed by what hath been oft mention'd of the word σωζόμενοι and σῴζεσθαι in the Goſpels, Mat. 10. h. Lu. 13. b. &c. the deliverance of the believing Jews or Chriſtians out of perſecutions, c. σωτηρία which (after the example of Christ) befell them in the first age, and from which they were delivered partly by the great act of vengeance from Christ upon the Jewes the crucifiers of him, and persecuters of his followers (see Lu. 21. 28.) and partly by their departing generally out of Judæa, before that destruction befell the Jewes (see Rev. 7. d. e.) and partly by the Halcyonian daies, which under Vespasian were allowed the Christians after this time in all places. The approaching of this is every where used, as an antidote or cordiall consideration, to arme them in time of affliction; and so here the considering that this is now nearer then when they first embraced the faith, and that therefore now 'twere unreasonable to fall off, and lose all their past faith and sufferings, when now a little while more will land them safe at their expected haven, the deliverance so promised. This probably is the meaning of the phrase, 1 Pet. 1. 5. σωτηρία ἑτοίμη ἀποκαλυφθῆναι ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ, deliverance ready to be revealed in the last time, and perhaps σωτηρία ψυχῶν v. 9. the saving of their lives, (antecedent to that of their soules) the delivering them from those imminent dangers that the Christians were under from the Jewes, till that their destruction, (for that that is the meaning of σῴζειν ψυχὴν Mat. 16. 15. Mar. 8. 35. Luk. 9. 24. saving, or finding, his life; see those places, and Note on 2 Pet. 1. e.) That 'tis there to be thus understood may be probable by v. 10. where, saith he, the prophets enquired concerning this σωτηρία salvation, or deliverance, what time it was likely to come v. 11. which seems to confine it to some eminent event or passage in this world, and that, it seems, now ready to fall out in that present age, v. 12. So. 2 Pet. 3. 15. where he bids them count the longanimity of God (that is, his sparing or deferring the punishment of the Jewes so long) σωτηρίαν deliverance, viz. that the Jewes might come in to the faith, and all the believing Jewes might have time to goe out of Hierusalem (see Note on Mat. 24. g.) and so be rescued out of that common destruction. To this, I conceive, belong these words in the Epistle of Barnabas p. 227. ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ αὐτοῦ ἡμέραι ἔσονται πονηραὶ καὶ ῥυπαραί, ἐν αἷς ἡμεῖς σωθησόμεθα, In his (that is, Christ's) kingdome there shall be evil and foule daies, in which we shall be saved, or escape; and that which follows, γλυκύπικρα ἡμῖν ὅτι φανεῖ, ἐκείνοις δὲ σκολιὰ, to us there shall be light some, but to them dark, black events. This is set down most plainly 2 Pet. 2. 6, 7, 9. by the example of Sodom and Lot; Sodom destroyed, and Lot and his family preserved: and so also of the old world, v. 5. when Noah and seven more were preserved, where ῥύεσθαι is all one with σῴζεσθαι. And 'tis observable that this very word σῴζω is used in this story in Genesis, when the Angel bids Lot escape and flie for his life, or save and deliver his life, σῴζειν ψυχήν. And because this is the prime matter of S. Jude's Epistle, as well as of that of S. Peter's to the dispersed Jewes, that also may probably be the meaning of κοινὴ σωτηρία, common salvation, or deliverance, Jude 3. that deliverance that the believers should generally meet with. This use of this word, how agreeable it is to the Scripture-style, may yet farther appear by the notion of a Saviour in the Old Testament, for a deliverer, such as Joshua was said to be, of whom there is a notable place to this purpose, Ecclesiasticus 40. 1. Jesus, &c. according to his name, was made great εἰς σωτηρίαν ἐκλεκτῶν, for the saving, or delivering, the elect of God, and taking vengeance on the enemies, &c. And so Obad. 21. the Saviours shall come to judge the mount of Esau, the kingdome, &c and so all those others, of whom 'tis said in general, Thou hast sent us Saviours, that is, the Judges which were sent or raised up by God to fight the battels of God's people against their enemies; in which two respects, first of avenging them on their enemies, secondly, of delivering them, those two titles of Judges and Saviours are bestowed on them. And agreeable to this, this act of Christs so remarkable on the Jewes is called both the kingdome of God, and σωτηρία deliverance, or salvation: kingdome in both respects, as a King is an avenger and protector both; and deliverance in the second only. Other like words we find to the same sense. See Note on Act. 3. b.

V. 12. The day is at hand] Ἡ ἡμέρα ἤγγικεν the day draweth nigh is all one with ἐγγίζουσα ἡ ἡμέρα the day approaching Heb. 10. 25. and shall there be explain'd, which that it may belong to the destruction of the Jewes, and whatever inseparable attendants of that, may appear Ezech. 7. 10. Behold the day, behold it is come, the morning is gone forth; which is clearly the approaching of this day (and so other of the phrases, used in the New Testament for that destruction, are to be met with in that chapter, An end, the end, &c. v. 2, 3, 6.) and yet more perfectly v. 12. The time is come, the day draweth neer, and these spoken clearly (as that whole Chap.) of the final destruction of that whole people. The approach of which being here mention'd, as a motive to encourage the Christian Jewes to hold out, and not to fall off to the Gnosticks impure courses (who, by helping them to escape persecutions, corrupted and inveigled many) this phrase is here by way of accommodation applied to that time, as a time of light, unfit for the works of darkness. See Heb. 10. a. and Lu. 21. 34. d. ἡ ἡμέρα ἤγγικεν

V. 13. Rioting] What κῶμος signifies, is not so commonly observed. Theophylact defines it, τὰ μετὰ μέθης καὶ ὕβρεως ᾄσματα, songs with drunkenness and contumely. In which definition, as the word ὕβρεις contumely is oft used in an impure sense, to denote unlawfull loves and pursuits, so in all probability doth it there, for the night-amorous revels are they that are peculiarly signified by κῶμοι. So Wisd. 14. 23. where speaking of the Heathens κρύφια μυστήρια secret mysteries, he joynes with them ἐμμανεῖς κῶμοι mad revels, and as the effects thereof addes, οὔτε βίους, οὔτε γάμους καθαρεύειν φυλάσσουσι, they keep neither lives nor marriages pure. 3 Mac. 6. 4. when he saith the Temple was filled ἀσωτίας καὶ κώμων, he addes ῥαδυμούντων μετ' ἑταίρων, dallying with harlots, γυναιξὶ πλησιαζόντων —— And he that doth this, is in Theocritus κωμαστής. So say the Scholiasts on that Poet, κωμάζειν λέγεται διὰ τὸ κατὰ νύκτα εἰς ἐρωμένας ἀπερχομένων, the word is used for those that go by night to their sweethearts. This they used to do with torches and fiddles, singing amorous ballads at the dores of their beloved, (from thence called κρουσίθυρα, and θυροκοπικὰ) a pattern of which is set down in Plautus Curcul. Act. 1. Scen. 2. e. κῶμος

Quid si adeam ad fores, atque occentem?
Pessuli, heus pessuli, vos saluto lubens. ——

To this belongs that of Aristophanes in Pluto,

Ἔοικα δ' ὅτι κῶμον βαδίζειν,
Στέφανόν γέ τοι καὶ δᾷδ' ἔχων πορεύεται,

He lookes as if he were going to a revel, having his crown and his torch; and more fully in the right reading of the verse in * Plautus, Tute tibi prælis lotis, luces cereum.

You go before your self with the fiddle, you are your own torch-bearer: some body else it seems they were wont to have, to performe these offices for them; so saith the Commentator of Hermogenes, Πυθαγόρας μέσῃ νύκτων ἀστρονομούμενος νεανίσκον τινὰ σὺν αὐλητῇ κωμάζοντα μετὰ λαμπάδος καὶ αὐλητρίδος —— Pythagoras studying the stars at midnight, saw a young man with a fidler revelling with a torch —— Agreeably the word is here to be interpreted, the night-revels, or pursuits of their unclean designes; and so it is, Gal. 5. 21. and 1 Pet. 4. 3. Comissationes, which some have mistaken for Comessationes, as if it were from comedo, and so render it surfetings, whereas the Latine word is but a light derivation from the Greek κῶμος, and κωμάζειν. * *Curcul. Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XIV.

a. 1. And for the preſerving of that Chriſtian charity among all, mention'd ſolemnly c. 13. 8, 9, 10. I ſhall enlarge to give theſe rules. Great diſſenſions and diviſions are already gotten into the Church of Jewiſh believers (not only againſt the Gentiles, but) among themſelves, ſome Jewiſh converts diſcerning their Chriſtian liberty and freedome from the Judaical yoke, others conceiving themſelves ſtill to be under that obligation. The latter of theſe is zealous for the Moſaical Law, and obſervances of circumciſion and meats, &c. and condemnes all others as breakers of Gods Law, that do not obſerve all theſe. On the other ſide they that are inſtructed in the knowledge of their Chriſtian liberty, ſeeing others ſtand on ſuch things as theſe, that had never any reall goodneſs or vertue in them, and now are abrogated by Chriſt, are apt to deſpiſe and contemn them that continue under that yoke, and reſolving to maintain that liberty which they have purchaſed by Chriſt, freedome from ſuch obligations, are apt to ſeparate from the Judaizers, ch. 2. 18. and ſo betwixt one and the other, the communion is likely to be broken. To both theſe therefore I apply my ſelf at this time. Thoſe of you that do not think your ſelves obliged to keep the Law, do not ye reject the ſcrupulous or erroneous Judaizer, that thinks himſelf bound to obſerve thoſe Lawes, of abſtaining from many meats, &c. but receive him to your Communion: yet not ſo, that he thereby think himſelf encouraged or authorized to quarrel with other mens reſolutions for the directing their own lives, what is lawfull or unlawfull for them, and to condemn others that doe not think themſelves ſo obliged.

1. HIM that is weak in the faith, * receive ye; but not † to doubtfull [a] diſputations.]

* receive to you, προσλαμβάνεσθε † to the judging of thoughts

2. He that is ſufficiently inſtructed in his liberty, makes no ſcruple of eating any thing, thinks not himſelf obliged to be circumciſed, &c. makes uſe of his Chriſtian liberty to that purpoſe: but the Judaizer being not ſufficiently inſtructed in the nature of the liberty allow'd him by Chriſt, and remaining in that error concerning the obligingneſſe of the Moſaical Law, abſtaineth from all fleſh perhaps, (for ſo ſome did, ſaith Theophylact, that they might not be taken notice of to abſtain peculiarly from ſwines fleſh) or elſe from ſome ſorts of meats, as unclean and forbidden.

2. For one believeth that he may eat all things; another who is weak, eateth herbs.]

3. Now to begin with the latter firſt (ſee note on Mat. 7. b.) The Jewiſh believer, that diſcernes his liberty and eateth all meats indifferently, muſt not deſpiſe the ſcrupulous erroneous, which is alſo a Jewiſh believer: And on the other ſide the ſcrupulous Judaizer muſt not reject and caſt out of his communion that other, who being inſtructed in the nature of his Chriſtian liberty doth not think himſelf obliged to abſtain from all thoſe meats, from which a Jew under Moſes religiouſly and Judaically abſtains; for God hath admitted him into the Church, (without laying that yoke upon him,) as a ſervant into his family, and he is not to be excluded by the Judaizer for ſuch things as theſe.

3. Let not him that eateth, * deſpiſe him that eateth not: and let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth; for God hath received him.]

* ſet at nought ἐξουθενείτω

4. What commiſſion haſt thou, O Jewiſh Chriſtian, to judge God's ſervant, received and owned by him, v. 3. to exclude him out of the Church? (ſee ch. 2. 1. and note a.) To his own Lord he ſtands or falls, that is, he, by his (not thy) ſentence or judgment, is either cleared (judged to have done nothing amiſſe) or condemn'd. But he certainly ſhall be cleared, for God is able to clear him, if he pleaſe, and he certainly will, having, by receiving him into his family, given him this liberty.

4. Who art thou that judgeſt another man's ſervant? to his own maſter he ſtandeth or falleth: yea, he ſhall be holden up, for God is able to make him ſtand.]

b. 5. The Judaizing Chriſtian obſerveth ſome ſpecial daies appointed by Moſes his Law, the ſabbath or other Jewiſh feſtivals; but the other which is no Judaizer, but knowes his own liberty, makes not that difference of daies that Moſes requires: and in ſuch things every man muſt act by his own, not by another man's judgment or conſcience (ſee note on Lu. 1. a.) what he is verily perſwaded he ought to doe, (and therefore unity and charity ought not to be broken by you for ſuch things.)

5. One man † [b] eſteemeth one day above another: another eſteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully perſwaded * in his own mind.]

† preferreth one day before another; another approveth every day * by, for the King's MS. reads πάσῃ without ἐν

6, 7. He that makes a difference betwixt daies, thinks it is God's will he ſhould doe ſo; and he that doth not make that difference, thinks it God's pleaſure now under Chriſt that he ſhould not make any difference. He that makes no difference of meats, thinks it acceptable to God that he ſhould do ſo, and in teſtimony that he thinks ſo, conſtantly bleſſeth God, when he eats, for giving him that food, to the eating of which he conceives God hath alſo given him liberty; and the Jewiſh Chriſtian thinks it obligation of conſcience to abſtain, and for that command of reſtraint, and for the grace of doing ſuch an act of ſelf-deniall, he giveth God thanks alſo. And this ſure is well done on both ſides; for no man of us is to doe what he himſelf likes beſt, but what he thinks is moſt acceptable to God.

6. He that regardeth a day, regardeth it unto the Lord: and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks: and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

7. For none of us liveth to himſelf, and no man dieth to himſelf.]

8. For our life and death are very unconſiderable, but as by them we may ſerve God; and therefore much more all other things.

8. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lords.]

9. And all the fruit of Chriſts death, and ſuffering, and reſurrection, which accrues to him, is onely this, that he may have power and dominion over us all, to command or give what liberty he pleaſeth.

9. For to this end Chriſt both died, and roſe, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.]

10. But why doſt thou that obſerveſt the Law, condemn thy fellow Chriſtian? or exclude him from thy communion, becauſe he uſes his Chriſtian liberty, &c. or thou that uſeſt thy liberty, why doſt thou think it a piece of ſenſleſſe ſtupidity in the Jew to abſtain, and thereupon deſpiſe v. 3. and vilifie him, which is alſo a kind of judging him? whereas indeed neither of you is to be the judge of the other, but Chriſt of you both, (ſee note a. on Jam. 3.) being by his Father ſent and commiſſionated to that office.

10. But why doſt thou judge thy brother? or why doſt thou ſet at nought thy brother? we ſhall all † ſtand before the judgement-ſeat of Chriſt.]

† be ſet with παραστησόμεθα

11, 12. According to that of the Prophet, Iſa. 45. 23. I have ſworn by my ſelf that unto me every knee ſhall bow; which being a Prediction of ſomewhat then future, was to have a completion in Chriſt incarnate (ſee Phil. 2. 9, 10, 11.) who is now conſtituted the one ſupreme judge of all, to whoſe judicature every one muſt ſubmit and give account for his own actions, and conſequently 'tis moſt unreaſonable that any man, but he to whom Chriſt this ſupreme judge hath delegated and committed that power, the Apoſtles and Governours of the Church, endowed with the power of the Keyes and Cenſures, ſhould thus cenſure, and reject others from their communion.

11. For it is written, As I live, ſaith the Lord, every knee ſhall bow to me, and every tongue ſhall confeſſe to God.

12. So then every one of us ſhall give account of himſelf to God.]

13. Let

13. Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a ſtumbling-block, or * an occaſion to fall, in his brothers way.]

13. And therefore let this fault be mended by you, doe not any longer cenſure and ſeparate from one another's communion, for ſuch things as theſe; onely be carefull that you do not ſcandalize any Chriſtian brother, that is, put in his way a ſtumbling-block to hinder his coming to Chriſtianity, or a gall-trap in his progreſs to wound him and make him go back, as the Judaizer is in danger to do, when he ſees thoſe liberties uſed among Chriſtians which he deems utterly unlawfull.

* a ſcandal σκάνδαλον

14. I know and am perſwaded † by the Lord Jeſus, that there is nothing unclean of it ſelf; but to him that eſteemeth any thing unclean, to him it is unclean.]

14. I am confident, and make no queſtion, but that Chriſt hath ſo removed that yoke of the Moſaical law, that to a Chriſtian Jew no kind of meat is unlawfull to be eaten; but yet for all that, it is unlawfull to him that eſteems it to be ſtill prohibited: the perſwaſion of its being forbidden him is, as long as he is ſo perſwaded, ſufficient to make it to him unlawfull to uſe that liberty, which otherwiſe were lawfull.

† in it

15. * But if thy brother be [c] grieved with thy meat, now walkeſt thou not charitably: deſtroy not him with thy meat for whom Chriſt died.]

15. But if for a matter of this nature, his not daring to eat what thou eateſt, thou deſpiſe and caſt off thy fellow Chriſtian that knowes not his liberty, and by ſo doing diſcourage or aliene him from going on in Chriſtianity, v. 13. ſure this is contrary to the rule of Chriſtian charity, of drawing all to piety, and driving none away, Mat. 18. 6. and it will be a great fault in thee, for ſo light a thing as meat is, to drive from Chriſtianity, and conſequently to deſtroy him for the ſaving of whom Chriſt was content to lay down his life, ſee v. 20.

* But if becauſe of meat εἰ διὰ βρῶμα

16. Let not your good be evil ſpoken of.]

16. Ye may uſe your Chriſtian liberty, but ſhall not doe well ſo to uſe it, as that it may tend to others hurt, for that will be the defaming of that which is in it ſelf indifferent or innocent.

17. For the kingdome of God is not meat and drink, but righteouſneſſe, and peace, and [d] joy in the holy Ghoſt.]

17. For Chriſtianity conſiſts not in ſuch external matters, eating or not eating ſuch or ſuch meats, but in the practice of Chriſtian virtues; ſuch are mercifulneſſe and peaceableneſſe and delight to doe good one to another, to build up and advance one another in piety, not dividing and hating, and excommunicating one another, v. 19. or delight to do good, or that joy which reſults from unanimity, ſaith Theophylact.

d.

18. For he that in theſe things ſerveth Chriſt, is acceptable to God, and approved of men.]

18. Theſe indeed are acts of obedience to Chriſt, that are ſure to be accepted by God (without Judaical performances) and to be of good report among all men.

19. Let us therefore follow after the things that make for peace, and things wherewith one may edifie another.]

19. And therefore let us moſt zealouſly attend to thoſe things which may thus preſerve peace between all ſorts of Chriſtians though of different perſwaſions, Judaizers or thoſe that are inſtructed in their liberty, and which tend to the drawing men to Chriſtianity, not aliening them from it.

20. For meat * deſtroy not the work of God: all things indeed are pure; † but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.]

20. Doe not thou for ſo unconſiderable a matter as eating is, or becauſe another will not, or dares not make uſe of that Chriſtian liberty which thou doſt moſt innocently uſe, diſturb that peace, that unity, which God hath wrought among believers of different perſwaſions about indifferent things. 'Tis true a man may eat any thing ſimply conſidered; but if by eating he aliene others from the Goſpel, by deſpiſing and avoiding them v. 3. that dare not doe ſo, this is a ſinne in him.

* diſſolve καταλυε † but the evil is to κακὸν τῷ

21. It is good neither to eat fleſh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother ſtumbleth, or is * offended, or is made weak.]

21. 'Tis not charitable to make uſe of any part of Chriſtian liberty, when by thy ſo doing any other man is kept from receiving the faith, and ſo falls by ſome occaſion of thine, or is gall'd, and diſcouraged, and driven from the profeſſion, (as the Jewiſh believer is by ſeeing others caſt off the Moſaical yoke, whom they think obliged by it) or any way wounded, or hurt, that is, brought to any kind of ſinne (ſee note on 1 Cor. 8. b.)

* ſcandalized, or is ſick, σκανδαλίζεται ἢ ἀσθενεῖ

22. Haſt thou faith? Have it † to thy ſelf before God. Happy is he that * condemneth not himſelf in that thing which he alloweth.]

22. If thou haſt a clear underſtanding of thy Chriſtian liberty, it is well for thee, and thou mayſt uſe it betwixt God and thy ſelf, but not alwaies before men, as when it may be in danger to hurt them, and when 'tis not neceſſary to reveal thy practice in ſuch matters. He is an happy man that, when he knows a thing lawfull, doth ſo manage the practice of it, the uſe of his liberty, that he hath therein no reaſon to accuſe or condemn himſelf: ſee note on c. 2. f.

† by thy ſelf κατὰ σεαυτὸν * judgeth not himſelf in that which he approves, μὴ κρίνων ἑαυτὸν ἐν ᾧ δοκιμάζει

23. And he that doubteth is damned if he eat, becauſe † he eateth not of faith: for whatſoever is not of faith, [e] is ſinne.]

23. And indeed for the ſcrupulous Judaizer there is little reaſon he ſhould be ſo ill uſed for his not daring to eat, when he thinks himſelf otherwiſe obliged; for it were a damning ſinne, for which his own conſcience already condemns him, ſhould he eat, or doe any indifferent thing, as long as he thinks in conſcience that it is not ſo, becauſe it is contrary to perſwaſion or aſſurance of the lawfulneſſe of his action: and whoſoever doth any thing without that perſwaſion (call'd faith here, and knowledge 1 Cor. 8 7.) ſo farre at leaſt as to judge that which he doth lawfull for him, he certainly ſinnes in ſo doing.

† it is not of faith, ἐκ πίστεως

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

1. διαλογισμῶν

V. 1. Diſputations] Διαλογισμὸς here ſeems to ſignifie the arguings, or reaſonings, and conſequently reſolutions of men concerning themſelves, to the managing their whole courſe of life, what is lawfull or unlawfull for them, and particularly here (as the Context inforceth it) the reaſonings and reſolutions of thoſe, that from the liberty of diſuſing the Moſaical Law given by Chriſt, conclude the lawfulneſs of eating any thing, v. 2. A fuller inſtance or example of this notion of the word I have not met with, then in Epicurus's his Epiſtle to Idomeneus, ſpeaking of the torments he was then under ready to die, as great as were imaginable, Ἀντιπαρετάξετο ὑπὲρ πᾶσι τούτοις τὸ κατ' ψυχὴν χαῖρον ὅτι τῇ θεωρουμένων ἡμῖν διαλογισμῶν μνήμῃ, The joy that he had in his mind, upon the remembrance of the reaſonings which he had in his life-time, ſtood in battel array againſt all thoſe torments of the ſtrangury, &c. what thoſe διαλογισμοὶ or reaſonings of Epicurus were, appears in his Epiſtle to Menaceus in Diog. Laert. wherein, as in an apologie for himſelf, and a declaration of the truth of his opinions, he confeſſes 'tis not eating or drinking, or any other of the ſenſualities of the world put together that beget a pleaſant life, ἀλλὰ νήφων λογισμὸς, ὁ τὰς αἰτίας ἐξερευνῶν πάσης αἱρέσεως καὶ φυγῆς, καὶ τὰς δόξας ἐξελαύνων, ἀφ' ὧν πλεῖστα τὰς ψυχὰς καταλαμβάνει θόρυβος, but a ſober diſcourſe, or reaſoning, and ſuch as ſearches out the cauſes of all choice or averſation, and drives away thoſe falſe opinions, from which the greateſt perturbations that ſeizeth on our mind, doth proceed. This νήφων λογισμὸς, &c. this ſober reaſoning what are the true cauſes of choice and averſation, that is, what is to be choſen or rejected upon true rational grounds, done or not done, was Epicurus's διαλογισμὸς, the remembrance of which brought him ſo much inward pleaſure in the midſt of his torments. This * S. Ambroſe (reciting part of that Epiſtle of his) renders ſobria diſputatio, a ſober diſputing, & by and by repeating the ſame again, continens vita, a continent life, and in * another place, ſobrietas mentis, ſobriety of mind. And Cicero Tuſc. Quæſt. l. 5. mentioning his cheerfulneſs at his death, tranſlates this διαλογισμῶν μνήμη, Inventorum ſuorum memoria & recordatio, the remembrance of the moral rules which he invented. So that the λογισμὸς and διαλογισμὸς ſignifies there, (and ſo moſt probably here alſo) that reaſoning of mens hearts by which they reſolve and determine what they may and may not doe, and accordingly regulate the actions of their lives; that ſpecial act of their judicium practicum, which hath the governing of their practice, and conſequently διάκρισις διαλογισμῶν is, the judging, or condemning, of other mens courſes. Which practice was not to be approved of, or encouraged in the Judaizer on one ſide, as on the other ſide he that made uſe of his Chriſtian liberty was not to reject, but receive him to his communion, though he were erroneouſly and unneceſſarily ſcrupulous in point of the Moſaical obſervances. And ſo this firſt verſe is the breviate of the whole chapter, which is all on theſe two heads, that the Jewiſh Chriſtian that underſtood his own liberty muſt not deſpiſe and reject the Judaizing ſcrupulous believer, and that the Judaizer muſt not judge or condemn the other. See v. 3. &c. and c. 2. 1. Note a.

b. V. 5. Eſteemeth] What κρίνειν here ſignifies, muſt be reſolved by the ſpecial, not vulgar uſe of the word among authors. It is uſed ſometimes for approving, giving the ſuffrage in a competition; ſo * S. Chryſoſtome uſeth together ταύτῃ τίθεται τὰς ψήφους καὶ τὰς κρίσεις, he gives his ſuffrage, and his ſentence, or judgement, to this. So in Xenophon, Κύρ. παιδ. l. 8. τοὺς μὴ ἑαυτὸν κρίνοντας ἐμίσει, he hated them that did not adjudge the victory to him. So Ariſtotle l. 1. de An. c. 11. πάντα τὰ στοιχεῖα κρίνει πλὴν ἡ γῆς, every of the elements but the earth, had ſome Philoſopher or other that gave his ſuffrage to it, that it was the ſoul, or principal of all things. So Plato in Philebo, ἃ τινα περὶ αὐτῆς ἄλλων κρίνομεν, if we prefer any before it. So when of Epicurus 'tis ſaid, κρίνει ἡδονὴν he defends, or gives his vote to, pleaſure that it is the ſummum bonum. And in the Epigram,

Κοίνει

* Tom 4. p. 435. l. 27.

Οὐδὲ γὰρ ἡ ψυχὴ τὸ φαγεῖν κρίνασα γένηται,

For the ſoul rejoyceth not as preferring eating before all things. And ſo here, ὃς μὲν κρίνει ἡμέραν παρ' ἡμέραν, one preferres one day before another, but another approves every day, that is, preferres not any before any.

c. V. 15. Grieved] Λυπεῖται here ſignifies to be grieved, as that notes being wounded or galled in his courſe, and by that means driven off from the profeſſion of Chriſtianity. That it ſignifies ſo, appears by the Context, comparing this verſe with v. 13. where the brothers having a ſcandal, that is, gall-trap (ſee Note on Mat. 11. c.) put in his way, is all one with the λυπεῖται being grieved here, anſwerable to both which together is, σκανδαλίζεται ἢ ἀσθενεῖ, is ſcandalized (or galled) and made weak, or ſick, or faint, or wounded, v. 21. For it is to be obſerved that λύπη grief or ſorrow is oft taken for the cauſe of ſorrow, diſeaſe, or wound, or gall, as ὀδύνη ψυχῆς, Eccluſ. 30. 12. is one that cauſeth grief to the ſoul; and as πένθος mourning is by Heſychius rended συμφορὰ calamity, which is the cauſe of mourning; and as φόβος fear ſignifies (the cauſe of fear) danger; according to an Hebraiſme obſervable in theſe writers, where for want of the conjugation Hiphil which in Hebrew ſignifies to cauſe to doe any thing, the Greek language is faine to uſe the Active to doe. So the Hebrew חלה, which ſignifies infirm or ſick, Lam. 1. 22. is by the Greek rendred λυπῆ, where we read, is faint, as Iſa. 1. 15. πᾶσα καρδία πρὸς λύπην the whole heart is faint, that is, very ſick, which is the cauſe of grief; and therefore the ſame word is in other places rendred ὀδύνη and νόσος, Deut. 7. 15. pain or diſeaſe. So אבר, which ſignifies deſtruction, and is frequently rendred ἀπώλεια, is Prov. 31 6. rendred λύπη, οἱ ἐν λύπαις men in ſorrow, for which our Engliſh have, ready to periſh, agreeably to which S. Paul here joynes (as the interpretation of grieving the brother) deſtroying him. This is farre diſtant from that notion which is ordinarily had of this phraſe, as if it ſignified ſorrow or trouble or grief for the other man, or rather anger or diſpleaſure againſt him; which being (in this matter) without cauſe (for 'tis ſaid ver. 14. that that which the brother eats is not unclean in its ſelf, and therefore he may lawfully eat it in that reſpect) is wholly to be charged on him that is ſo cauſleſly diſpleaſed or angry, and would not devolve that guilt of ſcandal on him that eats, that here lies on him by the brothers being grieved or wounded.

d. V. 17. Joy] That χαρὰ joy, Gal. 5. 22. ſignifies not the natural paſſion, but the Chriſtian virtue, and that again moſt probably that which is exerciſed toward our brethren, appears by the ἀγάπη charity before and εἰρήνη peace &c. after it, and therefore it muſt be underſtood in that notion which ſhall be agreeable thereto, either to ſignifie the rejoicing at any good that befalls another, but eſpecially at the virtuous actions performed by him (which 1 Cor. 13. 6. is rejoicing in the truth, that is, integrity and ſincerity of another, oppoſite to his ἀδικία doing amiſſe precedent) or elſe the deſire or delight of doing good to others, which as a thing very pleaſant to him that hath it, and as the cauſe of joy to them that receive benefit from it, may perhaps be called joy. And though the former of theſe notions is the more eaſie and prompt, yet that this latter is the more proper to that place may appear probable, by comparing it with the like phraſe here, χαρὰ ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, joy in the holy Ghoſt, which is here alſo joyned with righteouſneſs and peace, (and all of them, by the matter in hand, the care of not offending the weak brother, appear to be branches of duty to the neighbour) and ſeems contrary to the grieving and wounding the brother, v. 15. that is, the betraying him to any ſinne; and is expounded v. 19. by τὰ τῆς οἰκοδομῆς τὰ εἰς ἀλλήλους διώκειν, purſuing thoſe things that belong to edification toward one another, that is, building up in piety, bettering one another, which is here joyned with purſuing τὰ τῆς εἰρήνης the things that belong to peace (as there the joy is with peace it ſelf) and ch. 15. 2. by τὸ πλησίον ἀρέσκειν εἰς τὸ ἀγαθὸν πρὸς οἰκοδομήν, pleaſing the neighbour to his good for edification, that is, gratifying or cauſing joy and pleaſure to him in improving his ſpiritual weale, and ſo 1 Cor. 10. the not giving ſcandal to others, v. 32. is exemplified by his pleaſing of all men in all things, not ſeeking his own profit, but the profit of many, v. 33. and ſo not to ſeek his own but that which is anothers, v. 24. as it is ſaid of charity that it ſeeketh not her own, 1 Cor. 13. 5. that is, takes care of others ſafety, not onely of her own, doth nothing that may ſcandalize another, and rather then doe ſo, abſtains from that which the man himſelf approves of. By all which it ſeems probable that χαρὰ joy, and joy in the holy Ghoſt, that grace of the Chriſtian, flowing from the ſanctifying Spirit of God, or which is according to the will of God, a holy Chriſtian joy (as rejoicing in the Lord, Phil. 4. is rejoicing in thoſe things (afflictions there) which God would have us rejoice in) is the ſeeking and advancing the ſpiritual weale and good of others, as the grieving of them is the contrary, the wounding of their conſciences, and occaſioning their ſinne. 'Tis true, the joy of the holy Ghoſt 1 Theſſ. 1. 6. is the rejoicing in afflictions, contrary to the joy of the world, and ſo rejoicing in hope, Rom. 12. 12. but that hinders not but theſe phraſes, being otherwiſe inclined by the Context, may ſignifie otherwiſe.

V. 23. Is ſin] In this place, 'tis certain the ancient Copyes generally added that Benediction which we now find, ch. 16. 25. Τῷ δὲ δυναμένῳ ὑμᾶς στηρίξαι κατὰ τὸ εὐαγγέλιόν μου, &c. Now to him that is able to ſtabliſh you according to my Goſpel, and ſo on to the end. Thus we find it in S. Chryſoſtome and Theophylact, &c. And from thence the Poſthumous notes under Grotius's name inferre that the Apoſtle firſt deſigned to end his Epiſtle there. But there is no ground for ſuch conjectural inference. 'Tis certain, Doxologies may be ſeaſonable in other places, and not onely by way of concluſion; and ſo we find in the like ſtyle, Τῷ δὲ δυναμένῳ, Now to him that is able, &c. Eph. 3. 20, 21. in the middle of the Epiſtle; and ſo incidently Ὧ ἡ δόξα, to whom be glory, Gal. 1. 5. and more ſolemnly, Τῷ δὲ βασιλεῖ τῶν αἰώνων ἀφθάρτῳ, Now to the incorruptible King of Ages, &c. 1 Tim. 1. 17. almoſt in the beginning. And it is S. Chryſoſtomes Note, Ἔθος ἀεὶ τῷ Παύλῳ εἰς εὐχὰς καὶ δοξολογίας καταλήγειν ἀπὸ παρρησίας, It is cuſtomary with S. Paul to conclude an exhortation with prayers and praiſes. And Theophylact, μετὰ παράκλησιν εἴωθεν ἀεὶ εὔχεσθαι, After an exhortation he alwaies uſeth to pray. The petitory part of this Doxology is contained in the δυναμένῳ ὑμᾶς στηρίξαι, which is a praying that God who alone is able, will ſtabliſh them; and this ſo proper to the whole buſineſs of the precedent chapter, that it cannot without great injuſtice be taken from it: and therefore without examining the reaſon of its removall (for which we have onely probable conjecture) it is all reaſon that it ſhould be fetch'd back from ch. 16. 25. and placed here, as it ought to be.

CHAP. XV.

Paraphraſe.

1. WE then that are ſtrong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to pleaſe our ſelves.]

1. They that know the nature and extent of Chriſtian liberty, ought to help and relieve thoſe that doe not underſtand it, to be watchfull to keep them from falling into ſinne, and not pleaſe themſelves too much in reflexion on their own ſtrength and knowledge, and neglect or deſpiſe others that have not ſo much.

2. Let every one of us pleaſe his neighbour for his good to edification.

3. For even Chriſt pleaſed not himſelf, but as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.]

2, 3. Let us rather doe what good we can to the edification of other men, after Chriſt's example, who did not conſider the pleaſing of himſelf, but had the ſame common concernments, with the Father, that whatſoever befell God, fell on him, was as tender of Gods honour, as if it were done to himſelf. Pſal. 69. 9. ſee Joh. 2. 17.

4. For whatſoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning; that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope.]

4. And if ye think or pretend that thoſe words ſpoken by the Pſalmiſt belong not to you, ye muſt know, that generally ſuch ſayings in the old Teſtament were meant to be our inſtructions and documents; and one principall uſe of them is, that by the examples which we find there of the patience of pious men, and of God's relieving and comforting thoſe that want relief, we might be confident that God will relieve us alſo in due time.

5. Now the God of patience and conſolation grant you to * be like-minded one towards another, according to Chriſt Jeſus,]

* mind the ſame thing among one another, τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν ἐν ἀλλήλοις

5. And that God, for whom we ought to ſuffer, and who will give you that relief, give you alſo the grace of unity and charity, ſuch as Chriſt commaanded and expects from you,

6. That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorifie † God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

† the God and father

6. That ye may joyne unanimouſly, Jewes and Gentiles, into one, and aſſembling together worſhip and ſerve the Lord, who is both the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, (Eph. 1. 3, 17.) in all unity of affections and form of words.

7. Wherefore receive ye one another, as Chriſt alſo received us to the glory of God.]

7. Wherefore in all humility of condeſcenſion and kindneſſe, embrace and ſuccour one another, help them up when they are fallen, in ſtead of deſpiſing and driving them from your communion, after the example of Chriſt's uſage toward men, who came from heaven, and laid down his life to relieve us, and there is nothing by which God is more glorified then this.

8. Now I ſay that Jeſus Chriſt was a miniſter of the circumciſion for the truth of God, to confirm the promiſes made unto the fathers:]

8. And that ye may not think fit to deſpiſe the Jewiſh believers, let me tell you, that Chriſt came to them, was by God conſtituted a means or inſtrument of good to the Jewes in preaching to them the truth of God, calling them to repentance, and ſo exhibiting and making good to them the promiſes made of old to that people beyond all others.

9. And that the Gentiles might glorifie God for his mercy, as it is written, For this cauſe I will confeſſe to thee among the Gentiles, and ſing unto thy name.]

9. And on the other ſide, that the Jew may not condemn and reject the Gentile Chriſtian, or him that makes uſe of his lawfull liberty, let him know, that God hath been moſt wonderfully mercifull to the Gentiles, and made Chriſt alſo an inſtrument of this mercy to them, after that the Jewes had rejected him, and ſo hath given them occaſion to magnifie his name, according to that of Pſal. 18. 49. I will praiſe thee, and ſing unto thee among the Gentiles, ſignifying thereby, that the Gentiles have cauſe to give thanks and praiſe him.

10. And again he ſaith, Rejoice ye Gentiles, with his people.]

10. And ſo Deut. 32. 43. the Gentiles are bid to joyn with the Jewes in rejoicing and praiſing God.

11. And again, Praiſe the Lord all ye Gentiles, and laud him all ye people.]

11. And ſo Pſal. 117. 1. all the nations and all the people of the world are called upon to praiſe God.

12. And again Eſaias ſaith, There ſhall be a root of Jeſſe, and he that ſhall riſe to a reigne over the Gentiles, in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt.]

12. And Iſaiah propheſying of Chriſt, ch. 11. 10. that ſhould come from David's family (under the type of Hezekiah a king of Judah lineally deſcending from David) ſaith that he ſhall be for a ſtandard to the Gentiles, to whom they may and ſhall come, and truſt and relie on him.

13. Now that God, in whom all our truſt is repoſed, and from whom all good things are to be received, beſtow on you that cheerfull quiet (in ſtead of the contentions that have been among you) and that union and concord in the Chriſtian faith, (or without any receding from it) that thereby ye may have that hope, (which the Goſpel beſtowes on you on condition of charity, &c.) encreaſed unto you into all abundance, through the working of the holy Ghoſt in you.

13. Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope through the power of the holy Ghoſt.]

14. And though I doubt not but ye, that are full of virtue and charity, and perfectly know what your Chriſtian duty is, are alſo without my help able to adviſe one another to doe what I now ſay, that is, to abſtain from contemning and condemning one another.

14. And I my ſelf alſo am perſwaded of you, my brethren, that ye alſo are full of goodneſſe, filled with all knowledge, able alſo to admoniſh one another.]

15. Yet I have thought good to write freely to you, to ſtirre you up to the practice of that which you know already, this being a branch of my office and authority Apoſtolical, as wel as that of making known the Goſpel;

15. Neverthleſſe, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you, in ſome ſort, as putting you in mind, becauſe of the grace that is given to me of God,]

16. That office, I ſay, to which I was ſent by Chriſt Act. 9. 15. to preach the Goſpel to the Gentiles as well as the Jewes, that the Gentiles might be preſented and offered up unto God as a ſacrifice moſt acceptable unto him, ſanctified, not as other ſacrifices, by any prieſt on earth, but even by the holy Ghoſt, that is, that they might be brought to obey the Goſpel.

16. That I ſhould be the miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt to the Gentiles, miniſtring the Goſpel of God, *that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt.]

17. And for my ſucceſſe herein I have ground or matter of great rejoicing, not in my ſelf, but in order to God the author of this ſucceſſe.

17. I have therefore * whereof I may glory through Jeſus Chriſt in thoſe things which pertain to God.]

18. And herein I ſhall not need to be ſo vain as to mention any thing that can be queſtionable, wherein, as an inſtrument in Chriſt's hands, I have wrought, and had this ſucceſſe to my work, in bringing the Gentiles to receive and obey the Goſpel; A work which hath been done by miracles, and preaching,

18. For I will not dare to ſpeak of any of thoſe things which Chriſt hath not wrought by me, † to make the Gentiles obedient by word and deed,]

19. Proving and manifeſting my commiſſion, and the truth of what I ſhould ſay by greater evidences then any prophet of old, by doing all kinds of miracles, as alſo by ſpeaking of ſtrange languages, 1 Cor. 14. 18. and receiving and making known revelations from heaven 2 Cor. 12. 3. And after this manner beginning at Jeruſalem, and taking a circuit through Phœnice, and Syria, and Arabia, Act. 19. 20. &c. I have diſcharged this my office, and preach'd the Goſpel to the Macedonians which joyn upon Illyricum.

19. * Through mighty ſignes and wonders by the power of the Spirit of God, ſo that from Jeruſalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have † fully preached the Goſpel of Chriſt.]

20. By which courſe it appears that I have not only been carefull not to preach where ſome other had been before me, upon which it might be ſaid that I did only ſuperſtruct where others had laid the foundation, but I had a kind of ambition in it to make known the Goſpel to them that had never heard of Chriſt,

20. *Yea, ſo have I ſtrived to preach the Goſpel, not where Chriſt was named, leſt I ſhould build upon another man's foundation;]

21. To fulfil that glorious prophecie Iſ. 52. 15. that they ſhould be brought home to God, that were never preached to before, as the events of Jeremies prophecies ſhould be made good to them to whom the prophecies had not come.

21. But as it is written, To whom he was not ſpoken of, they ſhall ſee; and they that have not heard, ſhall underſtand.]

22. By this means of preaching to ſome new people or other, I have been hindred unexpectedly from coming to you, when I have ſeverall times deſigned it.

22. For which cauſe alſo I have been much hindred from coming to you.]

23. But now having no more occaſion to detain me in theſe parts, that I yet foreſee, and having for many years had an earneſt deſire to viſit you,

23. But now having no more place in theſe parts, and having a great deſire theſe many years to come unto you,]

24. In my journey to Spain I am reſolved to doe it, taking you in my paſſage, and expecting that you will accompany me ſome part of my way thither, after I have ſtayed a while, and ſatisfied my ſelf with the pleaſure of being among you.

24. Whenſoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you, for I truſt to ſee you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, † if firſt I be ſomewhat filled with your company.]

25. But now I am a going to Judæa to diſtribute to the poor Chriſtians there the collection that hath been made for them

25. But now I goe unto Jeruſalem, to miniſter unto the ſaints.]

26. By the Chriſtians of Macedonia and Achaia.

26. For it hath pleaſed them of Macedonia and Achaia, to make a certain contribution for the * poor ſaints which are at Jeruſalem.]

27. This they have done, and 'twas but due from them: for conſidering that theſe Gentile provinces have been beholden in an higher reſpect to the Jewes, have received the Goſpel from them, as indeed from Judæa it was that 'twas firſt preached to Macedonia and Achaia, 'tis but reaſonable they ſhould make them thoſe poor returns, contribution to their wants.

27. It hath pleaſed them verily and their debtors they are: for if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their ſpirituall things, their duty is alſo to miniſter unto them in carnal things.]

28. When therefore this buſineſſe is diſpatch'd, and I have delivered to them ſafely this fruit of the Gentiles liberality, I intend then to begin my journey to Spain, and take you in my way thither.

28. When therefore I have performed this, and have ſealed to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.]

29. And I am confident, when I come, I ſhall give you ſuch evidences of the great mercy and glorious diſpenſations of God, and the good ſucceſſes which I have had, that you will be much confirmed in the Chriſtian faith by my coming and telling you what I have been able to doe, and conſequently that I ſhall bring as much bleſſednеſſe to you, and be cauſe of as much Chriſtian joy as is poſſible.

29. And I am ſure that when I come unto you, I ſhall come in the fulneſſe of the † bleſſing of the Goſpel of Chriſt]

30. Now I beſeech you, brethren, for the Lord Jeſus Chriſt's ſake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye ſtrive together with me in your prayers to God for me,] 30. And now I beſeech you for our Lord Chriſt Jeſus ſake, and upon that obligation of Chriſtian love, which he requires, and his Spirit works in your hearts, that you will with great earneſtneſſe and intention joyn your prayers with mine to beſeech God,

32. That I may be delivered from them that doe not believe in Judæa, and that my ſervice which I have for Jeruſalem, may be accepted of the ſaints,] 31. That I may be deliver'd from that danger which I foreſee in Judæa, from ſome refractary men, that though they have received the faith, are violently bent againſt me, as an oppoſer of the Moſaical Law, and that the relief which I bring to the poor Chriſtians at Hieruſalem and Judæa, may be taken by them in good part, though it come from thoſe Gentile provinces.

32. That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you be refreſhed.] 32. This would be a means to make me come cheerfully to you, if it pleaſe God to grant it to our prayers, and to have a cheerfull being with you.

33. Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen.] 33. And the God of all unity and concord bleſſe you, and preſerve unity among you all. Amen.

1. ἀρχηγὸν V. 12. Reigne over the Gentiles] That which is out of the Hebrew rightly rendred, for an enſigne, is by the Greek tranſlators rendred ἄρχειν to bear rule, or dominion; becauſe it being the office of the King to defend, and by armes to protect the people, and the power of warre being, as the power of the ſword, a branch of imperial authority, and that no way competible to any, but either to the ſupreme ἐξουσία or ἄρχων ch. 13. 1, 2. power or prince, or to him that is ſent by him, that is, hath commiſſion from him, this being for an enſigne is all one in effect with ruling, and one is but a phraſe to expreſſe the other, and the Apoſtle according to his manner, maketh uſe of the Greek tranſlation, not of the Original.

a. Διάκονον

V. 1. Servant of the Church] What διακονῶν, to miniſter, ſignifies in the New Teſtament, hath formerly been noted at large (ſee Lu. 8. a.) viz. to relieve the poor, either out of the ſtock of the Church, as adminiſtrators and diſpenſers of others liberality and almes, or, as hoſpitable charitable perſons, out of their own ſubſtance. So the women that adminiſtred to Chriſt ἐξ ὑπαρχόντων αὐτῶν out of their own eſtates, and ſo Phœbe here, who is therefore called προστάτις πολλῶν, a reliever, or patroneſs, of many, ſee Lu. 8. a. and of Paul himſelf, ver. 2. and in all probability is the γυνὴ ἀδελφὴ 1 Cor. 9. 5. the ſiſter, or believing Chriſtian woman, which either did, or, if Paul would have accepted it, would have helped him and Barnabas to eat and drink, ver. 4. without labouring with their hands v. 6. Such as ſhe accompanying the Apoſtles in their journies to preach the Goſpel (as of her it appears by S. Paul's ſending this Epiſtle from Corinth to Rome by her, as 'tis in the ſubſcription) and furniſhing them with all things which they wanted, from whence they are ſaid κοπᾶν ἐν κυρίῳ to labour in the Lord v. 6, and 12. whereupon ſaith the Scholiaſt, that the Apoſtles carried about with them ſome matrons of good report εἰς τὰς ἀναγκαίας αὐτῶν χρείας χορηγούσας, that made proviſion for their neceſſary uſes, ὡς ἄνευ τοῦ λοιπὸν ὕλας περὶ τούτου ἀμεριμνους, μόνῳ τῷ κηρύγματι ἀπασχολεῖσθαι, that the Apoſtles being free from thoſe cares might be at leiſure for preaching only; and Theophylact, αἱ εὐποροι γυναῖκες ἠκολούθουν τοῖς ἀποστόλοις χορηγοῦσαι αὐτοῖς τὰ ἀναγκαῖα, ἀπὸ πάσης ἀπειρίας ὄντες τόπις θεσπεσίοις, rich women followed the Apoſtles, and provided them neceſſaries, and eaſed them of all that care, &c. V. 7. Apoſtles] Ἀπόστολος Apoſtle ſignifies primarily that office whereunto the Twelve were ſet apart by Chriſt immediately, and ſo that of S. Paul and Barnabas, ſent immediately by appointment of the holy Ghoſt, Act. 13. 2. Secondarily it belongs to ſome others after, that received the like Commiſſion from the Twelve, or from S. Paul; thus is James the Biſhop of Hieruſalem often called an Apoſtle. And ſo ſaith Theodoret of thoſe firſt times, that thoſe which were after called Biſhops, were then called Apoſtles. So, ſaith he, Epaphroditus is called Apoſtle of the Philippians, Phil. 2. 5. becauſe he was their Biſhop. So Clemens Romanus is by Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom. l. 4. called Ἀποστολος Κλήμης, Clemens the Apoſtle. So Ignatius is by S. Chryſoſtome called ἀπόστολος καὶ ἐπίσκοπος Apoſtle and Biſhop. So of Timothy, ὁ ἀπόστολος Τιμόθεος the Apoſtle Timotheus was made Biſhop of Epheſus, ſaith an anonymous writer in * Photius. So that Thaddæus, that was ſent by Thomas to the King of Edeſſa, is ſtyled in Euſebius l. 1. c. ιβ'. ἀπόστολος Θαδδαῖος, the Apoſtle Thaddæus. So Mark in Epiphanius, Hær. 51. and in Euſebius l. 2. c. κδ'. So Luke alſo by Epiphanius Hær. 51. And if it be he which is mention'd 2 Cor. 8. 18. in the ſtyle of who is praiſed for the Goſpel, or for preaching through all the Churches (as Ignatius affirms, Ep. to the Epheſ. and though Baronius affirm it to be Silas, and * Theodoret, Barnabas, yet Titus Boſtrenſis on Luke 1. p. 763. ly conceived to be he, being a conſtant companion of S. Paul in all his travails, as farre as the book of the Acts teaches, and therefore is ſaid by * Euſebius to have written the Goſpel from other mens teſtimonies, but the Acts αὐτόπτης from his own ſight) and not onely ſo, but, as it followes v. 19. ordained by the Churches συνέκδημος ἡμῶν Paul's fellow-travailer; then there will be little queſtion, but that title might belong to him, & that he was one of thoſe which are called there v. 23. Ἀπόστολοι ἐκκλησιῶν, Apoſtles of the Churches. Whether this ſenſe doe belong to the word in this place, it will be yet uncertain, becauſe though it be granted that in thoſe other places the ſecondary Apoſtles were certainly meant (and beſide this there is no other unnamed, but thoſe which confeſſedly belong to the twelve Apoſtles, &c.) yet 'tis poſſible that theſe here, Andronicus and Junias, may not be called Apoſtles, but onely ἐπίσημοι noted, known men ἐν Ἀποστόλοις among the Apoſtles, that is, among the twelve Apoſtles, as well they might be, having been Chriſtians more anciently then S. Paul, and ſo converted either by the Apoſtles probably, or by Chriſt himſelf. 'Tis true after all this, that in the Conſtitutions of the Emperours we find Apoſtoli Synagogarum, Apoſtles of the Synagogues, whoſe office it was among the Jewes to gather up the dues of the Patriarch that lived in Paleſtine. And proportionably to thoſe the word Apoſtles might ſignifie no more then meſſengers of the Churches, ſent about Eccleſiaſtick affairs, ſuch as are in Ignatius his Epiſtles called θεοδρόμοι or θεοπρεσβῦται ſacred or divine officers or meſſengers. But it appears not, that in any place of the New Teſtament the word is uſed in this ſenſe. See Note on Luke 6. c. and on Joh. 20. 21.

V. 16. Holy Kiſſe] The cloſe of all the Chriſtians prayers was wont to be in form of Benediction, and that Benediction the wiſhing all charity and unity among them (after the example of the love of God toward them) in the known form, The grace, or charity, of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the communication, or bounty, of the holy Ghoſt, be with, or among you, always, that is, be continued among you, as it is from every perſon of the Trinity toward you. And this being the form of diſmiſſing the aſſembly, it was ceremoniouſly obſerved among them to part with the kiſſing one another. So ſaith Juſtin Martyr Apol. 2. deſcribing the Church-meetings, ἀλλήλους φιλήματι ἀσπαζόμεθα παυσάμενοι τῆς εὐχῆς, when we make an end of prayers, we ſalute one another with a kiſſe, which is therefore called the kiſſe of peace: and Tertullian de Orat. Oſculum pacis eſt ſignaculum orationis, the kiſſe of peace is the ſeal of prayer. This therefore is here called the holy kiſſe, and S. Paul's bidding them ſalute one another with it, is in effect all one as his pronouncing that Benediction which was wont to be attended with it. c. Φίλημα ἅγιον

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE a CORINTHIANS.

2. Κορίνθιοι

OF the Epiſtles to the Corinthians theſe few things may be fit to be premiſed.

1. That this city being in its ſelf an eminent city, grown rich and populous by trade and merchandiſe, and luxurious and libidinous to a proverb, was the place where the Proconſul of Achaia fix'd his ſeat, and after its converſion to the faith, the Metropolis or mother city of all Achaia or Greece, and ſo is not, in the inſcription of this Epiſtle, to be look'd on as the Church in that one city, but as containing under it all the Chriſtians of all Achaia, which having been firſt converted by S. Paul, this Epiſtle is now addres'd to them all, under their Governours, or Biſhops through that whole region. This is diſtinctly ſet down 2 Cor. 1. 1. where to the Church of God which is at Corinth is added, and to all the Saints which are in all Achaia; and that probably is the importance of the phraſe, 1 Cor. 1. 2. to all that have the name of Chriſt called on them (that is, to all Chriſtians) ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ in every place, that is, in all that region, and not only in that one city, but ἐν πᾶσι κλίμασι τῆς Ἀχαΐας in all the coaſts of Achaia. Accordingly what S. Paul ſaith to them of Apollos, that he water'd them 1 Cor. 3. 6. is in the ſtory affirm'd of all Achaia, as well as of that city, Act. 18. 27. when he was willing to paſſe into Achaia, the brethren wrote to the diſciples (through all Achaia, not only at Corinth) that they ſhould receive him, and when he came (that is, whither he purpoſed to paſſe, into Achaia) he contributed much aſſiſtance to the believers there. So when he ſpeaks of the forwardneſſe of their (that is, the Corinthians) liberality 2 Cor. 9. 2. Achaia, ſaith he, was ready a year agoe; and ſo Rom. 15. 26. Macedonia and Achaia thought good to make a collection, &c. and ſo it appears again by another paſſage 2 Cor. 11. 9, 10. And hence it is that Rom. 16. 16. he tells them that the Churches of Chriſt (in the Plural) ſalute them, and v. 1. mentions the Church in Cenchrea a maritime city in Achaia, from whence S. Paul took ſhipping Act. 18. 18. when he departed from thence to Syria.

ἀχρι οὗ ἦν ἐν Ἀχαΐᾳ

ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ

2dly, For the time and manner of planting Chriſtianity among theſe Corinthians, and the reſt of Achaia or Greece, the ſtory in the Acts may be conſulted, ch. 18. 1. where about the fiftieth year of Chriſt, Paul comes from Athens to Corinth, and meets Aquila and Priſcilla there, ſoon after Claudius his baniſhing the Jewes from Rome; with them Paul wrought in his trade of tent-making, and at the ſame time he preach'd the Goſpel to them through that Region, to which he oft referres in theſe Epiſtles, telling them how freely (without making gain of them, or putting them to any charge) he had preach'd the Goſpel to them. Soon after Silvanus and Timotheus came to him out of Macedonia, and for the ſpace of eighteen months he abode in thoſe parts, wrought many miracles, 2 Cor. 12. 12. and converted many, though, as it appears, he was oppoſed by the incredulous Jewes, and brought before Gallio, Proconſul of Achaia, and accuſed by them, Act. 18. When Paul went from thence, he left Priſcilla and Aquila by the way at Epheſus Act. 18. 19. and they meeting with Apollos there, and inſtructing him more perfectly in the doctrine of the Goſpel, fitted him for his journey to Achaia, whither he ſoon went, and confirm'd them in the faith, which Paul had planted among them, being much too hard for the Jewes, who were his chief oppoſers there, Act. 18. 28.

3dly, For the time of writing this firſt Epiſtle two circumſtances will aſſiſt us to diſcern it. Firſt c. 15. 32. there is a touch or intimation of his danger at Epheſus, fighting with the beaſts there, which will appear (ſee Note on ch. 15. c.) to be that which was occaſion'd by Demetrius, Act. 19. This therefore was now paſt at the writing of this Epiſtle; and though the next thing which in the Acts is mention'd after that, is his departing to Macedonia, Act. 20. 1. yet by the date of it from Epheſus, which we find in many copies of the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, we have reaſon to believe, that his remove was not ſo ſuddain, but that this Epiſtle was written firſt, and ſent from thence. And accordingly we may interpret his words, ch. 16. 8. (which contain a ſecond circumſtance) that he will tarry at Epheſus till Pentecoſt, that is, till the time of his going up to Jeruſalem, which he had determined to doe that year at Pentecoſt. For that after this he ſhould come again to Epheſus, or to any other part of Aſia, and write from thence, (as by the ſalutations of the Aſiaticks 'tis apparent he did, ch. 16. 18.) before his going to Jeruſalem, is not reconcileable with the paſſages in the Acts, ſet down ch. 20. where in his journey from Epheſus v. 1. we find him at Eaſter at Philippi, and after that at Troas, and though he paſſe through Aſia, yet his haſt was ſo great, to reach Jeruſalem before Pentecoſt, that he could not put in at Epheſus v. 16. but was fain to tranſact that buſineſſe at Miletus, that would have call'd him to Epheſus, ver. 17. If this be thus rightly concluded for the place of writing this Epiſtle, then the time will be concluded alſo, at the end of his three years ſtay in Aſia, Act. 20. 31. that is, An. Chr. 54. Before which time, through the Gnoſticks and Judaizers, great ſchiſmes and diviſions had broken out at Corinth, and in other cities of that Province, and many other foul corruptions had crept in (by falſe, heretical teachers, and even the denying of the reſurrection by ſome of the Chriſtians there) which cauſed the writing of this Epiſtle. And upon the ſame occaſions and ſubjects was Clement's Epiſtle, ſome years after, written unto them, which as it uſes all arguments to reproach the unreaſonableneſs of their ſchiſme and commotion againſt their preſent Governours, ſo it inſiſts at large on the proving the Reſurrection.

CHAP. I.

Paraphrase.

1. PAul [* called to be an Apostle] of Jesus Christ, through the will of God, and Sosthenes † our brother,

1. See Rom. 1. 1. and note on Mat. 20. c.

2. Unto the Church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, * called to be saints, with all that in every place † a call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, *both theirs and ours,]

2. To the Church of God at Corinth, to those that through the faith of Christ have been sanctified, to the speciall saints (Rom. 1. 7.) of Achaia, both Jewes and a.

that are in that city, together with all other Christians in every place within the regions Gentiles,

3. Grace be to you and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I thank my God alwaies on your behalf, [for the grace of God which is given you † by Jesus Christ,]

4. for the great mercy afforded you in the preaching the Gospel to you, and all the graces so visible among you, consequent to that.

5. * That in every thing † ye are inriched by him, in all *[b] utterance, and in all [c] knowledge.

6. Even as the testimony of Christ † was [d] confirmed in you.

7. So that ye come behind in no gift, waiting for * the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ;]

5, 6, 7. For in all things belonging to Christ ye have been very plentifully furnish'd, either in all ability of instructing others, and in understanding of mysteries, or else in having the Gospel first preached, and then farther explained to you; the one at the first planting of the faith among you by me, the other by the watering of Apollos; so that now there is no need of any addition to be made, but onely that you persevere in what you have, expecting this coming of Christ to the deliverance of the faithfull, and remarkable destruction of all other, his enemies and crucifiers; b. c. d.

8. Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.]

8. Which Christ will, I doubt not, give you grace to hold out till this time comes, and to be found sincere Christians at that time, when all others shall be destroyed.

9. God is faithfull, by whom we were called unto the † fellowship of his son Jesus Christ our Lord.]

9. For of this be confident, that God will make good his promise, and having called you to the knowledge of the Gospel, and participation of the graces reach'd out to you therein, will never faile you in any thing else that is needfull for you, if you doe not faile your selves.

10. Now I * beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be † no division among you: but that ye be perfectly joyned together in the same mind, and in the same judgment.]

10. That therefore which I first exhort you to, and that with all earnestnesse possible, (as the prime addition to those gifts and graces that are among you) is this, that ye all teach the same doctrine, and nourish charity and unity, that there be no divisions in your Churches, but that ye be compacted and united, as members of the same body, in the same belief and affections.

11. For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the house of Chloe, that there are contentions among you.]

11. This exhortation, I suppose, ye have need of, having had information by those of Chloe's family, (see ch. 16. 17.) that there are schismes among you.

12. Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul, and I of Apollos, and I of Cephas, and I of Christ.]

12. My meaning is, that some pretend their doctrine was taught them peculiarly by Paul, and differs from what others teach; others that they have theirs from Apollos, or from Peter, or from Christ himself.

13. Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized *in the name of Paul?]

13. Now ye must know that the doctrine of Christ must not differ from it self, and therefore if Paul preach any thing contrary to what Christ taught, Paul must not be heeded in comparison with Christ, the foundation of your faith being, not Paul, but Christ.

14. I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius, 15. Lest any should say † that I had baptized in mine own name.

16. And I baptized also the houshold of Stephanas; besides I know not whether I baptized any other.]

14, 15, 16. For my part, I am so farre from pretending any such matter, from having baptized you into the faith of Paul, that I never did baptize above two of you, Crispus and Gaius, and the houshold of Stephanas, as I remember.

17. For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel: not with wisdome of words, lest the crosse of Christ should be made of none effect.]

17. For Christ did not principally send me to baptize, which others may doe as well, but to publish the Gospel to them that never heard it; yet not this, that I am more eloquent then others, and so fitter for the work, for this is not my way of publishing it, to attract men to the faith by any perswasion of humane eloquence, but onely by doing as Christ hath done before me, by venturing my life in doing it. This was the great means by which Christ meant to obtain belief, sealing his doctrine with his blood, and if I should let eloquence endeavour to supply that place, I should disparage Christs way.

18. For the † preaching of the crosse is to them that perish foolishnesse: but unto us which are saved it is the power of God.]

18. For the preaching a crucified Saviour, requiring belief to him, obedience to him who was shamefully put to death, and believing on whom may probably bring the same on us, may seem a ridiculous thing to impenitent unbelievers: but to us which have come in to Christ by repentance and faith, 'tis the most glorious evidence of the power of God.

19. For it is written, I will destroy the [e] wisdome of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent.]

19. And thereby is fulfilled that saying of Isaiah ch. 29. 14. that God will dispose of things quite contrary to what the wise men of the world would expect. e.

20. Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the [f] * disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdome of this world?]

20. Let all the Philosophers and learned or searching men, the Jewish interpreters of Scripture, shew me so many men brought to reformation and virtuous living by their precepts, as we have done by this ridiculous way, as 'tis believed, of preaching the crucified Saviour, or the doctrine of that Christ f.

which was put to death by the Jewes. Doth it not appear, that all the deep wisdome of the world is become absolute folly in comparison with it?

21. For when the heathen world with all their study of philosophy, which is the consideration of God's infinite wisdome in the creation and government of the world, did not come to the true knowledge of God, and when the Jewish world, depending on their knowledge of the Mosaical Law, did not discern or acknowledge God in the miracles and sufferings and doctrines of Christ, God was then pleased to send us Apostles to preach (without any flourish of rhetorick) this Gospel of Christ, so scorned by the wise men of the world, and by that means to reduce and rescue out of the waies of the wicked, all those that will believe and embrace it.

21. † For after that, in the wisdome of God, the world by wisdome knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishnesse of preaching to save them that believe.] † For when or, seeing that, Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ

22. For as the Jewes require some signe or prodigie from heaven to be shewed them, to perswade them the truth of the Gospel, so the Greeks look for profound philosophy in the Gospel, and scorn it because they think they find not that there.

22. For the Jewes require a signe, and the Greeks seek after wisedome.]

23. And yet are not we discouraged from going on in our course, professing him, in whom we believe, to have been crucified, and knowing that that is a mighty determent and discouragement to the Jewes, who looked for a victorious Messias, that should rescue them out of their enemies power, and to the Gentiles a ridiculous thing, who are gratified with nothing but eloquence, or profound knowledge:

23. But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jewes a * stumbling-block, and unto the † Greeks foolishnesse:] * scandal Σκάνδαλον † or Gentiles, for the King's MS. reads ἔθνεσι

24. But to the believers (see note on Mat. 20. c.) both Jewes and Gentiles, matter of greatest admiration, there being more divine power and wisdome expres'd in this ordering of things so, that the Messias should be crucified, then in any thing that the Jewes or Gentiles could have thought on.

24. But * unto them which are called, both Jewes and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdome of God] * to them the called αὐτοῖς τοῖς κλητοῖς

25. For of the actions and dispositions of God's counsels, that which in man's opinion hath least wisdome in it, is infinitely to be preferred before all that men deem wisest; and that which men think hath nothing of strength or virtue, hath much more of power in it then any thing else, it being much a more glorious act of power to raise Christ from the dead, then not to have permitted him to die, as it was a more likely way to bring any piously disposed person to receive the doctrine of Christ, when he laid down his life for it, then if he had been the most prosperous in this world.

25. † Because the foolishnesse of God is wiser then men; and the * weakenesse of God is stronger then men.] † For the foolish part, Ὅτι τὸ μωρὸν * weak part, τὸ ἀσθενὲς

26. Accordingly ye may observe who the men are among you that are wrought on, or converted by the Gospel, not principally the learned polititians, the great or noble families.

26. For † ye see your calling, brethen, how that not many wise men after the flesh, nor many mighty, nor many noble are called.] † look upon Βλέπετε

27. But the course which God hath chosen to take now in Christ is that that the world will count foolish, and this on purpose, that by the successe of that, the wise men of the world may be put to shame; 'tis that which the world counts weak, that it may appear how much more power there is in that which the world counts weakest in God, then in all their own strength.

27. But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world, to confound the wise: and God hath chosen the weak things of the world, to confound the things which are mighty.]

28. And those methods and courses hath God pitch'd on, which are by the nobles and the potentates look'd on as most despicable, and empty, and abject, that it may appear how empty are all those things that are most valued in the world, when these which they so much despise shall appear more effectuall then they.

28. And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are.]

29. That no man may have any reason to boast of his wisdome, &c. in God's presence.

29. That no flesh should glory in his presence.]

30. But of God's special bountry it is that ye believe, and thereby are ingraffed into Christ, who is made by God to us the author of all true knowledge, the cause of our justification, our sanctification, and will be also of deliverance and rescue from all calamities that this life is subject to, yea and from death it self by raising us again; see Rom. 8. note l.

30. But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdome, and righteousnesse, and sanctification, and redemption:]

31. That all our good may be acknowledg'd to come from God and none else.

31. That, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.]

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Ἐπικλῆδες ἀνομα Ἰησοῦ

V. 2. Call upon the name of Jesus Christ] Ἐπικλῆδες signifies to be surnamed, Mat. 10. 3. Lu. 22. 3. Act. 1. 23. and 4. 36. and 7. 59. and in many other places, and so in a passive not active signification. Agreeable to this ἐπικλῆδες ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ is to be called by the name of Jesus Christ, as an agnomen or supernomination, which notes the special relation we have to him; as the spouse of that husband, whose name is called upon her, Isa. 4. 1. (which is the direct literal notation of ἐπικαλεῖς here) or as the servant to that master, by whose name he is called also; and so ἐπικαλούμενοι ὄνομα Χριστοῦ is but a periphrasis of Christians, and no more. In this sense will it be most proper to interpret the like phrase Act. 2. 21. and 9. 14, 21. Rom. 10. 12, 13, 14. and generally in the New Testament, but when it signifies to appeale to, or the like.

b. Λόγῳ

V. 5. Utterance] The notion of λόγῳ in this place is somewhat uncertain, both because it, and the knowledge following, may either be the matter wherein the Corinthians are said to be enriched, or else somewhat in the Apostles, the means by which they were enriched in Christ. If it be taken the first way, then it will denote speech or utterance, ability in instructing others, and must be applied only to them that had such gifts in the Church, and not to the whole Church of Corinth; and thus it seems to be used 2 Cor. 8. 7. As ye abound in every thing, in faith, and word, and knowledge: Where as faith, so the other two are gifts and graces in them, such are σπουδὴ and ἀγάπη, diligence and love, that are after mention'd. And the other parts of that verse ἐν παντὶ περισσεύετε ye abound in every thing, agreeing so well with ἐν παντὶ ἐπλουτίσθητε here, ye were enricked in all, 'tis most reasonable to determine, that this same is the meaning of ἐν λόγῳ in word or speech here also. But because there is some difference betwixt abounding and being made rich, and the latter of them referres peculiarly to the gaining of the riches, and so to the means of acquiring them, it is therefore possible, possible, that it may there be that which, as a gift, was inherent in them, and so be agreeable to the rest of the graces mention'd there, and yet here be the means by which they were enriched; and if so, then it will signifie the preaching of the word, the doctrine of the Gospel as it is first preach'd and made known to men that had not before received it, as when we read of preaching the word, that notes the doctrine of Christ, as it was taught by him, or the articles that were to be believed of him, his death and resurrection, &c. This is wont to be set opposite to διδασκαλία doctrine (see 1 Tim. 5. 17.) which is the farther instructing of them that have formerly received the faith, and accordingly it may be so taken here, where 'tis set opposite to γνῶσις knowledge, which is the explication and unfolding of the mysteries of religion, and may well be here the watering of Apollos, which was superadded to the planting of Paul, and both of them together make up that which followes ver. 6. the testimony of Christ confirmed in you, the testimony of Christ being the Gospel. c. 2. 1. as 'tis first preached, (so Joh. 21. 24. where 'tis distinguished from the very writing of it, and so 1 Joh. 1. 2. but especially Rev. 1. 2.) and the confirming of it, is the farther declaring, and proving, and explaining of it; the first being prerequired to the baptizing of any, the second usefull for the fitting them for that imposition of hands which we ordinarily call Confirmation.

c. Γνῶσις

Ib. Knowledge] That the word γνῶσις here signifies the farther explication of the Christian doctrine, may appear, not only by the use of it in other places (see Note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) λόγῳ γνώσως, the word of knowledge, c. 12. 8. that is, being able to explain mysteries (as λόγῳ σοφίας the word of wisdome there, is being able to speak parables, or to use other such waies of veiling wise conceptions,) but especially by the circumstances of the Context here, the Gospels being confirmed in them, v. 6. And this of γνῶσις being here set down as a χάεισμα a special gift, and the being made rich in every thing (particularly in word and knowledge,) being all one with coming behind, or being wanting (ὑστερεῖσθαι) in no gift, ver. 7. this is again according to what we see ch. 12. 8. where γνῶσις is one of the gifts of the Spirit. Thus 2 Cor. 11. 6. where Paul's γνῶσις is preferred above his speech, 'tis his skill in explaining the mysteries of the Scripture, which is shewn in his writings in a greater height, then in his speech (when he was present with them) was observable. Thus Ephes. 1. 17. πνεῦμα ἀποκαλύψεως, the Spirit of revelation, ἐν ἐπιγνώσει αὐτοῦ, in discerning and acknowledging of Christ, the understanding of Prophecies, and discerning Christ in them, is there joyned with the Spirit of wisdome, as 1 Cor. 12. 5. γνῶσις had been, and 1 Tim. 4. 13. ἀνάγνωσις, part of Bishop Timothy's task, seems to be expounding, not simply reading of Scriptures, to which is joyned exhortation and doctrine. Thus is γνῶσις used in this Epistle c. 8. 1. where this gift of explaining mysteries is look'd on as apt to puffe men up, and so indeed some Hereticks of that time were so exalted and puff'd up with it, that taking upon them εἰδέναι τί v. 2. to know somewhat, that is, some extraordinary matter above other men (as he that thinks himself to be something, that is, some extraordinary person, all one with πνὰ μέγαν some great one, Act. 8. 9.) they call'd themselves γνωστικοὶ, from γνῶσις, knowing men, from this sort of sublime knowledge and explication of difficulties (as also πνευματικοὶ the spiritual, from this extraordinary gift) and so are referred to in that chapter, under the word γνῶσις, ver. 10, 11. and ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις, knowledge so called, but not truly so, from a false, not true Spirit, 1 Tim. 6. 20.

d. Βεβαιῶν

V. 6. Confirmed] The word βεβαιῶν to establish applied here to μαρτύριον testimony, may perhaps literally referre to the forinsick customes among the Jewes, where there being three parts of their Judicial proceesse, first מובה ריב, the entring of the cause, secondly, מכונה ריב, stabilitio litis, the establishment of the matter in dispute, thirdly, חקר ריב, Job 29. 16. the searching into the cause, the second of these may be here literally rendred βεβαίωσις, confirmation or establishment. For that second consisted in the interposing of an oath on one side, which is therefore called ἀντιλογίας πέρας Heb. 6. 16. the end of contradiction, that is, of that affirming and denying, which was formerly lawfull betwixt the actors, till the oath on one side had given the Judge some reason to incline that way, and that is said to be εἰς βεβαίωσιν in that place, for the setling, or establishing the cause, in that sense wherein the Romane law saith, Ὅρκῳ διαφερόμενοι ἀμφισβήτησιν τίμνει, (Pseilus συνοψ. νομ. v. 1243.) an oath takes off the Judge from that dubiousnesse that before he was in, one affirming and the other denying the same thing. By analogie to this, the preaching of the Gospel by the Apostles being called μαρτύριον a testimony or witnesse, viz. that which the Apostles gave in to the testifying the truth of the Gospel (being eye-witnesses thereof) this testimony may be said to be established or confirmed, when beside the first preaching of it, more light, and knowledge, and evidences have been afforded to the removing of all ignorance or doubt from mens minds. And so the meaning of the phrase here μαρτύριον τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐβεβαιώθη will be clearly this, that the Gospel which we first preach'd, the testimony which we gave of Christ, hath since by sufficient probation been made good among you, to incline you to consent to the truth of it.

Ἀντιλογίας τέλος πέρας

V. 19. Wisdome] The word σύνεσις signifies three things in these books: sometimes the mind or intellectual faculty, Mar. 12. 33. where God is to be loved with all thy mind, (see Note on Rom. 1. l.) secondly, an habit of science, or prudence, as here; thirdly, perspicacity, Ephes. 3. 4. 2 Tim. 2. 7.

e. Σύνεσις

V. 20. Disputer] What is the meaning of ζητητὴς in this place is not easie to determine, because, as the word it self, so the adjunct αἰῶνος τούτου is very capable of a double notion: for if αἰῶνος τούτου be rendred, of this world, then it will seem to signifie the Heathen world, and so σοφὸς, and γραμματεὺς, and ζητητὴς all be interpreted accordingly, σοφὸς the wise moralist, as the seven wise men of Greece and Socrates after, who for the moral learning was by the Oracle proclaimed the wisest man in the world, and γραμματεὺς the learned philologer, literator, as Tertullian renders it, and ζητητὴς, the searcher, or indagator, into the nature of things, which the Hebrews call העולם הזה this world, the philosopher, or natural magician. And so the next words would encline one to understand the place, the wisdome of the world ver. 20. and the world which by wisdom knew not God ver. 21. looking most directly upon the heathen Philosophers, who are by Baruch described in these words ch. 3. 23. οἱ ἐκζητοῦντες τὴν σύνεσιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, they that seek out, or search, wisdom on the earth. But then if αἰῶνος τούτου be rendred, of this age, then it may more probably referre to the Jewes; as ἄρχοντες τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου chap. 2. 6. must signifie the chief of the Jewes of that age, which crucified Christ, ver. 8. that is, caused him to be crucified, and there is mention of those, v. 22, and 23. and then σοφὸς may belong to the Jew, and denote their חכמי המחקר, naturallists, that undertook to know every work of the creation; and so likewise γραμματεὺς will belong to the Jew, and signifie him that is skill'd in their laws, and which interpreted them to the people according to the literal sense, their Doctors; and then συζητητὴς will have a peculiar notion among them also: For it was the custome of the Jewes, for many of the learned among them to sit in the the Synagogue, and to speak all of them by way of discussion, or debate to the same matter, (as to find out the true sense of a piece of Scripture) and to that custome 1 Cor. 14. 29. seems to referre, Let the prophets speak, two or three, &c. whence it is that this Synagogue, where they did this, is called בית המדרש the house of searching, or inquisition; and to that custome perhaps referres that which is said of Christ, Luk. 2. 46. that in the midst of the Doctors he heard and asked questions. So he that interprets the Scripture mystically and allegorically is called בעל המדרש the master of inquirie, or mystical disquisition, and absolutely הדרשן a searcher, or inquirer, that is literally Ζυζητητὴς, and that mystical or allegorical sense דרך דרש, the way of inquiry, and מדרש, Ζυζήτησις, and so מדרש תהלים, inquisitio Psalmorum, the searching of the Psalmes; see Elias Levita in the word מדרש. And then the Ζυζητηταὶ αἰῶνος τούτου will be the Jewish doctors which among themselves inquired into the truth of Scriptures (which Christ seems to call but found not Christ there, as they might have done, believed him not. Thus is the word used Act. 6. 9. where several men are said to rise up Ζυζητοῦντες τῷ Στεφάνῳ, talking with Stephen, as the Jewish doctors use to doe one with another about the sense of Scripture, and Act. 9. 29. 'tis said of Paul, that ἐλάλει καὶ Ζυνεζήτει πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστάς, he talked and debated with them about the sense of Scriptures concerning the Messias. This custome of the Jews seems to be referred to by this word, but yet whether the other circumstances of the place, which referre it rather to the Heathens, may not so farre prevail, as that it may be fit to pitch upon a middle interpretation of the word, and to apply this custome of the Jews to secular inquiries in the heathen schools, I shall leave it to be considered. and onely add, that the making of this place to agree with that of the Prophet Isa. 33. 18. seems to be a matter of some difficulty, the Text there looking another way, viz. by way of admiration, how the taxes, that were exacted in the time of the siege, were so suddenly ceased. For that is the meaning of, Where is the γραμματεύς; that is, he that even now kept the book of taxes; for so γραμματεὺς was the name of them that set down the publick acts, as also the customes, and taxes, and revenues of the Kings: and so, Where is the שׁחר the weigher? that is, the receiver of money; for so they received it by weight: and lastly, where is the numberer of towers? he that reckons and assesses the several houses of the city, every one according to their bigness, which was in order again to the exacting of taxes. From this matter that of this text is distant enough, and yet may that be so farre here accommodated, as to expresse an admiration here, as it was there, at a strange sudden change wrought among them, although the matter of the change was very different. And yet for the words also they thus farre agree, that as there was, Where is the scribe? so here, though in another sense, where is the scribe? that is, doctor or learned man; there the Scribe to register the taxes, the notary, here the learned man or doctor of the Law; as there שׁקל the weigher, so here, with the change but of a letter, without any of the sound, שׁחר the intelligent, or wise; and lastly, as there the numberer of towers, so here the enquirer, disquisitor of this world, that speaks his sense among others by way of debate or discussion to find out the truth, as there in the making an assessment they debated the rate or value of every house, to proportion it accordingly. And such applications as these by way of accommodating places to very distant senses (especially when the words in the Greek translation will bear them, though the Hebrew will not so well) is no extraordinary or strange thing in the New Testament; that of Christ's going with his parents to Nazareth, that the saying might be fulfilled, He shall be called a Nazarite, that is, the title of נצר a branch belongs to him, will appear to any as strange and farre off as this.

CHAP. II.

1. I said I preach'd not the Gospel to you in any eloquent words c. 1. 17. (from whence to this place all hath been brought in, on that occasion, by way of parenthesis) and now I resume it again, because it is a thing laid to my charge by some of you, that I am too plain and mean in preaching the Gospel to you. An accusation, or charge, which I am most ready to confesse.

1. AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not * with excellency of speech, or of wisdome, declaring unto you the † testimony of God.]

* according to height κατ' ὑπερ-οχὴν

† or mystery, for the King's Ms. reads μυστ-ηριον.

2. For I thought it not any way proper for me to goe about to mind God's method, and when he had determined the sum of our doctrine to be the doctrine of Christ, which he taught in his life time, together with the confirmation of it by his death (through which also we have many precious advantages, as pardon of sins through his satisfaction &c.) not excluding also, but taking in, in an eminent manner, his resurrection, it had been unreasonable to think of preaching any thing to you but this doctrine thus confirm'd: see chap. 1. 17.

2. For I * determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.]

* thought it not fit, ἔκρινα

3. And accordingly when I was among you, I was (in the like manner as Christ when he was here on earth) very ill used, (see note on Rom. 8. m. & Gal. 4. a.) persecuted for my preaching, and in continual fear of the utmost dangers, Act. 18. and this was the method fittest for me to use to assure you of the truth of what I preached.

3. And I was with you in weakness, and † in fear, and in much trembling.]

† in much fear and trembling ἐν φόβῳ καὶ ἐν τρόμῳ πολλῷ

4. And as for powerfull speaking, that which I used did not consist in rhetorical proofs or probable arguments of the truth of what I said, such as humane writings are content with, but in plain demonstration from the prophecies of the old Bible, or the voice of the Spirit since, and the miracles done by Christ under the Gospel.

4. And my * speech and my preaching was not with † enticing words of mans wisdome, but in [a] demonstration of the Spirit and of power,]

* word λόγος

† probable discourses πιθοῖς λόγοις

5. That the ground of your faith may not be humane eloquence &c. but the arguments of perswasion, which God hath thought fit to make use of.

5. That your faith * should not stand in the wisdome of men, but in the power of God.]

* may not be, μὴ ᾖ

6. Mean while the things which we teach, are (to those men which are arrived to the highest pitch of wisdome) divine and perfect wisdome, not that which this age boasts of, or depends on, or in which the rulers of the Jewes v. 8. doe excell, for all these are now a perishing, their learning and they ready to come to nought.

6. Howbeit we speak wisdome among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdome of this † world, nor of the princes of this world, that * come to nought.]

† age, nor the rulers of this age, οὐδὲ τῶν ἀρχόντων τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου

* perish, are abolished, καταργουμένων

7. But that wise dispensation of God's in giving us his Son, which was hidden under the Jewish types, and only darkly spoken of by the Prophets, but by God determined from the beginning to be now revealed to us, to the very great honour of us to whom it is so revealed.

7. But we speak the wisdome of God in a mystery, † even the hidden wisdome which God ordained before the world unto our glory.]

† that which hath been hidden, τὴν ἀπο-κεκρυμμένην

8. Which *rulers of this age v. 6.

8. Which none of the * princes of this world knew; for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.]

8. A thing which is not to be imagined, that the chief men among the Jewes (v. 6. see note on ch. 1. c.) understood any thing of, for if they had, they would sure never have put him to death, appearing by the voice from heaven, and his miracles (as well as by their own prophecies) to be God himself, come down from heaven.

† what eye. these things ἃ ἡτοίμασεν

9. But as it is written, † Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entred into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.]

9. To this belongs that of Isaiah c. 64. 4. at least it may fitly be accommodated to this purpose, that God prepares for them that depend on him, all faithfull pious men, such things as they never imagine, or hope for, such is the revelation of his mercifull designes toward us in the Gospel.

* depths βάθη

10. But God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the * deep things of God.]

10. And these hath God made known to us, not by any fallible deceivable way, but by sending down his Spirit upon the Apostles, which leading them into all truth, teaching them all things, reveals even these deep mysteries unto us, which be they never so secret in God, must needs be known by his Spirit, which knowes all the secrets of God as perfectly as our own spirit knowes our secrets.

† none οὐδείς

11. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of a man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth † no man, but the Spirit of God.]

11. For, as among men, the thoughts, and great concernments, and designes of a man, though none else knoweth them, yet his own spirit doth; so these divine matters, though none else can reveal them to us, yet his Spirit can.

* vouchsafed us by God ἐσμὲν τὰ ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ χαρισθέντα ἡμῖν

12. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are * freely given to us of God.]

12. And this is that Spirit which we have received, the very Spirit of God, (not the Spirit which suggests worldly things to us, that instructs us in those) to the end that we may reveal to you the infinite mercies of God toward you, which being bestowed on you, should not in any reason be concealed from you.

* accommodating spiritual words to spiritual things, πνευματικοῖς πνευματικὰ συγκρίνοντες

13. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdome teacheth, but which the holy Ghost teacheth, * comparing spirituall things with spirituall.]

13. And as the matter of our preaching is divine, and such as was kept secret in God, till his Spirit revealed it to us; so we proportionably preach it to you not in an humane, but divine manner, not by using ordinary humane means of perswasion, but by such arguments as the Spirit of God in the prophecies of the old Bible, and in his descent upon Christ Mat. 3. and by coming down upon his Apostles hath directed, adapting spirituall divine arguments to the proving of divine matters.

14. But the naturall man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishnesse unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.]

14. But such things as these, they that are led onely by the light of humane reason, the learned Philosophers, &c. doe absolutely despise, and so hearken not after the doctrine of the Gospel (see note on 1 Tim. 1. c.) for it seems folly to them c. 1. 23. nor can they by any study of their own come to the knowledge of them, for they are onely to be had by understanding the prophecies of scripture, and other such means which depend on divine revelation, the voice from heaven, descent of the holy Ghost, miracles, &c.

† discerneth ἀνακρίνει * discerned by none, οὐδὲν ἀνακρίνεται

15. But he that is spirituall † judgeth all things, yet he himself is * judged of no man.]

15. But he that hath made use of all these afforded him by the Spirit of God, viz. prophecies and voices from heaven, and such other evidences of divine revelation v. 13. he will be able to understand all these secrets perfectly, and being not himself perswaded by any other arguments, but onely by those that he hath thus received from the Spirit of God, he cannot reasonably be refuted by any other sort of arguments taken from humane reason, or worldly wisdome.

† which shall instruct him

16. [b] For who hath known the mind of the Lord, † that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ.]

16. For who can be imagined to know more of God's mind then he doth who is informed by the Spirit, that so he should teach him God's mind? Certainly no body. And consequently no body can teach you more of the truth of God then we (to whom Christ hath revealed his whole will as farre as concerns any man to know) have, or are able to doe.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Πνεύματος δύναμις

V. 4. Demonstration of the Spirit and power] That πνεῦμα καὶ δύναμις spirit and power may here signifie the same thing (as 'tis ordinary for two words or phrases to be conjoyn'd, the one onely to explain the other) may seem probable from the next verse, where one onely of them is mention'd, δύναμις θεοῦ the power of God. But there is no necessity that we should so interpret it, because the power of God in the fifth verse being set opposite to the wisdome of men (that is, the humane waies of perswasion or eloquence) must signifie Gods powerfull waies of perswading the belief of the Gospel, and signifying so, will contain under it the Spirit and power with the severall notions that may well belong to them; as first taking the spirit for the prophecies of the old Bible inspired by the Spirit of God, and Power for the miracles done by Christ. Thus hath Origen expres'd the meaning of them, the demonstration of the Spirit,]that is, saith he, τὰς προφητείας ἱκανὰς πιστοῦσθαι ἢ ἐπιγχάνοντα εἰς τὰ θεῖα χρεισῶν, the prophecies which were sufficient to give the reader assurance of the truth of the things that belong to Christ: And of power,]that is, τερατείας δυνάμεως, ὧν ἴχνη ἔτι σώζεται. the miraculous stupendious actions, of which the footsteps yet remain, Cont. Cels. p. 5. But beside this notion of the Spirit some others it is very capable of: as 1. that it signifie the descent of the Spirit of God on Christ, joyned with that voice from heaven, Mat. 3. This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased, and after, This is my beloved son, hear him. This may here fitly be called ἀπόδειξις πνεύματος, the demonstration of the Spirit, an evidence afforded by God immediatly from heaven of the truth of the Gospel, which being joyned with the power of Christ, both in respect of his doctrine and his miracles, were two heads most fit to be insisted on by S. Paul, for the confirming the truth of the Gospel. But it may yet farther be applied not to Christ personally, but to the Apostles after him, and then the Spirit will be the descent of the Spirit upon them, and by their imposition of hands, the holy Ghosts coming down upon others also, Act. 8. 18. and this together with their power of doing miracles may well be their ἀπόδειξις or demonstration of the truth of the Gospel, and be the thing that is meant here. Ἀπόδειξις πνεύματος.

V. 16. For who hath known the——] That this is a citation from Isa. 40. 13. there is no question, as also that the first words, Τίς γὰρ ἔγνω νοῦν Κυρίου; for who hath known the mind of the Lord? are set down, after this Apostles manner, out of the Septuagint. Now the same b. Τίς ἔγνω νοῦν Κυρίου

A postle citeth that place again, Rom. 11.34. and there in the latter part also sets down the Septuagints words, καὶ τίς αὐτῦ σύμβυλος ἐγένετο; and who hath been his counsellour? which words being not here read, but to τίς γὰρ ἔγνω τὸν νῦν τῦ Κυρίυ, these other immediately subjoyned, ὃς συμβιβάσει αὐτόν; who shall instruct him? there will be no reason to think these latter words to be another rendring of that second part of the verse in Isaiah. For when the Septuagint had translated it truly out of the Hebrew, why should the Apostle, who constantly useth the Septuagints translation, and that sometimes when that varies from the Hebrew, here use a new rendring of his own, and for καὶ τίς αὐτῦ σύμβυλος ἐγένετο; who hath been his counsellour? set onely ὃς συμβιβάσει αὐτόν; who shall instruct him? For this there is no probable reason to be given, and therefore it must be resolved, that no more then the first words are taken out of that place of Isaiah, and that the latter words are the Apostles own, to bring them to his present purpose, Who hath known the mind of the Lord, which shall instruct him? that is, who doth know the Lords mind so well as to be fit to inform and instruct the spiritual man? v. 15. for that αὐτὸν him should signifie the Lord (as they conclude, that make these words all one with the latter part of the verse in Isaiah) would be very strange, not only because it would be farre different from v. 15. of which it is brought for a proof, but also because knowing the mind of God, although it be a fit preparative to instructing of others, yet is not so for the instructing of God himself.

CHAP. III.

1. And I, brethren, although I was furnish'd with all manner of spiritual gifts, and was able to have revealed to you the highest mysteries, yet when I was among you, I could not think fit to treat so with you, the greatest part of you being then but very slender proficients in the Gospel, so farre from spirituall men (as some of you, the Gnosticks, are wont to style themselves) from men instructed by the Spirit of Christ, that you were gotten no higher then the imperfections and passions and sins of men, meer beginners in Christianity.

1. AND I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ.]

2. This was the reason that I gave you such tender food, proceeded not to reveal the mysteries of Christianity to you, for you were not fit for any higher diet, nor indeed yet are ye.

2. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat, for * hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.]

* ye were not then able, ἐτε ἐδύνασθε

3. For ye are not yet raised to any pitch of spirituall or Christian temper, as may appear by the schismes and factions that are among you, which being so contrary to the commands of Christ, which are all for peace and charity, as long as they are among you, ye are advanced but little above the pitch of meer men, those which have nothing of Spirit in them.

3. For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not † carnal, and walk * as men?]

† or men, for the Ks MS. reads ἀνθρωποι * according to man, κατὰ ἄνθρωπον

4. And herein your carnality consists: one pretends to follow the doctrine of Paul, another of Apollos, in opposition to all other Christians, and they that hold with one, hold against the other. And what is this uncharitableness but carnality?

4. For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?]

5. Where first it ought to be considered, that Paul or Apollos are not the authors of our faith, but onely instruments of conveying the doctrine of Christ to us (and consequently must not be conceived to teach diverse doctrine) according to the different commissions given them by the holy Ghost.

5. Who then is Paul? and who is Apollos? but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man.]

6. And so though I have taught you the doctrine of Christianity, and made you believers of heathens, and † Apollos baptized you, when you had been thus brought to the faith by me (I being sent by Christ, not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel, ch. 1. 14, 17.) yet the successe of all the whole work, in making either my preaching or his baptizing effectual, was from God, not from us.

6. I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase.]

† Ego de Plagem catechumenum feci, Apollo catechumenum lavacro. Opt.

7. And therefore there is no great matter imputable either to one or other, as that either of us should be deemed the author of your faith, but God onely who hath made our endeavours so effectuall to you.

7. So then, neither is he that planteth any thing, neither is he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.]

8. But then, secondly, the doctrine of both of us is but one, both of us have had the same designe and purpose of setling men in the doctrine of Christ, though, according to the labour that either of us have taken in the work, we may have different degrees of reward. And consequently, though one labourer may deserve more honour then another, yet ought not this to be an occasion of division or schisme among you, because our designe and doctrine being the same, your faith ought to be the same also.

8. Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one: * and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.]

* but

9. We indeed that preach, and they that baptize, are both servants or officers of God, and cooperate one with another in that great work of dressing and building up of soules, which when 'tis wrought, must not yet be attributed to us the instruments, but onely to God, the author and perfecter of all.

9. For we are † labourers together with God; ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building.]

† fellow-labourers of God, συνεργοὶ Θεῦ

10. God gave me abilities and commission to plant and preach the Gospel, to doe as the master-workman doth, to lay the foundation; and accordingly I have done, preached the faith, laid the foundation, Jesus Christ and him crucified, c. 2. 2. and some others that came after me to this Church which I had planted v. 6. (I mean not Apollos, for he onely watered what I had planted, baptized and farther instructed whom I had converted, c. 1. 5, 6, 7. but) some others, I say, which I hear have come in, have superstructed on my foundation somewhat which I never designed. But let them take heed what they doe; for if they have superstructed any other, but that one pure precious doctrine of Christ crucified, and constant confession of him in time of persecution, if from the Gnosticks they receive any infusions contrary to these, let them look to it.

10. According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise * master-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.]

* Architect ἀρχιτέκτων

11. For the faith of Christ being the foundation which I have laid, and that indeed the onely one which can possibly be laid,

11. For other foundation can no man lay then that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.]

12. Now

12. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble,

† for it is revealed, ὅτι ἀποκαλύπτεται

13. Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, † because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is.

* it shall receive, λήψεται

14. If any man's work abide, which he hath built thereupon, * he shall receive a reward.]

12, 13, 14. That which is regularly to be built thereon, is constant confession of Christ, in despight of afflictions, which like gold and silver, &c. is but refined and purified, but not consumed in the fire. But for any doctrine of worldly wisdome ver. 18. (see note a.) of prudential compliances with the persecutors, Jewes or Gentiles, if any such earthy material be brought in stead of it, it shall be brought suddenly to the triall; for that judgment of Christ which shall shortly passe upon them, for the destroying all corrupt believers on one side, and delivering and owning all true believers (see Rom. 13. d. and Heb. 10. a.) on the other, shall deale with them, as fire doth with that which is put in it to be tried, (preserving and refining what is true and good metall, and making it more illustrious, but burning up all that is combustible) burn up and consume all this worldly wisdome, and burnish the constancy of others like gold in the fire, (see Rev. 3. 18.) and preserve such, whilst all others are involved in their own subtilties, v. 19. And so all that adhere sincerely to Christ, they shall be sure not to misse their reward, preservation here in this world, besides that other that expects them eternally.

15. If any man's work shall be burnt, [a] he shall suffer losse, but he himself shall * be [b] saved: yet so as by fire.]

15. But if it prove combustible matter, if the doctrine or practice shall upon examination prove false and unchristian, and so will not bear that triall (such are the Gnosticks doctrines of denying Christ, when persecuted) it shall then be so farre from helping him to any advantage, as the Gnostick complier hopes it will, that it shall bring the greatest danger upon him: and if upon timely repentance, or by his not having actually denied Christ (for all his superstructing of some erroneous doctrines) he be more mercifully dealt with by Christ, and freed from having his portion with unbelievers, yet it shall goe hard with him, as with one that is involved in a common fire, and hardly escapes out of it. a. b.

* escape; but so as through fire

16. Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth † in you?]

16. By this that I say, you cannot but discern what care you are obliged to take to beware of these false seducing teachers that creep in among you: You are a Church of God's plantation, built as the Temple among the Jews, God's direction given for every part of it; ye have had the Spirit of God to teach you all true doctrine and pure practices, by your Apostolical plantation, and so to dwell and continue among you, and oblige you to all purity.

† among you, ἐν ὑμῖν

17. If any man * defile the Temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the Temple of God is holy, † which temple ye are.]

17. And therefore, if any false teacher shall bring in any unclean heretical doctrine into such a Church of God's planting, a place of God's residence, and so pollute or defile God's dwelling-place, (as when Nadab and Abihu offered strange fire on God's altar) then, as they were devoured by fire from heaven, so he must expect severe punishment. For all ye that are Christians make up this one temple of God's, and that being a consecrated society, must not be profaned or polluted with such impure doctrines as the Gnosticks every where infuse.

* corrupt φθείρει † as many of you as there are, οἵτινές ἐσμεν ὑμεῖς

18. Let no man deceive himself: if any man among you seemeth to be wise in this * world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.]

18. And for that other conceit of theirs, by which they get so many proselytes, that of the lawfulnesse of denying Christ in time of persecution, by which they promise themselves security from all the present evils, let no man cheat himself with this perswasion; any man that thus thinks to be more provident then other men, and by this means to secure himself, let him know that this will not thrive with him, he will find himself deceived at last (see v. 15. and Rev. 3. 18.) there is no such prudent way for him to secure himself, as to lay aside this worldly wisdome, and constantly and cheerfully to adhere to Christ, when in the eye of the world it seems most foolish to doe so.

* age αἰῶνι

19. For the wisdome of this world is foolishnesse with God; for it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftinesse.]

19. For God is wont to take off, and preserve the plain simple person that avowedly adheres to him, and to outwit the subtile designer; and it will soon befall those pretenders, according to that of Job 5. 13. they that think to be wiser then other men, are by so much verier fools then others, and so are discerned to be.

† machinations διαλογισμοὺς

20. And again, The Lord knoweth the † thoughts of the wise, that they are vaine,]

20. And to the same purpose is that of Psal. 94. 11. that all the subtile contrivances of crafty worldly-minded men prove vain and improsperous.

* all are πάντα ὑμῶν ἐστιν

21. Therefore let no man glory in men, for * all things are yours.]

21. Let no man therefore factiously or schismatically divide from the unity of the Church, following such or such a master or instructer, and so quarelling or contending with others, v. 4. For all the gifts that are in the Church were given for your use, and whatsoever any man can boast of, it is not peculiar to him, but belongs as well to every other person in the Church.

† instant ἐνεστῶτα, see Rom. 8. 38.

22. Wherefore Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things † present, or things to come, all are yours,]

22. He that planted the faith among you, and he that baptized you, and he that superstructed upon this foundation, are all subservient to your uses, and not to be masters of your faith, much lesse any of them to be set up against the other, to make divisions and rents among you; and so is likewise all humane wisdome, or knowledge of naturall things, so is God's mercy to us in keeping us alive, securing some of us from the malice of our enemies, and delivering up others of us to death, for the testimony of Jesus Christ, the condition now instantly approaching, pressures for the name of Christ, or that which is not quite so neer, the yet future coming of Christ (called the day v. 13.) for the destroying of the false, and rewarding the constant Christians; all these are by God designed in common to you all, as instrumental for your good.

23. And ye are Christs, and Christ is Gods.]

23. And the conclusion from hence is this, that you give not up your faith to any but to Christ, that you resolve firmly to obey him and adhere to him uniformly, as he resigned himself up to the will of God, to doe and to suffer whatsoever he appointed him, in the great office of being our mediator and redeemer.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. ζημιωθήσεται

V. 15. He shall suffer losse] Of the word ζημιωθήσεται here it may first be enquired, whether it belong to the man, or to his work, both immediatly precedent, εἴ τινος τὸ ἔργον, if any mans work. That which inclines it to signifie the work, is the ἀυτὸς ὃ that follows, but himself shall be saved, which seems to oppose himself to his work, that the one shall be lost, but the other saved. But this is well enough avoided by setting the opposition betwixt the saving of him, and the burning of his work, precedent to the ζημιωθήσεται and then the consideration of that as it answers the former probability, so it inclines more strongly to render it the other way, that the man, not the work, ζημιωθήσεται shall be mulcted. For that this word signifies not to be lost, but to suffer losse, hath been said Note on Mat. 16.m. Which cannot be here said of the work, of which it had before been said, it shall be burnt: For what is so, doth not suffer a mulct, or fine, or losse, (which according to all lawes must be salvo contenemento without utter ruine) but is lost, and utterly destroyed. It remains then that it be spoken of the man, whether false teacher, or any follower of such, that takes up any such false doctrine from him, and so upon the doctrine of Christ, (profes- ἐποικοδομεῖ sing still, or not denying of Christ) ἐποικοδομεῖ, superstructs some false doctrines, and erroneous practices. And of him it is here said, that he shall suffer losse, so as the metall that goes into the fire with drosse or embasement mix'd with it, is separated from all that mixture, and comes out a great deal lesse then it went in, loseth all that drosse in that triall of fire. Now how this is to be particularly understood of this superstructure of hay or stubble here, must be collected from Ηιλεκ the consideration of the day which is here mention'd ver 13. that it shall declare, or reveal. That the word Day in all languages signifies judgment, and that the day Emphatically, or the day of Christ the day of the Lord, signified an approaching season of judgment then expected on unbelievers and misbelievers, Jewes and Gnosticks, all the world over, in the Christian plantations, see Rom. 13. Note d. and Heb. 10 Note a. And that this is the day or Judgment that is here referred to, may appear 1st, by the exclusion of all other daies: The only two senses that can come in competition are either 1. that it signifie the finall day of judgment; or 2. the audience, and judicature, and sentence of the Apostle, when he comes to examine this doctrine. For the first, that cannot be understood here δηλοῦν because the office of the day here is δηλῶσαι to make manifest, and ἀποκαλυφθῆναι, to reveale, v. 13. And therefore supposing there were such a day of conflagration, which they that maintain look on as a purging fire to burn up all the ill works of the Christian, and fit him for heaven, yet the circumstances of the text here doe not belong to that, but to another quality of the fire, the trying, revealing, and discriminating one from another, as appears by all the phrases here used, Every mans work shall be made manifest, the day shall declare, it shall be revealed by the fire, the fire shall try what kind of work every mans is, and if any mans work remain, that is, abides the triall, he shall be rewarded. As for that of the Apostles coming to judge and censure, it is not probably here meant, because these hereticks and their followers did not acknowledge the Apostles power, but resisted and rejected them, as appears in divers other places (and oft layes a necessity on the Apostles to vindicate their authority.) And 2dly, there is no reason to conceive that the Apostle should call his own sentence by the name of the Fire, or speak of giving men rewards v. 14. which are to be expected from God. But then 2dly, that it be applied to this of the punishment of God now approaching the Gnosticks, will appear not only by the mention of the wood, hay, stubble, built on the foundation, which evidently denotes hereticall superstructures, (and it is known that these were the great hereticks of those times) and such as will be sure to perish when fire comes, but also by the consequents here to the end of the Chapter, which make up the known character of the Gnosticks. For that consisted specially of two things, 1. their doctrines of Uncleanesse, 2dly, their arts of worldly wisdome to secure themselves from persecutions by complying with the persecutors. And both these are here noted, that of Ναὸν Θεοῦ φθείρει Uncleanesse v. 16, 17. by the defiling the Temple of God, that is, themselves, who as Christians are obliged to be holy, but by the Gnostick infusions were in danger of all pollutions; and those that were immers'd in them, the Apostle tells that they shall be destroyed by this day, him shall God destroy v. 17. And so that φθερεῖ τοῦτον ὁ Θεός of worldly wisdome, v. 18. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, that is, prudent for the Δοκεῖ τις σοφὸς εἶναι ἐν τῷ αἰῶνι τούτῳ saving or securing himself from persecutions and dangers here. And of this the Apostle gives warning, that this wisdome is the greatest folly, and that the contrary thereto is the onely wisdome even for this life, the constant adhering to Christ, the surest means to deliver him from the dangers which here he fears, whereas these wise and prudential worldlings are likely to be taken in their own craft, v. 19. by their arts of secu- Δρασσόμενος τῇ πανουργίᾳ αὐτῶν ring. to destroy themselves, and so will appear vain and ridiculous in all their wise contrivances ver. 20. according to that of Christ, Mat. 16.25. he that will save his life shall lose it. And therefore the form of advise here used is, Let no man deceive himself. This practice of the Gnosticks in order to the securing themselves was a great mistake, the way to bring all destruction upon them, when the day of the Lord, the vengeance of Christ upon the crucifyers and persecutors of Christians, should come suddenly upon them, and sweep away the Gnosticks among them. And so, the whole passage belonging clearly to these, the full importance of the ζημιωθήσεται will be, that they which being not so high in that heresie as to deny the foundation, the faith of Christ, (which many did, and are elsewhere call'd Apostates and Antichrists, and they that denied Christ to be come in the flesh) and yet had received some of these Gnostick infusions, that particularly of worldly prudence and compliance with the Jewes, should (contrary to their expectation of gaining by this means) suffer losse, be in great hazard to be destroyed among them, and if they escaped, it should be very narrowly, the constant, faithfull, Orthodox Christian being the only one that should be perfectly safe when that fiery day came, when the unfaithfull and the cowardly should either utterly perish, or run an horrible hazard in that day. And to this purpose is it that the doctrines of these Gnosticks are expres'd by wood, hay, stubble, earthy materialls (and so notes of false doctrines, unfit to be built on this divine foundation) and those (of all things) the most combustible and sure to be destroyed, when a fiery triall comes, and that in two respects; first, that when persecution for Christ comes, such a kind of Christianity as this is sure to be burnt up, the Gnosticks will not then hold out, and confess Christ; and secondly, in respect of Christs coming to visit and judge, to reward the constant and destroy the unfaithfull, then these prudential waies of theirs will be sure to stand them in no stead, but bring them into greater danger, as he that means to secure himself against fire by wood, hay, stub- Ξύλα, χόρτος ble, shall be sure to have all burnt, and to encrease, not lessen the flame; whereas the truly wise way (and that which Christ counsels the Church of Laodicea to, in opposition to these Gnosticks, Rev. 3. 8.) is to build gold, silver, &c. which having been tried in the fire Χρυσὸς, ἄργυρος, &c. (and so denoting constancy in persecutions) are sure to hold out, and endure the test, whatsoever the day of visitation be, be the fire never so scorching, these will be the likelielt to be preserved in it.

Ib. Saved, yet so as by fire] That σώζεσθαι signifies b. to escape hath been often noted, but what σώζεσθαι διὰ τινος escape by here signifies, is the onely difficulty, and that will be best explained by comparing it with other places of the same kind. Thus 1 Pet. 3. 20. διεσώθησαν δι' ὕδατος they were saved out of, or through, the water, the præposition διὰ perhaps (as other præpositions oft are in the New Testament) being taken loosely for ἐκ or ἀπὸ, out or from, or else as the necessity of the matter imports, an escaping through water, implying consequently an escaping out of it also; and so the sense will be, that though there were a great flood ready to drown drown all the earth, yet for all this, by the help of the Arke they did escape that danger. And so here σωθήσεται ὡς διὰ πυρὸς he shall escape as one escapes out of the fire, that is, as * Chrysostome expresses it, as one that, when in the midnight his house is set on fire, wakes and leaps out of the bed, and runs naked out of dores, ἁδὲν τ ἔνδον λαβὼν, taking nothing that is within along with him, taking care onely (as he addes) ὅπως τὸ σῶμα τὸ ἑαυτῦ προεξαρπάζῃ τ φλογὸς, that he may snatch his own body out of the flame. And it is a common * observation that ὡς διὰ πυρὸς σώζεσθαι is a proverbial speech for those that get hardly out of a great danger; so ὡς δαλὸς ἐξηρπασμένος ἐκ πυρὸς, as a brand snatch'd out of the fire, Amos 4. 11. and so Jude 23. ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε, ἐκ τῦ πυρὸς ἁρπάζοντες, save them by snatching them out of the fire in time of danger, for so ἐν φόβῳ signifies, ἐν κινδύνῳ in presence of any thing that men are afraid of. By this means that of 1 Pet. 4. 18. will be explained also, for this will be the meaning of μόλις σώζεται (for which the Hebrew, Prov. 11. 31. reads שׁלם, shall be recompensed) he shall not escape without many losses and afflictions in that πύρωσις or combustion. So as in * Julian ἡ νὺξ ὀλίγως ἀνέσωσε μόλις, the night did hardly or with great difficulty, rescue a few; and in * Agathias, who having spoken of some that πυρπολεῖσθαι ἔμελλον, were ready to be fired and burnt, addes, μόλις ἐνθένδε διακπσόντες κατᾳφύγωσι, they hardly escape out of it.

CHAP. IV. Paraphrase.

1. LET a man so account of us, as of the * ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God.]

* officers ὑπηρέτας

1. And though, I say, we are subservient to your uses, and are appointed so to be, ch. 3. 22. yet it will become you to look on us, though not as masters of your faith, yet as ministers of Christ, and that in the most honorable office of the family, that of the steward, or ruler of the house, to whom among other things it belongs to dispense out every man his proportion of food, &c. and so 'tis our part to dispense the Gospel to you in that measure, and by those degrees that we see fit.

2. Moreover it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithfull.]

2. And above all things fidelity and honest discharging of trust is required of stewards, and if I should faile in that, I should be very worthy of blame.

3. But with me it is a very small thing, that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment; yea, I judge not mine own self.]

3. But for this I am not to be judged by you, by men, nay by my self.

4. For I know nothing by my self, yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.]

4. For though I can accuse my self of no fault in the execution of my Apostolical office, yet is not this the clearing of me, onely God that searcheth and seeth all must doe this.

† season καιρὸς

* who will also enlighten, &c. ὃς καὶ

5. Therefore judge nothing before the † time, untill the Lord come, * who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts, and then shall every man have praise of God.]

5. Therefore be not you too forward in your censures of me, but leave it to God, and I make no doubt but in time he will display the seducers, and discover every mans intentions and purposes, and then, as they that deserve shall have blame, so every man that hath done well shall by God be justified and commended.

† thus darkly set down of my self, μεμετασχημάτικα εἰς ἐμαυτὸν

6. And these things, brethren, I have † in a figure transferred to my self, and to Apollos for your sakes, * that ye might learn in us, ‖ not [a] to think of men above that which † is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another.]

6. This of not following or admiring the persons of men, I have thus said (see note on Rom. 7. d.) in the persons of my self and Apollos, under that figure to give you a general rule how to demean your selves to any other dispensers of the Gospel, viz. that in following of us ye go no farther then the directions v. 1. that is, think of us not as masters of your faith, but as officers, stewards of Christ, to distribute that to you which he hath entrusted to us, and accordingly not to make it matter of pride to your selves, or contemning of others, that ye are the disciples of such or such, in plain termes to beware that you do not break out into factions, one to the despising of another, boasting, one that he hath received the faith from Paul, and not from Apollos, another that he is a follower of Apollos, and not of Paul, &c.

* that in respect of us ye may learn, ἵνα ἐν ἡμῖν μάθητε

‖ not to opinionate above

† hath been written γεγραπται

7. For who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? Now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?]

7. For this can be no matter of boasting to any of you, for by it is no man dignifi'd before another, for by whomsoever you received the faith, it is clear that you received it; 'tis no acquisition of your own wit or parts, but meerly a mercy of Gods, that sent us to preach to you, and therefore cannot in any reason be matter of boasting to you.

* ye are already full to satiety; Ἤδη κεκορεσμένοι ἐστὲ

† already grown rich, ἐπλουτήσατε

8. * Now ye are full, † now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us, and I would to God ye did reigne, that we also might reign with you.

9. For I think that God hath set forth us the Apostles last, as it were men appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to Angels, and to men.]

8,9. You forsooth are so full and rich, so furnish'd with all kind of knowledge & wisdome, (such the Gnosticks bragg'd of) that you despise your Apostles and spiritual fathers that first converted you to the faith; Since we parted from you, you have in your own conceits been in great tranquillity and security, had happy Halcyonian daies, (see note on Rev. 1. 6.) And I wish it were so with you as you phansie it to be, that the tranquillity which the Gnosticks (with their compliances with the persecutors, whether Jewes or heathens) promise you, were a true Christian tranquillity, that we which are so sharply persecuted, might come to you as to a refuge, and enjoy some part of that great privilege with you; for certainly we have need of it: For we are so farre from any security, that we are exposed to all the miseries and persecutions and dangers in the world, we Apostles being as it were the forlorn party, sent out last, without any reserve behind to relieve us, and so given up unto certain slaughter, or as the gladiators upon a stage, those that come out first fighting in jest, as it were, but they that come last never giving over, till one lay down the other dead upon the place. For we are become as those that being condemn'd to death have wild beasts let loose on them upon the theatre, which certainly rend them to pieces, ch. 15. 32. And like those combatants on the theatre, we are set forth for a spectacle to the heathen world, to angels, to men to look upon.

* in splendour, we in disgrace, ἐνδόξοι, ἡμεῖς δὲ ἄτιμοι

10. We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ: we are weak, but ye are strong: ye are * honourable, but we are despised.]

10. We are vile and despised for the doing our duty, the exercise of our Apostolical office, but you forsooth are very wise men, deeply learned in the doctrine of Christ; we weak contemptible mean persons, but you strong and gallant.

11. As I was when I was with you (ſee ch. 2. 3.) ſo I am ſtill, in a condition of continual want and perſecution, and tranſitory mutable eſtate,

11. Even unto this preſent houre we both hunger, and thirſt, and are naked, and are buffeted, and † have no certain dwelling place,]

† are in no certain condition, ἀστατοῦμεν

12. Taking exceſſive pains that I may preach the Goſpel, and get mine own living by my labour, that I might not put you to any charges, (ſee Act. 18. 3.) and when, in ſtead of thanks, I meet with nothing but reviling for all this, I have no return to make them, but that of my prayers for them, nay when perſecuted, I entertain no thought of revenge toward them.

12. And * labour, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bleſſe: being perſecuted, we † ſuffer it:]

* are tired, κοπιῶμεν † forbear, ἀνεχόμεθα

b. 13. When calumniated and falſly accuſed, I pray to God for them by whom it is done, and this is no newes to me: for we Apoſtles of Chriſt are look'd on and uſed as the unworthieſt creatures of the world, and ſo continue untill this time.

13. Being defamed, we intreat; we are made as * the [b] filth of the world, and are the † off-ſcouring of all things unto this day.]

* the vileſt
† refuſe of all, πάντων περίψημα

14. And though I have thus been uſed by ſome of you, I write not theſe things to ſhame you, but as my beloved ſons I warn you, ſince theſe ſchiſmes have come in among you, yet I ſay it not to reproach or bring ſhame upon you for ſo doing, but out of the affections of a father, I adviſe and admoniſh you to behave your ſelves more like children, then ye have yet done.

14. I write not theſe things to ſhame you, but as my beloved ſons I warn you.]

15. For though others may have taught you ſince, yet 'tis only I that planted the Goſpel firſt among you, and therefore there can be no occaſion of ſchiſmes and diviſions among you, (by one's making one Apoſtle the maſter of his faith, another another,) any more then that children of the ſame father ſhould contend and divide about their life, or coming into the world, one profeſſing to owe it to one, another to another.

15. For * though you have ten thouſand inſtructers in Chriſt, yet have ye not many fathers; for in Chriſt Jeſus I have begotten you through the Goſpel.]

* if ἐὰν

16. And therefore, I beſeech you, let the form of doctrine which I left you be retained among you, without any new inſertions by any other.

16. Wherefore, I beſeech you, be ye followers of me.]

17. For this purpoſe I have ſent unto you Timothie, whom I converted to the faith, and one that hath long aſſociated with me, and done faithfull ſervice to me in the propagating of the Goſpel, who therefore exactly knowing my whole courſe of Chriſtian doctrine, may be your remembrancer, and tell you what my doctrine and practice is in every Church, where I come to confirm them.

17. For this cauſe have I ſent unto you Timotheus, who is my beloved ſon and faithfull in the Lord, who ſhall bring you into remembrance of my waies which be in Chriſt, as I teach every where in every Church.]

18. And ſince by my not coming to you my ſelf perſonally, ſome among you have taken occaſion to deſpiſe me that am abſent,

18. Now ſome † are puffed up, * as though I would not come to you.]

† have been puffed up, ἐφυσιώθησαν
* because I come not, ὡς μὴ ἐρχομένου

19. I am therefore reſolved by God's help my ſelf to come among you ſpeedily, and to examine what grounds they have for what they doe, and not much heeding the ſpeech or talk of them, to ſee whether this be any ſolid knowledge in them, upon ſtrength of which they ſhould deſpiſe others.

19. But I will come to you † ſhortly, if the Lord will, and will know, not the ſpeech of them which are puffed up, but the power.]

† ſpeedily, ταχέως
* ſpeech λόγῳ

20. For Chriſtianity conſiſts not in ſpeaking, but in doing, (according to a proverbial ſpeech of the Jewes, Speech is not a foundation, but work. Pirke Avoth p. 15.) and ſo all other perfections of men muſt be judged of, not by their boaſts of themſelves, but by the reality of their performances.

20. For the kingdome of God is not in * word, but in power.]

c. 21. And now I talk of coming to you, I pray conſider, which will you chuſe? As you behave your ſelves, ſo at my coming will I exerciſe either my power of inflicting puniſhments, or the milder way of kindneſſe toward you; and therefore according as ye like beſt, ſo prepare your ſelves for my coming.

21. What will ye? ſhall I come unto you with [c] a rod, or in love, and in the ſpirit of meekneſſe?]

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Φρονεῖν

V. 6. To think.] What φρονεῖν ſignifies in this place will beſt be gheſt by φυσιοῦσθε puft up, which followes on purpoſe to explain it. That ſignifying elation of mind to the deſpiſing of others, φρονῶν muſt in all reaſon do ſo alſo. Thus the Scholiaſt on Thucydides, l. 1. ſaith of καταφρονῶν that it is τὸ ἄγαν φρονεῖν, καὶ ὅτον ὑπερφρονεῖν, where φρονεῖν muſt be a degree of pride, as the other a great or high degree of it. So in S. Chryſoſtome Tom. 3. p. 177. l. 4. τίνος ἕνεκεν δυσχεραίνεις καὶ παροξύνῃ καὶ εἰς μωρίαν ὑπεκχεῖσθαι τῇ φρονήσει; why art thou diſturbed and abuſeſt thy opinion of thy ſelf, thy pride to folly? and l. 6. διὰ φρονήσεως γινόμεθα μωροὶ is by elation of mind, by pride, to become a fool, contrary to ὑπὸ φύσεως γινόμεθα μωροὶ, naturall folly. So Rom. 12. 3. it moſt literally ſignifies (not to be wiſe, but) to opinionate, to think great matters of himſelf. So in Demoſthenes, φρονῶν ἐφ' ἑαυτῷ πλεῖον ἢ ἄξιον εἰκὸς, one that thinkes as high of himſelf as is fit. Onely here the notion of the word ſeems a little to be reſtrained by the ὡς ἐν τῷ ἐνδεῖ, for one in the latter part of the verſe, and ſo to denote not ſo much pride of their own gifts, as Rom. 12. as pride and high opinion of their teachers, boaſting of them to the diſparagement of others.

b. Περικαθάρματα in the word Κάθαρμα

V. 13. Filth.] Περικαθάρματα ſignifies thoſe things that are uſed in the luſtrating of a city among the Gentiles. Suidas hath deſcribed the cuſtome in theſe words, Τὴν καθαρμὸν πόλεως ἀνήγειν ἐπολωμένου τινὰ ὃν ἐπάλυν κάθαρμα, For the purging and luſtrating of a city they cloathed a man (in foule and filthy garments, ſay others) and put him to death, and he was called a luſtration or expiation: thus, ſaith Euſtathius, κάθαρμα is a luſtration for, which the vileſt perſons were wont to be uſed, οἱ ῥυπαροὶ καὶ ὑπόβλητοι, ſordid, refuſe people. For thus it was, when the city was under any plague or other great calamity, they choſe out one of the naſtieſt perſons in the city, and brought him to a certain place, with cheeſe, and drie figs, and a cake in his hand, and then beat him with rods about the ſecret parts, and then burnt him and the rods together in a ditch, and caſt the aſhes into the ſea (τῷ Ποσειδῶνι θυσίαν ὑποτίννυντες paying a ſacrifice to Neptune, ſaith Suidas) with theſe words, γένου περίψημα, γένου κάθαρμα, Be thou a luſtration for us. This perſon was called κάθαρμα and περίψημα, and by Lycophron, and before him by Hipponax, φάρμακον a medicament, and by Philoſtratus (ſaith Sardus de ritib. l. 3. c. 19.) ἀποτροπαῖον a cure, or averter of judgment from the city. (But this is a miſtake in Sardus; all that Philoſtratus ſaith being onely this, that in the Theatre τὸ τῆς ἀποτροπαίας ἰσχύος, that is, the ſtatue of the deity that averteth judgment, plagues, &c. was ſet up.) By this it appears alſo, what is meant by περίψημα πάντων, the refuſe of all in the next words, to wit, the very ſame thing in another expreſſion, the vileſt, refuſe creature in a city, ſuch as used to be the expiation in a publick calamity. So saith Suidas, Περίψημα, κάθαρμα, which, I conceive, is a corruption from κάθαρμα, which differs but little from it; and Hesychius, Περίψημα, ἀποκαθάρμαγμα (for ἀποκάθαρμα I conceive) ἀντίλυτρα, ἀντίψυχα, ἢ ὑπὲρ τὰ ἴχνη πάντων, the two words are of the same signification, and denote those that are pai'd for others ransomes, or put to death in others stead, or else any thing that is most vile, trodden under feet by all men. Thus Tob. 5. 24. we have this phrase, περίψημα ἢ παιδίσκη γένοιτο, for, Let it be despised, a refuse, in respect of, or comparison to my son, this heathen custome, whence all this comes, being in a manner but a transcript of the Azazel among the Jewes, the scape-goat, that was sent into the wilderneſſe with all the sinnes of the people upon him, which was therefore called ἀποπομπαῖος, rejectaneus, or refuse.

V. 21. A Rod] The ῥάβδος or rod here is the power of inflicting punishments in the Apostles, of death it self, as on Ananias, of diseases, as on Elymas, and so the Hebrew word שֵׁבֶט for ῥάβδος is rendred πληγὴ a stripe Isa. 10. 24. and is all one with μάστιξ scourge Mar. 3. 10. and contrary to this is the spirit of meekneſſe that follows here, mercifulneſſe in not inflicting that sharpneſſe on them, upon sight of their speedy reformation, which by threatning here he desires and hopes to produce, before his coming to them personally. c. ῥάβδος

CHAP. V. Paraphrase.

1. * IT is reported commonly, that there is [a] fornication among you, and such fornication, as † is [b] not so much as named among the Gentiles, that one should have his father's wife.]

1. It is a great shame and reproach that lyes upon you, that sins of unnaturall uncleanneſſe, and marriages within prohibited degrees are so frequently to be found among you, and those of such a pitch in one offender, as civil nations, (though not Christian) and even the unconverted Corinthians would abhor to be guilty of, a sonne to take in marriage (or otherwise to live in that sinne with) his father's wife. a. b.

* Fornication is generally reported among you, † or, is not among; for ὀνομαζέσθω named, is left out by the Kings MS.

2. And ye are [c] puffed up, and have not rather mourned, that he that hath done this deed may be taken away from among you.]

2. And this so freely that ye doe not look on it as a crime fit to be censured in him, ye are not at all humbled with it, nor mourn for it (see 2 Cor. 12. 21.) either out of an opinion of the person that hath done it, (who is one of the Doctors of your Church, say Chrysostome and Theodoret) or out of an opinion infused now by some hæreticall teachers into you (which your former condition of life makes you apt enough to believe) that fornication is an indifferent thing (see c. 6. 13.) whereas in any reason you ought to have mourned over him, as over a great sinner, and expressed your sorrow in complaining of him, and using meanes that he might be excommunicated, see c. 12. 21. c.

6. Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Πορνεία

V. 1. Fornication] Πορνεία fornication in this place is a generall word to comprehend all unlawfull desires of the flesh, acts of whatsoever prohibited carnality, under it. For it is observable that the precept given by Gods positive command to the sonnes of Adam and Noah, and so to all mankinde, which is styled by the Jewes עֲרָיוֹת גִּלּוּי of discloſing nakednesses, under which style all the marriages within prohibited degrees Lev. 18. and all the unnaturall sinnes are contain'd, is Act. 15. exprels'd by abstaining ἀπὸ πορνείας from fornication. And that by the infusions of the Gnosticks, and remainders of their heathen customes, there was an Epidemical guilt of this sin of many sorts among them, is the meaning of ὅλως ἀκούεται ἐν ὑμῖν πορνεία, fornication is universally heard, that is, found, among you: for the word ὅλως seemes to be all one with καθόλε in universum, and so perhaps it is to be rendred c. 6. 7. ὅλως ἥττημα ἐν ὑμῖν ὅτι there is a defect generally among you, and being here joyned with ἀκούεται ἐν ὑμῖν is heard among you may signifie that 'tis an universall guilt of theirs; or else being joyned with πορνεία it will sound thus, fornication altogether, or fornication in groſse, (containing the severall branches of it) is heard, that is, found or met with, among you, and of the many sorts thereof, one that had not been practised, or indured to be thought or spoke of among civill heathens, or the unconverted Corinthians at that time, that of having the fathers wife. This, saith Chrysostome, was done by a Doctor, that is, I suppose, a Bishop in some Church of Achaia; ὁ μόνον θείων μυστηρίων ἠξίωτο, ἀλλὰ καὶ διδασκαλικῆ ἐπιστεύχει χαείσματος, He was, saith he, not onely vouchsafed the divine mysteries, partaker of them, but had obtained the dignity of a Doctor. And so Theodoret also.

Ὅλως ἀκούεται.

b. ὡς Ονομάζεται ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν.

1b. Not so much as named among the Gentiles] What is here said not to be named among the Gentiles is not so to be understood, that no nation ever used it, but that civill (though not Christian) nations have counted it abominable and nefarious, no way lawfull or tolerable, or that at this time the unconverted Corinthians were not guilty of it. Among the ancient Arabians it was used, and the custome so described by Al Mostratraf, Ebnol Arbir, &c. that when a woman was left a widow, or put away by the husband, the eldest sonne should take her by inheritance, and cast his garment over her, as a signe of it; or if he would not, then the next heir: and so the son, they say, succeeded to the fathers bed, as well as wealth, by inheritance. This being formerly in use was by the Alcoran forbidden, O vos qui creditis, non permissum est vobis fœminas hæreditatis jure accipere. Believers (that is, they that receive Mahomets law) must not take the fathers wives by right of inheritance. So Al Sharestanius, Turpissimum eorum quæ faciebant (Arabes tempore ignorantiæ) erat hoc, quòd vir duas sorores duceret, & patris sui uxorem velut successor assumeret, quod qui faceret appellatur Al Daizan, quo nomine insectatus est Aus Ebn Haiar quosdam è tribu Banikaïc, quorum tres ex ordine patris sui uxorem duxerant. Mos autem erat apud Arabes, ut cùm ab uxore, morte aut repudio, separaretur aliquis, filiorum ipsius natu maximus, si eâ opus haberet, vestem suam ei injiceret; quòd si ille opus eâ non haberet, duceret ipsam è fratribus aliquis dotis novæ inter-ventu. The fouleſt thing that the old Arabs did in time of ignorance was this, that a man married two sisters, and took his fathers wife as his successor, which he that did was called Al Daizan, and such there were of the tribe of Banikais, who three of them one after another had married the father's wife. Now it was a custome among the Arabians, that when any man was separated from his wife by death or divorce, his eldest son, if he wanted her, cast his garment upon her, that is, took her to wife; or if he wanted her not, one of his brothers married her.

V. 2. Puffed up, and not rather mourned] The word πενθεῖν here to mourn, lament, wail, referres to the customary solemnity of putting on mourning habits, and wailing over them that were to be Excommunicate, as over them that were dead, ὡς νεκρὸς πενθοῦσι, saith Origen Cont. Cels. l. 3. just as Pythagoras, when any forsook his schoool had a κενοτάφιον or empty hearse carried about, and mourned for him. Μετὰ λύπης καὶ πένθους ἀνιάτως ἔχοντα τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἀποτίμητε, him that is incurable, or not otherwise like to be cured, turn out of the Church with grief and mourning, saith Clem. Constit. 2. And so Origen l. 3. Cont. Cels. See Note on Rom. 12. c. And accordingly here followes ἐξαρθῆτε ἐκ μέσου, let him be taken from amongst you, noting the censure of Excommunication; and so 2 Cor. 12. 21. καὶ πενθήσω πολλοὺς τῶν προημαρτηκότων, καὶ μὴ μετανοησάντων, where bewailing of impenitent sinners is censuring them. And thus the word λύπη seems to signifie (being all one with πενθεῖν) 2 Cor. 2. 1. ἐλθεῖν ἐν λύπῃ to come with intention to censure and punish, the very same as (ch. 12. 21. before the bewailing them) is expressed by μὴ πάλιν ἐλθόντα με ταπεινώσῃ ὁ Θεός μου πρὸς ὑμᾶς, where God's humbling him towards them is giving him occasion to exercise his censures or Church-discipline on them, at his coming among them (contrary to the φυσιοῦσθε 1 Cor. 5. 2.) as appears by ch. 13. 2. when I come again I will not spare, and v. 10. ἵνα μὴ ἀποτόμως χρήσωμαι that when I come I may not use severity; so 2 Cor. 2. 3. λύπην ἔχω signifies to be constrain'd to use severity of censures, to which this mourning or sorrow belongs, and λυπεῖσθαι v. 4. to be under those censures, and v. 5. λυπεῖ, to offend and commit that which S. Paul was constrain'd to punish with the censures of the Church; so ch. 7. 8. εἰ καὶ ἐλύπησα ὑμᾶς is, if I inflicted the censures of the Church upon you, and in the end of the verse, I see that that Epistle, though written for that season, ἐλύπησεν ὑμᾶς, brought the censures of the Church upon you, ver. 9. and οὐχ ὅτι ἐλυπήθητε, not that you were put under the censures, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐλυπήθητε εἰς μετάνοιαν, but those censures produced that effectual change in you, ἐλυπήθητε κατὰ Θεὸν for ye were dealt with according to the discipline ordained by God, or Christ, in the Church: and so in all probability that is λύπη κατὰ Θεὸν v. 10. which brings μετάνοιαν, a change or newnesse of life, as the censures and punishments of the world bring death. And so κατὰ Θεὸν λυπηθῶσι ὑμᾶς to be mourned or sorrowed v. 11. that is, censured, according to Gods appointment.

d. Κρίνειν

inflict censures on them that are without? heathens, that were not in the Church, or Gnosticks, that divided from it, those he leaves to God's censures and punishments, as not belonging to his Apostolical judicature; so ver. 13. ἐκεῖ πῶν ὅτω ὑμεῖς κείνετε; Doe ye not judge them that are within? that is, all that live within your Church, and yet fall into any such carnal sinnes, ye, the Governours of each Church of Achaia, ought to endeavour to reduce, by inflicting the censures of the Church on them; and accordingly followes there, what here precedes, ἐξαρεῖτε τὸν πονηρὸν ἐξ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν Remove the wicked person (perhaps τὸν πόρνον the fornicator or incestuous v. 1.) from among you. And agreeably so it must be here, κέκεικα τὸν οὕτω τοῦτο κατεργασάμενον, I have judged, sentenc'd, him that hath thus done this; and what the sentence is appears by the 4th and 5th verses, the 4th containing the solemnity wherewith it was to be inflicted, in the publick assembly of the Church, to have power of the keyes exercised on him, according to his Apostolical office, παραδοῦναι τὸν τοιοῦτον τῷ Σατανᾷ, to deliver up such an one to Satan, v. 5. that is, to excommunicate him. See Note e.

Ἐξαρεῖτε τὸν πονηρὸν

e. Παραδοῦναι τῷ Σατανᾷ

V. 5. Deliver such an one unto Satan] παραδοῦναι τῷ Σατανᾷ to deliver to Satan here, and 1 Tim. 1. 20. is answerable to חרם among the Jewes, called in Greek ἀνάθεμα execration, the second species of Excommunication among them, and in which, for the greater solemnity of it, there were curses out of the Law of Moses, and such like execrations added to it (an essay of which we have Act. 8. 20. thy money be to thee to destruction, &c.) This was inflicted on him who had first been under the first species, that of the נדוי ἀφορισμὸς, remotion or separation, first for thirty daies, and then being allow'd thirty daies more (which they called the doubling of the נדוי) still continued in that contumacy; for then, say the Jewes, מחרימין אותו they anathematize him without defining any limited time, as in niddui they did. This in the Christian Church is called delivering to Satan, for two reasons. 1. Because it was the depriving the offender of those daily means which are in Christianity afforded, and ordinarily usefull to eject Satan, and the power of his kingdome out of the heart, such are 1. the prayers of the Church, 2dly, the publick use of the word or doctrine of Christianity (for he that is under Cherem, nec docet, nec docetur, neither teaches, nor is taught, say the Jews; and in the ancient Christian Church, they that were upon repentance received in again, were first among the ἀκροώμενοι hearers in the porch, θείων ἀκούειν γεγραφῶν to heare the holy Scriptures, saith Zonaras, which argues that they were before excluded from it,) 3dly, the sacrament of the Lord's supper, in which respect scandalous sinners συνδειπνοῦντες feasting with them are by S. Jude ver. 12. called σπιλάδες spots in their feasts or agapæ (which being annex'd to the Lord's supper denoted the whole action) that is, unfit, as blemish'd sacrifices, to be received there. And the use of all these means being in the œconomy of the Gospel designed to so much advantage to the soul, for the casting Satan out of it, the depriving men of the use of those means is properly stiled the delivering to Satan, as the Catechist, that instructed men and made them fit for Baptisme, or entrance into the Church, was wont to be called ἐξορκιστὴς the exorcist that cast Satan out. But then 2dly, in the Apostles times there was a sad consequent of this Excommunication, proportionable to the execrations in the Jewish Cherem (which, say they, seldome wanted their effect) viz. corporal power and possession, and inflictions of Satan on those who were delivered up to him, in like manner as we read befell Saul, after his defection from God, when the evil spirit came upon him, 1 Sam. 16. 14. For about Christ's time, and a little after, 'twas ordinary with the Devil to tyrannize over the bodies of men, laying all kinds of diseases upon them (as appears in the Gospel) which is called Satan's buffeting. κολαφίζειν 2 Cor. 12. 7. βασανίζειν tormenting, Mat. 8. 6. ποικίλοις νόσοις καὶ βασάνοις συνέχειν taking or holding them with divers diseases and torments. Mat. 4. 24. δῆσαι binding Lu. 11. 16. (the word that is used for Excommunication) and so here the delivering to Satan is εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the destruction of the flesh, to the inflicting bodily diseases on him. This Ignatius in his Epistle to the Romans calls κόλασις διαβόλου, the punishment of the devil, for he wishes there that it were on himself, μόνον ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ὄπτυχῶ only that by that means he may come to enjoy Jesus Christ, which cannot be said of the punishments in hell, for those would not be reconcileable with that end (see Rom. 9 Note b.) And so as among the Esseni of the Jewes saith Josephus, τοὺς ἐπ' ἀξιοχρέοις ἁμαρτήμασιν ἀλόγοις ἐκβάλλουσιν ἐκ τοῦ τάγματος, ὁ δὲ ἐκκεκριμένος ὀικτίστῳ πολλάκις μόρῳ διαφθείρεται, those that are found in any considerable sinne they cast out from their congregation, and they that are cast out commonly come to miserable deaths; and as Heliodorus 2 Mac. 3. in his sacrilegious enterprize was scourged by two Angels in the shape of young men, v. 26. and hardly came off with life; so the Apostolical Excommunication or anathema was attended with diseases and torments on the body, to lay a necessity on them of reforming. And this is the ῥάβδος rod; see Note on c. 4. b. Now for the word παραδοῦναι delivering, that seems to have an elegant notation in it, for it is a relative to asking or demanding, and implies that truth which otherwise appears from Scripture, thus; Satan is our adversary before God (and therefore called שטן ἐχθρὸς enemy, ἀντικείμενος set against us) this he expresses by accusing (to which Rev. 12. 11. referres) or impleading and thence he is called ἀντίδικος an adversary in suit in court of judicature, 1 Pet. 5. 8. This he doth falsly sometimes, as in the case of Job, c. 1. 9, 11. (in which respect he is called διάβολος a calumniator, by which the Septuagint oft render שטן) but sometimes truly, upon the real commission of some sinne, to which purpose he is said, as an explorator or searcher for faults, to go up and down to and fro upon the earth, Job 1. 7. when he hath any such accusation against any ἀδελφὸς, brother, Christian professor, or pious person, then, as perhaps it was in the case of Peter (see Lu. 22. 31.) he is said ἐξαιτήσασθαι to require him of God, demands to have him delivered up to him, as to a lictor or executioner, σινιάσαι to sift and shake him terribly; and that perhaps is the meaning of his ζητῶν τινα καταπιεῖν, seeking whom he may devour, 1 Pet. 5. 8. and if God think fit to answer this request of his, then God is said to deliver up to Satan: and from that course of God's is that discipline of the Apostles transcribed and copied out in the censures of the Church, which therefore are thus expres'd.

Ib. Destruction of the flesh] That Satan had (when he was permitted by God for sin) power to inflict diseases on mens bodies, appeareth by what hath been said Note e. and by most of Christ's cures of men possessed with devils, those possessions being generally accompanied with some ordinary disease, discernible by the symptomes there mentioned, the Epilepsie, and the like. And to this purpose 'tis observable what we find in the Hierusalem Targum on Gen. 2. 14. supposed to be said to the serpent by God, Cùm filii mulieris præcepta legis deseruerint, nec mandata observaverint, tu (that is, the serpent) firmus eris, & percutiens eos in calcaneo eorum ægritudine afficies, When the children of the woman shall forsake the commandements of the law, thou shalt be strong, and shalt strike them on the heel, and inflict sickness upon them.

g. μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι

Ecclesiastical

Ecclesiastical assemblies or farther excluding from civil commerce, is a matter of some question. In favour of the former of these, we may here observe one thing in the Context, that 'tis somewhat which the Apostle had before these words written to them about, ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ, &c. I wrote to you in an Epistle; where there is no enforcing reason to conclude that the Apostle referrs to some former Epistle of his (not now extant, nor anciently mentioned by any) the words being very capable of this other rendring, that in this Epistle he had so written to them, and so he did v. 2. of this Chap. Just as Gal. 1. 9. As we have before said, even now again I say, the word προειρήκαμεν, before said, looking no farther off then to the eighth verse immediately precedent, where that was said that v. 9. is repeated by him. Νυνὶ δὲ ἔγραψα but now I have written v. 11. which may seem to oppose this to some former Epistle, there is no force in that. For the νυνὶ now is not alwaies a note of time, but, as 'tis ordinary amongst us, of transition, thus; When I wrote to you not to converse with fornicators, I meant not the heathen fornicators, but I wrote to you onely in reference to the Christian professors guilty of those sinnes. But whether this be so or no, yet 'tis apparent that v. 11. which referres undoubtedly to this Epistle, the same phrase is used, μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι not to converse with them, which will therefore make it reasonable to explain this phrase by that which is mention'd v. 2. ἐξαρθείη ἐκ μέσου, removing the offender from among them, which is the ordinary phrase for Excommunication (see Note c.) and the brief of the sentence set down v. 3, 4, 5. I have judged, &c. and then there will be no necessity of extending it any farther, then to not joyning with such an one in sacred meetings, excommunicating, delivering up to Satan; and so 2 Thess. 3. 14. μὴ συναναμίγνυσθε, ἵνα ἐντραπῇ, have no fellowship with him, that he may be ashamed, may referre to these censures of the Church inflicted on the ἐχθρικῶν, disobedient, or refractary there. But then a second circumstance in the Context will be observable, that v. 11. where the μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι is repeated again, there is added to it, τούτῳ μηδὲ συνεσθίειν, not to eat with such an one. This is indeed more likely to belong to the interdicting all familiarity of civil commerce, and the rather, because the Jewes thought it unlawfull to eat with the Samaritans, Publicans, and sinners (μὴ συγχρῶνται, they will have nothing to doe with such, and, Why eateth your Master with such? say they to Christ's disciples) and a special example we have of it, 3 Macc. where speaking of the ἀποχωρήσαντες ἐξ ἀυτῶν, desertors, apostates from their Law by any notorious breach, 'tis said, ἐβδελύσσοντο, καὶ ὡς πολεμίους τὸ ἔθνος ἐκείνου, καὶ κοινῆς ἀπηλλοτρίουν καὶ συγχρήσεως ἐτίμων, they expressed a detestation of them, judged them as enemies of the nation, and denied them the civility of common commerce and good usage; and the same is called afterward in that place χωρισμὸς a separating from them, ἀποστροφὴ (though it be corruptly and without sense read κάλας στροφὴ) aversation, and expressed by ἀπεχθῶς ἐφάνησαν, they appeared enemies to them. And 'tis certain that the Jewish נדוי or first degree of Excommunication, being a separation or remotion ad quatuor passus, not suffering any man to come within four paces of him that was under that censure, was an interdiction of civil familiar converse, or of eating with him. And for this there is one farther argument from ver. 10. For if he had meant only Church-assemblies, the caution he there interposeth of not extending it to Heathens had been superfluous, since they who never were within their communion could not be ejected out of it. And so again the reason he gives for their converse with them, for else they must needs goe out of the world, seems to denote a civil commerce, which is here interdicted. It is true indeed that the not-eating with the Fornicator may be also applied no farther then to sacred converse (and accordingly the words may be thus read, μὴ συναναμίγνυσθε τούτῳ, μηδὲ συνεσθίειν, including what is between in a parenthesis, not to joyn, nor eat with such a man) for in those they eat together, συνευωχούμενοι, saith S. Jude, v. 12. feasting together in their agapæ, the common suppers that accompanied the Sacrament in this Epistle chap. 11. 20. and when fornicators, &c. were received or admitted there, S. Jude calls them σπιλάδες spots in their feasts, unfit to be present there, as blemished sacrifices to be offered to God. And if there be any more then this meant by the μηδὲ συνεσθίειν not eating with them, it must probably relate to the particular case of the Church of Corinth at that time, as being then torne asunder with schismes ch. 3. 4. & ch. 11. 1, 8. in which case the censures of the Church being neglected (ch. 11. 31. and so here v. 2.) the Apostle might think fit to prescribe to private Christians this method of shewing their dislikes, by avoiding all civill commerce or familiarity with notorious offenders, and that the rather, in respect of the scandal of such sinnes, that being not practised by the Gentiles there, but detested by them, v. 1. could not be committed by Christians among them, without bringing great reproach on Christianity: And that would not be removed by exclusion from sacred meetings which could not be visible to the Infidels, and therefore might fitly be provided for by this separation from familiar converse or society, an expression of a clear detestation of so foul facts. And so 'tis possible the Apostle might designe his exhortation Rom. 16. 17. to mark such as cause divisions, &c. among them, and avoid them, and 2 Thess. 3. 14. to note him that obeys not S. Paul's orders by Epistle, and have no company with him, as a direction not onely for the publick censures in a quiet Church, where they may be seasonably exercised, but also what private Christians were to doe for the discountenancing of offenders in case of schisme, and of either the neglect or unefficaciousnesse of the censures of the Church. And to that also may be applied that of Christ, Mat. 18. 17. Let him be to thee an heathen, and a publican; it being in this case reasonable for private Christians to restrain themselves towards those who resist all fraternal methods of charity and by outward behaviour to shew a dislike of their contumacy and obduration, especially when an Apostle at a distance shall passe that judgment on any particular man, and the present state of the Church leave no place for expectation of formal censures, the law of Charondas being not unreasonable in this case, Ἀδίκῳ ἀνδρὶ ἢ γυναικὶ μὴ ὁμιλεῖν μηδένα, ἢ ὀνειδίζεσθαι, ὡς ὅμοιον ὄντα, That no man converse with a wicked man or woman, or bring a reproach on himself, as if he were like him. But this is not to be thought necessary, but when it is by the Governour of the Church, as 'twas here by S. Paul, prescribed; nor prudent, but when by so doing we may hope to bring offenders to some sense of their faults. And whensoever it is done, it ought onely to be designed to charitable ends, and not to gratifie a man's own pride or wrath, to expresse animosities or revenges on any.

V. 10. Extortioners] What ἅρπαγες signifies here is somewhat uncertain. That which the other sinnes with which 'tis mention'd encline it to, is, that it denote violence or rapes, forcing or ravishing to uncleanesse, the ἅλωσις 2 Pet. 2. 13. preying like vultures on all that come near them. The literal notation of the word from ἁρπάζω rapio, by which, as by ἁλόω, the Hebrew טרף is rendred. This was the sin of Sodome, forcing of strangers, and even of the Angels when they came into the city to destroy it. And this is it which seems to be meant by the earth's being full of violence, Gen. 6. 11. joyned with the corruptnesse of it before God; for which two there joyned together φθορὰ gether (as 2 Pet. 2. 12. ἅλωσις and φθορὰ taking and corrupting) the word corrupt is used alone ver. 12. which, we know, in the New Testament signifies those pollutions, (see Note on 2 Pet. 1. b. and 2. b.) which probably were the sinne of the old world, a consequent of the sons of God seeing and marrying with the daughters of men, v. 1. (the like as happen'd after on the like occasion, Num. 25. 1.) and they are therefore joyned with Sodome in this matter, 2 Pet. 2. 5, 6. For to that of Uncleanness it is that this whole Chapter belongs, on occasion of πορνεία unlawfull lusts and incest, at the beginning. And to that of violence or ravishing, or using to unnatural sinnes, ἁρπάζειν and ἅρπαγες ordinarily belongs. Thus in Harmenopulus ἐξάβιβ. 5. τιτ. ζ'. (where τὰ τῶ ἁρπαγ& εἰς δημόσιον εἰσκομίσουσι), the goods of the ravisher shall be carried and forfeit to the Exchequer,) the word is used in this sense. So in the second book of the Sibylline Oracles (written, I suppose, by some ancient Christian) with those that had put off all shame are joyned ἁρπασιάοι, forcers, violaters of chastity, and p. 216. with λεκτεγκλόποι, εἰδωλολάτραι, and

Οἷς κακὸς ἐν στέρνοισιν ἔνι μεμαγμένος& οἷος&

(which is in effect all one with πλεονέκται and εἰδωλολάτραι here, inordinate lusters and idolaters) there is joyned ——ἁρπάζοντες, ἀναίδεια θυμὸν ἔχοντες, violent forcers, and persons of impudent lusts, and στέρξυσι κρυφίως secret loves and adulteries, to which the brimstone, the portion of Sodome, should be allotted, ——θείῳ ἀποβάσιν) ὀδυρμῷ.

Ἀκρατὲς ἢ ἀκρασία And thus, I conceive, it is that ἁρπαγὴ and ἀκρασία, violence and incontinence, are joyned together, Mat. 23. 25. and opposed both to καθαρὸν and καθαίζειν, pure and cleansing, v. 26. where S. Luke, c. 11. 36. in Πονηρία stead of ἀκρασία incontinence, hath πονηρία villany or wickedness, as that is used here v. 13. and in Genesis c. 6. 5. in this sense for abominable lusts. The full description

p. 333. of this will be best fetch'd from Strabo, l. 10. setting down the customes, and among them the amours of the Cretans, altogether after this manner, of force and rape, ὑ παιδοῖ καταγράζονται τοὺ ἐρωμένους, ἀλλ' ἁρπαγῇ, they doe not get their beloved youths by perswasion, but by force. The lover, saith he, some three dayes before tells the friends, that he means ἁρπαγὼ ποιεῖσθαι, to commit the rape, and they must not hide the youth or divert him from walking his wonted way; for to doe so is to confesse that he is not worthy of such a lover. The whole manner of it is there set down, not worthy to be here transcribed, by which 'tis plain that this of ἁρπαγὴ rape was among them the ceremony of their Masculа Venus, and very creditable and customary among them, and τοῖς καλοῖς τὼ ἰδέαι, ἢ γενναίων ὀπφαῶν, ἐραστῶν μὴ τυχεῖν αἰσχρὸν νομίζεται, 'twas a shame to any handsome youth of good parentage not to have some such lover, that should take him by violence; which being the heathen custome of this Island of Crete, may well be thought to have given occasion to that direction of S. Paul Tit. 1. 6. that he that were chosen to be Bishop should be such an one who had faithfull children, μὴ ἐν κατηγορίᾳ ἀσωτίας not accused of riot, not guilty of having suffered any such villany as this.

1. Εἰδωλολάτραι Ib. Idolaters] That εἰδωλολάτραι here is not to be restrained to the particular sinne of worshipping pictures or images, will be probable by the rest of the sinnes which are joyned with it, for which a Christian professor is to be excommunicated v. 11. It seems rather to referre either to the joyning in the Idol-feasts, of which the Gnostick hereticks were guilty, or else to those filthy practices so frequent and customary in their mysteries, as prime rites of the heathen false worships, and taken up in a most vile manner by the Gnosticks also. That the word should thus be used, will appear most reasonabe, 1. because of the words used in the Old Testament to signifie an idol; גלול is one which signifies pollution, or filth, by which any man is contaminated, and which is sometimes rendred βδέλυγμα abomination, and the false God or idol meant sometimes when βδέλυγμα abomination is used, as Wisd. 12. 23. referring to those abominable sinnes which those idol-worships were commonly guilty of; and to the same purpose is it that the Hebrew שקץ, abomination or filthinesse, commonly rendred βδέλυγμα or μίασμα, abomination or pollution, is sometimes εἴδωλον idol also. And so saith Lyra on Gen. 21. of the word עזק that it signifies idololatrantem, and coeuntem or lascivientem, idolatry, and any act of uncleanesse or lasciviousnesse. 2dly, Because their heathen worships were so full of these foul sinnes. Thus Wisd. 14. after an enumeration of many other wickednesses in their τελεταὶ and κρύφια μυστήρια, sacrifices and secret mysteries. v. 23. (that Cereris arcanum, the secret of Ceres in Horace, secreta Ceres in Seneca, Hercul. Fur. and Cadmæis orgia condita cistis, in OEteus) he concludes with μιασμὸς, γενέσεως ἐναλλαγὴ, γάμων ἀταξία, μοιχεία καὶ ἀσέλγεια, pollution, inversion of nature, confusion of marriages, adultery and shamelesse uncleaneneſſe, v. 26. and concludes that the worship of nameleſſe idols, or idols not to be named, is the beginning and cause and end of all evil, v. 27. So Jer. 44. 19. when they that dwelt in Ægypt justifie themselves to Jeremy, that they did no harm in their sacrifices to the Queen of heaven, because they did it not secretly, without the privity of their husbands, 'tis clear that there were such night sacrifices used by women, and suspected and disliked by their husbands. Thus 1 Kin. 14. 24. after the mention of idols and groves, it followes that there were Sodomites in the land, doing according to the abomination of the heathens which the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel; which withall notes the particularity of the sinne of the Amorites and other nations, for which they were rooted out, set down more fully Lev. 18. 24, 25, 27, 28. and an expresse threat from heaven v. 29. that Whosoever shall commit any of these abominations shall be cut off from among their people. To which purpose no doubt it was, that the signe of God's covenant with his people was that of Circumcision, σύμβολον ἡδονῶν ἐκλυμῆς, a signe of the excision of pleasures, saith Philo, noting the casting off that περιουσία κακίας superfluity of naughtinesse, which had been practised among those nations; and the same is more then intimated in our Baptisme, the outward part of which is ἀπόθεσις ῥύπε σαρκὸς, the washing away the filth of the flesh, and signifies the forsaking of all the sinfull lusts thereof. So 1 Kin. 15. 12. the Idols and the Sodomites are mention'd together, and 2 Kin. 23. 7. the houses of the Sodomites are cast down. Where there is also mention of the groves for those dark purposes, by which, under the name of Asheroth, Astarte seems to be designed. So when the Babylonians made Succoth Benoth, that signifies the tents of Venus, in which the Virgins were solemnly prostituted to the honor of that false Goddesse, under the title of Mylitta; and so the prostitution of their daughters for the honour of their Gods, which is mentioned not onely by Herodotus l. 1. and Strabo l. 16. but in the Epistle of Jeremie ver. 43. where as the θυμῶσαι πίτυρα (from the Hebrew פתרה apertura) hath an unclean notation in it; so the cords there mention'd are the signes of their foule vowes and obligation to pay their sacrifices before they went. So Isa. 57. 5. You that inflame your selves with Idols under every green tree, noting that prostitution of men and women in the groves about their Idol-Temples, in honour of their false gods. So 1 Mac. 5. 43. the Temple that was at Carnaim is expres'd 2 Mac. 12. 26.

Περιουσία κακίας

Ἀπόθεσις ῥύπε σαρκὸς

to

to be the Temple of Venus, for so Ἀπεργατῖον signifies, אדרעתא or ἀπάργατις being with the addition but of an א all one with דרעתא or Δερκετὼ, and with אדרה Athara, or ἡ ἀστέρκτα, the expression of, and title for Venus. And 2 Mac. 6. 4. when the Heathens profaned the Temple of God and transformed it into the Gentile worships, the first things that is mention'd is their ἀσωτία and κῶμοι, luxury and unclean night-meetings (so the Scholiast on Theocritus explains κωμάζειν ὅτι τὴν νύκτα εἰς τὰς ἑορτὰς ἀφιγμένας ἀφορμῶν) ῥᾳθυμούντων μεθ' ἑταίρων, καὶ ἐν ἱεροῖς ἀσελγέσι βεβόλοις γυναιξὶ πλησιαζόντων, &c. committing all filthinesse in the precincts of the Temple. And so there is more then a trope or figure in it, that Idolatry in the scriptures of the old Testament is so oft expressed by fornication, having so much of the reality of that vice in it, Philo calling the πάθη τῆ ἡδονῆς, sensual inordinate pleasures, εἴδωλα idols, & the heathen idols generally leading into those heathen sinnes also. Thus in the Sibylline Oracles speaking of the Romane lustrations, l. 3. p. 231. we find all the unnatural villanies mention'd, the same that Rom. 1. 26, &c.

Ἄρσην δ' ἄρσενι πλησάσει, σήσουσί τε παῖδας Αἰσχεσὶν ἐν τέκνοι, &c. And therefore in those Oracles p. 264. speaking of the Christians giving over Idolatry (ὧδ' ἔργ' ἀνθρώπων χρύσια &c.) 'tis added κ' ὧδε πρὸς ἀρσενικὰς παῖδας μίγνυνθ' ἁγάγως, Ὅσσά τε Φοίνικές τ', &c. naming all the nations of the heathen world that were guilty of it; and p. 279. exhorting against Idolatry,

Φεύγετε λαβρείας ἀδίκους τῷ ζῶντι λάτρευε,
Μοιχείαν πφύλαξο, καὶ ἄκριτον ἄρσενος εὐνάν.

Avoid unlawfull worships, and serve the living God, keep from adultery and unnaturall mixtures; and l. 4. p. 287. the true piety is set in opposition, as to the Idol-worship, so to Ἀλλοβίης κοίτης πόθος ἀισχέος,

and Ἄρσενος ὕβεις ἀπηχθὴς συγερή τε, all unlawfull and abominable lust; and p. 216. the heathens title is--Λεκτροκλόποι εἰδωλολάτραι, Idolaters that use stollen venery; and so p. 296. and 315.

Μοιχεῖαι παρὰ Ζοὶ, καὶ παίδων μίξις ἄθεσμος, all to the same purpose, concerning the Romanes practice. And infinitely more in other Authors, of the Eleusinia sacra, Cybele's mysteries, Venus's and Flora's feasts among the Gracians. By this may appear the notion of εἰδωλολάτρης Idolater and Idolatry in this place for all those foule sinnes so practised by the worshippers of false Gods, and from them taken up and improved by the Gnosticks. So Col. 3. 5. fornication, uncleanness, πάθος, evill concupiscence and inordinate desire, ἥτις ἐστὶν εἰδωλολατρία, which is Idolatry, where Saint Cyprian, Ep. 51. will have ἥτις referre to all the foregoing sins, for which the wrath of God comes, &c. So Eph. 5. 5. Every fornicator, and unclean person, and πλεονέκτης inordinate luster, who is an idolater. To this may be referr'd that of Maimonides, More Neboch. l. 3. c. 37. speaking of the unnaturall sins of the Gentiles, and instancing in one of them, Propter hoc, saith he, prohibitæ sunt commixtiones, scilicet insitio arboris in aliam speciem, ut elongemur à causis Idolatriæ & fornicationum, making Fornication, in that notion of sins against nature, to be all one with Idolatry, or that which Idolaters freely practised. This may be also the notation of Idolaters, when the Apostle saith, 1 Cor. 10. 6. Be not ye idolaters, as were some of them, as it is written, they sate down to eat and drinke, and rose to play, for the Greek παίζειν there rendred to play, may referre in that place to those sins of uncleanness; see Note on that place. But no question, this is the meaning of ἀδίμητοι εἰδωλολατρεῖαι abominable, nefarious idolatries, 1 Pet. 4. 3. as appeares by the ἀσέλγειαι just before, that is, the τὰ παρὰ φύσιν unnaturall sins of uncleanesse, in Phavorinus, and the ἀνέκνυτος ἀσωτίας v. 4. confusion of sexes, and all kindes of villany not to be named, as those words denote; see Note on that place. And so most manifestly in this Epistle c. 6. 9. where fornicators, idolaters, adulterers, effeminate, abusers of themselves with mankinde, &c. are joyned together in the same matter. And Gal. 5. 20. where among the workes of the flesh are in the front, adultery, fornication, uncleanesse, lasciviousnesse, idolatry, &c. all clearly of a making, if this notion of idolatry be accepted. And Rev. 21. 8. where among the severalls, to which fire and brimstone belong, (the portion of Sodome) we have ἐβδελυγμένοι abominable (in the sense that c. 17. 4, and 7. βδελύγματα and ἀκάθαρτα τῆς πορνείας abominations and uncleanesse of fornication, are put together) fornicators, idolaters, &c. and c. 22. 15. fornicators, idolaters, &c. And this sure was it that Saint John referr'd to in his first Epistle c. 5. 21. when he perswades his little children, his new converts, to keep themselves from idols, that is, from those Gnostick practices, which had overrun all Asia, as appeares by the Epistles to the Churches there, Rev. 2. and 3. Thus in Polycarp's Epistle, He that abstaines not from unnatural lusts (under the name of πλεονεξία, which is there mistranslated covetousnesse; see Note on Rom. 1. h.) ab Idololatria coinquinabitur, & tanquam inter Gentes judicabitur, shall be infected by Idolatry, and judged as among the Gentiles. And so when Bede on Mat. 5. 32. saith of fornication, that by that word is not onely understood Adultery, but omnis concupiscentia vel avaritia (for πλεονεξία again) vel Idololatria, every concupiscence, inordinate lust or idolatry. And all these uses of the word Idolatry in the New Testament, distinctly referring to the Gnosticks practices, who, as they were content to be present at the idol-sacrifices, making it an indifferent thing (rather then be persecuted by the heathens) so they practised all these heathen villanies in the highest manner imaginable. I shall adde but one testimony more to this purpose, that of the Illiberitane Councell, Can. 2. Flamines, qui post fidem lavacri & regenerationis sacrificaverunt, eo quòd geminaverint scelera, accedente homicidio, vel triplicaverint facinus, cohærente mœchiâ, placuit, &c. The priests that, after the receiving the faith, and being baptized, have sacrificed, in respect that they have doubled their sins by the accession of homicide (the bloodshed in the Gladiators prizes, which were ordinarily joyned with their heathen sacrifices) or trebled them by the adherence of adultery, or sinnes of uncleanness, 'tis decreed, &c. where, it seemes, these followers of the Gnosticks, that, after the receiving of the Christian faith, sacrificed as heathen priests, undertook the office of their Flamens, lay under a treble guilt, worship of false Gods, bloodshed, and uncleanesse also.

V. 11. Railer] That λοίδορος signifies a railer or opprobrious, contumelious speaker, there is no doubt; but that it signifies reproachfull actions, as well as words, there is as little question, and therefore Hesychius that renders it κακολογῶν in reference to words, renders it ὑβριστὴς a contumelious person, it may be, in respect of actions also. And then it may be here another notation of the heathen Gnosticks sins of uncleanesse, which in all languages have been civilly expres'd by words that note contumely or reproach. So in the Sibylline Oracles,

Ἄρσενος ὕβεις ἀπηχθὴς τε συγερή τε, the contumelious using of mankinde, abominable and base. So when the Apostle calls them ἄτιμα πάθη; infamous, dishonourable. So to abuse or defame, in English, is ordinarily taken for these sins of uncleanesse committed on any, and in the Hebrew dialect, to mock (and παίζειν and ἐμπαίζειν, see Note on 1 Cor. 10. c.) as of Joseph, He hath brought in an Hebrew to mock us, Gen.

k. Λοίδορος

Ἀτιμα πάθη

Gen. 39. 14. and so saith Lyra of צחק to mock (mention'd Note h.) that it notes ludentem & coeuntem, mocking and defiling. And thus sure it may signifie in this place; and so all that are mention'd here will be reducible to the same head, of sins of Uncleanesse or Incontinence, save only that of Drunkennesse, which, as another heathen rite, and sensuall sin, is fitly joyned with them. But if this be not it, it may then, according to the ordinary use of the word for reproachfull speeches, refer to the uncharitableness of the Gnosticks in accusing the Christians, and so stirring up persecutions against them.

l. V. 12. For what have I to doe——] Some doubt there is of the reading and rendring the words from this place, to the end of the chapter. Theophylact tells us of some that set the point after ἐχὶ, and then began a new sense without an interrogation. And then the reading must be, what have I to do to judge those that are without? No, Judge ye those that are within, adding as in a parenthesis, (but those that are without God judgeth) and ye shall take away the evil from among you, which best agrees to the ϗ (and, not therefore) in the Greek, and to the reading of Chrysostome and Theophylact, who read ἐξαρεῖτε τὸ πονηρὸν, ye shall remove the evil thing, (not ἐξαιρεῖτε ὁ πονηρὸν remove the evil or wicked person) from among you, referring, * say they, to the passage in the Old Testament, Deut. 13. 5. and 22. 21. And accordingly Theodoret and the vulgar read τὸ πονηρὸν the evil. For this later part, that this reading and rendring is to be adhered to, there will be little doubt to any that considers how evidently these last words ϗ ἐξαρεῖτε—— and ye shall remove the evil from among you, refer to the phrase in the Old Testament, Deut. 22. 21. (though there the Rome Edition reads corruptly ὁ πονηρὸν) all the question is of the former part, which depends on the pointing of the ἐχὶ, of which Theophylact addes, τινὲς δὲ συναπτῶς, ϗ ἐρωτηματικῶς, some read it conjoyned with what followes, and by way of interrogation, as we do, and all the Copyes that now we meet with. And that I preferre this reading, beside the consent of Copyes, these are my reasons. 1. Because the Context agrees very well to it, the thing that the Apostle now hath in hand, being to disclaime meddling with heathens, in the beginning of the verse, upon which that which is here added, ἐχὶ τοὺ ἔσω ὑμεῖς κρίνετε, τοὺς δὲ ἔξω θεὸς κρίνει; if it be read all in one interrogation, Do not ye judg those that are within, but those that are without God judgeth? will follow, & cohere very commodiously; for thus it will ly. I have nothing to do to judge those that are without, but as ye, that is, the Church, use to censure those that are within, who belong to your cognizance, so for all others they must be referred and left to Gods tribunal: (many speeches of this kind are taken notice of, Note on Matt. 9. d.) 2dly, Because in the former reading, ἐχὶ is made an answer to τί, which I believe to be without example, the question by τί being so strong and familiar a negative, that generally there is not any negation added to it, and if there were, οὐδὲν would be it most regularly. 3dly, Because ἐχὶ is very frequently an interrogative forme, and οὐκ and μὴ, οὐδαμῶς and μηδαμῶς, the formes of answering the question, and that argues the necessity of retaining the second reading. The onely difficulty remaining is how ϗ ἐξαρεῖτε, and ye shall take away the evil from among you, shall fitly connect with this sense. For that ϗ should be rendred therefore is not very reasonable, and that also which supposeth the right reading to be ἐξαρεῖτε ὁ πονηρὸν, take away the evil person, not ἐξαρεῖτε τὸ πονηρὸν, ye shall take away the evil thing, which we have already with great reason pitch'd on for the true. The probablest way to salve this difficulty is, either to affixe these last words of the Chapter, and of this matter, as a testimony out of the Old Testament, to conclude, and to belong to the whole business of this Chapter, that by their obeying his directions in it, they should thus put away the evil from among them, and secure themselves from the punishments which else might fall on them, among whom notorious sinners were thus permitted to live impunè as it had oft fallen out among the Jewes: Or else to put the whole 12th verse, and the beginning of the 13th, in a parenthesis (and not the beginning of the 13th onely) and then to read it in sense thus, from v. 11. But now I have written to you not to accompany, or so much as to eat or use any familiar converse with any unclean or drunken professor, and by so doing ye shall put away the evil from among you: secure your selves from the judgements, which else you have reason to fear will come upon you, then adding the parenthesis in its due place, to give an account of his restraining these censures to professors or Christians onely. And this seemes the fairest way of composing all difficulty.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase.

1. DAre any of you, having * a matter against another, goe to Law before the unjust, and not before the Saints?]

1. When there is any matter of controversie betwixt you, about your worldly goods, I heare that you implead one another, (see Rom. 3. note b.) before the heathen tribunals, and use not that method prescribed by Christ to Christians Mat. 18. 15. How dareth any Christian doe thus?

2. Doe ye not know that the Saints shall judge the world? and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy † [a] to judge the smallest matters?]

2. You cannot but know, that in the great final judgement of all the world, the Saints of God shall bear God company in judging the wicked: and if Christians shall then by God be vouchsafed that honour, to have any thing to doe in matters of so much higher importance, is there any reason they should be deemed unworthy to be intrusted with the judging of worldly differences, which are much inferior to those of adjudging of men's eternall being?

3. Know ye not that we shall judge angels? * how much more things that pertain to this life?]

3. 'Tis certain that God's children, when crowned by him, shall pronounce sentence against the evill spirits; and shall they not be thought fit to decide a controversie about an ordinary trespasse among men?

4. † If then ye have judgement of things pertaining to this life, * set them to judge who are least esteemed in the Church.]

4. If therefore there fall out betwixt you any matters of controversie concerning the matters of common life, which are to be brought to Judicatures, or will not otherwise be composed, and if ye doe despise the Governours of your Churches (which, since these dissensions are come in, are quite out of esteem among you) so farre, that ye doe not think fit to stand to their sentences or decisions, yet sure ye have all reason to referre it to the simplest and meanest Christians, or even to set them in the tribunal, rather then carry your controversie before the Gentile Courts.

5. I speak this to your shame; † Is it so that there is not a wise man amongst you? no not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?]

5. My mentioning the meanest and most despicable among you, is to make you ashamed of your unreasonablenesse in supposing (as by going to heathen courts, ye must be interpreted

† Is there so never a wise man, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστι σοφὸς preted to doe) that there is no one Chriſtian fit for this employment, that is, that there is not one man of them that hath underſtanding enough to arbitrate an ordinary buſineſſe between fellow-Chriſtians, whoſe inclinableneſs to peace is to be preſumed of, and then that muſt needs work ſomewhat toward the pacification.

6. But one Chriſtian imleads his fellow Chriſtian, and that before Gentiles.

b. 7. It is not ſo well, that you goe to law at all; it were the part of a more excellent magnanimous Chriſtian ſpirit, to be content to loſe ſomewhat that were his own, to bear ſome injuries, rather then to goe to law upon every treſpaſſe.

7. Now therefore, there is utterly * [b] a fault among you, † becauſe ye goe to law one with another: Why doe ye not take wrong? * why do ye not rather ſuffer your ſelves to be defrauded?]

* a defect

* Why are ye not rather defrauded? Διατί οὐχὶ μᾶλλον ἀποστερεῖσθε;

8. But ſome of you are ſo farre from this excellent Chriſtian temper, that you are ready to injure others, even your fellow-Chriſtians, and, ſo ye may gain to your ſelves, care not how you deprive others.

8. Nay, you doe wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.]

9. This is abſolutely inconſiſtent with the Chriſtians duty or reward; Never doe you flatter your ſelves with a beliefe of the contrary, nor permit the falſe teachers that are crept in among you, to give you any hope of it: And as for matters of injuſtice, ſo for all your other Gnoſtick practices of uncleanneſſe (ſee notes on c. 5. a, h, i.) and unnaturall luſt.

9. Know ye not that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the kingdom of God? be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abuſers of themſelves with mankinde,]

10. Neither they that are guilty of them, nor of any other injuſtice, ſhall, without reformation, ever be capable of inheriting the crown which is by Chriſt promiſed to Chriſtians.

10. Nor theeves, nor † covetous, nor drunkards, nor * revilers, nor † extortioners ſhall inherit the kingdome of God.]

11. And ſuch ſins as theſe were ordinary among you in time of your heathen ſtate: but now you have given up your names to Chriſtianity, which denounceth judgement againſt all theſe; your baptiſm is a renouncing of them all, your ſanctification by the Spirit directly contrary to it, your juſtification by what Chriſt hath ſuffered and done for you (ſee note on Mat. 7. b.) utterly incompatible with ſuch impurities and injuſtices, ſpoken of either in the laſt or this chapter.

11. And ſuch were ſome of you: but * ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified, but ye are juſtified † in the name of our Lord Jeſus, and by the ſpirit of our God.]

12. And whereas your teachers, to allure you to ſenſuall practices, tell you firſt that all meat is freely to be eaten, and ſo ſooth you up in luxury, and then proceed and perſwade you that uſe of venery is as neceſſary for your bodies, and ſo as lawfull, as eating of meat is; I ſhall tell you firſt, that ſuppoſing them lawfull, yet it will befit a Chriſtian to abſtain from many things that are not utterly unlawfull; and ſecondly, that if indifferent things begin to get a dominion over any, if men, upon conceit that meats are lawfull, come to be enſlaved to their bellies (as of the Gnoſticks 'tis affirmed, that they ſerve their bellies, and that they are lovers of pleaſures more then of God) this is then abſolutely unlawfull.

12. All things are lawfull * unto me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawfull for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.]

* But the πάντα μοι

13. 'Tis true that meats are by God and nature appointed for the uſe of men, and that the body of man here in this life hath abſolute neceſſity of them: And yet to take off our hearts from them, we may alſo conſider that in the next life, which is a ſpirituall life, this eating and deſiring of meat ſhall be taken away, and therefore even here we ſhould keep the fleſh in ſuch a ſubordination to the ſpirit, that we may be able to deny our ſelves even lawfull pleaſures ſometimes, eſpecially when any occaſion makes it more expedient, v. 12. But then for fornication (whatſoever your former heathen principles, or preſent falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks, teach you) that is no ſuch lawfull or indifferent thing, your bodies are to be conſecrated to God either in lawfull wedlock, or in chaſte ſingle life, and by being kept pure here, muſt be made capable of riſing to everlaſting life with Chriſt hereafter. v. 14.

13. Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats; but God ſhall † deſtroy both it and them. Now the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body.]

† take away, καταργήσει

14. And then God, that raiſed up Chriſt's pure ſinleſſe body out of the grave, and hath made it a ſpirituall body, ſhall alſo doe the ſame for us, though we lye down in the grave alſo.

14. And God hath both raiſed up the Lord, and will alſo raiſe up us by his own power.]

15. And this one conſideration may have force on you. Your bodies expect to riſe with Chriſt, as members with the head: ye muſt not then in any reaſon pollute a member of Chriſt, a devoted conſecrated perſon, by ſuch unclean embraces.

15. Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Chriſt? ſhall I then take the members of Chriſt, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.]

16. That which was ſaid at the inſtitution of marriage in paradiſe, that the man and the wife become one body, concludes, that the fornicator makes himſelf one body with a whore.

16. What, know ye not that he which † is joyned to an harlot, is one body? for * two (ſaith he) ſhall be one fleſh.]

† cleaveth κολλώμενος,
* they two, οἱ δύο

17. As on the other ſide, he that keeps cloſe to Chriſt's commandements, and ſo cleaves to him, Deut. 10. 20. hath a ſpirituall union with him, minds the ſame things that he minds, and ſo is very farre from theſe carnall baſe joyes, in which all the Gnoſticks religion conſiſts.

17. But he that † is joyned unto the Lord, is one ſpirit.]

† cleaveth, v. 16.

18. Be ſure therefore that ye keep your ſelves farre removed from that ſinne. Moſt other ſins are committed againſt God, or the neighbour; but ſinnes of uncleanneſſe are againſt one's ſelfe, a defiling of his fleſh, a polluting of that which by chaſtity and ſingle life is ſet apart to be a temple of God, a place of ſanctity and purity. v. 29.

18. Flee fornication. Every ſin that a man doth, is without the body: but he that committeth fornication ſinneth againſt his own body.]

19. Your bodies are, by your being Chriſtians, conſecrated to the ſervice of his Spirit, (and the Governours of the Church, of which ſort the inceſtuous perſon is thought to be, (ſee c. 5. 2.) ſet apart in all purity to diſcharge that function, to which they are conſecrated by receiving the holy Ghoſt.) This benefit of the Spirit ye have received from God, and it is an engagement to you to think your own bodies are not now at your own diſpoſall, to uſe them as you pleaſe (as in your ſtate of Gentiliſme, or without that engagement ye might be tempted to imagine.)

20. For God hath pai'd dear for the purchaſe of you, hath given his ſonne out of his boſome, and his very Spirit, to this purpoſe, to purchaſe unto himſelf a peculiar people, zealous of good works, by this price making purchaſe of our bodies as well as our ſoules, and ſo engaging us to ſerve and glorifie him in both, and not leaving either of them at liberty for us to diſpoſe of as we pleaſe.

20. For ye are bought with a price, therefore glorifie God in your body, and in your ſpirit, which are God's.]

a. κριτήρια

V. 2. To judge] That the word κριτήρια signifies not matters, but places of judicature, appears by Hesychius (Κριτήριον, δικαστήριον) and authors and Glossaryes generally; and so in the sacred style, Susan. 49. where we read, the place of judgement. So Judg. 5. 10. sit in judgement, and Dan. 7. 10. the Judgement was set, that is, the Court of Judges. And Jam. 2. 6. κριτήρια are distinctly and necessarily rendred Judgement-seats. And so here the Arabick interpreter renders it by words which are thus in Latine, Subsellia Judicii ad mundum pertinentis, seates of judgement belonging to the world.

b. ἥττημα

V. 7. A fault] The word ἥττημα is used Rom. 11. 12. and is opposed to πλήρωμα fulnesse, noting there the great paucity of the Jewish converts to Christianity. Accordingly, though it be here applyed to another matter, yet in the same notion it is a going lesse, or an inferiour degree, which in respect of that which is to be expected of the higher proficients in Christianity, is a defect or failing, a low pitch for any Christian, but not such as can absolutely and universally be counted a sin, as not being against any precept. Contending, or going to law, for light inconsiderable matters, is forbidden by Christ, Mat. 5. 40. but not absolutely, all contending for the recovering or defending ones own, when the matter is of weight or importance. Onely they that have gotten a superiority and contempt of the world, they will goe higher then that strict precept, and rather endure considerable losses, then engage themselves in such disquiets of minde and turmoiles, as such contentions use to bring with them: and to this is to be applyed that which here followes in this place, why doe ye not rather suffer injury and defraudation? that is, it is more Christian and excellent to doe so. And in this respect, or comparatively to this higher vertue, the going to law at all though it be not a sin, ἁμάρτημα or πταίσμα, yet it is ἥττημα a diminution, a lesse degree of Christian perfection; and that is all that is meant in this place. As for the word ὅλως although that be left out in the Kings MS. which reads ἥττημα ὑμῖν ἐστι it is a diminution for you, yet it may be well retained, and note, that this defect was universall among them. See Note on c. 5. a.

CHAP. VII.

Paraphrase.

1. NOw concerning the things whereof ye wrote unto me: It is good for a man not to touch a woman.]

1. Now in answer to that particular in your letter, which (on occasion of the Gnostick doctrine of marriage being from the devill, &c.) seems with some reason to preferre single life before marriage, I thus far acknowledge, that, for them that can live chaste and pure without marrying, it is better or more commendable that they doe so.

† but for fornication, ἀλλὰ διὰ τὰς πορνείας

2. † Nevertheless, to avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.]

2. But for the avoiding of all kindes of uncleannesse or pollution, it is generally most safe and fit, that men and women should betake themselves to the conjugall state.

* the kindnesse which is due

3. Let the husband render unto the wife * a [due benevolence,] and likewise also the wife unto the husband.

3. All acts of conjugal love, a.

4. The wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband; and likewise also the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife.

† by compact, ἐκ συνθήκης

5. Defraud you not one the other, except it be † with consent for a time, that ye may * give your selves to fasting and prayer, and come together again, that Satan tempt you not † [b] for your incontinency.]

5. By mutuall consent for some time, particularly, that ye may have a vacancy for duties of devotion, fasting, &c. wherein it was usual to abstain from those things which are lawfully enjoyed at other times (see note on Mat. 6. h.) which being past, ye may then take care to prevent those dangers that may attend long abstinencies, for want of strength to resist those temptations that Satan may take advantage to present to you, or cast in your way. b.

* be at leasure for, σχολάσητε † by reason of your not being able to contain

6. But I speak this † by [c] permission, and not of commandment.]

6. What I thus say, v. 2, 3, 4, 5. I say onely by way of counsel, what appears to me to be best for men, generally speaking, all being not able to contain, but herein I am farre from laying any precept on any to marry. c.

† by way of advice, not by way of precept,

7. For I would that all men were even as I my self: but every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.]

7. For I would rather desire or advise all men to continue unmarried as I doe; but that will not, I suppose, be best for every one, because every one is not fitly qualified with the gift of continence, to undertake that more honorable pitch, and such a man may have some other speciall excellence, whereby to glorifie God.

8. I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I.]

8. It is more worthy their designe and endeavour, either to live unmarried, or when the wife is dead, to abstain from second marriages, for which ye have me for your example.

* have not power over themselves, see note b. † to be on fire πυροῦσθαι

9. But if they * cannot contain, let them marry; for it is better to marry then † to burn.]

9. But if they have not that experience of their own strength and ability to abstain, and preserve chastity, which may encourage them to this, let them marry in God's name: It is infinitely better to doe so, and preserve conjugall chastity, then by rejecting the use of that remedy to be enflamed with burning vehement desires, perhaps to break out into unnaturall practices (see Rom. 1. 27. Jude 11.)

* I give warning, παραγγέλλω † be separated, χωρισθῆναι * be separated χωρισθῇ

10. And unto the married * I command, yet not I, but the Lord: Let not the wife † depart from her husband:]

10. But to them that are married, 'tis not my caution or commandement, but Christ's, that the woman be not separated from her husband.

11. But and if she * depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife.]

11. Or, if upon just cause, that is, in case of fornication, she be put away from her husband, let her either remain single, or use means to gain the pardon and affection of her husband again; and for the husband, let not him in any case, but that wherein Christ allowes it, the case of fornication, put away his wife.

† For the rest, τοῖς λοιποῖς

12. † But to the rest speak I, not the Lord, If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away.]

12. But in answer to the other parts of your letter, ver. 1, 6, 8, 10. or, For other things things I give mine own judgment, not any precept of Chriſt's. 'Tis certain, and by the precept of Chriſt (which commands not to put away a wife, but for cauſe of fornication) to be reſolved neceſſary, that if any Chriſtian husband have an heathen wife, and ſhe have a mind to live with him, he ſhould not put her away, unbelief being no ſufficient cauſe of divorce.

13. And ſo in like manner for the Chriſtian wife that is married to an Infidel, if he be willing to live with her, let her by no means ſeparate from him.

13. And the woman which hath an husband that believeth not, and if he be pleaſed to dwell with her, let her not leave him.]

d. 14. And beſide the prohibition of Chriſt, which obliges to this, other advantages there are worth conſidering; For it ſometimes hath come to paſſe, and there is great reaſon to hope it, that the heathen husband may be converted by the Chriſtian wife living with him, and ſo the wife by the husband: and this one conſideration is the reaſon why the young children of Chriſtians are admitted to baptiſme before they come to knowledge, becauſe by their living in the family with Chriſtian parents, theſe children may be brought up in the faith, and kept from heathen pollutions (and the Church requiring and receiving promiſe from the parents, doth conſequently preſume they will) and by the ſame reaſon it is that the children of the heathen are not ſo admitted.

14. For the unbelieving husband * is ſanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife † is ſanctified by the husband; d elſe were your children unclean, but now are they holy.]

* hath been ſanctified, ἡγίασται † hath been ſanctified

15. But now the thing not ſtated or medled with by Chriſt, and therefore now promiſed to be defined by me ver. 12. is this, that in caſe the infidel will not live with the believer unleſſe ſhe will forſake her religion, ſhe is not then ſo enſlaved or ſubjected ſo farre, that ſhe may doe acts prejudicial to her religion, and to the betraying thereof, for that end that ſhe may continue with her husband, but ſhe remains blameleſſe, if ſhe remain ſeparate from him, upon ſuch his deſertion. But yet above all things, that which is moſt to be obſerved is, that the believing party doe the utmoſt that is poſſible to keep peace and agreement with the other, not to fall out at all, or if they doe, to repaire the breach and be reconciled again; nay farther, not to marry again, as long as there remains any hope of returning or reconciliation.

15. But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a ſiſter is not * under bondage in ſuch caſes: but God hath called us to peace.]

* inſlaved, δεδούλωται

16. For 'tis poſſible that the Chriſtian wife may uſe ſome means to work upon the infidel husband, or the Chriſtian husband on the wife, ſo as to bring him or her to repentance and the faith of Chriſt, and in intuition and hope of this any difficulties would be undergone: but when this poſſibility ceaſeth, as in caſe that the heathen party deſert, or will not live with the Chriſtian unleſſe he or ſhe deſert the faith of Chriſt, then 'tis evident that this hope ceaſeth, and in this caſe the Chriſtian party is free from thoſe obſervances, v. 15.

16. For what knoweſt thou, O wife, whether thou ſhalt ſave thy husband? or how knoweſt thou, † O man, whether thou ſhalt ſave thy wife?]

† O huſband, ἄνερ

e. 17. Onely according to the lot that any man hath befaln him, if it be with an infidel wife or the like, let him be content with it, and doe as much good in it as he can, and not think himſelf privileged by his being a Chriſtian to throw it off. And this every where is my doctrine, and I deſire it be univerſally reſolved on in all Chriſtian Churches.

17. * e But as God hath diſtributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, ſo let him walk, and ſo ordain I in all Churches.]

*Onely εἰ μὴ

f. 18. If one which hath been circumciſed be converted to Chriſtianity, let him contentedly continue in it, let him never trouble himſelf to get off that mark from his fleſh (as ſome did:) as on the other ſide, he that is not circumciſed when he is converted, need not receive circumciſion (as ſome required of them, Act. 15. 1.)

18. Is any man called being circumciſed? let him not † f become uncircumciſed: is any man called in uncircumciſion? let him not be circumciſed.]

† uſe means to become

19. For ſuch outward things as theſe on either part, are no part of Chriſtianity, but the obſervation of the precepts of Chriſt is all in all: ſee Gal. 5. 6. and 6. 15.

19. Circumciſion is nothing, and uncircumciſion is nothing; but the keeping of the commandements of God.]

20, 21. In what condition of life ſoever a man is, when he is converted to Chriſtianity, let him contentedly continue in it, and not think that Chriſtian religion frees a man from any obligation that lay upon him before, for that is to make Chriſtian liberty a pretence for covetouſneſſe, or luſts, or ſecular advantages (ſee 1 Tim. 6. 5.) if either the being a Chriſtian might manumit a ſervant, or free an husband or wife from former obligations. Heretherefore that being a bond-man is converted to Chriſtianity, muſt not think it any diſparagement to his Chriſtianity, that he continues a ſervant ſtill, nor be ſolicitous of changing his condition. Yet this is not ſo to be underſtood, but that if, by any fair regular means, he can obtain his freedome, he may then make uſe of them, and preferre liberty before ſervitude; for ſo he might have done if he had never been Chriſtian.

20. Let every man abide in the ſame calling, wherein he was called.

21. Art thou called being a ſervant? * care not for it: † but if thou mayeſt be made free, uſe it rather.]

* take no care, μὴ σοι μελέτω
† but yet alſo if, ἀλλ' εἰ καί

22. For he that being in the condition of a ſervant is converted to Chriſtianity, doth by his converſion become a freeman in reſpect of Chriſt; not that he ceaſeth to be a ſervant to his former maſter, or reaps any ſecular advantage thereby, but his advantages are ſpiritual, to wit, that by being a Chriſtian he is now delivered from many ſervitudes, that of ſinne, &c. that lie upon all others, and to live in Chriſt's family, as one of his freemen, though in reſpect of the world he continue as a ſervant; and ſo on the other ſide, he that is a freeman and turns Chriſtian, becomes thereby a ſervant of Chriſt, undertaking obedience to his commands, though he loſe not his liberty in the world by that means. (By which 'tis clear that Chriſt meddles not with the ſecular government of the world, nor changes any man's outward condition by his becoming Chriſtian.)

22. * For he that is called in the Lord, being a ſervant, is the Lord's freeman: likewiſe alſo he that is called being free, is Chriſt's ſervant.]

* For the ſervant which is called in the Lord, Ὁ γὰρ ἐν κυρίῳ κλη θεὶς δοῦλος

g. 23. On the other ſide they that have bought out their liberty, and obtained manumiſſion, having been formerly ſervants to heathens, let them not ſell themſelves again, or revert voluntarily into that condition of ſlavery, but preferre liberty rather, ver. 21.

23. || Ye are g bought with a price, † be not ye the ſervants of men.]

|| Are ye bought or redeemed
† be not ye made μὴ γίνεσθε

24. And ſo ſtill, as he was when he was converted, ſo ſet him ſtill abide; let not his being a Chriſtian move him out of his ſtate, or make him leſſe, but rather more contented with it.

24. Brethren, let every man wherein he is called, therein abide with God.]

25. For your other queſtion concerning virgins marrying at ſuch a time as this, or of thoſe that are betrothed, whether they ſhould be bound to conſummate their marriage or no, I muſt ſay again, that I have no command of Chriſt to build my anſwer upon; yet I ſhall again give you my opinion in it, as an honeſt faithfull man, with all uprightneſſe.

25. Now concerning virgins, I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my * judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithfull.]

* opinion γνώμην

26. Firſt then my opinion is, that 'tis beſt in reſpect of the diſtreſſes that are daily to be look'd for on Chriſtians, I ſay that 'tis beſt for men and women (ſuppoſing them not contracted) to continue unmarried.

26. † I ſuppoſe therefore that this is good for the preſent diſtreſſe, I ſay that it is good for a man ſo to be.]

† I think this then to be good, becauſe of the neceſſity approaching, to wit good, Νομίζω οὖν τοῦτο καλὸν ὑπάρχειν διὰ τὴν ἐνεστῶσαν

27. But if thou art engaged or betrothed to a woman, this is no excuſe for thee to ſeek to get looſe again (for that cannot be done ſo as to be free to marry another, as long as ſhe lives.) All that I ſay is, that it is not now the prudenteſt way to think of marrying, if thou art not already engaged.

27. Art thou bound to a * wife? ſeek not to be looſed: art thou † looſed from a wife? ſeek not a wife.]

* woman γυναικὶ † free from a woman λέλυσαι ἀπὸ γυναικός

28. But

28. But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned: nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you.]

28. Yet not so, that if thou dost, 'tis a sin to marry, or that the virgin that now marries commits any sinne; onely (in such times as these) the married state is likely to be fullest of trouble, and therefore my kindness to you makes me perswade you not to marry.

29. But this I say, brethren, * the time is short; it remaineth that both they that have wives, be as † though they had none;]

*29. But by the way let me tell you, that within a short time now 'twill come to passe, that they that have wives shall be as they that have none, all in great and equall dangers;

30. And they that weep, as * though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as † though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as * though they possessed not;

31. And they that use this world, as † not abusing it, for the fashion of this world passeth away.]

30, 31. And they that weep for the losse of husband or wife, as those that have lost neither, and those that rejoice for being newly married, as those that are not married at all; and rich men and purchasers, as those that keep nothing at all for themselves; those that deal in the world, as those that are wholly taken off from it: for as a scene which is turned and shewes a new face, so doth now the fashion of this world begin to appear, the times are turning into very troublesome.

32. But I would have you * without carefulnesse: he that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord.]

32. All the advantage therefore I wish you, is to be as uncompounded as may be, that you may have the lesse perplexity before-hand, and be able to attend the service of God, more then you would be if you were married. He that is unmarried hath but one obligation of care, how he may serve God most acceptably.

33. But he that is married careth for the things of the world, how he may please his wife. †]

33. But the married man hath another obligation of care lying on him, viz. the pleasing of his wife, and by this means he is divided and distracted.

34. h There is difference also between a wife and a virgin: † the unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and spirit; but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.]

34. The widow and virgin being both unmarried, have no diversion; nothing else to doe but to serve God, and to take care to render themselves acceptable to him; whereas domesticall affairs are part of the married womans care, and it is part of her calling to be very carefull to please her husband.

35. And this I speak for your own profit, not that I may * cast a snare upon you, but † for that which is comely, and ‡ that you may attend upon the Lord without distraction.]

35. But all this while I speak onely of that which is expedient for you in respect of worldly convenience, not as if marriage were in any kinde unlawfull, but that if you can contain from marriage, and if no such unfitnesse be in it, as is mention'd v. 36. you may have the advantage of the lesse distractions in attending the service of God.

36. But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely toward his virgin, if she * passe the flower of her age, and need so requite, let him doe what he will, he sinneth not; let them marry.]

36. As for the last part of your question, that of being betrothed, that, I confesse, is a circumstance which will much alter the case; For in case a man be betrothed, but not married (see note on Mat. 1. f.) to a virgin, and she begin to grow in yeares, so that if (in respect of the present condition of the times approaching) marriage be deserr'd, 'tis necessary that she must passe her prime, in this case I lay no restraint upon him, so much as in prudence, let him doe what he likes best, let them marry.

37. Nevertheless he that † standeth stedfast in his heart, having no necessity, but hath power over his own will, and hath * so decreed in his heart, that he will keep his virgin, doth well.]

37. But he that hath made a firm resolution to stay a while, and finds himself able to doe so, and neither from any necessity arising from himself, nor from the condition of the virgin to whom he is betrothed, is any way obliged to present marriage, but hath free power in all respects to doe what he will, and hereupon judges it fit and determins to keep his virgin, that is, not yet to marry her for a time, but at last in a better season to doe so, this is a very commendable resolution.

38. †So then he that giveth her in marriage doth well: but he that giveth her not in marriage doth better.]

38. So that the conclusion is, that he that marries, even at this time, doth that which is absolutely lawfull, and in the case mention'd v. 36. expedient also: and again he that in the case set v. 37. doth deferre, and for a time abstain from marriage, makes a more prudent choise in the respects forementionn'd v. 35. of attending the better on the service of God, and for avoiding of distraction.

39. The wife is bound by the law, as long as her husband liveth: but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will, onely in the Lord.]

39. As for her that is once married, she is by that obliged to her husband as long as he lives, but if he dye, 'tis absolutely lawfull for her to marry another, so that in the doing of it there be no other circumstance that make it unlawfull, or so that considerations of piety be taken in in the doing of it, and not onely carnall desires gratified thereby.

40. But she is happier if she so abide in my judgement: and I think also that I have the spirit of God.]

40. But 'tis more for her earthly advantages to continue unmarried, and more convenient toward the serving of God without distraction v. 35. according to my judgement, and I think the spirit of God guides me in making this judgement, though I have no expresse precept for it.

Annotations on Chap. VII.

2. Ἴδιον

V. 3. Due benevolence] What εὔνοια here signifies will be best conjectured by the use of the Hebrew עֹנָה Exod. 21. 10. (mentioned after food and clothing) that must not be denied the wife. The Septuagint render it ὁμιλίαν αὐτῆς, accompanying with her; the Hebrew word also signifies εὔνοια benevolence, which is therefore here used as a moderater word, in stead of the other; the Syriack reades the love which he owes, and some other Greek copies read ὀφειλομένην τιμὴν due honour or worship, which perhaps is the ground of the use of the word worship retained by our Church, in the form of marriage, meaning that kindnesse which is here said to be due unto her: but the Kings MS. hath ὀφειλὴ onely, all that by vow of marriage is due unto her.

b. Ακρασία

V. 5. For your incontinency] What ἀκρασία signifies here will be best gues'd by the Context, where the reason of the advice, συνέρχεσθε, for the man and the wife to accompany together, being this, that the devill tempt them not διὰ τὴν ἀκρασίαν, ἀκρασία being the occasion or advantage that the Devill takes hold of to tempt, must signifie their want of ability to contain: Not that it signifie incontinence, for that is a sin against the marriage vow, and will not agree with the Context, which suppoſes no ſuch ſin; but, I ſay, a want of ability to contain or abſtain any longer from the lawful pleaſures of marriage, as ἐγκρατὴς is he that ἑαυτὸν ὑπὸ κράτει ἔχει hath himſelf in his power, his own command, and ſo οὐκ ἐγκρατεύονται v. 9. they that have not the command of themſelves, ſo as to live chaſtly without marriage, and ſo ἀκρατὴς, and thence ἀκρασία the contrary inability to contain; which inability or weakneſſe is an occaſion of temptation, and will be an advantage alſo to the tempter, by which, when he tempts, he may be moſt probably able to overcome.

c. Συγγνώμη

V. 6. Permiſſion] That Συγγνώμη may ſignifie advice or counſell, will be gathered from the Grammarians, Heſychius and Phavorinus; Συγγενώσομαι, ſay they (it ſhould be συγγνώσομαι) συμβουλεύσω, giving counſell, and Συγγινωσκόμενοι, πειθόμενοι they that are perſwaded by advice or counſell. And then the plain importance of this verſe is, that in reſpect of the contrary dangers of fornication, &c. v. 2, 5. he generally gives his advice, that men ſhould marry, &c. v. 2, 3. Yet for this he is far from giving any command, or laying obligation on any. For if upon experience, and long tryall, there be no fear of thoſe dangers, then his advice is to live unmarried. For ſo he had ſaid, v. 1 that it is good for a man not to touch a woman; and again he ſubjoyns it, ver. 8. that it was good for them to continue as he was himſelf, that is, in ſingle life. And ſo each of theſe, marrying, and not marrying, is according to ſeverall circumſtances, matter of counſell, but neither abſolutely of precept. If there be danger of fornication, then it is his advice, that for the avoiding of that, marriage be choſen, v. 2. and to the ſame purpoſe, rather let them marry then burn, v. 9. And becauſe every man hath not the gift of Continence, and it is not preſently diſcerned who hath, therefore in generall ſpeaking, and as farre as belongs to thoſe who doe not diſcern that they have this gift, the contrary danger is ſo ſtrictly to be avoided, that the Apoſtles advice (though not command) is, that ἕκαστος, and ἑκάστη, men and women generally v. 1. betake themſelves to that ſafer courſe. But this ſtill far from any univerſall precept, for in caſe ſecurity from that danger of fornication be otherwiſe to be had, then the Apoſtle's counſell and advice is to follow his example v. 7, and 8. and either in Virginity, or Widowhood, to remain unmarried. That is the meaning of Θέλω γὰρ for I will, or would, not that he commands or preſcribes that, but that, in caſe a man hath the gift of containing, he preferres the ſingle life. For the Hebrewes for want of a word in their language to denote Comparative degrees, uſe Poſitives in ſtead of Comparatives, and accordingly θέλω to will ſignifies here to wiſh rather, or to be more willing, to preferre, or recommend, as better. And that is the meaning of καλόν ἐστι it is good, both v. 1, and 8, and 26. that is, κρεῖσσον better or more eligible, if that circumſtance of the contrary danger doe not hinder it, or outweigh on the other ſide. Of this ſpeech of the Apoſtles concerning Marriage it is Tertullian's ſaying lib. De monogam. Dixit hoc Apoſtolus indulgens, non præcipiens. What the Apoſtle here ſaid, he ſpake by way of indulgence, not by way of command, rendring συγγνώμη indulgence, according to that other notion of the word, whereby it ſignifies pardon or forgiveneſſe of a fault; and ſo ſaith Heſychius, Συγγνώμων, ἐλεήμων, it denotes pity or mercy. Thus it is poſſible Tertullian might interpret the place, being by the Montaniſts infuſions ſomewhat unkind to marriage. But againſt this the Apoſtle's words are plain, (even when he adviſes ſingle life as beſt at that preſent) If thou marrieſt thou haſt not ſinned, v. 28. And in this place the Context is no way favourable to that notion. For the ἕκας & ἐχέτω let every man have his own wife, &c. ver. 2. and the γαμησάτωσαν let them marry ver. 9. (in caſe of the forementioned danger, διὰτὰς πορνείας becauſe of fornications, and εἰ οὐκ ἐγκρατεύονται) if they have not command over themſelves; ſee Note b.) is certainly more then this, even a free conceſſion of marriage to all, and in caſe of that danger, an advice and counſell alſo. To which purpoſe it is obſervable, that as here συγγνώμη is oppoſed to ἐπιταγὴ command, ſo is γνώμη alſo, ver. 25. where that γνώμη ſignifies advice or counſell, and not onely permiſſion, or indulgence, appears by the conſequents. Νομίζω οὖν τοῦτο καλὸν——v. 26. I think this is good (that is, as was ſaid, better) for the approaching inſtant diſtreſſes, and again ὅτι καλὸν that it is good, or better, for a man to be ſo. From whence as it followes evidently that γνώμη ſignifies counſell, as that looks on that which is better, and as counſell is generally oppoſed to precept, and as many things which are not under precept are yet under counſell; ſo in all reaſon the συγγνώμη differing ſo little from γνώμη will by the oppoſition to ἐπιταγὴ precept (common to both of them) be determined alſo to this ſignification of advice and counſell. And ſo there is no queſtion of it, that for all thoſe who have not that command over themſelves, which may give them ſome degree of ſecurity againſt the danger of fornication, it is κρεῖσσον γαμῆσαι v. 9. better to marry, and ſo matter not only of permiſſion, or indulgence, but of counſell to them.

d. ἐκ ἀκαθαρσίας ἀλλὰ ἁγίας

V. 14. Elſe were your children uncleane, but——] The meaning of οὐκ ἀκάθαρτα, ἀλλὰ ἅγια, not unclean, but holy, in this place, appeares by the Context to be clearly this, that the children of Chriſtians are not refuſed, or rejected from baptiſme, are ſuffered to come to the font, when others are not ſuffered: in the ſame ſenſe that ἀκάθαρσία is uſed, when Peter refuſes to preach to the Gentiles, becauſe they are κοινὰ καὶ ἀκάθαρτα, profane and unclean; where God, reforming his error, bids him Call no man common, which God hath cleanſed or ſanctified, that is, reputed fit to be made partaker (there) of the privilege of preaching, (here of Baptiſme.) For the ground of this ſaying here, that Elſe were your (that is, the Chriſtians) children unclean, but now are they holy, is only this in the beginning of the ver. For the unbelieving husband hath been ſanctified by the believing wife, &c. that is, 'tis of common experience, and from thence preſumed very probable, that a Chriſtian living with an unbeliever will inſtill Chriſtianity into him or her, and therefore they ſhould live together. This he farther proves by the practice of the Church about children, thus, Were it not for the great probability that the Chriſtian living with the heathen, ſhould infuſe Chriſtianity into him, there could no reaſon be rendred of the practice of the Church, why the Chriſtians childe, which is no more a Chriſtian then the childe of an heathen (Chriſtianity being no natural gift, born with them) ſhould yet be capable of Baptiſme, and thought fit to receive that Sacrament, when the heathen's childe is not wont to be ſo admitted; and this, it ſeems, by the generall judgment and practice of the Church, with whom 'tis thought reaſonable thus to preſume, that the Chriſtians childe ſhall be educated in Chriſtian knowledge, which of the heathen's childe they cannot preſume, unleſſe he be taken out of the hand of the parents. This conſideration thus propoſed by the Apoſtle here by the way, is of great authority to prove the Apoſtolical uſe and practice of baptizing the infants of Chriſtian parents, viz. upon preſumption that thoſe parents will ſee them educated and inſtructed in the knowledge of their undertaking, and vow of Baptiſme; and when any other Chriſtian will undertake the ſame for the children children of heathens, there is little doubt but they may be admitted to Baptisme also, paritate rationis by analogie of the reason. And thus it was the custome of the Jewes before Christ, in their receiving and baptizing of proselytes (from whence that the Christian baptisme was deduced, see Note on Mat. 3.a.) For, say they, this Baptisme belonged not onely to those which being of years came over from heathenisme to the Jewish religion, but also to their infant children, if their parents, and the consessus under which they were, did desire it in behalf of the children, promising to let them know and understand when they came to age, what was required of them by their proselytisme, and on condition that they should not then renounce the Jewish religion; which is since the office of the sponsores or susceptores, the godfathers in the Church, who doe it in the name of the consessus, the Church or congregation. This practice of the Church seems clearly deducible from this place, where by the Context is concluded, that it is strongly probable (and being by the parents and sponsores undertaken and promised, it is by the Church presumed) that the Christians childe will be catechized, and consequently that such an one may be allowed Baptisme on that presumption, and that is was then in the Apostles time the custome of the Church to baptize them; which is here expressed by νῦν δὲ ἅγιά ἐστι, but now they are holy, the word קדש, which is vulgarly to sanctifie, signifying among the Jewes, to wash, as when the High-Priests washing his hands and feet ten times on the day of Expiation is called עשרה קדושין the ten sanctifications, Joma c.3.§.3. which being the word that notes the washing of some part of the body, and distinguished in use from the word טבילה which is the immersion of the whole body (see Note on *Joh.*13.b.) may perhaps be an intimation, that the primitive Baptismes were not alwaies a dipping or immersion of the whole body, but that the washing or sprinkling of some part might be sufficient, for that was the meaning of the קדושין. As for any privilege which the parents faith hath to save the childe, or infuse saving grace into it, it is not concludible from hence, nor any thing, save onely this, that Christians children, 'tis presumed, will be catechized and instructed in the Christian faith, and so may, and frequently used to be baptized, but the children of heathens brought up with them, will not probably be so instructed, and therefore are not to be thus admitted to Baptisme. That this should be the notion of ἅγια and ἀκάθαρτα will farther also appear by remembring the nature of legal uncleannesses or pollutions. They made the man to be separated from the congregation; They that were so unclean, might not enjoy the privileges of the Temple, till they were washed or sanctified; and that is just proportionable to the notion here given of it. And accordingly ἁγιάζειν to be sanctified in Gregory Nazianzen and the antients signifies to be baptized.

Καὶ ἡ ἀκάθαρτα

e. εἰμὴ ἐκάστῳ

V. 17. But as God hath —] In this place some antient copies give us another reading thus, τί οἶδας ἄνερ εἰ τὴν γυναῖκα σώσεις, ἢ μή; ἑκάστῳ —— What knowest thou, o man, whether thou shalt save thy wife, or no? As God hath distributed to every man —— This we learn from Theophylact upon the place: τινὲς, saith he, οὕτω ἀνέγνωσαν, some have read thus. And then this will take away all debate, what should be the proper notation of εἰ μὴ in the beginning of the verse, reading it εἰ μὴ ἑκάστῳ —— For though, if it were certaine that that were the true reading, some probable account might be given of it, as that εἰ μὴ might signifie Onely, or the like; yet when other copies have read it in a forme thus perspicuous and free from all question, it will be more reasonable therein to acquiesce, especially considering that if it should be as our copies have it, εἰ μὴ not ἢ μὴ, yet joyning that to the end of v. 16. and not transferring it to the beginning of v. 17. (as 'tis certain the antient copies were not divided into verses, or so pointed as ours now are) then still there will be as little difficulty in it; for so the words will be very current, τί οἶδας, ἄνερ, εἰ τὴν γυναῖκα σώσεις, εἰ μή; What knowest thou, o man, if thou shalt save thy wife, if not? that is, whether thou shalt or whether thou shalt not.

V. 18. Become uncircumcised] Ἐπισπασμὸς signifies attraction, and particularly belongs to a practice of some Jewes, who under the Ægyptian tyranny first, then under Antiochus, and lastly under the Romans, being oppress'd for being Jewes, of which their Circumcision was an evidence, used means by some medicinal applications to get a new præputium: And these were called by the Talmudists משוכים, that is, ἐπισπαστικοὶ attractores. And that it is possible to be done is affirmed by Cor. Celsus the famous Physician, but easier, saith he, in a boy then a man. So saith R. Aleai of Achan, that he made himself a præputium, in Excerp. Gemar. Sanhedr. c. 6. §. 2. This the author of the books of the Maccabees affirms 1 Mac. 1.15. ἐποίησε ἑαυτῷς ἀκροβυστίας, they made themselves foreskins. So under the tyranny of the Romans there were many who therefore were circumcised again by Bar-chuziba, when he took upon him to be the Messias, and got power among the Jewes two years and an half, and was at last slain under Ælius Adrianus. This also Epiphanius observes of the Jewes when they turned Samaritanes, and of the Samaritanes when they turned Jewes; for in both those cases there was use of the ἐπισπασμὸς attraction, that they might be capable of being initiated by Circumcision, of which number Symmachus is said to be one, (the Greek Translator of the Old Testament) when being hated by the Samaritanes he betook himself to the Jewes in the reigne of Severus the Emperor. Now that this practice is here forbidden the Corinthians by the Apostle, may seem to be from hence, because some that were converted to Christianity from Judaisme, did so zealously renounce all their Judaical rites, that they used means to attract the præputia again, which was an act of too much superstition and curiosity, and so is censured here. f. Ἐπισπασμὸς

V. 23. Bought with——] In this place the whole Context perswades to read Τιμῆς ἠγοράσθητε; interrogatively; for so will it best answer Δοῦλος ἐκλήθης; Art thou called being a servant? or is thy calling that of a servant? Thus ver. 18. both parts of the speech are delivered interrogatively, Περιτετμημένος τις ἐκλήθη; Is any man called being circumcised? and presently, ἐν ἀκροβυστίᾳ τις ἐκλήθη; Is any man called in uncircumcision? For the confirming of this reading, 'tis to be observed, first, That as before and after those two questions, ver. 18. the rule is given, that every man walk in, or abide in, that calling, or condition, wherein God hath placed him, contentedly without making advantage of Christianity for his pretence of a change; so 'tis here likewise, before, v. 21. (where the interrogation is varied, Art thou called being a servant?) and after this verse, which assures us of the continuing the same manner of speaking, and so that this latter is by way of interrogation also. Secondly, That after the first question, and the short answer to it, Art thou called being a servant? care not for it, all that followes, as far as to this, v. 23. is but as in a parenthesis (but if thou mayest be free, use it rather, For he, &c.) and so what here followes, v. 23. answers to that, by way of parallel, Τιμῆς ἠγοράσθητε, &c. Which yet will not be a parallel, or answerable to the former question, unless, as before uncircumcision was opposed to circumcision, and the mention of the latter was interrogative as well as of the former, so here the being bought with the price be opposed to being called a servant, (which it cannot be, unless it signifie manumission from service) and the forme of delivering it interrogative also. Lastly, 'tis apparent that the designe of the whole place is to assure g.

Christians that they are not to expect secular immunityes or privileges by being Christians, that their being spiritually redeemed by Christ doth not make them free men that before were servants, and this 23. verse, is a medium to infer that, and the conclusion repeated immediately upon it, v. 24. Let every one, &c. Yet such a medium it would not be (but the contrary) if speaking still to the person, or persons, last spoken to, v. 21. that is, to servants, he should here tell them, they were bought, or redeemed, by Christ (as the same phrase evidently signifies, ch. 6. 20.) and therefore must not be the servants of men. And that he speakes to any other, viz. to free men, it can no way be collected from any words unless from these v. 23. nor yet can it from these unless τιμῆς ἠγοράσθητε signifie being bought out from humane servitude by some summe of money, &c. as we know it was ordinary to buy freedome from heathen Masters. Therefore in all probability that is it which is here meant, and then that is best expres'd by forme of interrogation.

h. Μεμέρισται

V. 34. There is difference——] For the right understanding of the word μεμέρισται, it will first be necessary to set down out of the Kings MS. a various reading of this whole place, which differs much from that which is vulgarly received, and seems very probably to be the truer: It is thus, ver. 33. Ὁ δὲ γαμήσας μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ κόσμου, πῶς ἀρέσῃ τῇ γυναικὶ, καὶ μεμέρισται, v. 34. Καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἡ ἄγαμος, καὶ ἡ παρθένος ἡ ἄγαμος μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ Κυρίου, ἵνα ἁγία τῷ σώματι καὶ τῷ πνεύματι, &c. He that is married careth for the things of the world, how he may please his wife, and is divided, or distracted. And the unmarried woman (that is, the widow) and the unmarried virgin careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and spirit. Here μεμέρισται signifies being divided between two, the service of God, which lies upon him as a Christian, and the pleasing his wife, which lies upon him as an husband; and contrary to this is the ἀπερισπάστως without distraction v. 35. which belongs to the unmarried. Thus the Hebrew חלק, to which μερίζω is punctually answerable; signifies ordinarily to divide an inheritance, but among the Rabbines, in partes distractum esse, to be distracted several waies, and when 'tis rendred dividi to be divided, it is yet oft to be taken in that notion of distraction. Hence it is that the Hierusalem Targum, Gen. 22. 14. describing Abraham's faith and ready obedience, without any doubting or anxiety or distraction what to chuse, describeth it thus, Tibi perspicuum est, nullam fuisse in corde meo divisionem, quo tempore jussisti me offerre Isaacum, &c. Thou seest, O Lord, that I had no division, or distraction, in my heart when thou badst me offer Isaac; and Gen. 25. 26. speaking of Jacob's not believing the newes of Joseph's being alive, in stead of non credidit, he believed not, the Targum reads, & divisit cor ejus, and he divided his heart. The word in all other places in the New Testament signifies simply to be divided into two parts, Mat. 12. 25. Lu. 12. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 13. and so doth μερισμὸς Heb. 4. 12. and μερισὸς Lu. 12. 14. And there is no appearance of reason, that it should doe otherwise here. Now for the vulgar reading of the words, μεμέρισται in the front of verse 34. (which indeed is very antient among the Latines, as appeares by Tertullian's using it De. veland. Virgin. c. 4. Divisa, inquit, est mulier & virgo, quare? quoniam innupta i. e. virgo cogitat ea quæ sunt Domini——) that cannot well be imagined in the notion of differing. For though the Hebrew חלוק signifies with the Rabbines, divisio Arithmetica, division in numbring, and thence differentia and discrimen, difference of one from another, yet first that importance of the Noun is not observed to belong to the Verb among them, and 2dly, the Verb in the singular cannot be applied to the two Nounes, ἡ γυνὴ and ἡ παρθένος, the woman and the virgin in conjunction, (mulier & virgo differt would not be true Latine, nor would it be better Greek) and therefore if that should be the reading, the words must be rendred severally, the woman is divided, that is, distracted, and likewise the virgin. But there would be no great sense in that, the Context speaking onely of the distractions of the married, whereas in the other reading, to which we adhere, the whole Context is very current, and the meaning perspicuous, as we have expressed it. But the not understanding of this notion of μεμέρισται for distraction, seems first to have been the occasion of taking away the καὶ, and then the μεμέρισται which is in the end of ver. 33. was of necessity to be put in the front of v. 34. and from thence all the perplexednesse of the place, which is clearly taken away by the other reading.

Μεριστὸς Μερισὸς

V. 35. That you may attend——] This rendring of πρὸς τὸ εὐσχήμων καὶ εὐπρόσεδρον τῷ Κυρίῳ ἀπερισπάστως, that you may decently wait upon the Lord without distraction, is avowed by the Syriack, and the figure of ἓν διὰ δυοῖν expressing one thing by two words, in the εὐσχήμων καὶ εὐπρόσεδρον, will bear it very well.

i. Εὐσχήμων καὶ εὐπρόσεδρον

Paraphrase.

CHAP. VIII.

1. Now for that other part of your letter, which enquires of the lawfulnesse of eating things offered to idols (on occasion again of the Gnosticks infusions) and accordingly speaks of the knowledge that you have (from whence the word Gnostick comes, see note on c. 1. c. and 2 Pet. 1. b. and Rev. 2. 6. that is, knowing men) that an Idol is nothing, and so that that which hath been offered to Idols may as freely and indifferently be offered to Idols as any thing else, I shall now tell you, first, that we orthodox Christians have knowledge too, to wit that knowledge of our Christian liberty, and therefore need not be despised by those among you, who separate your selves from us, in the pride of your hearts calling your selves Gnosticks, which supposes all others ignorant but your selves; but our care is to joyne charity or the love of God with our knowledge, and that will encline us to suffer any thing for Christ's sake, and so we shall not need to goe to their idol-feasts, to save us from persecution, as the Gnosticks doe: and a little of this courage and love of Christ is much better, tends more to our profit, then all that pretended deep knowledge of their liberty which the Gnosticks pretend to, and by that chuse to goe to the Idol-feasts, rather then confesse and suffer for Christ. (see note on Rev. 2. b.)

1. Now as touching things offered unto Idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.]

2. And therefore if any man please himself with an opinion of his knowledge, from such subtilities as these, and so come to despise other men, and not to consider what tends to their good and edification, this man (let him call himself Gnostick, or what he will) is farre enough from the true Christian knowledge, or from directing his knowledge to the right end, for that is charity, or the edification of his brethren.

2. And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.]

3. If any man love God sincerely, and so adhere to him in time of danger, or temptation, he truly knowes God, and consequently is known and acknowledged by God.

3. But if any man love God, the same is known of him.]

4. As

4. As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice to idols, we know that [a] an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one.]

4. Having premised thus much concerning the name and sect of the Gnosticks, who a.

are such assertors of their liberty to doe all things, and particularly in this matter think they have argued so subtilely for liberty to eat of the idol-feasts, to make that an indifferent thing, because forsooth an idol is nothing, I come now to the thing it self, by confessing their objection, that an idol indeed, according to the notation of the Hebrew word, is nothing, there being but one God, and all the heathen idol-gods being but fictions of theirs, so farre from being gods, that they are but the works of mens hands.

5. For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth (as there be Gods many, and Lords many)]

5. For though there be many called by that title, whether the celestiall and supreme deities, so esteemed among the heathen, or inferiour, of a second order, called Baalim, or Lords, agents and mediators between the gods and men, or whether the Sunne and Stars of Heaven, or men of the Earth deified. Theophylact.

6. * But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we † in him, and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.]

* Yet ΑΛΛ

† to or for him εἰς αὐτὸν

6. Yet we Christians know and are assured that there is but one true God, the Creator of all things, to whom all mens prayers must be addressed, as to the supreme, from whom as we had our being, so we are to think our selves obliged to be his servants, and to make all our applications to him; and so likewise but one mediator, but one Lord, by whom all things were created, and by whom, as the only mediator betwixt God and us, all our prayers are addressed to heaven, viz. Jesus Christ.

7. Howbeit, there is not in every man that knowledge: for some * with conscience of the idol unto this houre, eat it as a thing offered to an idol, and their conscience being [b] weak is defiled.]

* or, with the custome or common usage of the idol, until this time, for the Kings MS. reads φὶ συνηθείᾳ ἕως ἄρτι

7. But all men doe not know or think this, that these idols or heathen gods b.

are nothing, (for sure they that are accustomed to worship them think they are something) nay 'tis clear that some men that are of opinion that idols are something, and who fear them as able to hurt, (and so that must confesse, that the eating of those feasts pollutes those that have cast off the worship of them) and that continue their custome and former heathen course to this very time, though they have received Christianity, doe still goe to idol-feasts as such, even now that they have received the faith of Christ; and their sick, that is, wounded, sinfull consciences, see note b. (that is, they that goe on still in this old heathen practice, not yet laid down) are defiled or polluted by doing so. This is certainly a sinne in them.

8. But meat commendeth us not to God: for * neither if we eat, are we the better; neither if we eat not, are we the worse.

* or, neither if we eat not, doe we any great matter, nor if we eat, do we come short, for the King's MS. reads εἰ μὲν ἐσθίομεν οὐδὲν περισσεύομεν, εἰ μὴ ἐσθίομεν οὐδὲν ὑστερούμεθα

8, 9. Now this being supposed, it will follow that he that goes to the idol-Temple with these, though he be not of their perswasion, may yet

9. But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling-block to them that are weak.]

be a means of confirming them in their error, it being certaine that they will think he comes as they come, that is, with an opinion of that deity, and of the benefit he shall reap by eating of (that is, partaking in) the sacrifice, which inconvenience being counted of, there is no so great benefit to be reaped by going and eating there, as that it should be fit to incurre that danger. For though neither eating nor abstaining be in its self in the sight of God of any moment, yet this care will befit every Christian, that he so use his own liberty, that he be not an occasion of sinning (or continuing in sinne) to those that are already in that erroneous sinfull course, by confirming them in it.

10. For if any man see thee, which hast knowledge, sit at meat in the idols temple, shall not the conscience of him † which is weak be * emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols?]

† being weak ἀσθενὴς ὤν

* confirm'd, οἰκοδομηθήσεται

10. For if any man that, through an erroneous conscience, goes to those Idol-feasts, shall see a Gnostick (who within himself knowes an idol to be nothing, and therefore eats this but as ordinary meat) be at an Idol-feast and partake of it, will not he by this means be confirmed to goe on in his erroneous course?

11. † And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ dyed.]

† for, Thy brother therefore for whom Christ died, growing sick through thy knowledg, is destroyed, for the King's MS. reads ἀπόλλυται ὁ ἀδελφὸς ἐν τῇ γνώσει σου ὁ ἀσθενὴς δι'

11. And that Christian of an erroneous conscience (see note b.) shall be confirmed in his error and sinne, and consequent ruine, by occasion of this practice of thine, all which, through confidence of thine owne knowledge, without care of thy brothers heathenish errors remaining in him, thou hast been guilty of, which is a sinne in thee, not onely of uncharitableness to him, but of injury or robbery against Christ, in betraying a soul to ruine, for the saving of which Christ dyed.

12. But when ye sin so against the brethren, and [c] wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ.]

* scandalize my brother, σκανδαλίζω

12. And though it should be granted that your presence at idol-feasts were no impiety against God, yet sure this uncharitableness against thy brother, bringing him to a confirmation in his sinfull practice, who through error is already in it, must be looked upon as an impiety and sin against God himself, who is concern'd in him. c.

13. Wherefore if meat * make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.]

13. If therefore this my eating in an idol-Temple of that feast, (or any use of my liberty in the same kinde) be an occasion of confirming any Christian in an erroneous sinfull practice, or bringing him to doe any thing which is unlawfull, I will sure deny my self the use of that liberty, be it supposed to be such as by the Laws of Christ truly belongs to me, when it shall prove of so dangerous consequence to my fellow-Christans.

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Εἴδωλον οὐδέν

V. 4. An Idol is nothing] The meaning of this assertion of the Gnosticks, and concession of S. Paul, that εἴδωλον οὐδὲν ἐν κόσμῳ, an idol is nothing in the world, must be fetch'd from the notation of the Hebrew word אלילים, from אל that signifies nothing, that which hath no existence, Job 13. 4. Jer. 14. 14. Zach. 11. 17. and from thence comes אלילים idols, that is, so many nothings, so farre from being Gods that they are οὐδὲν ἐν κόσμῳ, nothing in the world, no parts of God's first creation, onely inventions and phancies of men, creatures of mens own creating, πονηροὶ πονηρῶν δαιμόνων καὶ πλάσται καὶ μυσταγωγοί, saith Greg. Nazianzene, wicked men are the formers first, and then the worshippers of their wicked deities.

b. Ἀσθενὴς

V. 7. Weake] That ἀσθενεῖν signifies being sick, in the New Testament, hath been formerly made clear, Note on Rom. 8. m. And being applied to the soul or conscience, as here, it must needs signifie the disease or wound or sickness of the soul or conscience, which is sinne or error. Thus in the Greek of the Old Testament, Nahum 2. 5. where we read out of the Hebrew, they shall stumble in their walk, there 'tis, ἀσθενήσουσιν ἐν ταῖς πορείαις they shall be weak. And so generally the Hebrew כשל impingere, and cespitare, to stumble, or fall on gal-traps, or any other mischief by the way, is rendred by the LXXII ἀσθενῶν being weak, because they are wounded and galled by these means, and so made unable to goe forward. So Rom. 14. 21. we have together in the same sense σκανδαλίζεται and ἀσθενεῖ, being offended (or galled) and being made weak. So Rom. 5. 6. Ἡμῶν ἀσθενῶν when we were weak signifies when we were in a wounded, mortally wounded state, noted by when we were enemies in other places, and there by ἁμαρτωλῶν ὄντων ἡμῶν v. 8. when we were sinners, sinners, and by ἀσεβῶν v. 6. impious or ungodly. So [e] in Ro. 5. 6. saith Theophylact, Ἀδυνῶν, τυτέστιν ἁμαρτωλῶν, ἀδύνατα γὰρ ἡ ἁμαρτία, ὥσπερ ἡ δικαιοσύνη ὑγίεια, weak, that is sinners, for weakness is sinne, as righteousnesse is health. And thus, 'tis clear, it signifies in this place, the discourse being of those who take the idol-gods to be true Gods, and consequently that the eating or partaking of their sacrifices, which is a part of the worship of those idols, will stand them in stead, prove beneficial to them, and therefore goe on purpose to those feasts and eat the idol-sacrifice, ὡς εἰδωλόθυτον, as, or because (or under that very notion, or upon that reason that) it is so; which certainly is an erroneous, and so an idolatrous, sinfull conscience, though it be in one that hath embraced Christianity. So v. 9. it is used again for these same men of those erroneous consciences, leading them into that heathen sin, to whom a Christian's going to (or being present at, and eating of) their idol-feasts, though he eat it but as ordinary meat, will yet be a means of scandal, that is, an occasion of confirming them in their sinne. Thus again v. 10, 11. where they are called brethren, which notes that this heathen error was yet, ἕως ἄρτι, v. 7. continued among some Christians at Corinth, not the Gnosticks (for they pretended to know that an idol was nothing, and so professs'd not to eat of those feasts as idol-feasts, but onely as of ordinary meat, who therefore are here warned to take heed that they doe not confirm these others in their sinne) but some more rude, ignorant, heathen Christians, that through the customarinesse of their former practice συνηθείᾳ τοῦ εἰδώλου ἕως ἄρτι, the custome of the idol untill now, and secondly through their νηπιότης c. 3. 1. their infancy or rawnesse in Christianity (which made S. Paul look upon them not as spiritual, but as carnal men, not as Christians, but Heathens still) and thirdly through the infusions of corrupt false teachers (mention'd in the following chapter, the wood, and the hay, and the stubble, v. 12. that must be fired out of the Church) and fourthly through fear of losing all that they had by the heathen persecutors (which seemes to be mention'd c. 10. 13. and which occasion'd many to offer sacrifice in after-times, when Christianity had taken deeper root then it had yet at Corinth) were still in these dreggs and lees of Heathenisme, after their embracing of Christianity; which will be no wonder to any that observes in this very Epistle, that they thought all kindes of Fornication, and even Incest, no sinnes, c. 5. & c. 6. 15. suing one another at heathen tribunals, no sinne, c. 6. yea and believed not the Resurrection, c. 15. And the villanies that were under pretense of Christian liberty practised by the Gnosticks, who took themselves to be persons of farre deeper knowledge, at the beginning of this Chapter, were yet as grosse and as heathenish and abominable as could be imagined, setting Christians at liberty from all their former obligations toward Husband, Master, Prince, and engulfing themselves in all the filthinesse in the world, 1 Tim. 6. Jude 8. From this explication of ἀσθενῶ will appeare also the notion of it Rom. 14. 21. where being placed also with προσκόπτειν stumbling, and σκανδαλίζεται being scandalized, it must needs signifie to sinne also.

V. 12. Wound] Τύπτειν signifying to strike, or give any blow, and being here applied to the weak or sick, c. 8. 12. that is erroneous, sinfull conscience, and being parallel to σκανδαλίζειν scandalize, v. 13. must be understood in a notion which will be common to that other. Thus he that layes a stumbling-block in any man's way, at which he falls or breaks his shins, or otherwise hurts himself, is said τύπτειν to strike, or hurt, or wound him; and so it best agrees with this place, noting the confirming that man in sinne, betraying him to all his after-commissions, whose conscience was before erroneous, and his practices sinfull, which is as if in stead of curing a sick man, which sure stands in need of that charity, I should wound and hurt him more.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. IX.

1. And that you may not think that what I say c. 8. 13. of abstaining from many things that are lawfull, is magnificently and speciously, rather then with exactnesse of truth, spoken by me, I shall now mention my practices of this kind in other instances. And this the rather, because of another part of your letter, which mentions the deep knowledge of the teachers you have now among you, and intimates how I am despised by them, and that particularly for labouring in the works of my calling, making of tents, and so getting mine own living among you (see ver. 3. 4.) Now hereto I make this reply, that without the vanity of comparing with them, I may surely say four things of my self, 1. that I am an Apostle of Christ, called from heaven immediately to that office; 2. that I had no obligation to doe what I have done among you (see v. 4, and 19.) that is, to preach on free-cost to you, as I have, that I discern my Christian liberty so well, that I know I might have done otherwise; 3. that though I was none of Christ's followers here on earth, yet I have been equalled to them by seeing, and being spoken to by Christ out of heaven; and 4. that I am certainly he that converted you to the faith, that planted the Gospel at Corinth, and so surely am not unworthy to be considered by you.

1. AM I not an Apostle? Am I not free? Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? Are not you my work in the Lord?

2. For the first of these, mine Apostleship, Whatever I am to others, I am sure I am an Apostle in respect of you. Your conversion to the faith is as great a confirmation of my Apostleship, as a seale is to an indenture or instrument, or particularly to the letters dimissory, by which messengers were wont to be sent to the Churches.

2. If I be not an Apostle to others, yet doubtlesse I am to you: for the seale of mine Apostleship are ye in the Lord.]

3. For the second, that of my getting my living by my labour, the account which I give unto them that backbite me for this (as if I knew not the nature of Christian liberty, and so out of niceneſſe of conscience, or scrupulosity durst not receive any reward from them to whom I preach) is this,

3. * Mine answer to them that doe examine me, is this,]

*My apologie to them Ἡμὴ ἀπολογία.

4, 5, 6. That we know sufficiently that 'tis lawfull for us to take along with us in our travailes for the Gospel, a believing woman such as Phœbe, (see note on Rom. 16. 2.) as freely as others of the Apostles generally have done, to provide for us in our preaching, that so we may be able to eat and drink, and yet not be forced to work with our own hands to get our maintenance (see Act. 18. 3. and 1 Cor. 4. 12.) I doe not believe that any greater burthen lies upon Barnabas and me, any greater necessity of getting our living by our trades, then lies upon others that have left their trades, and so I know my Christian liberty well enough.

4. Have we not power to eat and drink?

5. Have we not power † to lead about a sister, a wife, as well as other Apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?

6. * Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working?]

† to carry about a sister woman ἀδελφὴν γυναῖκα περιάγειν

* or have I onely and Barnabas no power, Ἢ μόνος ἐγὼ καὶ Βαρνάβας οὐκ ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν

7. For my Apostleship being a kind of warfare in the scripture phrase, a planting a vineyard, a feeding a flock, in all reason, in all these respects, I may expect a sufficient maintenance from them to whom I have these many relations,

7. Who goeth to warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?]

8. Say

† according to man κατ' ἄνθρωπον

8. Say I these things † as a man? saith not the Law the same also?]
8. Nay this is not onely rational discourse, but 'tis the doctrine of the Law.

9. For it is written in the Law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the oxe that treadeth out the corn: doth God take care for oxen?
9, 10. For when 'tis there commanded that the oxe that treadeth out the corn, should, all the while he doth so, have liberty to eat of the corn before him; that precept that

10. Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? for our sakes no doubt this is written; that he that plougheth, should plough in hope, and he that threshеth * in hope, should be partaker of his hope.]

* or in hope of partaking, for the King's MS. reads ἐν ἐλπίδι τῷ μέλλοντι seems to respect the oxe, belongs certainly to men, and signifies that men are obliged to reward all those that take pains for them, as the ploughman would never labour, were it not in hope of reward, and he that is at the pains of threshing, must in any reason have the encouragement of eating of the corn that he thresheth out.

11. If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing, if we shall reap your carnal things?]
11. And then much more we that have laboured spiritually for your good, planted the Gospel among you, may think it but just and proportionable, that we receive some part of your wealth from you.

12. If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? nevertheless, we have not used this power, but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the Gospel of Christ.]
12. This I know, The false Apostles that come among you make use of this power, and receive the fruits of it, and then may not I have great confidence to doe it? By what hath been said, 'tis clear we might require a maintenance from you, and that we know this our liberty, v. 1. but yet we have abstained from making use of it, and have rather chosen to take any paines our selves, Act. 18. 3. 1 Cor. 4. 12. yea and to suffer hunger many times (that you may not think we abstain from receiving from you, because we have no need of it) and so make no use of this claime of ours, as we might lawfully doe, (see note on c. 13. e.) rather then be thus burthensome to our auditors, on purpose designing this, that we may not hinder the course of the Gospel, or keep men from being alacrious and cheerfull in it, by making it chargeable to them.

† eat of that which is holy, or, feed by the temple ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ ἐσθίειν,

13. Doe ye not know that they which minister about holy things, * live of the things of the Temple? and they which wait at the altar, are partakers with the altar?]
13. In sacrifices 'tis clear that the priests (see note on Joh. 6. b.) eat part of the consecrated offering, and all is not burnt upon the altar, the altar devours not all, but the priest divides with it, and eats or carries home some portions of the sacrifices.

14. Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel.]
14. And accordingly God, that hath the free disposall of all mens estates, hath given an assignement to those that preach the Gospel, of so much out of their auditors substance, that they may be maintained by preaching it.

† yet have I not written ἐν ἐμοὶ

15. But I have used none of these things: † neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me; for it were better for me to dye, then that any man should make my glorying void.]
15. But I have made no use of this privilege of an Apostle, but have preaeh'd to you on free-cost: And I doe not now speak of it, as if I would desire to receive any thing from you, for I am much better pleased to doe it thus, yea and I would rather choose to famish by doing so, then be deprived of this way of advancing the Gospel, v. 12. I am so farre from murmuring or complaining of this, that I would not for all the world lose this comfort and joy, that I have preach'd to you without receiving any thing from you, it being farre a more blessed thing to give, then to receive.

† ἵνα μὴ

16. For * though I preach the Gospell, I have nothing to glory of; for necessity is laid upon me, yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the Gospell.]
16. For I am commanded to preach the Gospell, and consequently by doing so I can expect no extraordinary reward from God; I doe no more then strict duty, (see note a.) I am sent by God with Commission to doe so, and that layes an obligation upon me, and 'twere a damning sin, if I did it not.

† voluntary * I have been intrusted with a stewardship ἑκὼν μισθὸν ἔχω οἰκονομίαν πεπίστευμαι

17. For if I doe this thing [a] † willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, * a dispensation of the Gospell is committed unto me.]
17. If I did indeed preach voluntarily without a command, then even for my preaching the Gospell, as well as for my doing it without any reward, I might have some reason to expect some reward from God, as for an act of free-will offering: But seeing I doe it not so, now all that can be said of me, in respect of the preaching it self, is onely this, that I had a stewardship entrusted to me, and I discharged it, which if I had not discharged, I ought to be punished, and having discharged it, I can expect no future reward for doing that which I was bound to doe. a.

† What then is reward to me? Τίς οὖν μού ἐστιν ὁ μισθός; * use not μὴ χρησάμενος

18. † What is my reward then? Verily, that when I preach the Gospell, I may make the Gospell of Christ without charge, that I * abuse not my power in the Gospell.]
18. What is it then that shall bring me in a reward? whence shall my reward come? why, if I preach freely, and make no use of that liberty or power which I know I have, v. 12, 15, 17. (see 2 Cor. 11. 9, 10.) then this will be rewardable in me.

19. For though I be free from all men, yet have I made my self [b] servant unto all, that I might gain the more.]
19. For being obliged to no man, I have freely served all, preached to them without any wages, that I might be more likely to bring them to Christ. b.

20. And unto the Jewes I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jewes: to them that are under the Law, as under the Law, that I might gain them that are under the Law:]
20. In like manner I have denyed my self the use of my Christian liberty in many other things also, observed many ceremonies of the Jewish Law, which I needed not to have done, but onely to gain the Jewes.

* obedient to the law of Christ, ἔννομος Χριστοῦ

21. To them that are without Law, as without Law, (being not without Law to God, but * under the Law to Christ) that I might gain them that are without Law.]
21. To those that observe not the Law of Moses, I behave my self in like manner (not as if I were irregular, but ruling my actions according to the Law of Christ and Christian liberty) that I may work on those that are not observers of Moses's Law.

22. To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some.]
22. To those which were not sufficiently instructed in the nature of their Christian liberty, I restrained my self of the use of mine, that I might attract those the more probably; and so I dealt with all other sorts of men, doing that which I thought most probable to win them to Christ.

† copartner of it, συγκοινωνὸς αὐτοῦ

23. All this I doe for the Gospel's sake, that I might be a † partaker thereof with you.]
23. And all this for the propagating the Christian faith, that I may convert the more, that by so doing my reward in another world may be the greater.

24. [c] Know ye not that they which [d] run in a [e] race, run all, but [f] one receiveth the prize? [g] so run, that ye may obtain.]
24. You Corinthians have the Græcian games in one part of your country, and therefore cannot be ignorant of the customs of those, particularly how in that of running in a c. d. e. f. g.

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. Ἑκὼν πρᾶσσω

V. 17. Willingly] What is the meaning of ἑκὼν πράσσω to doe any thing voluntary, or, as a voluntier, appears by ſeverall parts of the Context, 1. by the oppoſition to ἄκων involuntary, as that is explain'd by a neceſſity is laid upon me, and woe is to me, if I preach not, &c. v. 16. and I am intruſted, or a truſt is repoſed in me, v. 7. For that notes the involuntary action to be that which is by law required, and cannot be omitted without ſinne. and ſo becometh neceſſary So ſaith Theophylact, Εἰ δὲ ἐνεχειρίσθην, πρόδηλον ὅτι οὐκ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ τοῦτο ποιῶ, ἀλλὰ δεσποτικὴν ὑπολυθεὶς πληρῶ, τοῦτο γάρ ἐστι τὸ ἄκων, by theſe words, If I am intruſted, 'tis manifeſt he means that I doe it not of my ſelf, but perform the Lords command, for this is to doe it involuntary. And therefore to doe it ἑκὼν voluntary is to doe it of ones ſelf, without any command or obligation on him to doe it. So Theophylact interprets it, εἰ μὲν οὐκ ἐνεχειρίσθην τὸ κήρυγμα, ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ δὲ τοῦτο ἐποίουν, it ſignifies, if this were not committed to me as a truſt, but I did it of my ſelf.

Καύχημα 2dly, By the mention of καύχημα boaſting v. 16. and 2 Cor. 11. 9, 10. for that implies what is done, to be done without obligation, and above that which was neceſſary by engagement of any precept. And ſo 3ly, by Μισθὸν ἔχω μισθὸν ἔχω I have reward here, and v. 18. for reward ſignifies a return or retribution to ſomewhat, which a man was not bound to doe. So the phraſe is uſed among the Jewes, and Maimonides hath a rule, Mor. Neb. l. 3. c. 17. Ei datur præmium, qui injuſſus aliquid facit, to him a reward is given, who doth any thing unbidden. And therefore the whole phraſe here, εἰ δὲ ἑκὼν τοῦτο πράσσω muſt thus be rendred moſt clearly, not if I doe, or ſhall doe, this voluntary, as ſuppoſing that poſſible that he may (for ſpeaking of preaching the word, he had before ſaid, that neceſſity was laid upon him, and therefore he cannot be free, or at liberty to doe or not doe it) but, as ſuppoſitio non ponit, a ſuppoſition doth not affirm, ſo the εἰ is to be rendred, if, that is, on ſuppoſition that I did this voluntarily, a reward would then belong to me, εἰ δὲ ἄκων, but ſeeing 'tis not ſo, ſeeing I doe it not of my own inſtinct, but by appointment from God, &c. διὰ τοῦτο ἡ φιλοτιμία τὸ πρᾶγμα, therefore there is nothing heroical, or matter of holy emulation, or ambition in it. And accordingly it followes that the matter of preaching being to him diſtinctly under precept, there was but one thing which could bring him any reward, viz. the ἀδάπανον ὑμᾶς making it coſtleſs to the auditors, εἰς τὸ μὴ καταχρήσασθαι τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ μου, v. 18. in not making uſe of that power which he had, that is, the power of receiving maintenance from others, v. 5. which he might moſt lawfully have done, v. 7, 12, 14. and which Cephas and others freely did, v. 5. and the not uſing it would therefore be thankworthy with God, and yield him ſome reward from him. To this purpoſe clearly S. Chryſoſtome, τὸ μὲν ἐστιν ἐπίταγμα, τὸ δὲ ἑκὼν ἐμῆς προαιρέσεως κατόρθωμα, one was a precept, the other a virtuous action of his choice, ἃ μὲ γὰρ ὑπὲρ τὴν ἐντολὴν γίνεται, πολὺν ἔχει τὸν μισθὸν καὶ τοῦτο, for what is done above the command, hath proportionably a great reward. And again of the word Ἀνάγκη neceſſity, that Ἀνάγκη it referres to the command, πρὸς ἀντιδιαστολὴν τῆς ἐλευθερίας τῆς ἐν τῷ λαμβάνειν, in oppoſition to the freedome, or liberty of receiving v. 12. So again Theophylact, τὸ εὐαγγελίσασθαι ἐπίταγμά ἐστι, καὶ χρέος, καὶ ἐὰν πληρῶ τοῦτο, οὐδὲν κατόρθωμα, &c. Preaching the Goſpel is a command, and ſo a debt, and if I doe it, there is no great matter of virtue in it, τὸ δὲ ἀδαπάνως κηρύσσειν προαιρέσεως φιλοτιμία, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καύχημά ἐστι, but to preach without charging them, is the ambition of my free will, or choice, and in that reſpect there is place of boaſting, or I may boaſt. And ſo S. Auguſtine, Potuit beatus Paulus ex Evangelio ſibi victum quærere, quòd maluit operari, amplius erogabat; Bleſſed Paul might get his food by preaching the Goſpel; but in that he choſe to labour with his hands, he erogated the more, did more in Gods ſervice, then by any particular precept was required of him.

b. Δοῦλος V. 19. Servant to all] Servants or δοῦλοι, bondmen or ſlaves were wholly in the power of their maſters, they had power of life and death over them, much more of their bodies for labour, without giving them any wages or reward. To doe all that they are commanded is but the due debt to their maſters, which if they perform, they are not praiſed, but puniſhed if they doe it not; whereas they that are free, if they doe any office for any, they may in reaſon expect to be paid for it. So here S. Paul being a free man, no ſlave to the Corinthians, that is, under no obligation to preach without maintenance v. 1. might in reaſon expect from them reward for all his ſervice, his preaching, &c. but he did all this for nothing, and that he calls ἐδούλωσα Ἐδούλωσα ἐμαυτὸν πᾶσιν, his ſerving them as a ſervant doth, without any wages, or as though he were their ſervant.

c. Οὐκ οἴδατε V. 24. Know ye not —] The diſcourſe that here begins, and goes on to the end of the Chapter, is all perfectly Agoniſtical, no way to be explained but by obſervation of the cuſtomes in the Grecian games or ἀγῶνες. Of theſe there were four moſt famous in Greece,

Τέσσαρές εἰσιν ἀγῶνες ἀν' Ἑλλάδα, τέσσαρες ἱεροί, in the Anthologie, l. 1. the Olympick, Pythian, Nemean, Iſthmian, differing one from the other onely in the places of the πανηγύρεις or celebrations. The laſt of them, the Iſthmian, were kept among the Corinthians, and that occaſions his ſpeech in this place, οὐκ οἴδατε; doe you not know? as preſuming their particular knowledge of

h. Ἐγκρατεύεται of all those customes which he is about to mention or referr to.

d. Ib. Runne] In every of these four ἀγῶνες, there were five exercises, as was said Note on Rom. 9. l. Wrestling, Cuffing, Running, Leaping, Quoiting, πάλη, πυγμὴ, δρόμος, ἅλμα, δίσκος, which the Anthologie sets downe with some little change, putting ἄκοντα for πυγμὴν not very fitly. Beside these five single ones, there was another kind made up and compounded of the two foremost together, Cuffing and Wrestling both, and because to the performing of that all kind of strength and agility was required, it was therefore called παγκράτιον from κράτος strength, not from κραίω to overcome. Now the particulars that are here referred to are onely two of these, that of δρόμος or ποδωκεῖν running, the third of the five, and this of παγκράτιον, the one compounded of the other two; the former of these in this and the two next verses, the latter in the last verse of the Chapter.

Ἅλμα, ποδωκίλω, δίσκον, ἄκοντα, πάλλω.

e. Ib. A race] Στάδιον was the space wherein they run, ὁ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἔδρεχον, ὧν ἦν πηχέων τετρακοσίων διάστημα &c. saith the Scholiast on Pindarus, it was three hundred cubits long.

f. Ib. One receiveth] This race is open to all to run in, that is, to all that aspire to the crown or prize, who come from all coasts to that end, and from thence the agones were called πανηγύρεις or frequentia, places of meeting or assembly. But when never so many ran, there was no possibility for above one to overcome, to wit, he that came foremost to the goale, for to him onely the reward or prize belonged, which was called in their idiome, βραβεῖον bravium, or ἆθλον, which two words differ no more then δῶρον and λῆμμα, the first in respect of the βραβευτὴς that adjudges, the second in respect of the ἀθλητὴς that receives it. This he was said λαμβάνειν, or καταλαμβάνειν, or ἀπολαμβάνειν (see note on Rom. 9. l. Phil. 3. c.) which we render by receiving, or obtaining, that is, catching of the prize or βραβεῖον from the top of the goale, the βραβευταὶ, or judges, having passed their sentence that he hath overcome & it belongs to him.

Ib. So run] The οὕτω here referres to the lawes or g. rules of the agones, the observing of which was as necessary toward the obtaining the victory or prize, as the swiftnesse was. For in the race, there was not only the two termes, from whence, and to which they ran; the first called βατὴρ and τέρμα, the latter ἐσκαμμένα, βαλβὶς, τέλος, σκοπὸς, but also κανὼν, the rule, a white line marking out the path, within which they were to run, τὸ μεταξὺ τοῦ βατῆρος καὶ τῶν σκαμμάτων, the middle space betwixt the two termes, from which, and to which they ran, or leaped, saith Jul. Pollux: and if they transgress'd or ran over it, they did not νομίμως ἀθλῆσαι 2 Tim. 2. 6. run regularly, and consequently they lost the prize; so saith S. Chrysostome, ἂν μὴ πάντα ἁπλῶς διέλθωσι τὰ τοῖς ἀθλήταις προσήκοντα ὑδέποτε στεφανοῦσθε, if they doe not absolutely passe through, and perform all things that befit the combatants, they are never to be crowned. Nay, if others observe aright (that they were bounded with swords on one side, and the river Alpheus on the other) the danger was greater then that of losing the prize, if they transgressed, they not onely lost, but fell into the river, or on the swords point; which is very applicable to our Christian race. Beside these many other νόμοι ἀθλήσεως lawes, or rules, of combating there were, all which were to be observed in order to obtaining the crown, and that is the meaning of the οὕτω τρέχειν here, so run.
